Fables By George Ade

The Modern Fable of the Sickly Dream and How It Was Doctored Up.

(Copyright, 1902, by R. H. Russell.)

One Day a pure white Soul that made Sonnets by Hand was sitting in his Apartment embroidering a Canto. He had all the Curtains drawn and was sitting beside a Shaded Candle waiting for the Muse to keep her Appointment. He wore an Azure Dressing-Gown. Occasionally he wept, drying his eyes on a Salmon Pink Handkerchief bordered with yellow Morning Glories. Any one could tell by looking at him that he was a delicate Organism and had been raised a Pet.

Presently he put his left Hand to his Brow and began to Indite with a pearl-handled Pen on a Paper. Then there was a Ring at the Bell.

"Oh, Fudge!" said the Author. "That distressing Sound! And just when I was beginning to generate Ethereal Vapor. Hereafter I shall order the vulgar Tradespeople to deliver all Marshmallows at the Servants' Entrance."

He began to write again, reviving himself at the end of each Word by means of Smelling Salts. He did not see the Artist standing in the Doorway.

The Artist was a muscular Person with an Ashen Complexion and a Suit that was not large enough to show the entire Pattern. He carried a Bludgeon with a Horse's Head on it. In order to attract the Attention of Mr. Swinburne, he whistled through his Teeth, whereupon the Author jumped over the Table and fell among the Rugs, faintly calling "Mother! Mother!"

"Cut it out!" exclaimed the Artist. "What's matter? Huh?"

"Oh, how you startled me," said the Author, sitting up among the Rugs. "Just as you came in I was writing about the Fays and the Elfins. I was in the deep Greenwood, the velvet Sward kissing my wan Cheek and the Leaves whispering overhead."

"I see," said the Artist. "A Dark Change from an Interior to a Wood Set. That's all right if you can do it quick. Who did you say you was doing it for—the Fays?"

"I mentioned the Fays and Elfins," replied the Author.

"I've heard of the Fays," said the Artist. "They're out on the Orpheum Circuit now. But the Elfins—no. What kind of a Turn do they do?"

"Ah, the Elfins!" said the Author. "They dance in the Moonlight and skip from Tree to Tree."

"Acrobatic Stuff with Light effects, eh? Well, you're on a couple of Mackerels. I never see any Benders that could get away with a Talking Act. You want to give your Piece to somebody that can Boost you. You write a good gingery skit for me and Miss Fromage and we'll put your Name on a Three-Sheet in Letters big enough to scare a Horse."

"I gather from the somewhat technical Character of your Conversation, my dear sir, that you are associated with the Drama," said the Author.

"Is it a Kid?" asked the Artist. "Wuzn't you ever in Front? Don't you look at the Pictures in the Windows? I'm Rank, of Rank and Fromage. Miss Fromage is the other half this Season, and if you Seen her a Block off you'd say, 'Is it or ain't it Ethel Barrymore?' We've just closed with McGoohan's Boisterous Burlesquers. We was so strong that we killed the rest of the Bill, so we got the Blue Envelope. Now they're using all our Business, including the Gag about the Custard Pie."

"To whom am I indebted for the Honor of this Visit?" asked the Author.

"I heard that you was a Litry Mug and I'm around here to see you about a Sketch for me and Miss Fromage. The one I've got now is all right, but in it I've got to eat 8 hard-boiled Eggs, and with 4 shows a Day, that's askin' too much of any Artist. This Sketch was wrote for us by the Man that handles the Transfer Baggage at Bucyrus. He fixed it up while we were waiting for a Train. I've been using it since 1882 and it goes just as strong as ever, but I like to get new Stuff once in a while. So I want you to fake up something that'll kill 'em right in their Seats. Here's the Scenario: My Wife's a Society Girl and I'm supposed to be a Dead Swell that's come to take her to a Masquerade. With that to work on, all you need to do is to fill in the Talk."

"I have recently prepared a One-Act Play, but I am not sure that it will meet your Requirements," said the Author. "It is called 'The Language of Flowers.' There the three Characters in the Play—a young Shepherd named Ethelbert, the Lady Gwendolen and a Waiting Maid."

"We couldn't carry three People," said the Artist. "You'd better use a Dummy instead of the Hired Girl. I do an awful funny Wrassle with a Dummy. Go ahead and slip me the plot."

"It is an Idyllic Thing," said the Author. "Ethelbert is in love with Gwendolin, but he is not certain that his Love is reciprocated. So he sends her the Flowers. The waiting-maid brings them into the Bower where Lady Gwendolin is seated, and with them a Scroll of Verses from Ethelbert. The Lady Gwendolin unrolls the Scroll and reads:

Traced in the Veins of the Petals
Are the Lines I fain would speak,
And breathing low in the perfumed Leaves
Is the Name—

"Hold on!" said the Artist. "That's a Cinch. Have a Stage-Hand come on with the Flowers. Lottie says, 'I know who sent these,' and so on and so on, and his Nobs gets off. Then her alone with the big armload of Hollyhawks, that I'm supposed to be sendin' her—savvy? She says, 'Well, there's no three ways about it, I've got this Gazabo dead to Rights. She goes on to talk about Me, leading up to her song, 'John L. will be our Champion once again.' Bing! The Door Bell rings. Then me on quick, see? I've thought out a Make-Up that's sure to get a Holler the Minute I come on. I wear a pair of Pants made out of Tin Foil, a Fur Coat with Lace around the Bottom, and on my Head I wear a Coal-Scuttle with some Sleigh-Bells fastened to it. As I come down Stage I make some crack about just escapin' from a Business College. When I see the Doll, I go over and slap her on the back, pull out a Sprinklin' Can and water the Flowers. You'll have to fix me up a Line to introduce the Sprinkler. As soon as she sees me, she gets stuck, so she hands me one of the Flowers. I say, 'Ah, a night-blooming Pazizum'—then I take a Salt-Cellar out of my Vest and shake some Salt on the Flower and eat it. I done that with a Piece called 'A Boiled Dinner,' and it always went big. When she sees me eat the Flower, that makes her sore, understand? She comes at me with a right-hand Pass. I fall over a Chair and do a Head-Spin. You fix up a strong Line for me just as I go over the Chair. Then—What's the matter, Cull? Here, Bud, open your Eyes!"

The Author had fallen in a Heap on the antique Writing Desk.

"Hully Chee!" exclaimed the Artist. "He's Croaked!"

MORAL: A Classic is never Safe except in the Church Parlor.

Percy Sacrificed All

In an Attempt to Prevent His Mother Knowing That Her Husband Had Embezzled Trust Funds In His Possession.

Bridgeport, Conn., March 8.—Ruined by the crimes committed by his father, Percy L. Johnson sacrificed his own small fortune and his career to protect the memory of his parents. When this proved to have availed nothing, the young man followed his father's footsteps and embezzled, using the money thus obtained always in an attempt to make good the money previously stolen. When the inevitable exposure came he fled to Mexico, but almost immediately returned of his own volition to face the disgrace.

Even then he accepted all of the blame and refused to make an explanation that would have placed him in a better light. In court he entered a plea of guilty and without a murmur put on the stripes and began serving the sentence of six years at hard labor imposed by the judge.

At last he has spoken and after ten months of his sentence has been served he has told why he employed funds that were not his own. The statement was almost forced from him. He has taken his present action with great reluctance and was persuaded to make his confession only when he was convinced that the innocent would suffer if he failed them. It is said that he would have persisted in his silence had not his old mother advised that the truth should be told.

Prior to the spring of 1896 few men in Connecticut were held in higher esteem than Joseph W. Johnson, the father of Percy. He was a member of the state legislature and held many other offices of public trust. He was thought to be possessed of great wealth, and no public organization in Fairfield county was complete if he was not a member. He was thought to be the soul of honor and integrity. It was quite natural then that he should be made a trustee of funds created for purposes of a charitable nature.

When Nathaniel Wordin, whom many had looked upon as money mad, died in 1888, he left $80,000 as a trust fund for the benefit of the Staples free academy, of Easton, one of the oldest institutions of learning in the state. Mr. Johnson was made the sole trustee of this fund. Again he was made the executor of the estate of David Pendleton, of Bridgeport. Other trusteeships of value were his.

Much money was invested by Johnson in Kansas farm land mortgages, and in May, 1896, he went West to inspect his investments. A few days later word was received that he had died suddenly in Topeka. Percy Johnson went to Kansas and brought his father's body back to Bridgeport for burial. He explained that his father had died almost without warning. This story was accepted as the truth, and the young man, who had established himself in the practice of law, took up his father's business and soon succeeded to the trusteeships that had been the elder Johnson's.

All went well until a visitor from Topeka brought word that Mr. Johnson, instead of having died as described, had deliberately stepped in front of a train and thus killed himself. Then rumors began to grow concerning the Johnson fortune. It was hinted that the Kansas investments had been unfortunate, but no one even suggested that the trust funds might have suffered.

Percy Johnson knew better. He found that his father had used all the money that had been placed in his care, and he determined to protect his father's memory when he told the story of his death. The son commenced using the funds in his charge to meet his father's shortages.

Finally, when his obligations began piling up so fast that he saw that he must soon be unmasked, he resorted to speculation. He tred the bucket shops, and in this manner obtained enough money to escape a crash. He speculated only when he had to raise cash to meet a note. Thus for four years he ran his business. Then came a time when a few hundred dollars was not sufficient. He had to make a larger deal, and at last his luck had turned. He speculated in the securities of the Third Avenue Elevated railroad. Had he been able to hold on a week longer than he did he would have had a profit of $30,000 and his troubles would all have been a thing of the past. He could not hold on and found himself disgraced. Then he fled.

PLAN WRECK.

Discovery of Attempt to Ditch Eastern Minnesota Train.

Grand Rapids, Minn., March 8.—An arrest was made by Sheriff Tyndall at Swan River yesterday noon which has resulted in making public a startling attempt to wreck the Hibbing passenger on the Eastern Minnesota on Wednesday afternoon.

Patrick Burke was the man taken into custody. The warrant was sworn out before Justice Huson, of this village, before the way-freight left for the East, the charge being train wrecking, and within an hour afterwards the suspect was a prisoner. He was taken under circumstances which point to his guilt. With the sheriff there were Detective Gordon and Deputy Harry. The man had been located near Swan River, and the officers immediately proceeded to the little cabin where he was supposed to be in hiding. A logging train was passing at the time and Burke made a sneak from the nearby hut to get aboard. He was seen by the sheriff, however, the train was flagged and the fugitive made to come forth from his hiding place and surrender. Burke was brought to Grand Rapids yesterday afternoon by Sheriff Tyndal, the other officers being left to pursue the three remaining members of the gang believed to have had a hand in the plot.

Late in the afternoon Clinton Wasson was also arrested. He was thought to know some of the desperadoes, and it may be that he himself was implicated. According to his story he passed Wednesday night in a box car with four men, strangers to him, but who got on near the scene of the attempted wreck.

They rode as far as Swan River. The vigilance of the engineer on the passenger train was all that averted a frightful catastrophe. The train had passed Negonab, when ties, railroad iron and rocks were discovered on the track. The obstruction would have caused a bad wreck, as the speed of the train was high.

At 9 o'clock last night word was received from Deputy Harry indicating that no further captures had been made. Of the three men at large one is a mulatto.

Burke, the prisoner, appears to be shrewd and keen. He will not talk to anyone. It is not known that the Hibbing passenger train carried enough in the way of valuables to make it worth while for the men to assume such a desperate risk as they did, but the way in which the obstruction was built upon the track precludes any idea that some sinister design had not been carefully formed, and the attempt made to give it effect.

VIEWS BY GATH

Tillman and South Carolina—The Sturdiness of President Roosevelt—Other Topics.

Washington, March 5.—A respectable public opinion seems to be growing in South Carolina, and it will envelop Tillman, unless he can apotheosize brutality as one of the state's rights. Upper South Caroline was long ago described by Hugh S. Legare as "the land of bull drivers." But the railroad men say that the people of that region are the modern, the forcible population, while the Charlestonians are weak-headed.

Tillman comes from Edgefield, where Preston S. Brooks lived, a district of brute force. He is never in favor of anything except as it is in opposition to something else. This man would have no hesitation, if it ministered to his turbulence, in having a fight at the president's table. He was described to me as the South Carolina Ben Butler, resolved upon drawing attention, if not by merit, by violence. Why do such men afflict the senate, unless that body has become the apex of the fools' paradise? No great ability is in it, and it is full of actions. Hale is jealous of Frye; Chandler and Gallinger were enemies; Wellington believes McComa's faction betrayed him when he ran for congress, because he was the bolder spirit. Hence the ile passes. Tillman is resolved that nobody shall think in South Carolina but by his permission, and his abominable conception of senatorial independence he maintains to be democracy.

Saw Prince Henry at several points in Washington. His reception was so frigid that it seemed to lack understanding. Whether he were a man or a ship seemed to be the query with the fair sex. The men boorishly discussed the showing of much courtesy to a foreign prince. The supreme court took advantage of the holiday and noise and delivered its usual opinion, that it had no jurisdiction over anything of a determinate and dangerous sort.

Roosevelt gave the clearest instance of his inflexible judicialism in the Schley verdict. Had it been McKinley he would never have faced the music. But Roosevelt, like any man whose ear is not on the ground, rather desired a "scrap" with wild-cat public opinion. He dealt like Solomon with the two tough women. "Boo," said Roosevelt. "It was a battle of the captains. The littlest fellow there was the most overlooked."

Some people do not like that kind of a president. Some do.

When we think of the contemporary fidgettiness of public opinion, its want of any standard or reference, perhaps we shall see that Roosevelt is "it." The public fortitude of the country was kept lachrymose and silly so long that Roosevelt is a little like an earthquake.

Women would like to be the arbiters of issues. We have seen them in the Daughters of the Revolution last week imputing to each other waste of head money. They pay $1 a head and quarrel over it like car fare.

I went to Vermont week before last, and two long cars were filled with stern women and one regent. That regent was as much revered on account of her regency, which she audibly advertised, as Christopher Sly in the character of the grand duke. She called everything "we."

If Mount Vernon was in the hands of the United States an empty stomach there might get a glass of ale. There might be a lodging nearby to stay all night. It would not be everlasting gate money and signs of "don't" do anything.

The price of the present prosperity is the derangement of most of the orderly habits and thoughts of the country. A beacon of riches burns against the fixed stars and fills the night with flame and the day with smoke. Hardly anybody reads, and yet the press, subsisted upon readers, sustains the Wall street domination of the intellect. The president is the champion of the forgotten legism of the republic. The three presidents previous to him were all for the corporations.

Although Ohio has elected four presidents out of its citizens, it has had only nine years of the office, Harrison dying in a month, Garfield in eight months, McKinley in the fifth years. New York has had the presidency eighteen years.

Hayes was a genuine soldier, as brave as any man in the war. He, also, was eclectic in his prejudices against force, oppression and corruption. He vetoed popular silver bills when Sherman hesitated. He put a Democratic Southern soldier in his cabinet. Cleveland vouched for his integrity and to his title by going to his funeral. Vice President Hendricks said to me: "We had no business to accuse Hayes of foul play, when we arranged the cards."

Yet Edward McPherson, who presided over the Hayes' national convention, said to me: "I do not consider Hayes manly and sincere. He seemed to squirm, to feel in a false position, to want candor and openness. He prevaricated upon appointments. Lincoln's election was disputed, but it did not make him flinch. Blaine was brought to bay, but he made a bold show."

Our wealthy classes marry their daughters to European titles because gambling has destroyed the male accomplishments here. The young foreigner is domestic, gentle, assiduous. The girls find in him something beyond Wall street talk.

The movement of the German kaiser to visit this country through his brother is a step of homogenity, to extend the social career of America on relex lines. The criticisms upon the visitor, from Kentucky, may be regarded as the last Indian war whoop. We are nearly all Germans, especially the Anglo-Saxons, but we do not know it. The attack upon the president's daughter's curiosity to see a coronation was especially in savagery.

Heretofore, with some exceptions, Europe has been the scene of American diplomacy. Our independence was not absolutely won by arms. After Cornwallis' capture some three years elapsed before the British army was withdrawn. He surrendered Oct. 17, 1781, and peace was not declared until Nov. 30, 182, nor New York evacuated till Dec. 4, 1783. This interval was all diplomatic. First a change of ministry was required over parliament. Then the death of one prime minister was followed by another minister with different views. Meantime the British fleet beat the French in April, 1872. Few know now that Spain and Holland as well as France were parties to our war, or that John Jay, John Adams, Franklin, worked at Paris long after Washington's sword was idle. The British jesuistry was to acknowledge the independence of certain colonies, separately, so as to divide them. John Jay opposed this states right plan, truly of British invention; that the Washington of the negotiations, refused to treat with the British tradesmen sent to pull the chestnuts out of the fire, till the "United States of America," was recognized in the catspaws' credentials.

Spain captured the east side of the Mississippi river as far up as Illinois during the suspension. The English worked to inspire American jealousies in a way to make the Jesuits of that day look like childish. Meantime Washington's 10,000 idle soldiers were eating their heads off by West Point. As soon as the British succeeded in pulling America away from France, Vergennes lent us $1,111,111, so as to stand No. 1 several times over.

Jay, to avoid another British war, made a treaty in London which the opposition here attacked for party advantage till the backwoodsmen compelled them to go to war eighteen years afterward, and inglorious it was —the treaty of Ghent—only made after the Canadian British were beaten at Plattsburg, a feat England knew about while our commissioners were ignorant. Not a point did we make in the treaty except the same points the derided Jay made, further continuation of peace.

John Jay was our great foreign minister, five years absent from his country in the revolution, resigning the chief justiceship to prevent a second war in 1794. If there is any place where nothing about him is known it is in the American congress. He was at the head of the foreign affairs committee, which was our only secretary of state during the entire government of the Confederation—five years—and although less prolific than Hamilton, was the legal force behind the Federalist and the Constitutional government. Nobody oensiders a statue of him, while McClellan and Logan are to be rampant over the capital town.

Mr. Dooley Talks

On the Philippine Peace

By F. P. DUNNE.

(Copyright, 1902, by Robert H. Russell.)

"'Tis sthrange we don't hear much talk about th' Ph'lippeens," said Mr. Hennessy.

"Ye ought to go to Boston," said Mr. Dooley. "They talk about it there in their sleep. Th' raison it's not discussed annywhere else is that ivrything is perfectly quiet there. We don't talk about Ohio or Ioway or anny iv our other possissions because they'se nawthin" doin' in thim parts. Th' people ar-re goin' ahead, garnerin' th' products iv th' sile, sindin' their childer to school, worshipin' on Sundah in th' churches an' thankin' Hiven f'r th' blessin' iv free govermint an' th' protection iv th' flag above them.

"So it is in th' Ph'lippeens. I know, f'r me friend Gov'nor Taft says so, an' they'se a man that knows con-tintmint whin he sees it. Ye can't thrust th' fellows that comes back fr'm th' jools iv th' Passyfic an' tells ye that things are no bether thin they shud be undher th' shade iv the cocoanut palm be th' blue wathers iv th' still lagoon. They must be satisfied with our rule. A man that isn't satisfied whin he's had enough is a glutton. They're satisfied an' happy an' slowly but surely they're acquirin that love f'r th' govermint that floats over thim that will make thim good citizens without a vote or a right to thrile be jury. I know it. Gov'nor Taft says so.

"Says he: 'Th' Ph'lippeens, as ye have been tol' be me young but speechful frind, Sinitor Blvridge who was down f'r tin minyits wanst an' spoke very highly an at some length on th' beauties iv th' scenery, th' Ph'lippeens is wan or more iv th' beautiful jools in th' diadem iv our fair nation. Formerly our fair nation didn't care f'r jools, but done up her hair with side combs, but she's been abroad some since an' she come back with beautiful reddish golden hair that a tiara looks well in an' that is betther f'r havin' a tiara. She is not as young as she was. Th' simple home-lovin' maiden that our fathers knew has disappeared an' in her place we find a Columbya, gintleen, with machurer charms, a knowledge iv Euro-pean customs an' not averse to a cigareet. So we have pinned in her fair hair a diadem that sets off her beauty to advantage an' holds on th' front iv th' hair an' th' mos' lovely pearl in this ornyment is thim sunny little isles iv the Passyfic. They are almost too sunny f'r me. I had to come away.

"'To shift me language suddintly fr'm th' joolry counther an' th' boodore, I will say that nawthin' that has been said even be th' gifted an' scholarly sinitor, who so worthily fills part iv th' place once crowded be Hendricks an' McDonald, does justice to the richness iv thim islands. They raise unknown quantities iv produce, none in which forchunitely can come into this counthry. All th' riches iv Cathay, all the wealth of Ind, as Hogan says, wud look like a second morgedge on any Apache wickeyup compared with th' untold an' almost unmintionable pro-ducts iv that gloryous domain. Me business kept me in Manila or I wud tell ye what they are. Besides some iv our lile subjects is gettin' to be good shots an' I didn't go down there f'r that purpose.

"'I turn to th' climate. It is simply hivenly. No other wurrud describes it. A white man who goes there seldom rayturns unless th bereaved fam'ily insists. It is jus' right. In winter enough rain, in summer plinty iv heat. Gin'rally speaking whin that tropical sky starts rainin' it doesn't stop till it's impty, so th' counthry is not subjected to th' sudden changes that afflict more northerly climes. Whin it rains it rains; whin it shines it shines. Th' wather frequently remains in th' air afther th' sun has been shinin' a month or more, th' earth being a little overcrowded with juice, an' this gives th' atmosphere a certain cosiness that is indescribable. A light green mold grows on th' clothes an' is very becomin'. I met a man on th' boat comin' back who said 'twas th' finest climate in th' wurruld. He was be profission a rubber in a Turkish bath. As f'r the summers they are delicious. Th' sun doesn't sit aloft above th' jools iv th' Pasyfic. It comes down an' mingles with th' people. Ye have heard it said th' isles was kissed be th' sun. Perhaps bitten wud be a betther wurrud. But th' timprachoor is frequently modified be an eruption iv th' neighborin' volcanoes an' th' inthraduction iv American stoves. At night a coolin' breeze fr'm th' crather iv a volcano makes sleep possible in a hammock swung in th' icebox. It is also very pleasant to be able to cook dinner within won.

"'Passin' to th' pollytical situation, I will say it is good. Not perhaps as good as ye'ers or mine, but good. Ivry wanst in a while whin I think iv it, an illetion is held. Unforchunately it usually happens that those illicted have not yet surrindehered. In th' Ph'lipeens th' office seeks th' man, but as he is also pursooed be th' sojery, it is not always aisy to catch him an' fit it on him. Th' counthry may be divided into two parts, pollytically, where th' insurrection continues an' where it will soon be. Th' brave but I fear not altogether cheery army conthrols th' insurrected parts be martyal law, but th' civil authorities are supreme in their own house. Th', difference between civil law an' martyal law in th' Philipeens is what kind iv coat th' judge wears. Th' raysult is much th' same. Th' two branches wurruks in perfect harmony. We bag thim in th' city an' they round thim up in th' counthry.

"'It is not always necessary to kill a Filipina-American right away. Me desire is to idjucate thim slowly in th' ways an' customs iv th' counthry. We ar-re givin' hundherds iv those pore benighted haythen th' well-known, ol'-fashioned American wather cure. Iv course, ye know how 'tis done. A Filipino, we'll say, niver heerd iv th' histhry iv this counthry. He is met be wan iv our sturdy boys in black an' blue iv Macabebee scouts who asts him to cheer f'r Abraham Lincoln. He rayfuses. He is thin placed upon th' grass an' given a dhrink, a baynit bein' fixed in his mouth so he cannot reject th' hospitality. Undher the inflooence iv th' hose that cheers but does not inebriate, he soon warrums, or perhaps I might say swells, up to a ralization iv th' granjoor iv his adoptive counthry. One gallon makes him give three groans f'r th' constitchoochion. At four gallons he will ask to be wrapped in th' flag. At th' dew pint he sings "Yankee Doodle." Occasionally we run acrost a stubborn an' rebellyous man who wud sthrain at me idee iv human rights an' swallow th' Passyfic oceun, but I mus' say mos' iv these little fellows is less hollow in their pretintious. Nachrally we have had to take a good many customs fr'm th' Spanyards, but we have improved on thim. I was talkin' with a Spanish gintleman th' other day who had been away f'r a long time, an' he said ye wudden's know counthry. Even th' faces iv th' people on th' sthreets had changed. They seemed glad to see him. Among th' mos' useful Spanish custims is reconcenthration. Our reconcenthration camps is among th' mos' thickly popylated in th' wurruld. But still we have to rely mainly on American methods. They are always used fin'lly in th' makin' iv a good citizen, th' garotte sildom.

"'I have not considered it advisable to inthrojooce anny fads like thrile be jury iv ye'er peers into me administhration. Plain, sthraightforward dealin's is me motto. A Filipino at his best has on'y larned half th' jooty iv mankind. He can be thried, but he can't thry his fellow-man. It takes him too long. But in time I hope to have thim thrained to a pint where they can be good men an' thrue at th' inquest.

"'I hope I have told ye enough to show ye that th' stories iv disorder is greatly exaggerated. Th' counthry is pro-pressin' splindidly, th' ocean still laps th' shore, th' mountains are there as they were in Bivridge's day, quite happy apparently, th' flog floats free an' well guarded over th' govermint offices an' th' cheery people go an' come on their errands—go out alone an' come back with th' throops. Ivrywhere happiness, contint, love iv th' shtep-mother counthry excipt in places where there ar-re people. Gintlemen, I thank ye.'

"An' there ye ar-re, Hinnissy. I hope this here lidel story will quiet th' waggin' tongues iv scandal an' that people will let th' Ph'lippeens stew in their own happiness."

"But sure they might do something f'r thim," said Mr. Hennessy.

"They will," said Mr. Dooley. "They'll give thim a measure iv freedom."

"But whin?"

"Whin they'll shtand still long enough to be measured," said Mr. Dooley.

CULTURED ONES

Hold Their Breath at Charge of Plagiarism.

Columbus, Ohio, March 8.—The artistic air of the Columbus Arat association was given a rude jolt at the afternoon meeting, when one of the suspected members was charged with plagiarism.

The Art association members have been discussing the manufacture and construction of stained glass from the craftsmen's standpoint, with the form, color and adaptiveness from the artists' point of view. The papers read on the subject have been pronounced "lovely" and "excellent." Horace W. Whayman has been giving some edifying papers, and it remained for Mrs. Kelly at this last meeting to charge Mr. Whayman with plagiarism. She says his essays were written by Somers Clark, of the English Arats and Crafts' Exhibition society. The further charge is made that Mr. Whayman "swiped" interesting matter from a book by William Morris and Walter Crane, and now the cultured ones are holding their respective breaths for fear their indignation will break bounds.

OFTEN KILLED, BUT STILL ALIVE.

When asked by his publisher in Copenhagen to write a short autobiography, Bjornstjerne Bjornson is said to have submitted the following: "I was born in 1832 at Christiana; have been killed many times, the last time being in November, 1901, but I am not yet quite dead."

BREED

Will Protect Fair Women's Names By Making No Fight.

Marion, Ind., March 8.—Mrs. Cora M. Breed has filed a complaint in the circuit court for a divorce from Richard E. Breed. She states that they were married March 27, 1889. She alleges cruel and inhuman treatment and many other serious charges. She asks the custody of their daughter Lucy, aged 11, and an allowance for her maintenance until she is of age. She alleges the defendant has property valued at $50,000 and demands alimony in the sum of $17,000.

Richard E. Breed is a prominent glass manufacturer and is well known in state politics. He is a member of Governor Durbin's staff and returned from a tour of Cuba with the governor yesterday.

Mrs. Breed was formerly Miss Cora Mark, of this city. She was a member of the exclusive society, and her kind treatment of every one made her a favorite with all.

Mr. Breed said he would not await the decision of the court in the matter of the alimony asked, but would immediately settle that matter with his wife by giving her $20,000. He does not care to have a sensational trial and will allow his wife to procure a divorce without making any defense. The names of young ladies in society and that of a young woman of excellent family, who was acting as Breed's stenographer, have been mentioned in connection with the domestic troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Breed, and for this reason he thinks it much better to not fight the case than to drag the names of a number of young women into a sensational divorce suit.

"SHINER"

Groans Under Competition and Figures on a Trust.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 8.—Steve Yeager, a bootblack, has evolved the details of a trust that will bring "shines" up to 10 cents and crowd the little fellows out of the business.

He says he is tired of the ruinous competition of the street gamins, and his scheme is to go before the city council and secure the passage of an ordinance to license all bootblacks, the license fee to be $10, and all applicants to undergo competitive examinations as to the effects of blackings on leather and other things that may be regarded as important to the public which is to be served.

Steve shines the shoes of state and county officers and says that he is forced to serve these moneyed classes for 5 cents because of the competition of men and boys who are not "artists" and never can be.

GIVEN A DIVORCE

After Flashing Letters Found In Husband's Pocket.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 8.—With a sweet-faced little babe in her arms, Mrs. Amelia M. Joslyn was given the divorce and alimony she asked for on the ground of cruelty.

Mrs. Joslyn said she had found many letters from unknown women in her husband's possession. Some of them she read in court. They were signed "Alice," "Blanche," "Helen" and "May," and they were full of warm expressions of endearment.

NO NEW DEVELOPMENT

In Either the Ore or Vessel Situation.

Cleveland, March 8.—The Iron Age Review says: There is no new development either in the ore or the vessel situation. The furnace interruptions since navigation closed will leave more ore on dock in the spring than was counted on, and estimates of the amount of ore that will be brought down this year leave furnacemen at ease about their uncovered supply. As high as 23,000,000 tons has been figured upon by close students of the mining situation, and instead of 45 per cent the Mesaba range is counted on to contribute 55 to 60 per cent, or 13,000,000 to 14,000,000 tons. This means that there is yet considerable Mesaba ore to be sold. The vessel situation has not changed. Several million tons of ore are yet to be covered, and the difference between shippers and vessel men is still one of 3 cents—80 cents against 75 cents from the head of the lake.

HEARD FROM.

The Steamship Etruria Is Hourly Expected at the Azores.

London, March 8.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail, from Horta, Azores, dated March 7, says the Cunard line steamer Etruria is hourly expected at that port.

About 7 p. m., Feb. 25, continues the correspondent of the Daily Mail, a rumbling in the engine room of the Etruria, followed by a crash announced that the propellor had gone and it was soon discovered it had carried the rudder away with it.

The Etruria was then in lat. 40.03 N., long. 40.36 W. She was experiencing fine weather, although not long before the weather had been boisterous.

There was no excitement among the passengers when they learned of the accident. They dined and spent the evening in their usual manner.

An hour previous to losing her propellor she had exchanged good night signals with the Cunard line steamer Umbria at a distance of about forty miles, and had dispatched various wireless telegrams from her passengers for delivery in New York. Immediately after the accident the Etruria tried, but unsuccessfully, again to call up the Umbria.

The same night the British steamer William Cliff was sighted. The William Cliff stood by the Etruria until daylight when an arrangement was made to tow the Cunarder. On the morning of Feb. 27 the British tank steamer Ottawa, from Philadelphia, Feb. 17, was sighted. The Ottawa stood by the Etruria until March 2.

Nearly two days were spent in rigging a jury rudder, during which time the Etruria was towed less than fifty miles.

BURRO AND BUREAU.

A Philadelphia man who recently returned from Mexico tells of the shipment north of a Mexican burro as a present for his boy. The donkey was transported without difficulty until the region to which burros are indigenous had bee nleft behind, says the Philadelphia Times. A change of cars was made at a small northerly junction. It was in charge of a particularly dense freight agent. Having an hour to wait and thinking the donkey needed water, Mr. L—— went to the freight office. Outside stood the agent beside the burro studying his way bill in deep perplexity.

"Has he had water and feed?" was asked the man.

"Do you own that there animal, sir?"

"Yes; have you fed and watered him?"

"I hain't done nothing but try him on this here bill."

"Why, what's the matter?"

"Matter is this here bill won't check. I'm a bureau short and a jackass over, and durn me if I can make it out."

PREPARING FOR SPRING ATHLETICS

High School Athletes Beginning to Give the Track Team Much Attention---Some of Those Who Will Compete.

And now for spring athletics.

The high school athletes are arranging their affairs and making every possible preparation for a successful season for both the track and baseball team. If the weather man developed his expected amiability work will begin in the course of the next two weeks.

The track team will from all appearances have a good lot of candidates desirous of positions on it. Capt. Arthur Mallet has been circulating among the men who, he thinks, would make desirable members of the team with the result that a large number of able men have given in their names as candidates for honors in the several departments of the team.

There probably will be no change in the list of events from that of last year. It is as follows:

Runs—One mile, half mile, quarter mile.

Dashes—220-yard, 120-yard, 100-yard.

Hurdles—220-yard, 120-yard.

Bicycle races—Two miles, one mile, half mile.

Pole vault, high jump, broad jump, hammer throw and put.

The class relay race competed in by a team of four men from each class will also be run this year as last. The winner of the race will be given the custody of the cup, which is awarded for that purpose. Last year the cup was won by the graduating class, and as they were not in the school to attend to the matter of its being put in some conspicuous place for exhibition with their class colors attached, it has spent the year in the safe of the jeweler who was engaged to engrave the class numerals and the names of the winning team on it. At the athletic meeting this week the matter was discussed and the cup will in all probability be resurrected and placed, as was intended when it was donated by last year's baseball team.

There are a number of good men who intend entering each of the events as given above; and there are undoubtedly a number who have not yet signified their intention of so doing. Among those who reported themselves as expecting to enter the events are:

For the dashes—Whipple, McKenzie, Cummings and Dash.

Long runs—Berg, Ash, Harrison, Bush and Evans.

Quarter mile run—Harrison, Ash and Bradley.

Hammer throw and shot put—Granzow, Merritt, Capt. Mallet and Lippitt.

Bicycle races—Farrell, Potter and Peterson.

High and broad jumps—Scobbie, Capt. Mallet.

The make-up of the relay teams is decided upon by the classes and as yet is unknown.

These will contest in the preliminary, which will be held some time in May. The men getting the first two places in each event will contest in the meet or meets, which will be held with other schools.

The management will collect the usual prizes for the preliminary field day, and these should encourage a large number of contestants to try. The list of prospective competitors as it stands should be greatly enlarged as soon as practice begins. The freshmen, whose ability as yet is entirely unknow, will in all probability have some men out to try for positions on the team.

Manager Richards held a conference with the captain and other prominent athletic men during the week. It was finally decided to give up the idea of attending the inter-scholastic meet at Minneapolis. After the preliminary the team will probably, as has already been suggested, have a meet of all of the high school teams of Northern Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan in this city. The local men look upon the matter favorably; likewise the two schools in Superior. So the project will very probably be consummated.

Although a great deal of interest centers about the track team just now, the baseball organization is by no means forgotten. At the meeting of the Athletic association on Thursday afternoon, Alvin Cummings, '03, was unanimously elected to the captaincy. Harvey Dash has already been made manager, so the team is now ready to get down to work as soon as some one discoveds a patch of dry land large enough to begin practice on.

The team will be practically the same as the indoor team. The same captain and manager will officiate; the line-up of the team will be nearly the same. Another game or two of the indoor kind will be pulled off and then the team will change its uniform and become the regular outdoor baseball team.

All of the men have had a year or two of experience, and the team will surely prove as good as that of last year, which failed to find an opponent that could defeat it.

ANNUAL SACRED CONCERT.

Large Number of Soloists For the Event.

Preparations for the annual sacred concert have been rapidly going forward. It will take place on Sunday, March 23. An excellent program has been arranged and much careful drill will be gone through under the direction of A. F. M. Custance, which will make the event one of the best that the school has given in years.

The following large list of soloists will render selections: Mrs. A. F. M. Custance, Mrs. Bert Holcomb, Miss Rena Smith, Cyril Tyler, C. D. Shepard, Roy Prytz and H. G. Gearhart. The combined chorus of the High School Musical society and St. Paul's church will participate. Flaaten's orchestra will furnish the accompaniments. Superintendent R. E. Denfeld will officiate as reader.

Notes of the Week.

The senior-junior oratorical contest, which was to have come off Friday evening, was postponed one week because of a meeting of the board of education. That will give the contestants another week in which to prepare themselves. Interest in the event runs high.

At the meeting of the freshman class it was decided to give the class spread on Friday, April 4, at Harmonie hall, Lester park. That is the first Friday after Lent.

The class also decided upon the class pin, selecting a very pretty sample. It is shaped like a shield. In the middle is a smaller shield diagonally, the two halves in the colors of the class. In one half will appear simply the letter D; in the other the class numerals, '05. Orders for the pins will be sent in immediately.

At the athletic meeting a committee was appointed to reconstruct the constitution. The present one is deficient in many ways, so the association decided to do away with it in favor of a better one.

The Literary society held a short meeting Friday afternoon, presenting a correspondingly short program. Frank Kane, '03, gave an excellent reading of a humorous skit entitled "The Scientist Talks." Miss Jennie Brown, '03, sang a pleasing solo, receiving an enthusiastic encore. Miss Gorman, '05, recited an interesting poem, closing the meeting.

"Briefs for senior graduation essays must be in before March 7," says a blackboard notice, so you see that the "honors" are getting down to work.

KILLED THE CHEF.

Gallahugh Says He Had Insulted His Wife.

Minneapolis, March 8.—Herbert Gallahugh, a Northern Pacific barkeman, shot and instantly killed Charles Collins, the colored chef of the San Angelo hotel last night in the kitchen of the hotel. Mrs. Gallahugh has been employed at the hotel and had reported to her husband that the negro had offered insults to her. Gallahugh's first shot was fatal, but he leaned over Collins' body, stretched on the floor, and fired a second shot through his heart. He then telephoned to the police and told them where they could arrest him, which they did.

CHOYNSKI WON.

Knocked Out Hanrahan In the Fifth Round.

Louisville, Ky., March 8.—Joe Choynski, of Chicago, knocked out "Wild Bill" Hanrahan, of New York, in the fifth round of what was scheduled as a 25-round match before the Empire Athletic club, at Music hall, in this city, last night. The knock-out blow came after a hot mixup, which ended by Choynski putting a stiff left to "Wild Bill's" jaw and following it up with a right to the jaw, which put Hanrahan out of the fight. Choynski had the best of the fight all the way, and his feinting and dodging was too much for the New Yorker, whose vicious swings failed to land.

MAGAARDEN REMOVED.

Governor Takes Action In Hennepin's Sheriff Case.

St. Paul, March 8.—Governor Van Sant issued an order yesterday removing from office Phil T. Megaarden, sheriff of Hennepin county.

Megaarden was charged by former Public Examiner Pope with malfeasance in office. It was alleged that he had made fraudulent charges of fees and expense accounts against Hennepin county. He was temporarily suspended by the governor and a commission appointed to take testimony. It is on this testimony that the governor has acted.

A new sheriff will be elected by the Hennepin county commissioners.

OUR BREAD SUPPLY

Wheat and Flour Statistics That Fascinate By Their Vastness.

By F. W. Fitzpatrick.

A couple of years ago Sir William Crookes, a noted English scientist, started in to scare us by compiling a lot of figures to show that our wheat supply was nearly, and soon would be, absolutely inadequate to the wants of the ever-increasing numbers of the world's bread eaters, and that we would have to turn to some other "staff of life;" bread would be the rich man's food.

That bread is becoming a more and more popular food there is no doubt. In 1877 there were 397,000,000 bread eaters in the world; in 1894 there were 490,800,000 and in 1901 we had jumped up to 540,000,000. A lively increase, I grant you, and a steady one, while our wheat crops are far from steady. The first year named there was a deficit of 150,00,000 bushels that had to be made up from the savings, the over-supply held in store from former years. In '94, in spite of the great increase in consumers necessitating a supply of 2,234,000,000 bushels of wheat, our crop permitted that we store away 337,000,000 bushels for future emergencies. Then on the contrary, in '97, there was a deficit and we had to draw upon our savings of wheat for 311,00,00 bushels. Sir William and other statisticians seem to fear that farmers will continue to cultivate better paying crops instead of wheat until the dark things they prophesy will come to pass. As a matter of fact there were, in the United States alone, 5,400,000 acres less of wheat in 1897 than there were in 1884. But it is not as if these acres were being built upon or forever barred to wheat raising. It is simply that farmers have been able to make more money from something else. The everlasting law of supply and demand will regulate all that; even if that same acreage is never turned into wheat again we have untold, almost incalculable virgin wheat lands still untouched. Why, in the Dominion of Canada, its Northwest territories and Manitoba there are but 8,000,000 acres in wheat today, while they have 240,000,000 acres of wheat-growing land.

And then, too, our averages tell the story. A scientist is as apt to take figures for a specific period, juggle them and then scare the life out of us with the result. We actually need, for bread purposes the world over, an average of 2,324,000,000 bushels of wheat a year. The crop of '98, the smallest for seven years, was 2,214,000,000 bushels, while the average crop since 1890 has been 2,477,845,000 bushels, leaving as a neat little nest egg of 150,000,000 bushels a year.

It may be safely stated that as our numbers increase and as we eat more and more bread so will the farmers of the world increase their wheat acreage; in this country alone, leaving out the Argentine and India, we can add 20 per cent a year to the world's bread supply, without any very extraordinary effort for centuries yet.

Our world supply this year will be somewhat below the average. The United States will yield less than it has for any of the past ten years. India—poor, famine-stricken India—will show but 183,000,000 bushels, over 40,000,000 bushels less than her average. Manitoba's wheat is below the average quantity, too, this crop. She will have less than 11,000,000. The Bulgarian crop is large. The Hungarian is below the average; there will be but about 135,000,000 bushels. Australia and Chile will show material reductions. The Argentine crop is heavy, some 105,000,000 bushels, and Uruguay's crop will probably make a poor showing, 8 or 10 per cent below last year's. Figures from Russia are slow in coming in, but the department of agriculture anticipates that that crop will also be below the average a trifle.

To understand the world's averages I will cite you the figures of 1896. Our grand total that year was 2,430,000,000—an average yield. Of that amount North America supplied 476,493,000 bushels: South America, 66,000,000; Europe, 1,484,301,000; Asia, 339,397,000; Africa, 38,400,00, and Austraasia, 25,906-00 bushels.

In the United States we devote about 39,000,000 acres to wheat raising, and our average yield is about 13½ bushels to the acre. Minnesota, of course, leads off at the head of wheat-raising states with about one-ninth of our total supply, Kansas follows with about one-thirteenth, then Ohio next, on down to Connecticut, that raises only about 2000 bushels a year.

It is most interesting to follow this wheat from the field to the mill. It is carried first to the little "way-side" local elevator, gathered in by the great railway lines and their feeders to the main distributing elevators in the great wheat centers of St. Louis, Duluth, Minneapolis, Chicago, Buffalo and New York, there to await its being carried off to the mill elevators for grinding into flour or for its shipment abroad. Some of these elevators are enormous affairs. One in Chicago holds 3,400,000 bushels; another company owns 92 elevators in Dakota and Minnesota, or a capacity of 4,250,000 bushels; a concern in Chicago owns elevators there that can contain 13,000,000 bushels of wheat. Twelve thousand miles of railway feed these capacious maws. One of these elevators unloads 500 cars of wheat a day, and has yardage enough to hold cars for four days' work.

Together with Russia, we practically supply Western Europe's millions of bread-eaters. We annually export some 15,000,000 barrels of flour and over 70,000,000 bushels of wheat. England, of course, draws most of her wheat from India. Some 35,000,000 bushels a year of Indian wheat are so milled in England. There are few mills in the Argentine, so that their sixty odd millions of bushels are exported to Brazil and to the United Kingdom.

The rich, glutenous, northern or "spring" wheat makes the best flour, also the most flour. Minnesota is naturally its principal milling center, as Missouri—principally St. Louis—is the milling center of the Southern starchy "winter" wheat belt, than, by the way, there is none better for pastry.

That spring wheat makes the best bread in the world, particularly that from wheat grown along the fertile Red River valley, there is no doubt. There seems to be something about that soil and climate that makes the wheat hardier and richer in nitrogenous and flesh-forming qualities than that grown anywhere else. And, too, Minnesota grinds out that splendid flour at a good rate. Her 207 mills have enormous capacities, some of 8000 barrels a day. She can put out about 120,000 barrels a day. Missouri has a milling capacity of 60,000 barrels a day; New York, 58,000; Ohio, 67,000; Illinois, 68,000; Wisconsin, 59,000; Indiana, 54,000, and Kansas, 42,000.

Four and a half bushels of wheat make a barrel of flour, or 270 pounds of wheat produce 200 pounds of flour, or "net" 196 pounds, allowing four more to the seventy for leakage and waste as well as husks, "offal," dust, etc., that, incidentally, is not lost but turned into profit as "bran," "shorts," etc., etc.

"Spring" wheat makes more flour than any other; that is, some twenty to forty pounds more bread may be gotten out of a barrel of it than out of one of "winter" wheat. Three hundred and twenty-five pounds of bread is what can be made from a barrel.

Our consumption of flour is just about one barrel of flour per year to every man, woman and child of our 76,000,000 people. The Minneapolis mills alone produce over one-sixth of the flour necessary for our entire population. As a general proposition, our spring wheat millers grind nearly 30 per cent more flour than is needed for home consumption, and are glad to lay it down in Liverpool at sometimes not over 50 cents a barrel more than we pay for it here. There have been times, and in recent years, when competition has been so keen that the mills have been glad to make 5 cents net profit per barrel. Combinations have been formed and "trusts," but somehow or another they are not productive of much added profit, certainly not a profit commensurate with the enormous capital invested. Did you not read of the obsequies of one of the great milling trusts just the other day?

We are seeking markets everywhere. We sell to Western Europe, or ship large quantities of flour to South Africa, to distant Turkey, even to China, and, strangest of all, for it is like "carrying coals to Newcastle," we ship flour to Australia—a wheat-exporting country!

All told, the mills of the world will probably grind out this year a total of about 364,000,000 barrels of wheaten flour. The Anglo-Saxon race will use up pretty nearly half that supply; the Latins, a little over a third; the Germans, one-sixth, and the Slav a twentieth.

The "patent" process of reduction has only been in vogue since 1870; prior to that time the old stone reduction, or grinding process, nearly as primitive as that used by old Father Abraham, was the system of milling used the world over. Today there are "purifiers," "bolters," "reduction rolls," and so much other complicated machinery about a great mill that one grows dizzy trying to follow its operations.

The Imperial mill, of Duluth, for example, one of the largest, if not the very largest mill in the world, is simply a maze of belting, shafts and buzzing machines. There are five distinct grindings and sixty-one separate operations. Still, it only requires the services of 250 men to operate it. They can turn out 8000 barrels of flour a day. A year's grinding represents the product of 3515 farms of 160 acres each. In this country we will use up about 76,000,000 barrels this year. Part of that, of course, goes into manufactures, pastes, etc. Some 3,000,000 barrels a year are used in New York biscuit factories, then we make something like one pie a week per inhabitant, but there is left enough for bread making, that some one has calculated that if one year's supply of the "staff of life" were placed in baker's wagons, 1000 loaves per wagon, 20,000,000 wagons, forming a procession 60,000 miles loag, would be required to carry it; or, these wagons, eighteen abreast, would extend from ocean to ocean; or if these loaves were built into a roadway, they would pave one thirty-six feet wide, extending clear around the world!

There is a certain fascination about wheat and flour statistics, there is something so vast about them. They spoil one for dealing with anything that may be expressed in thousands of deeds or thousands, but then the reader may not be as deeply interested in the matter as I am. I could keep on detailing the processes of flour-making, showing comparisons with other products or matters we are perhaps more familiar with, and carrying out long columns of calculations all day, but, in very mercy to the reader, purpose to stop it all off right here as suddenly as a "choke" shuts off the astonishing flow of wheat through that other easy running "spout," an elevator bin leg.

Miss Ida M. Snyder,

Treasurer of the Brooklyn East End Art Club.

Miss Ida M. Snyder

IT is one of the saddest things in life to see a beautiful young girl languishing on a bed of sickness, when she should be strong and healthy, filling the home with the sunshine of her happy face. Somehow or other as the mother is the center of the home, the daughter seems to be its greatest joy or its greatest care. A home with an invalid daughter is like a hospital. The sufferer with her pale blanched face calls for every one's care and sympathy. How different is the home where a healthy girl sheds her happy influence and ministers to the comfort of every one in a thousand pleasant ways.

It is remarkable that so many women will forfeit health and then suffer the consequence of pain and sickness when it is unnecessary. Women who enjoy this greatest of Nature's blessings are liable to forget that health can be easily lost by neglect. They cannot realize that the loss of sleep, a little cold or irregularity of habits can result disastrously until they once suffer painful menses. Menstrual troubles are generally the beginning of women's troubles. The vitality is at a low ebb, the blood weakened, the digestion disordered and she goes about pale-faced, hollow-eyed and haggard, a piteous contrast to the blooming health of her former self. But over 1,000,000 women have found health again by taking Wine of Cardui. As a regulator of the menstrual periods Wine of Cardui has never been known to fail. It has seldom failed to restore perfect health, even in the most persistent and aggravated cases of weakness.

Miss Ida M. Snyder, of No. 535 Bergen street, Brooklyn, N. Y., has used Wine of Cardui and she says it helped her into a new life. Health to Miss Snyder is worth a great deal. She is an attractive young woman with intellectual attainments and she occupies the position of Treasurer of the Brooklyn East End Art club. This position marks her as a person of intellect, culture and refinement and it speaks highly of the respect and trust her fellow women have in her. She writes:

"If women would pay more attention to their health we would have more happy wives, mothers and daughters, and if they would use more intelligence in the matter of medicines, observing results, they would find that the doctors' prescriptions do not perform the many cures they are given credit for.

"My life was a burden to me through persistent indigestion; anaemia resulted and my friends thought I was an invalid for life. But I would not give up and when I found that prescriptions would not help me, I tried something else.

"In consulting with my druggist he advised McElree's Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught, and so I took it and have every reason to thank him for a new life opened up to me with restored health, and it only took three months to cure me."

You may secure the same relief as Miss Snyder, if you take Wine of Cardui as she took it. Thedford's Black-Draught is the companion medicine of Wine of Cardui and it is a liver and bowel regulator which assists greatly in effecting a cure. Go to your druggist and buy a dollar bottle of Wine of Cardui and a twenty-five cent package of Thedford's Black-Draught and take them in the privacy of your home. If you take these medicines according to directions, the relief and cure is simple. Some cases are cured quickly and others take longer because the disease has run longer. Remember how Miss Snyder took Wine of Cardui and has health. The same medicines are offered you today.

WINE OF CARDUI Will surely bring you relief from the suffering you now endure. Take it in your home.

DUN'S REVIEW

Unsettled Weather Has Had Bad Effect on Business.

New York, March 8.—R. G. Dun's weekly review of trade says: Unsettled weather was the most unsatisfactory feature of the business situation. A sudden thaw following an exceptionally heavy snowfall produced freshets and floods. Manufacturing and transporting interests suffered severely and consumers were regent for shipment of delayed goods, while great quantities of merchandise became stalled in transit. Preparations for an enormous spring trade continue undiminished. There is still some uneasiness regarding the labor situation at the coal mines, and at Fall River there is a disagreement as to the length of a cut of cloth, although increased wages are assured.

Not only is there no improvement to be recorded in the iron and steel outlook, but floods in the Pittsburg region added to the pressure by completely closing many plants and damaging much costly machinery. Supplies of coke failed to increase because the railways were badly disorganized, and the net result was a week of light output when requirements were notably heavy. Recent destruction from the elements makes an unusual demand for structural material, and on spot business buyers gladly pay premiums of $6 a ton above list prices.

The situation has become so abnormal that it is impossible to gauge the market by ordinary standards or secure quotations of any value for comparative purposes. The encouraging feature is that despite present exorbitant prices the speculative element is not prominent and orders are accepted for distant delivery with no effort at inflation. Coal shipments have been curtailed to such an extent that dealers' supplies are low and quotations very strong.

Nothing new has developed in the footwear industry. Eastern shops are still working on old contracts, but buyers are delaying the placing of fall business in expectation of securing more satisfactory terms. Shipments have fallen below the figures for the same week last year, but since Jan. 1 there still apepars a good increase over 1901. Leather is weaker and hides declined another fraction. Cotton goods are well sustained, the stronger raw material giving all the advantage to sellers, but there is much uncertainty as to the labor situation. This tends to make the mills conservative regarding the acceptance of contracts for future delivery. Less activity is reported in the market for woolens, buyers having, apparently, completed their first rounds of orders. All staples steadied and some rose sharply, the net changes for the week amounting to a considerable advance. It was natural for grain to hold firm when wheat receipts at the West were 2,899,341 bushels, compared with 3,747,952 bushels last year, while arrivals of corn were but 2,001,914 bushels, against 5,020,438 a year ago. Exports of wheat, flour included, were 4,174,894 bushels, against 3,185,032 in the previous week and 3,715,930 a year ago. Even corn went out more freely, Atlantic exports exceeding 10 per cent of the movement a year ago, or 371,904 bushels, against 3,357,438. Speculation was quiet with many guesses as to the coming report of farm reserves. For the first time in this crop season, cotton showed an advance over the price at the corresponding date last year and it is significant that the higher figure failed to attract heavy selling at the South.

Visible supply statistics of coffee were calculated to depress the market, but there was a recovery, which may be attributed to gloomy cables from Brazil regarding the outlook for the new crop.

Failures for the week numbered 176 in the United States, against 208 last year, and seventeen in Canada against twenty-six last year.

THE BRIDE OF EASTER

How Many Gowns Shall a Bride Have In Her Trousseau?

The Modern American Modiste Will Claim Fifty at Least Are Necessary, But the French Dressmaker Will Say Twenty.

New York, March 8.—Just how many gowns shall a bride have in her trousseau?

Ask, not papa, but the dressmaker!

A Fifth avenue modiste, with new world notions, will reply "fifty at least." Of these there will be twenty-five for the room, the breakfast table and for evening lounging during the blissful period before friends begin to call—before the time when one must be regularly "at home" to society. The other twenty-five will be for the street and for dinners.

A French couturiere, with more economical ideas, will explain that the madame can get along nicely with twenty, if these be all of French design, so adaptable to many an occasion, with waists that can be separated—so!

The Russian dressmakers who ape the Parisians, and who are very swell, nevertheless, will point to several fur suits and tell you they will suffice with three evening gowns and two Russian blouse suits for the house, with a few negligees.

The American dressmaker, who is often a graduated seamstress, will cut according to her cloth and turn out her bride better equipped with gowns than any of the rest on the same amount of money

"If I could be born again," said an old lady, "I would be born at the age of 21, so that I could immediately be married and have a trousseau. At no other time does a woman have so many new gowns, and consequently at no other time is she so happy."

Six street gowns, six dinner gowns, including evening and reception robes, and six morning or house dresses, should be in every woman's trousseau. This does not mean that all shall be thousand-dollar gowns, nor even $100 ones, nor $50 ones, to get down to the matter, but only that there shall be a certain number for change. Just how she will get them is a thing which the bride must determine. It is a secret between three important agents—herself, her dressmaker and her own needle.

Brides, as well as their gifts, one may believe, will be numerous this year and costly.

It means more to be a bride now than it used to, and to get married costs as much as you can afford—often a little more.

The bride who took the money allotted to her for her bridal outfit and put three-quarters of it aside for her bridal gown, allowing only one-quarter for her trousseau, has many imitators.

Buy your gown first, is the bridal adage, then with what is left procure your traveling gowns, your reception and house dresses, your finery, your fixings and your lingerie.

Lingerie is horribly important for, somehow, though no one can tell exactly why lingerie shows through the gown this year. You can tell—any woman can tell—upon inspection, just how well dressed another woman is underneath her gown and this without as much as the hoisting of a skirt braid. But in spite of the fact that it will cost something to procure her underwear, and a great deal more to buy her dresses, and her tea gowns, her shirt waists, her hats and her littles, the bride of Easter looks forward to going to the altar dressed not like the lily in her simplicity, but like the gaudiest of man-made flowers. Not fussy are her bridal robes, but very costly, and from the crown of her shapely head, whence hangs a veil of real lace, to the tips of her pretty toes, where glisten pearl-tipped slippers, there will be money spent.

To begin at the feet and go up, the white satin slipper is very stylish, and is seen with pearl as well as rhinestone embroidery. Pearls mean tears, and it is not considered quite the thing for a bride to tread the bridal aisle in slippers that are so symbolical of weeping. So a few brilliant rhinestones are scattered through the pearls and a little bridal bell is embroidered in silk upon the toe.

Bridal superstitions are seen through all the finery of this Easter. One of the most exquisite of wedding dresses, one intended for a Paris bride, is lined not with white but with blue. The gown is a delightful thing in white panne satin, so white as to be dusky in its folds. It fairly shimmers, and its high luster is its greatest beauty, the feature that makes it so costly.

The lining throughout is of blue, the shade known as true blue, except around the foot, where, for a depth of eight inches there is a double ruching of white chiffon and lace. The blue does not show, but it is not intended that it should, for it is there only for superstitition's sake.

A bridal gown, now nearing completion and tried on daily by a pretty model in a Fifth avenue establishment, is in white satin, that favorite bridal material, with the white shading a very little toward silver gray. You would not suspect it of owning such a trait did you not attempt to compare it with that shade of white known as "plead," then you would see the difference between dead white and gray white.

This gown, which is, indeed, for an Easter bride, one whose name will a few days hence fill the society journals with accounts of lavishness, is a model of simplicity. The skirt is cut upon the sheath pattern, plain in the front, with a full train in the back, yet it is not very close around the hips. It is full enough to relieve the satin of its plainness.

The Fifth avenue modiste who is making it has this to say about cutting out a white satin:

"Never," says she, "cut it perfectly plain, or you will make it too trying. A piece of satin stretched across the front of one's figure is never handsome, but if you cut it rather full, and let it fall in folds, it becomes beautiful."

"Truly," continued this authority, "the prettiest days were those when brides wore the so-called 'round' skirts, shirred upon a band across the front, and with thousands of little gathers over the hips and abdomen. The tiny folds caught the light and gave back the prettiest tones. Then came the days when the front was perfectly plain, and, oh, so trying it was. Now there is a compromise, and the bride's gown is again a thing of beauty.

"The back should be cut very long, though not in a court train, and very rounding. The greatest art is required to keep the train from turning over, and for this purpose a soft stiffening may be used. The object is to give weight. A heavy skirt will not turn over when a light one is sure to do so. Under the edge of the skirt there must be a lining of lace, so that the skirt, even if it turns, will still be pretty.

"I would advise that the train begin at the sides, to make a long rounding sweep, instead of a sharp pointed one.

"As for the length of the skirt, it should be considerable, front as well as back. The skirt should more than touch the ground and should never swing free from it at any point, particularly should it be long in the middle of the front."

When all is said and done, and other styles are tried and thrown aside, one comes back to the little lace bolero. For actual artistic effect there is nothing that equals it. The tiny shoulder bolero all of lace is one of the most becoming features ever bestowed upon any gown, and the fact that women of fashion are wearing it is proof that it is not only becoming, but that it holds its own.

A simulated bolero will be worn by the bride of Easter. The shoulders will be trimmed with it and the front and back will be made to look precisely like a bolero.

The headdress called the Mikado is the one that promises to come in with Easter. According to this fashion the flowers are arranged in the hair at each side instead of on top.

The little wreath of orange blossoms, set on as a crown, and used to hold the wedding veil in place, will always be worn, and there is something about its conventionality that is attractive. It is becoming to the head, for one thing, and sort of helps to crown the face.

Orange blossoms, Easter lilies, lilies of the valley, whatever they may be, are grouped over the ears.

The conventional style of hairdressing for the bride is one that preserves her hair as nearly as possible in its natural outline. The hair must be twisted close to the head and braided or coiled flat. The veil drapes the head and it is not becoming to show knots or a high coiffure. Nothing uglier than the Psyche knot under the wedding veil could be imagined. Even where the veil is to be caught on top by orange blossoms the knot is slow.

In New York there is a very pretty young woman who acts as a professional veil draper. She goes from house to house when weddings are plenty, often draping six in a day. If the wedding is at high noon she arrives early, drapes the veil and passes on to her next patron. Her styles are obtained from Paris, from London, from Vienna and from the most prominent of the dress designers.

Here is one of the latest modes, told in her own language:

"I take the veil, which, to be perfectly correct, must be a wide piece of lace bordered with a handsome pattern. The veil should not be more than three yards long and not less than two yards yards long and not less than two yards wide. A perfectly square piece was worn by the young duchess of Westminster, and Miss Morton's veil was also square. Both were of very fine point lace with the handsomest of lace borders, all in one piece.

"With the veil in my hands, I hold out my arms at full length and separate my hands. The bride walks in under the veil as under a canopy, which is gradually lowered upon her head. One end must hang down longer than the other and the front edge must just rest upon her hair, not quite touching her forehead. The back I allow to fall plain. The sides I secure upon the sleeves of the wedding gown to keep the veil from drooping toward the back.

"The veil is then pinned to the top of the coiffure and is pinned again upon the coiffure at the ears, with invisible pins.

"If the flowers are natural ones, and if I cannot remain to fasten them in the hair, I indicate the spot where they should rest and instruct someone upon how to place them. Then my work is done. This, beside being the newest form of arranging the veil, is also the simplest.

"There is nothing to it except the hanging of the lace over the head in such a manner that it will fall at the back and at each side, while the front just escapes the forehead."

There is a more elaborate arrangement, which is to be recommended for a bride whose veil is not of priceless lace. The plainer the arrangement the handsomer the lace must be, for it will show off just so much the more clearly.

For the bride who will have a veil of tulle, or illusion, or of embroidered chiffon, there is a pretty mode that is in the eyes of many more attractive than any of the very new ones. The veil, which in this case must be long enough to reach from the crown of the bride's head to the end of her wedding train, is shirred across the top with a slight heading of an inch left to stand upright. It is upon this heading that the orange blossoms are set.

Another shirring is put into the veil four inches from the first one, and in the puff thus created the coiffure rests. From this the veil falls in long, graceful lines down the back of the gown to the very floor. At the extreme end there is a very deep hem. Or, if there be a border of lace, so much the better. The sides of the veiling are brought around the shoulders and fastened to the sleeves with little invisible pins or with diamond knots.

The custom of wearing a short or bride's veil over the face, to be removed by the maid of honor, is being revived. This very short veil is of plain tulle and is provided with a deep hem. It is caught upon the front of the coiffure, and, after the bridal ceremony, is thrown back by the maid of honor, so that it covers the orange blossoms. The long bridal veil hangs from the coiffure down the back to the floor.

The shower bouquet is the one that is to be carried. This is made, if one would make it at home, by grouping the flowers into a hand bouquet, round and large enough to look well. The bridal bouquet should never be too large or it will give the bride an awkward appearance. Around the stems of the flowers there is tied a white satin ribbon, which is looped into long bow knots and hanging ends. Upon these ends there are tied little bunches of flowers, all hanging at different lengths. Certain of the shower bouquets have ten and a dozen hanging bouquets; others have three or four. It is all a matter of taste. A tall bride can carry off more of the hanging bunches than can a short one.

In all the bright lexicon of Lenten fashions there is nothing newer than the lace blouse threaded with black baby velvet ribbon. Those who speak and dress from the fullness of exact knowledge on sartorial matters and a well equipped purse hold out for the rich cheese yellow Irish crochet lace, or batiste lace of the same tone where a blouse is concerned.

The lace should be dropped on a white lining, that is, of course, separated from its top layer of splendor by a single thickness of Brussels net or some such approved third material. Many women have a liking for the faintly colored linings and adopt a tinted velvet ribbon for the threading purpose.

This season is to see the rounding out and development of the fancy boa on lines of elaboration and chaste splendor that we have hitherto never entertained in our wildest dreams. Boas of ribbon, lace, flowers, net Liberty gauze, silk muslin and even of bridal veil tulle have been accumulating in the factories where such things are made, and by Eastertide no woman will think herself fit to be seen without a positively monstrous ruff with foot-long ends completing her street, church, calling, reception, theater and opera costumes. The bigger the boa the more nearly will its wearer have reached the acme of style, and to put it mildly, many of those we shall wear, directly furs are put off, are exquisitely lovely.

For the afternoon white silk net and pompadour ribbon is one of the pretty combinations; for elderly ladies they are making boas of ash gray silk muslin powdered over with roses made of gray baby ribbon, and every rose has a gray pearl center. For stately young beauties a boa made wholly of huge shell pink chiffon roses is a commendable idea, and while some of these tower in giant ruffs at the back of the neck, a goodly number are meant to fall in a pre-Empire drapery rather low on the shoulders, knot at the breast and let long ends fall to the knees or ankles.

From the knee down all the boa streamers are very fancifuly trimmed and tasseled with lace frills of puffings of chiffon, and in some cases these long, gay ends are drawn under the arms to the rear, fastened at the waist line behind and allowed to fall out like sash ends on the skirt. What with an eye for details, a memory for line and color and a finger to skillfully wield a needle, every woman can have her boa or set of them at her own price. At the shops every type of frill, both wide and narrow, is sold by the yard; a few yards and a few stitches is all the material and architectural labor needed, and some of the most admired boas have been whipped up at home for half the cost of the same thing made and sold in the shops.

How wondrously gay the new foulard gowns are! This spring the manufacturers have sought to revive goods with fancy borders, and oddly enough the broad bordered foulard has led all the rest. Where the silk weavers showed their unusual good sense was in making the border very wide and giving it a ribbon effect. Hordes of foulards or peau de printemps, as one variety of this silk is called, are turned out, boasting absolutely no other decoration than their own sprightly borders used with skill and good sense.

One way to treat a border is suggested by the model of a house gown for afternoon wear. A most satisfactory Canton blue and pure porcelain white was the color scheme of the foulard itself. The border to this had evidently been wide and was most cheerfully imprinted in great bouquets of pink roses and pale yellow Gueldre roses. The thoughtful and artistic dressmaker treated the skirt in clusters of close-set pinched tucks running in deep Vandykes. At the foot she set on the border in a shaped flower effect, and of the border she also made a little short tailed directory jacket effect for the waist. Her triumph was unquestioned and not a scrap of lace had she used.

So many of the new dresses are made flat and even cut out a little in the neck that the question of collars and their height and usefulness is being gently agitated in fitting rooms. Flat necks and open necks are assuredly most comfortable, and to some women this trying mode is almost becoming, but they are in the dressmaking minority, and collars of choking height will probably finish the necks of nine-tenths of the best spring suits.

The mention of spring suits inspires a comment upon the almost lavish use of white in the decoration of the latest tailored things. White vests, cuffs, collars, revers, piping and stitching and facings are strong features in the world of sartorial interests. Hats are not only trimmed with white flowers, but faced with white or are all white; white belts are being pushed into notice and white gloves have never been worn so freely as at the present moment. One of the nouveautes de Paris are carved or plain ivory buttons. A set of exquisite ivory buttons for a new spring wrap cost $250, while in bone they were charmingly imitated for $5.

KODAK

Brazil, Ind., March 8.—Wednesday afternoon Albert Decker, of the firm of Decker & Son, furniture dealers, successfully photographed Harry Sayer, a trusted employe, while he was stealing money from the drawer.

On the 16th of last month Mrs. Pressel several weeks, and finally Mr. Decker decided to trap the thief. Consequently he ranged a kodak on the money drawer and attached a string to the slide which was passed into the cellar. A hole was then bored through the floor to allow Decker full view of the safe, and when Sayer was raking the coins from the drawer Decker pulled the string, securing an excellent photograph of the thief with his hands full of coins. He was immediately arrested and confined.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

"Mam'selle 'Awkins" Comes to the Lyceum on Next Tuesday Evening.

Frederick Warde, the Well Known Tragedian Will Present "Belphegor, the Mountebank," Thursday and "Julius Caesar" Friday.

The title of "Mam'selle 'Awkins," George R. White's big operatic comedy production, which comes to the Lyceum next Tuesday, has been the source of much comment. The title is easily explained. The husband of a poor English laundress discovered a wonderful cleaning soap which he called "Scrubolio," and becoming immensely wealthy, leaves a fortune to his only daughter, Honorah Hawkins, who immediately goes to Paris to study French and improve her station in order that she may gratify her ambition, and capture a lord for a husband. The result is natural; she refers to herself as mam'selle, and still being a Cockney, cannot overcome the habit of dropping her "h's," so instead of Hawkins she says 'Awkins. Thus the title "Mam'selle 'Awkins."

The part of Honorah Hawkins is played by Miss Delia Stacey, who appeared as the original "Willie Van Astorbilt" in "The Burgomaster."

Miss Stacey is supported by Miss Ella De Vine, a handsome little lady, who is said to have a big soprano voice; Miss Carolyn M. Huestes, a dainty soubrette; Eddie Smith, in the part of "Noah Snuffles, the hen-pecked hotel keeper; Harry Wilson, as the much-married Lord "Bobby;" C. C. Patterson, as the counterfeit parson, who is making money easy; J. J. Cluxton, as Fitzroy Cavendish, the physical culture crank; Herbert Salinger, as the MacGregor, an Irishman forced to wear kilts as a legacy from his uncle; and Mac Rossi, as Julius Ippic, the moneylender, who objects to being called Julius because it is his "Christian" name.

FREDERICK WARDE.

On Thursday evening, at the Lyceum, Frederick Warde, the well-known tragedian, will present the famous play "Belphegor, the Mountebank." It is now some forty years since the great play was pronounced one of the best acting plays of the modern stage. During that interval nothing has been produced to render this critical opinion less just. The time of the play occurs during the reign of the French king Louis XVIII. The first act deals with the arrival of the itinerant Mountebank and his family at the "Fleur-de-Lis," during a fete, and shows, while to the world he may be a buffoon, he has a heart capable of the noblest sentiments. In the second act he is the unaffected and loving husband and father in the bosom of his family. Nothing could be more amusing than the breakfast scene, or more pathetic than the ending of this act, where he learns of the flight of his wife and child. But a more forceful, if less touching effort is reserved for the climax of the third act. Here nothing could exceed the variety of light and shade in this vivid picture of gay old France, with King Louis XVIII restored to the throne, and crowds of the nobility returning to their estates and prerogatives and plunging again into their old life. With many plays the last act is almost superfluous, but not so with "Belphegor, the Mountebank," where the interest is cumulative, and calls for perhaps the most intense scenes both of conception and execution in the piece, holding the attention until the final curtain descends with he whole rounded off by a finished ase and discrimination. The play is full of clean comedy, deep and delicate pathos, and situations of great intensity. Mr. Warde is seen at his best as "Belphegor," a part that he has enacted many times. He is surrounded by the best company he has yet had, and brings the production here complete and historically correct in every respect.

It will be a source of pleasure, no doubt, to the students of Shakespeare, to learn that the distinguished tragedian, Frederick Warde, will present that sublime tragic play, "Julius Caesar," Friday evening.

ENOUGH ARTILLERY AT SHILOH.

An amusing incident occurred at a concert by Thomas Preston Brooke and his famous band during a recent tour of the New England states. Among the early arrivals at the opera house were an elderly gentleman and his wife from the country, and they were shown to seats well toward the front of the house.

When the curtain arose, revealing the fifty musicians attractively grouped on the stage, their natty uniforms and resplendant instruments completing a picture of dazzling effect, the old gentleman from the rural district was all enthusiasm. "Gee whilliken, Manda, be they all goin' to play at once?" he ejaculated, to the amusement of everyone seated near him.

A storm of applause greeted the renowned bandmaster when he appeared on the stage, which seemed to mystify our old friend. "That's a fine-lookin' feller, but he ain't played nuthin' yet," said he. "What's all this hullabaloo about, any way? Is he goin' to play a tune on that huskin' peg?" Just at this moment Brooke's baton was raised, there was an instant of eager expectancy, and then the band struck up a stirring march. When the music had ceased the old gentleman was in ecstasies. He applauded and stamped his feet vigorously, then jumped up out of his chair, waving his hands in the air and whistling like a gallery god. When his wife pulled him back into his seat he shouted: "By cricky, Manda, I never heared sich music as that before. Seth Tibbitts and his old fiddle don't amount to shucks."

And so it continued throughout the concert, Uncle Reuben growing more enthusiastic with each number.

Near the end of the program was the anvil chorus from "Il Trovatore," rendered with spectacular appurtenances. During this selection six red-shirted blacksmiths occupied the front of the stage and played the anvil accompaniment to the music, while a sensational effect was produced by the firing of eighteen electric cannon at regular intervals.

When the first gun was fired our rustic friend dodged excitedly and began to get nervous. The next discharge added to his discomfort, and when the third cannot went off he grabbed his hat and started hastily for the door, followed by his faithful spouse.

As they disappeared through the entrance the old man shouted back at the door keeper: "B' gosh, I got enough o' that kind of music at Shiloh!"

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Pauline Hall Contemplates South American Tour.

New York, March 8.—M. B. Leavitt appeared on Broadway last week with a bright and smiling countenance, the cause of which, he explained, was that Pauline Hall had practically signed a contract with him for his vaudeville tour through South America. "I have long wanted to try that field," said Mr. Leavitt, "for there is a pile of money to be picked up there as well as good vaudeville show from the states. Some years ago Robert Grau urged me to take up this scheme and offered to go in with me on it. I had just got around to the matter, but I shall take the company down solely on my own account. Miss Hall objected to the idea at first, but the more she has thought it over the better she likes it, and I expect her to head the company. She will be away for a year at least, perhaps three."

Undoubtedly "Colonel Bill" Thompson, as an organizer, is without a peer. When he got back to town the Colonel kept very quiet for a couple of weeks. During the period he gathered the remnant together and coaxed them gradually into the belief that what they needed to make them happy was another tour under his management. To any other manager this scheme would have presented apparently unsurmountable difficulties. But the colonel never turned a hair. Before he got through he had the Boston Lyric opera company headed for Hartford, filled with beautiful visions of ready money and a triumphal tour of the Central West. The first member of the troupe returned three days later, and to sympathizing friends unfolded a few incidents of the trip. In this language: "We went out on the commonweath plan, but we are coming back on the get-there-as-you-can." According to another member of the troupe there was so much trouble at the third performance that the musical director threw up his job, believing that the performance could not go on. Therein he showed a deplorable lack of knowledge concerning Thompson. "Colonel Bill" grasped a baton, planted himself in the leader's chair and directed the orchestra "Faust" as though he were Walter Damrosch. There is at present an alarming silence about the further affairs of the company.

The rise of Eleanor Robson is as remarkable as it has been rapid. Her first stage success was as Bonita in "Arizona," a soubrette's part which she played excellently well. It was a considerable jump from that to leading lady with Kyrle Bellew, but again she scored heavily. It is now understood that she will accompany Bellew abroad when "A Gentleman of France" is taken to England in the spring time. Later she will return to this country to star under the management of Liebler & Co., in a play which has not yet been selected.

Miss Robson is remarkably modest and retiring for a stage favorite, and she had a few unpleasant moments the other afternoon up at the Columbia university. Bellew was lecturing before the Engineering society of the school of mines. As the students from Barnard college entered the lecture room the gallant Columbia men greeted each batch with three rousing cheers. The girls enjoyed it, but being accustomed to this sort of reception, took their places without visible signs of emotion. Then Miss Robson entered, and the students, mistaking her for a Barnard late-comer, gave her three times three and encouraged her to hurry up. She drew back and was with difficulty prevailed upon to enter the lecture room. Even then she made her escape at the first possible moment.

While a "Gentleman of France" is expected to continue for some time, Liebler and company are always searching for a new play for Bellew. The one which has received the most favorable consideration so far is the work of Edward Thole Spencer, a young actor, and is entitled "The Chevalier Bayard."

Both the star and his managers are so highly pleased with the dramatic strength and the picturesque possibilities of the play that it will probably be the successor of the Weyman dramtization.

The Empire Stock company presented its second play of the season on Monday night. It is a comedy in four acts, by Ludwig Fulda, whose previous great success was "The Lost Paradise." The name of the new play is "The Twin Sister." It was produced in its original German form at the Irving Place theater here last season. The English version has been made by Louis M. Parker, who wrote "Rosemary" and translated "L'Aiglon." This version is now running in London at the Duke of York's theater. Margaret Anglin and Charles Richman have the principal roles.

This season at the Metropolitan opera house will be a remarkably profitable one, made so, above all other reasons, by the single performance given for Prince Henry. One expert estimates that the total receipts for that night were $69,000. The decorations to $15,000 and the other incidental expenses were not heavy enough to interfere with the net profit of at least $40,000, which is probably the record for any single performance without a benefit attached to it. The shrewd Mr. Grau let it be understood that the superb decorations would be kept in place for one extra performance at least, and the result was that at the succeeding night the house was packed to the doors. Counting this extra profit the visit of Prince Henry must have meant at least $56,000 to the Grau Opera company. It also mant a small fortune to ticket speculators, who managed to get a few seats for the inevitable late comers. Several reports had it that as high as $150 was paid that night for a single orchestra chair.

The death of L. C. Behman, the managing partner of Hyde and Behman, removes from the ranks of vaudeville management perhaps its strongest factor. As a showman, an owner of race horses and a real estate speculator Mr. Behman was remarkably successful. Not feeling well recently he decided to take a short trip to the West for health and recreation, and he made the journey in his private car, accompanied by his wife, his family and his cook. He had only just returned to town when death seized him.

Augustas Thomas, the playright, is about again after an illness which, not particularly serious in itself, has been very expensive to him. He had accepted $10,000 in advance payments on plays and has had to refund this sum, as his physician has forbidden him to do any work for at least six months. The largest return payment was made to Daniel Frohman in the shape of a check for $2500.

• • •

R. A. Roberts, the stage manager for Amelia Bingham, has lost a job because that actress decided to return to "The Climbers." In "Lady Margaret" Roberts had a small part, during which he appeared on the stage as the manager of a dressmaking establishment, and was not called upon to speak a line. This gave him an excellent opportunity for keeping the people on the stage moving around just as he wanted to, and the result was that this scene was always effective.

The presentation of "Notre Dame" at Daly's was remarkably effective. The stage setting was the handsomest seen in this city in many days. Especially the vagabound's retreat and the belfry of Notre Dame. The struggle between the deformed bell ringer and the archdeacon was thoroughly realistic, and when the dummy was thrown from the tower the audience gave a genuine gasp.

The news that Mrs. William Faversham has brought suit for absolute divorce against her actor husband came with a distinct shock to the many friends and admirers of the young star. At first the story gained no credence, for among the theatrical folks and the public alike the Favershams for sixteen years have been regarded as the most devoted of couples. In announcing the suit a friend of Mrs. Faversham made the" simple statement:

"There has been so much talk about this case that I think, in common fairness, that it should be said the co-respondent is not an actress."

Beyond that all details are veiled in the closest secrecy.

• • •

Ever since Virginia Earle secured her divorce from Frank Lawton, the whistling comedian, Broadway has looked for the announcement of her marriage to a prominent physician, whose attentions have been marked for some time.

• • •

It is now said that W. A. Brady and Joseph Buckley have arranged to revive "The Two Orphans," with Kate Claxton in her original role of the blind girl. In order to head off competition arrangements have been so hurried that the production will be made some weeks before the time originally fixed for the Lieber revival. Miss Claxton had refused to permit the use of her version, and she feared that the Liebler people would use another. In this instance her haste has been all wasted, for the announcement is made that the other revival has been definitely postponed.

• • •

Bijou Fernandez has invented "the fencing elbow." Her new disease is a first cousin to the bicycle knee. Miss Fernandez took up fencing for the sake of the exercise, and wielded the foil with so much enthusiasm that the muscles of her right arm soon demanded the services of a doctor, who strapped it in a rubber bandage. Miss Fernandez still appears nightly at the Bijou, but the bandage is partially in evidence.

• • •

Annie Russell will have but two weeks more at the Lyceum theater, as the Frohman lease is up, and the building will promptly be torn down. The closing performance of "The Girl and the Judge" is announced for March 22. Daniel Frohman is authority for the statement that the three engagements which Miss Russell has played at the Lyceum have been the most successful in the history of that house.

• • •

Miss Lillian Russell is one of the few actresses who are keeping Lent religiously this year. At Weber and Fields' on ash Wednesday night she made her first appearance in a $1000 diamond gown, with plate glass trimming, which not only sets off her beauty gorgeously, but makes her look ten years younger than ever before. Miss Russell has given a solemn pledge to her managers that by way of Lenten penance she will positively wear this gown at every performance between now and Easter Sunday.

Of all contemplated invasions of London by American actors none more seriously threatens to disturb the harmonious relations between the two countries than John Blair's proposed revival in London of the morbid and melancholy in drama as displayed in "Ghosts," "John Borkerman," "El Gran Galleoto" and other funereal offerings which a few seasons ago he tried to get New Yorkers to accept.

He even appealed to the thoroughly artistic by giving a series of subscription performances in Carnegie Lyceum, but the experiment was not popular.

Blair has at least the courage of his convictions, and his friends wish him success, although they are dubious as to the result.

From all accounts Della Fox is not having a particularly happy time on the road with her new musical comedy, "The Little Ma'mzelle." Once the princess of operatic soubrettes, Della declined slowly but surely in popularity. Her songs must now be of the "patter" order, which permits them to be talked about instead of sung. Reports from towns where "The Little Ma'mzelle" has been played say that the comedienne met with little more than stony silence.

There was weeping and gnashing of teeth up in the Harlem section of the city last week when the announcement was made that during the engagement of Mrs. Patrick Campbell no passes would be issued either by her managers or by the Harlem Opera house people. Harlem is the home of many actors who have families, and it likewise contains many politicians, all of whom are in the habit of going to the theater for nothing. Consequently Manager Lichtenstein, of the house, and George Tyler are widely despised in that district. Mr. Tyler announces that that so many propositions had been made for Mrs. Campbell for her appearance in Australia that she may give up her plan to return to London for the coronation ceremonies. Personally she favors a visit, and if she decides to make it, her contract with Liebler & Co. will be so extended as to permit a tour under their direction to the Pacific coast before she sails.

James K. Hackett has exercised the prerogative of a star, and will not support his wife, Mary Mannering, when she makes a short spring tour in "Camille" under Frank McKee's management. Mr. Hackett made this announcement last week, and says all of his time will be occupied in getting "The Crisis" into shape for his use as the successor of "Don Caesar's Return."

• • •

Pretty Mamie Gilroy, who was one of the old Hoyt favorites, is to go into vaudeville as a headliner. She will put on a series of acts known as "Lady Bountiful," which are taken from a newspaper picture series popular in the East. Gottschalk, who conducts for Francis Wilson, has written some tuneful music for the new star.

• • •

William Norris' faithful work as a comedian in the past four or five years is to have its reward next season, when this accomplished young actor will be sent out by Liebler & Co. as the star in a dramatization of Henry Blossom's "Checkers." This breezy little work is now being made into dramatic form for Mr. Norris, who will assume the title role. It will be another departure for the actor who has given the stage some memorable comedy characterizations in artists. Sembrich did not fancy singing to well-nigh empty house, sans the prince, and her act was cut. It was not a musical event at all, this "gala performance," but a curiosity show, in which Prince Henry played the star part for Mr. Grau, and drew no salary. The grand opera folk, who usually may take to themselves grand airs of importance on the Metropolitan stage, on this occasion were simply the vaudeville performers who supplied the incidental divertisement. They were like the mandolin orchestra that plays at receptions when the salad is being served. It was very, very clever of Mr. Grau.

Out of Plumb.

When the wall is out of plumb the building is more or less unsafe, and the higher the wall is carried out of the perpendicular the greater the danger of collapse. It's about so with the health; it is out of plumb when the digestion is impaired, when there is a dull, sluggish feeling, with nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness. Every day that these symptoms are neglected increases the liability to physical collapse.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It purifies the blood and cures nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness by curing the diseases in which they originate.

"For three years I suffered untold agony," writes Mrs. H. R. White, of Stanstead, Stanstead Co., Quebec. "I would have spells of trembling and being sick at my stomach, pain in right side all the time; then it would work up into my stomach and—such distress it is impossible to describe. I wrote to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, stating my case to them, and they very promptly answered and told me what to do. I took eight bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and five vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Thanks to Dr. Pierce and his medicine I am a well woman to-day. Dr. Pierce's medicines also cured my mother of liver complaint from which she has been a sufferer for fifteen years. We highly recommend these medicines to all suffering people."

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book containing 1008 pages, is given away. Send 21 one-cent stamps for expense of mailing only, for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the volume bound in cloth. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

THEORY

Of Amateur Detective Shaken By Man He Declared Dead.

New York, March 8.—As a student attending the College of Physicians and Surgeons, whose name is said to be Cohn, was passing through Rivington street, a woman shouted:

"There he is; there's the man who says you're dead."

As Cohn turned to look at the shouting woman he was seized by a powerful man, who began to thrash him unmercifully. The woman also took a hand. At every opportunity she pulled hair out of Cohn's head or scratched his face.

In the college Cohn told his experiences to his friends. His body is bruised and his head was bandaged. He made a vow to give up amateur detective work.

Mr. Cohn has had theories about detective work, and wished to prove he had the material in him out of which Hawkshaws are made.

Among a list of bodies taken into the dissecting room of the college about a month ago there was one of a man of big frame, who had tattooed upon his right forearm an elaborate nautical emblem. There was some discussion as to the possibility of tracing a dead man by such a mark. Cohn saw at once that the subject offered a magnificent opportunity for his genius in the detective field. He had the skin bearing the tattoo removed, and took it to various tattooing establishments. They said it was "beautiful work," but they could not give any information to him as to who bore such a mark. At last he found a "professor" who recognized the design at once.

"I did that work for Michael Glenahan," said the professor.

Cohn, after a long search, discovered a Mrs. Glenahan in Jersey City, whose husband, a sailor, had been missing two months. Delighted with the success of his detective work, but putting on a look of solemnity, he went to Mrs. Glenahan, and without a word of warning announced that her husband was dead. He showed the piece of preserved skin, and said her husband had been dissected.

She shrieked and then fainted. The neighbors rushed in, saw her unconscious, and not knowing anything about the facts, but thinking he had attacked a defenseless woman, they would have lynched him had he not fled for his life.

Cohn plumed himself upon his skill in the Glenahan investigation, and had no reason to have his confidence shaken until he was attacked on Rivington street.

He recognized the shrieking woman as Mrs. Glenahan. The man with her was the "dead" Mr. Glenahan

BASEBALL IN DULUTH

Strong Team Promised For the Coming Season at Oneota Park.

Five New Players Have Been Signed and Three Pitchers Have Been Secured--Talk of a City League.

Baseball gossip is reviving. Duluth has taken to indoor sports with paying patronage this winter, and there are certainly strong indications that baseball and other outdoor athletics will receive liberal patronage during the coming summer.

The Duluth baseball team will put in another season at Oneota Park, but efforts are being made to get an exceptionally fast lot of men together, and to improve the transportation facilities to and from the grounds.

Manager Van Praag has signed five new players and will begin his season with three pitchers, two of whom have never worn a Duluth uniform before.

Besides the bustle and preparation for the opening of the season in semi-professional circles, there is much talk of a city league. This was attempted without much success last year, but indoor baseball rivalry has incited a new interest in sports generally, and the outlook for a city league, composed of six or eight teams, is very good.

The first determined attack on the American association comes from the Eastern league. The different clubs have formed a pool for raiding the American association of the best players, and have raised a fund of $10,000 for bribing players, whose cupidity is their strongest side. George T. Stallings, who is now manager of the Detroit team in the Eastern league, it is said, has been selected manager of the looting excursion. He has been supplied with money and with a list of players wanted by his associates.

President Hurley of the Eastern league does not admit that this plan of warfare has been adopted, but would not flatly deny that the details were untrue. The Eastern league can be counted upon to antagonize the American association at every opportunity. It contends that Hickey's associates not only deserted the National Association of Baseball Leagues at a critical time, but turned around and robbed the Eastern of all its best players without offering anything for their releases and without respecting the claim of different clubs to the players which they, in a measure, had developed.

Stallings is very bitter against the American association and daily lets out a string of tirade. His principal fear is that the American association in paying such big salaries that it will bankrupt itself.

President T. J. Hickey, of the American association, who is at present in the Twin Cities, laughs at the Eastern league game. He argues that if the American association is paying exorbitant salaries for minor league players, how can the Eastern league, which is composed of even smaller cities, pay still higher salaries. The proposition is absurd. The players secured by the American association can only be tempted away by higher salaries and if the Eastern league should start that game, why, if the worst comes to the worst, it is a game that two can play at. President Hickey says that Stallings is sore because he was not admitted to the American.

The exodus of American jockeys to Europe leaves a dearth of first class riders here. Twenty-four of our best Knights of the pigskin have found employment on the turf abroad. This leaves all the American turfmen, with one or two exceptions, at the mercy of second-class and inexperienced riders. This is rather a bold statement, in the face of the many stories from England's shores that neither American jockeys nor their methods were wanted by the English stewards. It seems, however, that something must be going on on the other side, as Yankee riders are flocking there in vast numbers and with positive assurances of good mounts.

* * *

As a means of proving his identity for the cashing of a check, George Siler, the pugilistic referee, was asked by the paying teller at the Fort Dearborn National bank yesterday to "count out" an imaginary fighter.

When Siler presetred a check to secure the money, the teller said:

"You'll have to be identified, Mr. Siler."

The referee searched through his pockets and offered as evidence several letters, some of which were on boxing club stationary.

"Oh, you are the referee?" asked the teller.

"Yes, I'm the fellow," replied Siler.

"Well, I guess it's all right, but I need personal identification. Don't you know some one here?"

The possessor of the check said he did not, but perhaps some one of the force knew him. Thereupon the teller summoned one of the younger clerks, who is known to have a liking for boxing, and to him the situation was stated.

The latter looked doubtful when he confronted Siler. "You look to me to be a bigger man in the ring," said the newcomer, looking suspiciously at Siler's nose glasses.

"That's true, figuratively," said Siler. "I am a bigger man in the ring," at the same time removing his glasses.

Still the clerk was not absolutely sure. Suddenly the teller, in the midst of the discussion, interrupted with a jerky command of "Let me hear you count, Mr. Siler."

The latter instinctively bent half forward, began swinging upward and downward his right arm to a measured "One-two-three."

Before he had reached "four" the teller said:

"That's enough. You're Mr. Siler, and here's your money. Any one but a referee would say: 'Count what?' or would count right along."

* * *

George H. Ketcham, owner and driver of Cresceus, has practically announced that the monarch of the sulky will star in another exhibition tour of the country the coming season, and at the windup will sail for Havana, Cuba, where the great trotter will put in a number of weeks giving trotting exhibitions on the various tracks in the island.

* * *

Jim Galvin, one of the most famous pitchers in the country, is dying in a house on Laveck street, Allegheny, Pa., penniless and broken in health, while the waters of the flood have been swishing in the story below his room. He was a product of the famous "Kerry Patch" of St. Louis, which produced such players as "Scrappy" Joyce, Patsy Cable and Jack O'Connor.

* * *

After a week's theater engagement at Cleveland, James J. Jeffries will leave direct for the coast to begin light training at once for his coming bout with Fitzsimmons. The champion avers he is now in good condition, but he will have to take off nearly twenty pounds to be absolutely fit for a hard fight.

* * *

Manager Kelley, of the St. Paul Baseball club, has returned from the schedule meetings of the American association, Chicago. Said Mr. Kelley to the Dispatch: "I look for a very successful season for the league, judging from reports made by the managers at Chicago. Minneapolis is a bit slow in rounding to, but I am sure Walter Wilmot will line up a good team at the proper time. There need be no worry about Columbus or Toledo, if the clubs of these cities make any kind of a showing. Tebeau has got Louisville worked to the right spirit."

* * *

Far off Vancouver is getting ready to offer $25,000 for the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight. It took the business men of that burg one hour to raise $12,000.

* * *

Joe Walcott is again out with a challenge to fight any man in the world. In Boston the other day he posted a $1000 forfeit and offered to make a $2500 side bet with any prospective opponent.

* * *

Clark Griffith's record of going through a full season with but one wild pitch, as he did last season, was equaled by Tannehill, of Pittsburg, last year.

The American league has broken away from the price traditions which have prevailed in Ban Johnson's circuit for so many years. "Quarter ball," the watchword of the American league, is the cry no longer. Hereafter the 25-cent fan will have to go 'way back, etc., while the man who used to pay 50 cents for his grand stand seat will be taxed 75 cents.

This change of policy is a radical departure. A lift in prices has been often advocated, but never before attempted. The defenders of high prices have asserted that the American league was giving much better quality of ball than the National, and was therefore entitled to charge the same amount of money, and have also held that the fans would be willing to pay the extra tax in consideration of the fine games which would be given them. The conservatives felt that quarter ball was the magnet which had drawn the fans in the past, the mascot which had made the American league so mighty. Both sides had good grounds for their respective reasonings. It seemed, however, as if the conservatives would spin, and the prices would remain unaltered. As the issue proved, the radicals won out, and a scale of tariffs varying but little from that of the National league has been adopted.

It is hard to forecast the results of this change in prices. Perhaps the crowds will take kindly to it, flock in as thickly as ever, and swell the exchequer to overflowing. Possibly there will be a falling off in total attendance just about proportionate to the increased ratio of taxation, so that the total receipts will remain about the same as under the old laws. It may also happen that the crowds will do a disappearing specialty, and thus dwindle away, angered at the high prices, till the clubs play to empty benches. All of these possibilities can only be determined by the actual test of the campaign.

In all probability the exigencies which always govern the prosperity or sufferings of baseball clubs will hold good as usual. Clubs which rank near the top will enjoy a boom, and will rake in the money irrespective of the gate charge, while clubs wallowing at the bottom will be losers not only in percentage but in money, and doubly so from the exasperation of the fans, who would kick at paying 25 cents to see a tail-end team, and would simply scream at the idea of giving up 50 pfennigs to look at the losers.

Charley Comiskey, of the champion White Stockings, says he is well pleased with the change. He can afford to he. He also likes the schedule, which gives Chicago home games July 4 and Labor day—dates usually claimed by the Chicago National leaguers.

The Chicago club's home games will be as follows, Sundays shown by figures in parentheses:

Cleveland—April (27), 28, 29, 30; Puly 4.4, 5, (6); Sept. 17, 18.

The Chicago Journal says: "Judge Rees put an end to the infield farce at New Orleans yesterday by ruling off Jockeys G. Ellson, A. Bartley, D. Brazil, W. Penn, D. Gaddy and T. McHugh. Dagmar and Coley, two brush mavericks, were also relegated to a rear seat. Now, if the Crescent City club wishes to make a ten-strike it should declare off all steeplechases from now on. They are an eyesore to racing fans there. Some but the rankest suckers bet on them, and in the light of the recent scandals, the quicker the jockey club blots out the uncanny things the better for the sporting public. Jockey Corner's mount, Bristol, ran out of the course yesterday, but the rider failed to bring him back and go over the right course. Bristol won the race, but was promptly disqualified and Corner ruled off for life. It will be well to note that Bristol opened favorite. If steeplechases are to be given here this year it would behoove the tracks that give them to offer better inducements in the way of increased purses over those of last year in order to bring better class of brushers here. The infield spot was somewhat of a farce here last year, and it will bring only discredit on the tracks that gave them unless they exploit the best jumpers that money can bring here. If you are to have the timber toppers we should have the best that money can lay hands on necessary to have a lot of broken-down, spavined flat horses trying to eke out life's taper at the end shambling over the green sward. What a ridiculous sight it is to see a good jumper finish an eighth of a mile before a horde of superannuated flat horses, which is too often the case at times. The Chicago racing public bolstered the game here last year as it had never been bolstered before. It was a red-letter year in local racing. The crowd showed their appreciation of the cross-country game by an increased attendance when such sport appeared on the program. The jumpers, from an artistic viewpoint, were a failure, all told, and nowhere near the standard that should have been set for an indulgent and patronizing public. Judge Rees' commendable actions at New Orleans recently in purging the game from the machinations of scheming cabals should have a good effect on the sport here this year, and the public has every right to expect much higher class sport over the hazards than what was doled out to it last year. Many good steeplechase animals can be brought here this year if an incentive is offered in the way of increased purses. The tracks made big money here last year, and if they are to cater for the public's interest they should give nothing but the best infield sport that money can bring here. The Chicago public will ask the best that can be given to it, and it is certainly, beyond all question, entitled to it.

IN COPPER DISTRICT

Second Head of Mass Mill Placed In Commission.

Work at the Adventure Is Being Pushed Actively.

J. R. Van Evera of Marquette Gets Option On Belt Mine.

Houghton, March 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Mass mill has placed its second head in commission. The returns from the first head, started last July, have been good, and it is thought that the mine is now sufficiently well opened to supply selected rock for both stamps. The selection of rock is a necessity, as all of the Ontonagon county mines are very bunchy, stretches of very rich ground alternating with spots that are entirely barren of mineral, or of too low grade to permit milling at a profit. While this is true of all of the mines of the lake district, the Ontonagon county mines show greatest fluctuations than are the rule elsewhere. Fortunately for the mines of the Ontonagon district, the richer patches of ground are of exceptional value, thus permitting a process of equalization necessary to the profitable operation of the mines.

Work at the Adventure is being pushed actively, both at the mine and on the new mill. When this mine begins production it will have an exceptionally large amount of ground opened, and, for the reasons set forth in the preceding paragraph, it will be possible for the Adventure to "strike an average" of its ground much quicker than would be possible with a smaller amount of underground openings. Both the Adventure and Mass have one unusual advantage in the existence of a series of parallel lodes, there being six of these at the Mass and seven on the Adventure tract, in a cross-section of about 1000 feet. The Adventure will be able to furnish rock at a lower cost than almost any other mine in the district, for the first two or three years of operation, because the rugged country in which the mine is opened permits the removal of rock above the third level through adits, thus doing away with heavy hoisting charges.

The option on the Belt mine, which was surrendered on March 1 by N. P. Leopold, of Chicago, was immediately renewed to J. R. Van Evera, of Marquette, who now has options on both the Belt and Penn, where mining work is in charge of Capt. W. A. Dunn, who opened the Baltic mine in 1897. The Belt received a black eye nearly twenty years ago, when "worked" by an English syndicate, which was flagrantly mismanaged from start to finish, and managed to expend upwards of a million dollars without opening the mine sufficiently to feed a single stamp with selected rock. While this fiasco injured the name of the mine, it did not affect the opinion of good judges of mining matters in this district, because the plan of operations, or, rather, the operations without a plan, of the English company was so notoriously bad that the mine itself was never really opened, or given an honest test.

If the return of twenty-three pounds of refined copper per ton of rock stamped by the Baltic in 1901 is said to have disappointed Eastern shareholders, but should not prove disappointing to people who are not looking for miracles. The Baltic returned seventeen pounds to the ton in its first year, nineteen in its second and twenty-three in its third, which is an unusually good showing. The making of twenty-five pounds per ton places the Baltic immediately after the Wolverine and Quincy among the amygdaloid mines of the district, which is a pretty good place for a mine only five years old. If the Eastern shareholders would base their opinions on facts rather than on their desires, they would not be so subject to disappointments, which they apparently meet every time a copper mining company takes an annual report.

The Trimountain is making a surprisingly large amount of copper, but the figures of fifty pounds of mineral per ton, that have recently appeared, lack verification. The mine may be making that amount of mineral (which is the crude copper, with adhering particles of rock) but the figures so far printed are all estimates. Futhermore, the mill practice of the district varies to greatly that the amount of fine copper carried in fifty pounds of mineral ranges from twenty-eight to forty-four pounds. All that can be said of the Trimountain with certainty is that the rock is yielding surprisingly well in the mill, and the future of the mine can no longer be questioned, except by those totally devoid of knowledge of the lake district.

The rally in Arcadian stock has led to a variety of rumors, which, boiled down to the hard facts, may be stated as follows: The southern shafts of the mine are looking well and give promise of making a profitable mine. Unfortunately these shafts are not far from the southern line of the company, though a mine of fair size could be opened, if the present promising conditions continue. The diamond drill operated by the Arcadian has recently brought up some good cores. Just how good is a matter of conjecture, but at least promising enough to hold out hopes of better things than the Arcadian has yet met with.

Grading for the railroad of the Phoenix is well along, and the one-stamp mill is to be built this season. This mill will get is power and also its wash water from the Eagle river, piped from the mine to the mill under a strong head, and as the heaviest expense of Mills is for power to operate stamps, jigs and pumps, the Phoenix should be able to make a new record of low milling costs. Underground the property is looking well.

The southern shafts of the Mohawk, which at the start were not equal to those at the northern end, are now fully as good, and possibly better. The new mill of the Wolverine is well along and most of the machinery on the ground. It is possible that the mill may be in operation in May, though July would be a safer date to set. The Mohawk mill is about two months behind the Wolverine, of which it is a twin. The Wolverine will add about in the new mill, and the Mohawk should make at least as much copper as the Wolverine, at the start, and nearly twice as much eventually, owing to its greater area.

The miners and trammers at the Franklin Junior mine are on strike, owing to a difference of opinion regarding contract wages. As usual, the stories told by the employers and workmen vary greatly. The Franklin is probably paying about as low wages as any mine in the copper district, but inasmuch as the trammers who ask for $55 per month, were already getting $52 per month ,or $2 per day, it does not seem as though the average wages earned by miners could possibly be as low as has been asserted by some of the men. Where mines are worked by the contract system there are always a few unfortunates every month that make small net earnings, but this is evened up on the average. One long-standing cause of irritation in the iron and copper districts of Lake Superior is found in the prices charged for supplies to contract miners, which must be furnished by the company, and are charged at two to four times their cost. On the face of it, this seems little less than robbery by the corporations, but the explanation given for this apparent overcharge is one that satisfies many of the longer-headed miners. The companies state that if supplies were charged at cost, the miners would be careless in their use, and that much waste would follow. In the long run, the contract miners must do as well as they could do in other mining fields, or they will leave. According to the opinion of the mining companies, and their agents they are a unit on this point, a reduction in the price of supplies to cost would mean a waste of powder, candles, etc., and a lower contract price paid for drifting and stoping. The supplies wasted would have to come out of the earnings of the miners or the profits of the companies, or both, and in the end a reduction in price of supplies would do more harm than good.

The Isle Royale will soon be in a position to use its third head to advantage. This was run for a time, but was shut down because it was found that rock could not be properly selected to feed three stamps.

DULUTH'S NEIGHBORS

TWO HARBORS.

Two Harbors, March 8.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorney Dwan is able to be about again after his recent illness.

Representative T. A. Bury came up from St. Paul Saturday to spend Sunday with his family.

A local lodge of the uniform rank K. of P. is to be organized here in the near future.

The heavy winds of Friday and Saturday broke up and cleared the harbor of the remaining ice, and stopped the work of the ice men. Most of the dealers have their houses filled but a number will have to ship their ice in, as it is not probable there will be any more ice on the bay" his season.

County Auditor John Olson transacted business at St. Paul Friday and Saturday, going there to look over some tax matters.

Joseph Lager moved his saloon and restaurant into his new brick block on Poplar street and opened for business Saturday.

John Danby, of Ely, was in town a few days this week.

Mesdames H. S. Bryan and W. B. Woodward entertained a number of lady friends at the home of the former Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Skinner rejoice over the arrival of a baby girl at their home last week.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a supper at the Norden hall Tuesday evening, March 11.

The W. J. Siemeburner lodge B. of R. T. will give its annual ball on Easter Monday morning, March 31.

The village caucus, which was held at the court house Saturday evening proved a very tame affair, instead of lively as was expected, though the caucus was one of the largest ever held here, over 200 persons being present. The meeting was called to order promptly at 8 o'clock by Mayor Holden, M. T. Hannon was elected chairman, L. H. Bryan, secretary; P. G. Pastoret, J. E. Therrien and H. Burwell, appointed clerks, and the nominations soon in order. For mayor, the name of H. L. Holden, the present incumbent, was presented by J. H. Lunz. There being no opposition Mr. Holden was nominated by acclamation. For councilmen the first name presented was John Norden, who was also nominated without opposition. For the second council man the first opposition developed. The names voted upon being M. T. Hannon and F. A. Hall, of which Mr. Hannon received 103 and Mr. Hall 28 ballots, the former being nominated. For the third councilman Mr. Hall came up again, in opposition to T. J. Brown and was defeated by a vote of 129 to 69. The main fight of the evening was for the receivership, R. N. Oshlund and T. E. Evans being the contestants. Mr. Oshlund receved 132 votes to 85 for Mr. Evans, and was therefore declared nominated. For village treasurer Geo. Watts was nominated without opposition, as also were W. S. Andrews and A. J. McGee for justices of the peace and Chas. Gerulberg for constable. Everything was transacted in a quick and orderly manner and the meeting adjourned by 9:0 o'clock. Of the ticket named, H. L. Holden, M. T. Hannon, T. J. Brown, Geo. Watts, W. S. Andrews and Charles Yernberg are renominations. Though no opposition developed at the caucus there is to be at the polls, the following citizens' ticket having been announced: For president, H. S. Bryan; for councilmen, L. D. Rose, John Paulson and H. W. Cable, and recorder, F. E. Evans. The balance of the ticket has not been named but will probably be the same as the village ticket. Severin Iverson has also announced himself as a candidate for justice of the peace. For the town offices Charles Eckland for overseer of highways, George Munford for chairman and V. Dahlberg for supervisor, have announced themselves as independent candidates.

It is reported that the lady school teachers are to organize a basket ball team providing a suitable place can be secured to practice.

The city fathers held two meetings the past week, a special one Thursday evening to act upon the liquor license of Johnson & Scott, which was granted, also to grant Joseph Lager the privilege of transferring his electric light privileges to his new building. The business at the regular meeting Tuesday evening was the allowing of the salaries of the village employes and a few other bills amounting to a total of $283.12, and the reading and ordering published fourteen liquor license applications. Two Harbors now has a total of twenty-two saloons. The proposition from the Burgess Electric company of Duluth for the increasing of the capacity of the lighting plant was laid over for the new council and until after election, for the license question is to be voted upon and as the license money was figured upon to pay for the improvements no contract can be made until they are sure of the revenue.

The average temperature for February was 15.7 degrees above zero, precipitation 1.35 inches, snow 5 inches.

Conductor G. R. Smith returned Friday from Arizona and California much improved in health and has resumed his duties with the Duluth & Iron Range.

Mrs. W. E. Bender and daughter, Ocella, visited with relatives here a few days this week.

W. D. Newell returned this week from Colorado where he spent the winter and has returned to work for the Duluth & Iron Range.

Jacob Olson, who was arrested last week for purloining some articles from the Y. M. C. A. was brought before Judge Andrews Monday and sentenced to thirty days in the county jail.

Frank Walker transacted business at Ely a few days this week.

VIRGINIA.

Virginia, March 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—S. Shen, of the logging firm of Shen & England, was in the city Tuesday. This firm is doing considerable logging by the contract for Iowa parties, on lands twelve miles north of Virginia. They are a new concern here and are doing a great deal in a business way for our merchants. Two hundred men are employed by them and their work will extend throughout the summer with about the same force. In all probability this company's headquarters will be here, as the head men are looking dwellings. Logging is going on at present in 61-15, and just east of the new Duluth & Virginia road.

The local parties who secured a state lease of section 16-59-17, north of this city, received a brand new churn drill Monday and it is now on the property, nearly ready for testing the supposed body of ore. The lessees did considerable test-pitting on 16 during the winter, but the work was not of a satisfactory nature and it was thought best to do the job well first as last, with the result that a drill was secured. The people of this city will wait anxiously for reports of any find on these lands, as a discovery at that location will reveal and prove the fact that a new iron field lays untouched north of the Mesaba and between that and the Vermilion range, and just over the "divide" a few miles to the north. Many believe that ore actually exists in 59-17, but others gauge their ideas purely upon past geological surveys, and it is hard to give in that there is any existence of the much sought for mineral north of range 18.

The Bailey saw mill was closed down Saturday last and in all probability will not be reopened until the lakes are free from ice. The company is doing everything possible to get a big cut banked ahead for the summer's work, and Virginia lake is being used for that purpose.

A new townsite will be opened for a rush of the populace in about three weeks, and the new town will certainly be a hummer. It will be located in 27, 59-15, some six miles east of Biwabik, and has iron mines and white pine and Norway timber sufficient to warrant good backing for a large place. Virginia and Duluth parties are back of the project and hope to be able to have the lots on the market in a short time. Several lots are already spoken for so soon, and the land is not surveyed. At the present time 200 men are employed in and around where the new town of Palmer now stands, and at least twenty drills are penetrating the ore body on the lands adjacent, while the working of the mines in the near future is assured. The big Stephens mine will be a shipper this year, and the McInnis is being put in condition, the other three properties being immense propositions. The location is an ideal one.

THE DAUNTLESSNESS OF DELIA

BY ANGELA MORGAN

(Copyrighted, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

"Oh, Della, why did we ever come here? We might have known how wildly impossible it would be to succeed in a city like this!"

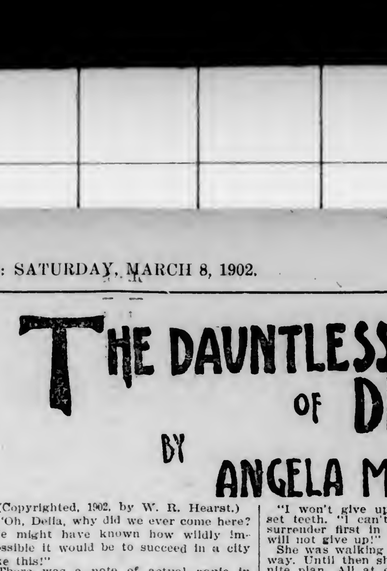
There was a note of actual panic in Grace's voice, which penetrated even Delia's stoical resistance. But she was prepared for the attack and in a flash and flung off the influence of her sister's mood.

"Other girls have done it," she responded fearlessly. "We can do it yet, if we'll just hold on!" She was washing handkerchiefs at the stationary stand in the corner. Her movements caught the spirit of her words and took on a determined energy.

"Yes, that's always it," moaned Grace, despairingly. "Haven't we been 'holding on' all the time? Things have only grown worse. Oh, Della, why not give it all up and go back home?"

Della turned fiercely. "Home!" she cried. "Do you call it home, where stingy relatives begrudge you every morsel you eat, every piece of clothing you wear? I, for one, refuse to live on tolerance."

"That's better than struggling in this way," insisted Grace. "Oh, Della, I had no idea New York was such a big, cold, heartless place! Poor little me, with my faulty voice training, hoping for a hearing in a city crowded with excellent talent—why, it's sheer nonsense! And as for you, with your everlasting scribbling that nobody wants—well, I should think you'd know by this time how useless it all is."



There was a resolute splashing of water over at the washstand. Then Della spoke.

"I may have to try a different line for a while, Grace, but I shall never give up—never. Nothing on earth can move me."

Grace rattled back hopelessly. "You're just obstinate, that's all," she said. "I tell you it's the wildest folly for us to stay here. We've just barely enough money left to go back home. Let's go now, before it's too late."

"Never!" said Della. She mounted a chair and began spreading handkerchiefs on the window pane to dry. This process obviated the necessity for ironing.

Grace sighed. "What did you mean by trying a different line?" she now questioned.

"Something not literary or musical."

"Well—what?"

"Anything I can get, Mrs. Edmunds suggested several things."

"Mrs. Edmunds!" sniffed Grace. "Yes, she can suggest things, but what does she ever do? All those women really care about is the entertainment they get out of us for their guests."

"Don't be harsh, Grace. I am sure Mrs. Edmunds, at least, is sincere."

Grace shivered and drew closer to the steam radiator. "I don't believe it. This city has taken away my confidence in everybody."

Della began putting on her hat and jacket.

"Where are you going now?" demanded Grace. "I suppose you have some other wild scheme on foot."

"I'm going to 'try, try again,'" answered Della cheerfully. "Good-by, sister, I'll be home before dark."

In spite of her fearless optimism, Della felt vaguous of a vast loneliness when she found herself in the street. The full meaning of her responsibility swept upon her suddenly with relentless violence. She fought furiously to keen off the oncoming tide of despondency that threatened to break down her heroic resolve.

"I won't give up!" she repeated, with set teeth. "I can't be defeated unless I surrender first in my own mind, and I will not give up!"

She was walking rapidly toward Broadway. Until then she had formed no definite plan. All at once she made up her mind and boarded an uptown cable car.

Grace, sitting in the dingy little room that had been home to them since they came to New York, abandoned herself to abject hopelessness. Della's attitude filled her with terror. Grace's imagination was devoid of wings. She could not comprehend the faith that believes in things not yet apparent.

It was dark before Della returned. She came in smiling.

"What's happened?" cried Grace.

"Our room rent is assured," replied her sister. "I have a position."

"What is it? Where is it?"

"Behind a counter," said Della, bravely. "A shop girl!" Grace almost screamed.

"Shop girl or not, I'll be an independent wage-earner."

Grace sank into a chair. "Oh, Della, Della!" she moaned.

"You are ungrateful, sister."

"What store it is?" asked the other chokingly.

Della told her. "I was extremely fortunate to secure it at all. Mrs. Edmunds helped me."

"Just think of being a shop girl all your life!"

Della could not resist a laugh.

"You decree it as if it were inevitable. No, Grace; it's only temporary. My ideal is just as high as ever. I'm thankful indeed that I've presence of mind!"

That night she sat up after her sister had retired. She wrote rapidly on odd bits of paper.

"What are you writing?" cried Grace fretfully from the bed.

"On a story!"

"I don't see why you will waste time that way. You know it's foolish, Della. It never does any good."

Della did not wince.

"I must keep on and 'give it up,'" she said. Then, gently: "I'll shade the light, if it hurts your eyes."

The next day Della went down town to work. Grace stayed at home and chafed at the thought of her dependence on her sister. It was still a hard fight for both of them, and the most rigid economy could scarcely make one salary do for two.

"I suppose this is better than going back home!" Grace would say, bitterly.

One evening Della was very late. When she entered her face was radiant.

"Now what is it?" demanded Grace.

The other opened her lips to speak, gasped a few times, then suddenly burst into tears.

"Heavens! Have you lost your position?"

"N—no!" sobbed Della. "But that—editor—accepted—what I wrote! The magazien will publish it, and—they say they want more—and—" She choked and handed Grace a letter.

"When did you get time to see about all this?" questioned the astonished Grace, reading the letter.

"Any time and every time," laughed Della, drying her eyes.

Grace still wondered.

"And he paid you this just for that little story you wrote the other night?"

"Yes, it was that. Oh, Grace, dear, I believe things are going to change for us now!"

"Well, I think it's about time," answered Grace, with a sigh of relief.

BLASTS FROM RAM'S HORN.

The darkness makes us prize the dawn.

It's an ill will that speaks well of no one.

The church that scatters its money will gather its members.

Hot-headed sermons do not warm the hearts of the saints.

The top wave of excitement always has a bottom of depression.

A man must be consistent with his present and not with his past.

A steady shining, though small, is better than a great scintillation.

Men who are scooped into the church are not safe in the kingdom.

They who march in faith pray better than those who kneel in fear.

The passenger is likely to make better time in the car than in the cab.

If you feel you have a call to preach to the many, first test it on the few.

Common sense is a sort of sixth attribute which will mistrust all the others.

HIS FIRST TARANTULA

And the Traveler Wanted It His Last.

"Every time I see the name Sulphur Springs, cold chills chase up and down my spinal column," said a Milwaukee railroad man to the Sentinel. "The reason for this is that at the little town of Sulphur Springs, Tex., on the Cotton Belt road, was where I first met with a tarantula, and of all the crawling things in the grand scheme of nature the tarantula is to me the most abhorrent. The conditions surrounding my introduction to one of these fuzzy brown arachnids was in a way peculiar, and as I look back upon the experience it is not without its humorous side. I had spent several days at Texarkana and was invited to take a trip West with the manager of the road and the assistant general freight agent in a special car. After we had started I innocently asked if there were any tarantulas or centipedes in the country. The two looked at each other, and I now understand that in that look there was an agreement to victimize me, but I was entirely unconscious of it at the time.

"'Centipedes, tarantulas, scorpions, lizards,' said the manager. 'I should say there were.'

"'Why, of course there are,' said the freight agent.

"Then those two men proceeded to tell me tales of the prevalence of these venomous creatures and how one's life was never safe for an instant anywhere in the state. They told me how they crawled into the beds during the day and waited until night to give the death sting to their victim as he was peacefully sleeping. They explained how acquaintances of theirs had carelessly put their hand in their coat pocket to be stung by one that had crawled there while the article was hanging from a hook. For the greater part of the day these men continued to tell stories of this sort until I imagined that I could feel the things crawling up my trousers legs, and if my hand unconsciously touched anything soft I was certain it was a tarantula, but I did my best to keep them from knowing the effect their stories were having on my nerves.

"Toward evening we reached the town of Sulphur Springs, and as the depot was fully two miles from the town and it was necessary to remain in the town several hours, it was decided that we remain over night at the hotel. When we reached the hotel we found there were but two rooms left, and the freight agent and myself were assigned to a double room. It was about 10 o'clock when we retired, and I was exceedingly nervous about spiders and reptiles. The hotel was an old frame building, and my companion was kind enough to inform me that it was just the sort of a house tarantula would seek. At the same time he smiled, and I realized that he was enjoying my day's joking. He afterward told me that he had never seen a tarantula outside of a bottle of alcohol in a druggist's store. When we had put out the light and retired he started again. It appeared that he had reserved the most thrilling yarn for this particular occasion, and I listened intently to a tragedy in which a tarantula was one of the principal characters. Before he finished I felt something strike my leg, which was covered with a sheet, but said nothing, not wishing to interrupt the story. As soon as it was finished I remarked that something had struck my leg.

"'Get up and see what it was,' said he, and his tones indicated a tone of fear that surprised me.

"I did as he suggested. Lighting the lamp, I carried it over to the bed, and the white-robed freight agent followed closely. As the rays of the light struck the bed, there, in the very center of it, was as fine a specimen of a tarantula as I have ever seen. I looked at my companion, and his face was as white as his nightrobe.

"'Do you think it bit you?' he asked.

"'No,' I replied, 'I am certain it did not.'

"'Well, let's get rid of the thing,' he said. So we secured a window stick, and after inducing the spider to crawl onto the end of it, I stepped through the window onto the porch and bent the stick and then released it quickly. In the moonlight I could see the fuzzy brown thing going through the air toward the ground.

"I have never spent a more horrible night than that one was. If I slept I was awakened by the sting of a tarantula. Every time I moved a foot or hand my flesh touched the fuzzy coat of one of them. Finally I gave up trying to sleep, and, forcing my mind into pleasanter channels, I made myself believe I was back in God's country, where there are no tarantulas. My companion confessed that he slept as little as I did, and also that he felt it was a sort of retribution for his efforts of the day before to make me uncomfortable. It was the first tarantula either of us had ever seen. And the landlord assured us that it was the only one ever seen in Sulphur Springs, but I received his statement with incredulity."

Duluth is rapidly becoming one of the most thoroughly unionized cities of the Northwest. All sorts and conditions of trade and labor are organizing. Usually in cities where there is a great deal of organization under way there is always more or less trouble between labor and employers of labor, but happily such is not the case in Duluth.

The union workingmen and the Duluth business men are on the best of terms, and seem to be enjoying the city's prosperity together with the best feelings toward each other. This is further evidenced in the fact that the wages of many trades will be advanced during the coming year without the slightest opposition from those called upon to pay the advances.

One of the most important of the recent organizations is that of the new machinists' union. There was an unusually large and interesting meeting of machinists in the Hunter block on Thursday evening, when application was made for the new union's charter. Even with such a good attendance only about half of the machinists of the city were present.

The organization of this new union is due to the efforts of Alderman William E. McEwen, state organizer of the Federation of Labor, and the organization committee of the Trades' assembly, which consists of Henry Dworschak, J. W. Richardson and Gordon O'Neill.

Members of the West Superior union attended the meeting and reported a local over there consisting or forty-six members.

For the first time in years it has been found necessary to use the "picket" system in Duluth. Owing to the fact that Moses Cook refused to join the early movement of the leading stores and the Retail Clerks' union, the clerks put out pickets to warn traders that he has a non-union store. They were very successful. The first night about a dozen purchasers were turned away and the second evening only two out of twenty approached went into the store.

The union is not making a personal fight on Mr. Cook as a matter of prejudice, but if he persist in remaining open after hours it simply means the collapse of the early closing movement, which has so many things in its favor. The clerks will probably be supported in their desire to live like other human beings and quit work at 6 o'clock every evening, except Saturday.

The district legislation bill in Massachusetts is indorsed by more than 500 unions, comprising a membership of more than 100,000 workers.

Bangor master printers are willing to concede the 9-hour day, but decline to accept the new wage scale promulgated by the union.

The Sattley Plow company, Springfield, Ill., has sued forty-two of its striking employes for $50,000 damages for trying to interfere with its business.

The London war office has placed an order in Switzerland for 100,000 pairs of boots, the contract to continue three years, amounting to 300,000 pairs.

The bricklayers, at their recent international convention, adopted a resolution that Southern members shall not refuse to work alongside a colored brother.

At St. Louis 300 quarrymen quit because a new scale demanding 30 cents an hour for sledgers and machine men and 25 cents an hour for laborers was refused.

Porto Rico cigarmakers have gained $1 more per 1000 without strike. The bricklayers, carpenters and painters of the island have organized during the past month.

A movement has been started among the coal miners to set apart one day of the year for recreation and speechmaking in honor of the national president, John Mitchell.

Chicago's 4000 clothing makers will receive an advance in wages. The advance applies to vest and pants makers and amount to 2 or 3 cents on each garment.

The formation of the metal trades' councils within all central bodies of labor throughout the country is advocated in a circular sent out by the Federated Metal Trades' council.

The Texas State Federation of Labor held a convention recently, urged the Democratic state government to pass a few labor laws and seceded from the American Federation of Labor.

Norfolk street railway men struck because the company issued an order requiring the motormen to give $100 bond for sobriety and the conductors to give a like bond to honestly perform their duties.

Newark's Boot and Shoe Workers' union, which withdrew from the Essex Trades' council several weeks ago, because of the political discussions which took place upon a number of occasions, will ask to be reinstated in the organization.

There will be a general demand among all trades in Lancaster, Pa., for a nine-hour workday about April 1. The bricklayers, hod carriers, stone masons, plasterers and sheet metal workers have already served notice on the contractors that they want the nine-hour day.

Toronto bricklayers want 45 cents an hour. They have the eight-hour day. The painters and carpenters want the eight-hour day, beginning on May 1. The Federal Building trades will not allow its members to work with men who do not carry the union card. This will have an important bearing on the matter.

Brooklyn's Brotherhood of Carpenters are fighting the Amalgamated association. The Amalgamated carpenters are really an English organization and pay per capita to their headquarters at Manchester, England. This is objected to by the Brotherhood carpenters, who desire that every member of the craft earning a livelihood in America shall belond to an American organization.

A list of names of employes in the Braddock, Homestead and Duquesne mills, who are entitled to pensions from the fund set aside by Andrew Carnegie for that purpose, has been prepared and sent to the company's office in this city. Andrew Carnegie gave $4,000,000, the interest of which was to be used for the benefit of old and disabled employes of the mills of the Pittsburg district.

The annual report of the New York state board of mediation and arbitration, dealing with industrial disputes, records 126 such between Jan. 1 and Oct. 1. These involved 649 firms or establishments and 44,823 employes, out of 62,536, the number employed before the disputes. Of the firms effected, 504 suspended work for a longer or shorter period. Forty-five of the strikes were for increased wages.

Plans are being drawn for the new Davis mills to be built at Fall River, Mass. This is the enterprise that was reported sometime ago as likely to be established in New Bedford. A meeting is to be held to organize the corporation and transact other business. The mill will probably operate 40,000 spindles on fine goods. J. B. Richards, head bookkeeper at the Arkwright mill, is named as treasurer. The main building will be three stories high and 127 by 350 feet. The capital of the concern will probably be $500,000.

Pittsburg bricklayers will soon hold a conference with the contractors, and will ask an advance from 50 cents to 62½ cents an hour. Fifty cents was the scale price during the last year. The Slate and Tile Roofers' union will ask 45 cents an hour. The structural iron workers are demanding 50 cents an hour after May 1, an increase from 40 cents, and an eight-hour day. The Amerocan Bridge company, the most important of the employing companies, have refused at two conferences to make both changes asked.

Payne's Bolt works, at San Francisco, conceded the nine-hour day to their thirty strikers and agree to other terms. The concerns that are still fighting are the Union Iron works, the Risdon Iron works, the California Electrical works, the Golden State and Miners' Iron works, the Dow Pump works, the Krogh Manufacturing company, Garrett's Machine works, the Abner Doble Iron works, and W. S. Deacon's Main Street Iron works. The Risdon and Union employ a large number of men. There are about 2200 men still on strike, who are being supported since last May from funds contributed by other organizations.

Secretary Steinbess of the National Building Trades' council, whose headquarters are at St. Louis, Mo., has issued an open letter replying to inquiries from all over the country regarding contracts let for the fair buildings. He says: "All building craftsmen should take a common-sense view of the situation and not stake their chances on the time-worn saying: 'There is always room for one more.' The two building contracts now awarded embody less than $1,000,000, and all branches of the trade are overrun with men who are now here and unable to pay board. The room for one more can only be made by shoving out one of those now employed. These are the facts in the case, and sensible men will stay away. The foolhardy will help to swell the flock of those who are constantly arriving—and making matters worse by their coming for the army already here.

ATTAR OF YLANG-YLANG.

Among other things, it appears now that by capturing the Philippines we have captured the chief source of the famous attar of ylang-ylang, almost as costly attor of roses, and equally as delicious in perfume, says the New York Press.

The division of insular aaffirs of the war department has compiled some information about it. Attar of ylang-ylang is obtained from the flowers of the lyang-ylang tree, a cultvated and wild tree, ften attaining a height of sixty feet. It belongs to the custard apple family, and its drooping greenish yellow flowers three inches long are of extraordinary fragrance.

The popularity of the violet as the latest favorite in the list of perfumes is threatened by the attar of ylang-ylang of the Philippines. Colonia Agippa, the choice perfume of the Romans, so named in honor of the wife of the Emperor Claudius, after enjoying in modern times an unrivalled lead for nearly two centuries as the Eau de Cologne, from the city of the Rhine, the first place of its modern manufacture on an extensive scale, yielded to the most lasting fragrance of the sachet in evidence in all forms, in all places, and among all classes and conditions of women.

The attar of roses, the famed essential oil of the damask rose of Balkans, finds its equal in perfume in the Philippine product, and the ylang-ylang tree is a better yielder of essence from the flower, and, therefore, a less cost basic essence for the perfumers' art.

The ylang-ylang, sometimes spelled ilang-ilang, while indigenous to many parts of tropical Asia, reachesits greatest perfection in the Philippine islands, where it is a favorite among the natives. eBsides its value as an attar in preparations for the hair and toilet waters, it is held to possess curative virtues in took and other aches and pains. A preparation of cocoanut oil, known to commerce as Macassar oil, for the hair, the attar of ylang-ylang is the perfume.

The perfumers of Europe, and, to a less degree, of the United States, make it the base of some of their most costly extracts. The Manila oil is practically without competition in the markets of the Western nations on account of superiority, and even at from $40 to $55 a pound the supply is unequal to the demand.

Hitherto the United States supply has come through Germany or France. Together with England, those countries have a monopoly of the product, which is generally secured in advance under contract for the entire output.

The tree is common to many localities south of Manila. It is found chiefly in the well-populated provinces and islands, and the natives say that it thrives best near the habitations of man. The propagation in plantations, by seed or cuttings, about twenty feet apart, each way (108 trees to the acre) is easy, and the growth rapid in almost any soil. The first flowers appear in the third year, the eighth year yielding as high as 100 pounds, the bloom occurring every month. The greatest yield is from July to December.

The process of converting the long, greenish yellow fragrant petals of the flower into essence is by the simplest form of distillation, using merely water and the choicest flowers. No chemicals of any kind are required.

The best quality is clear as distilled water and fragrant. The second quality is yellowish and smoky. The oil is drawn from the bottom of a glass separator, the water remaining. The oil is then filtered through talcum, and is ready for the market.

Seventy-five pounds of leaves yield about one pound of oil. Flowers are worth from 8 to 15 cents gold per pound. The cost of manufacture is placed at $4 a pound. The yield in the case of attar of roses is small, 150 pounds of rose leaves producing, but one ounce of oil.

There are whole flowering groves of ylang-ylang trees in many parts of Southern Luzon and the Visayan islands.

Inquiry Into Iron Roads Combine Proposed.

From The Herald
State Capitol Bureau

St. Paul, March 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—A resolution was introduced in the senate this morning calling on the attorney general to investigate the alleged consolidation of the iron range roads, and if there is such consolidation, to see that the laws are not violated. It was introduced by Senator Miller of Rock county and Senator Hawkins of St. Louis county gave notice of debate. So the resolution went over to tomorrow under the rules. It can be taken up then and acted upon, although no bills could be handled tomorrow. The resolution calls on attorney general to investigate the consolidation of the Duluth & Iron Range and Duluth, Mesaba & Northern roads, and if he finds a practical consolidation has been accomplished by the concentration in a single corporation of a majority of the capital stock of the two roads, he is at once to institute legal proceedings to prevent a further violation of the law.

The senate passed the Anderson real estate bill by a vote of 40 to 2. It will have to go to the house and have the senate amendments concurred in.

Senator Snyder introduced a bill providing that the state university shall be taken from the board of control and placed exclusively under the board of regents, and the senate passed it under suspension of the rules by a vote of 35 to 24.

The Anderson inheritance tax law was made a special order for this afternoon. The bill giving the public examiner power to check the earnings of corporations paying a gross earnings tax was passed under suspension of the rules.

* * *

In the house this morning Mr. Pennington of Dakota tried to get a reconsideration of the vote by which his bill, cutting down the iron ore freight rates, was indefinitely postponed. Mr. Mallory opposed it, and Mr. Laybourn rasied the point of order that Mr. Pennington could not make the motion because he did not vote for postponement. The chair held the point well taken, so the matter was dropped.

The Pennington bill amending the law for taxation of domestic corporations so as to tax their bonds was passed.

Mr. Smith's bill raising the personal property exemption to $200 was lost, and so was the Nichols' bill permitting constitutional amendments to pass by a vote of those voting on the proposition instead of requiring a majority of those voting at the election.

An attempt to suspend the rules on the St. Louis exposition bill filed, and it was renewed later. The point had not been voted upon when the noon adjournment was reached.

The house had a good deal of unfinished business, not much having been accomplished this morning, and the session is likely to hold until a late hour tonight. The conference committee put in most of the morning on the constitutional amendments, and agreed just at noon. Its report must be adopted by both houses. All that is to be done must be done today, as no bills can be passed tomorrow.

The senate railroad committee, by a vote of 8 to 6, ordered an unfavorable report on the bill to reduce ore rates on the iron range roads. That report will be made this afternoon, and Senator Baldwin will have a minority report recommending the bill for passage.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

BALDWIN IS PRAISED

For Faithfully Representing His Constituents By His Vote In Favor of the Ore Freight Reduction Bill.

From The Herald
State Capitol Bureau.

St. Paul, March 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—For presuming to have a mind of his own and voting according to its dictates on two occasions, Senator C. O. Baldwin has gained the temporary ill-will of the other senators from St. Louis county, and he has advanced himself immensely in the high respect in which the senate already held him.

The trouble came Saturday morning, as Saturday's dispatches stated, though Senator Baldwin and on a previous occasion voted differently from the other St. Louis county senators. This was when the Jacobson bill was before the senate. Senator Baldwin favored the franchise feature of that bill, and he therefore voted to give the bill consideration. He did this in the full belief that the tonnage tax feature of the bill stood no show whatever, and as a matter of fact, in the face of the showing that was made, the tonnage tax proposition would not have received three votes in the senate. So there was no danger of admitting that proposition when a vote was cast to give the bill consideration.

This vote, while it showed Senator Baldwin to be eminently fair-minded, as dozens of senators stated at the time, did not arouse the Republican senators from St. Louis county, for they knew that his vote did not endanger the interests of St. Louis county on the tonnage tax proposition.

But the clash came Saturday morning, when Senator Halvorson's bill to cut down the iron ore freight rates was reported by the reception committee, as had been expected, for indefinite postponement. A fight was immediately started to overrule the report of the committee, and forty-five out of the sixty senators present voted to receive the bill. This included several members of the reception committee, who for the first time, because of the apparent merit of the bill, voted to reverse their own finding. Senators Lord and Miller, both members of the committee, voted to receive the bill over the committee's report and stated that it was the first time they had voted against their own report.

Then Senator Baldwin made a motion that the rules be suspended, and that the bill be placed on its final passage. In the meantime, however, some work had been done upon the floor of the senate. C. A. Severance of the law firm that represents the interests of the United States Steel corporation, was present, and did some of the work.

AS BAD AS THE BOXERS

New York, March 10.—Lockwing, the Chinese vice consul at New York, made his first appearance in a Christian house of worship when he spoke at the St. Cloud Presbyterian church in West Orange, N. J.

In the course of his remarks he declared that the Boxer movement was no worse than the Chinese exclusion movement, both being based on ignorance and prejudice. He said:

"China needs your help for its progress and I believe that by lending the helping hand you will be doing a Christian service, helping my people to become better men and better women. Between this country and China closer relations must come and may justice be the star which shall guide these nations to look with favor upon all that is good in the development of my country."

WANT CARS FOR POTATOES

Chicago, March 10.—So great is the demand for shipping facilities that the potato dealers are paying the railroad companies a bonus of $10 a car, says the Tribune. The dealers have had trouble all season in getting cars placed when and where they wanted them and just now they are particularly desirous of quick action. The price for seed potatoes is advancing rapidly and the dealers want to take advantage of the market before farmers raise the price still further. Less than three weeks ago potato seed stock was selling at 85 cents at loading stations. Now the holders are asking $1.25. The demand is from southern sections. While they raise good table potatoes in the South, they are compelled to come north each season for seed stock.

AGED PEOPLE ASPHYXIATED

Mt. Clemens, Mich., March 10.—Frederick Doescher, aged 86 years, his wife, aged 72 and his sister, Mrs. John Frink, aged 60, were asphyxiated at their residence on Clinton street, some time between Friday night and this morning by coal gas. The women were found dead in their bed while Doescher's body was in a chair behind the stove. He was evidently awakened by the gas and overcome after he had gotten up to fix the stove.

WILL SOON GO BACK

Prince Henry's Visit to This Country Almost Ended.

Spends Several Hours Visiting City of Philadelphia.

Saw Independence Hall, Cramps Shipyards and War Vessels.

Philadelphia, March 10.—Prince Henry of Prussia finished his American tour in this city today, and for the brief space of five hours was the guest of this municipality. His reception was most cordial and his welcome heartfelt. From the moment when the special train bearing the imperial visitor steamed into the Pennsylvania railroad station, the popular demonstration was hearty and spontaneous.

The program covering the flying visit of Prince Henry was carried out as planned, in a manner befitting the dignity of the royal visitor.

Prince Henry arrived in this city at 10:20 o'clock, the special train having made the run from New York in exactly two hours. Broad street station contained probably the largest crowd in its history and the first appearance of the prince as he alighted from the private car "Columbia," was the signal for an ovation which was continuous as long as the distinguished guest remained in sight of the multitude gathered to extend a popular welcome.

The prince was met at the station by the citizens' reception committee, headed by Mayor Samuel Ashbridge. After shaking hands with the mayor, the prince was introduced to the other members of the committee. Then, with Mayor Ashbridge on his left and Chief Wilkie of the secret service attending him on the right, he walked through the roped off passageway to the street, where carriages were in waiting, Admiral Evans, the prince's suite and the reception committee following. The First and Second troops of the Philadelphia city cavalry, in command of Capt. John C. Groome, acted as official escort and two battalions of mounted policemen headed and brought up the rear of the procession.

The city hall is located directly opposite Broad street station, and the building was circled in order to give the prince a better opportunity of viewing the architectural beauties of the huge structure. Five minutes after his arrival Prince Henry stood in the mayor's

A SUICIDE.

Nels Hanson Thinks His Brother Took His Life.

Kansas City, March 10.—Nels C. Hanson, a brother of Jorgen Hanson, who was found dead at the Helping Hand institute in this city on Saturday morning with a bullet hole in his head, arrived here today from Crookston, Minn., to take charge of the body. Hanson states that his brother had for years been considered of unsound mind. He believes that he committed suicide. No developments have appeared to sustain the theory of murder. The body will be taken to Minnesota for burial, where the dead man's widow and ten children live.

TWO WRECKS.

Both Occurred at Crossings---No One Was Killed.

Neola, Iowa, March 10.—Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific fast mail train No. 2 east-bound was wrecked at the Milwaukee & St. Paul crossing west of this place last night. Engineer Schultz and Fireman Gottschalk, who went down an embankment with the engine was slightly injured, but none of the passengers were hurt. The engine and the forward trucks of the mail car left the track. The train was backed up to Council Bluffs and returned to this city over the Milwaukee tracks. The accident was caused by a misunderstanding of signals. Traffic on both roads were blocked for three or four hours.

Ironton, Ohio, March 10.—A Norfolk & Western freight and a Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton mail train collided on a crossing, the engines' sides wiping each other. The crews jumped and escaped except Mail Agent W. T. Stewart, who was imprisoned in an overturned mail car. The wreck caught fire and the fire department was called out. Stewart wrenched the door off and leaped from the car. He was badly bruised. All the mail burned.

TOOK HER LIFE.

Annie McCoy of South St. Paul Is Dead.

St. Paul, March 10.—Anie McCoy, aged 19 years, employed at King's hotel, South St. Paul, committed suicide this morning. She was found unconscious, the result of a dose of carbolic acid. Al efforts to save her life proved vain. No cause is known for the act.

MAY BE BENNETT.

San Francisco, March 10.—The Call prints the following dispatch from Kansas City: "The police here have a man under arrest answering the description of Bennett, the supposed murderer of Nora Fuller. The San Francisco police department has been notified and Chief Wittman has wired to hold the man and that a detective will start at once for Kansas City."

LONG HAS RESIGNED

Secretary of the Navy Will Leave the Cabinet.

To Be Succeeded By Moody of Massachusetts.

Washington, March 10.—The third change in the cabinet of President Roosevelt occurred today when Secretary Long submitted his resignation in a graceful letter, it being accepted in an equally felicitous one by the president. The change was made complete by the selection of Representative William Moody, of the Sixth congressional district of Massachusetts, as Mr. Long's successor in the navy department.

This change has been expected for a long time. Mr. Long had intended to retire at the beginning of the late President McKinley's second term, but he consented to remain until certain lines of policy in which he was involved were more satisfactorily arranged.

Then, when President Roosevelt succeeded, though anxious to return to private life—for Secretary Long will never again enter public life—a strong feeling of loyalty towards Mr. Roosevelt induced the secretary to defer his retirement until it was convenient for the president to make a change. Recently Mr. Long has been in Massachusetts making arrangements with his old legal connections to re-enter the practice of law and he has had his house at Hingham put in order for his occupation. When Mr. Long entered the cabinet originally he was an active member of the firm of Hemingway & Long, a well-known legal firm of Boston. He always has maintained a silent connection with the concern, and will again become an active partner.

The correspondence exchanged today is as follows:

Navy Department, Washington, March 10, 1902.—My Dear Mr. President: Will you accept this as my resignation of the secretaryship of the navy—to take effect on the first day of May next, or sooner, of course, if you shall at any time so wish. It has been to me a delightful service. I leave the official circle of your cabinet, in which my association with you and its members has been so happy, with high appreciation of your administration and with most cordial good wishes for its success, and for you especially. Very truly yours.

JOHN D. LONG.

White House, Washington, March 10.—My Dear Mr. Secretary: It is with very sincere regret that I accept your resignation. I shall always count it a privilege, not only to have served with you during the last several months, but to have served under you at the outset of President McKinley's administration. I have seen you in both relations and it has never been my good fortune to be associated with any public man more single minded in devotion to the public interest. Our relations have been not only merely official, but also those of personal friendship. May all the good fortune you so richly deserve attend you wherever you go. Sincerely yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

To the Hon. John D. Long, Secretary of the Navy.

HAVE YET TO BE CAUGHT

Sultan of Turkey Indulges In the Pleasure of Giving His Foes Long Sentences While They Are Absent.

Constantinople, March 10.—Princes Lutfullah and Sabahaddin, sons of Dahmud Mahmud Pasha, the sultan's brother-in-law, and seven other Turkish fugitives of lesser note have been sentenced by default to perpetual confinement in a fortress.

A dispatch to the Associated Press from Constantinople, Feb. 13, said that warrants had been issued for the arrest of Princes Lutfullah and Sabahaddin and other Turkish fugitives, who were charged with organizing in Paris a conspiracy to overthrow the sultan, Abdul Hamid.

Mahmud Pasha, who has long been prominent in the young Turk movement, and who fled from Constantinople in December, 1899, with his two sons, was sentenced to death by default, on the charge of being implicated in a plot to assassinate the sultan. He was a short time ago expelled from Greece, at the behest of the sultan, and then proceeded to Rome and later to Paris.

TEN PERISH IN FLAMES

Mother and Nine Children Lose Their Lives In the Burning of Their Home at Matane Quebec.

Matane, Que., March 10.—Fire, which originated in the kitchen of the residence of Arthur Bouchard yesterday, caused the death of Mrs. Bouchard and nine children. The fire was discovered by a servant, who immediately gave an alarm. Mr. Bouchard jumped from an upper window and was about to be followed by his wife, but she failed in her attempt and perished, together with her nine children, six boys and three girls, the eldest being about 14 years. Bouchard had arisen about 5 o'clock and lighted a fire in the kitchen stove and then retired again.

WILL RACE ANY BOAT

J. P. Morgan Will Send the Columbia Abroad to Meet Any Craft Afloat, Boat For Boat.

New York, March 10.—It is stated that J. P. Morgan announced at the reception given to Prince Henry by the New York Yacht club, that he will put the Columbia, the America's cup defender of 1901, in commission and send her across the ocean to race against anything afloat, boat for boat. This statement is said to have been made by Mr. Morgan in conversation with Admiral Von Baudisin and others, just after Prince Henry had taken his departure from the club house.

Commodore Ledyard immediately repeated the announcement to club members.

Under boat to boat conditions all question of class is waved so that Emperor William may have a chance to race his new Yankee schooner yacht Meteor against the America's cup holder.

WILL NOT BE REORGANIZED

Springfield, Ill., March 10.—The directors of the State bank of Elkhart, which was closed last Saturday because of an alleged shortage of $32,000 in the accounts of Treasurer Frank W. Cottley, who later killed himself, met today and decided not to reorganize the bank, and filed a petition in the Logan county circuit court at Elkhar, asking Judge Myers to appoint former County Judge Schwartzfeger, now cashier of the German National bank, receiver.

THE SALARY IS TOO SMALL

St. Paul, March 10.—A special to the Dispatch from Aberdeen, S. D., says: Judge A. W. Campbell has received formal notice of his appointment as assistant attorney general in the Spanish American war claims matter and in the communication Mr. Knox informs him that the salary will be only $300 per month. The amount named decided Judge Campbell not to accept the tender, as he does not believe it would be worth while to go to Washington for that amount.

METHUEN CAPTURED

Startling Victory of Boers Near Winburg.

Four Guns and All British Baggage Taken.

London, March 10, 4:33 p. m.—Gen. Methuen and four guns have been captured by Gen. Delarey.

Gen. Methuen was wounded in the thigh. Three British officers and 38 men were killed. Five British officers and 72 men were wounded. One British officer and 200 men are missing.

The fight in which Gen. Methuen was captured occurred before dawn March 7, between Winburg and Lychtenburg, Orange River Colony. The British force numbered 1200 men. The Boers captured all the British baggage. Gen. Methuen is retained as a prisoner.

The text of Lord Kitchener's dispatch announcing the capture of Gen. Methuen, is as follows:

:Pretoria, Saturday, March 8.—I great regret to have to send you bad news of Methuen. He was moving with 1900 mounted men, under Maj. Paris, and 300 infantry, four guns and a pom-pom, from Wynburg to Lychtenburg and was to meet Grenfell, with 1300 men at Rovirainesfontein today. Yesterday morning early he was attacked by Delarey's force, between Twe-Bosch and Palmieteknill. The Boers charged on three sides.

'Five hundred and fifty men have come in at Mariebogs and Kraalpan. They were pursued by the Boers four miles from the scene of action. They report that Methuen and Paris, with the guns, baggage, etc., were captured by the Boers. Methuen, when last seen, was a prisoner. I have no details of the casualties, and suggest delaying publication till I can send definite news. I think this sudden revival of activity on the part of Delarey is to draw off the troops pressing De Wet.'

In a second dispatch, dated Sunday, March 9, Lord Kitchener says:

"Paris has come in at Kraaipan, with the remainder of the men. He reports that the column was moving in two parties. One, with the ox wagons, left Twe-Bosch at 3 a. m. The other, with the mule wagons, started an hour later. Just before dawn the Boers attacked. Before reinforcements could reach them the rear guard broke. In the meantime a large number of Boers galloping up on both flanks. These at first were checked by the flank parties, but the panic and stampede of these mules had begun, and all the mule wagons, with a terrible mixture of mounted men, rushed past the ox wagons. All efforts to check them were unavailing.

"Maj. Paris collected forty men and occupied a position a mile in front of the ox wagons, which, after a gallant but useless defense, the enemy rushed into the ox wagons and Methuen was wounded in the thigh. Paris being surrounded surrendered at 10 a. m. Methuen is still in the Boer camp."

Then follows the numbers of the casualties as already cabled. The killed include Lieuts. G. R. Venning and T. P. W. Nesham, of the Royal artillery, who were both killed while serving their guns with case shot.

As Lord Kitchener announced that Maj. Paris had surrendered, and also telegraphed that he had reached Kraaipan with the remainder of the men, it may be inferred that the Boers subsequently released the major and his companions.

BIG STRIKE AT BOSTON

Teamsters and Freight Handlers Refuse to Work, Resulting In Great Inconvenience to Several of the Railroads.

Boston, March 10.—The strike of the freight handlers of this city, which, according to votes passed by the labor unions yesterday, threatens to involve 10,000 men, was begun early today. The Team Drivers' union, No. 25, embracing about 6000 men, led off. Other unions followed, and the strikers claim that by night fully 10,000 will be out. The strike grows out of the Brine Transportation company's trouble with its teamsters, which began several weeks ago, but was precipitated by the refusal, on Saturday, of members of the Freight Handlers' unions to take care of merchandise carted by non-union teamsters employed by the Brine company.

A large force of police is on duty to prevent disturbances.

The Team Drivers' union embraces nearly all the drivers handling freight in the city.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad and the Boston & Albany branch of the New York Central are most directly involved today, the Freight Handlers' union, which began the fight Saturday by calling out about 600 men, being made up mainly of men from these two roads.

At both the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Albany freight houses, gangs of Italians engaged yesterday to remove the freight which had accumulated after the regular force struck Saturday, were still at work. There was no sign of disturbance about the freight yards during the early hours. Police details guard all approaches, but there has been no demonstration calling for their intervention.

In view of the threatening aspect of the strike, the state board of arbitration today placed itself in touch with all concerned in the trouble. The members of the board were not without hope that the opposing parties could be brought together, although the strike had come in spite of the fact that the grievances of the union had been before the board in various forms during the past three months.

It was learned that the newspapers are exempt from the embrago of the teamsters and their paper will be delivered as usual, the same as supplies to hospitals and public institutions.

A BIG RUSH TO ALASKA

Great Movement to the Gold Fields During the Spring and Summer Is Shown By Rapid Engagement of Passage.

Chicago, March 10—The Inter-Ocean's Tacoma correspondent states that the present winter rush to Southwestern Alaska and Klondike districts bids fair to be outdone by the great movement to the gold camps at Cape Nome during the spring and early summer. Twenty steamships and sailing vessels have been announced for service in Nome trade during the season. These vessels have an aggregate freight carrying capacity of 40,000 tons. They will furnish accommodations on the first trips alone for over 7000 passengers.

So many passengers are already booked that shipping men are confident that every available passage will be taken long before the steamers commence to sail. This is due to the fact that the Nome and tributary districts have now become permnent gold producers, and that permanent facilities in the way of railroads, electric lights, telephones and other conveniences are being provided. These necessitate the travel northward of many men besides those engaged primarily in mining and the shipment of great quantities of freight. The steamship companies are receiving letters daily from New York and other Eastern cities to reserve space.

Seattle, March 10.—Advices from Dawson, via Skagway, state that the people of Dawson are preparing to make a strong fight against the Treadgold concession. Telegrams received at Skagway from the Klondike metropolis are to the effect that a committee of prominent men of that place is already on its way out from the interior, and will present the people's case before the authorities at Ottawa. Prior to the appointment of the committee, telegrams were sent to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the premier, and the earl of Minto, governor general of Canada, asking for a delay in the confirmation of the grant.

SIX MEN GUARD THE NEGRO

Chicago, March 10.—Chained to his wife and guarded by five detectives and a sheriff, Charles Savage, a negro, who is charged with being implicated in a $11,000 diamond robbery in Portland, Oregon, last November, arrived in Chicago from Montreal, Canada, and today will continue on the way to Portland. Savage and his wife were arrested after a chase across the continent. Savage is charged with entering the room and robbing the trunk of A. F. Lowenthal, a New York diamond merchant, while he was stopping at a Portland hotel. Savage, Mrs. Savage and a woman known as True Johnson, who was arrested in Omaha, are charged with having disposed of the stolen property.

LAID AT REST.

Funeral Service Over Remains of Lieut. Wilson of Fire Department.

The body of the late Lieut. Linus J. Wilson, of the fire department, was laid to rest yesterday with many honors.

The funeral service was held in the First Methodist church at 3 o'clock. The dead was escorted from Tibbett's undertaking rooms to the church by a cortege of policemen, firemen and members of the Masonic fraternities.

The casket was carried on the hose wagon of company No. 3. On the seat beside the driver was the fire hat of the dead lieutenant. It was this seat that he had occupied for the past four years when his company was on duty.

Six members of the fire department and brother Masons of the deceased acted as pall bearers. They were: Capt. Hector Rambo, Capt. George Maghan, Lieut. William Harvey, Joseph Cole, Charles T. Johnson and William Miller.

The floral tributes were magnificent. The Firemen's Relief association contributed a "Gates Ajar" of roses. This piece was four feet high.

The members of company No. 3 contributed a very beautiful floral shield. The blue lodge Masons a floral piece representing the square and compass emblem. The Scottish Rite Masons had the Rose Croix emblem in flowers, and beside this there were a number of individual contributions.

The large auditorium of the First Methodist church was more than filled during the services. Dr. Long preached the sermon and Mayor Hugo conducted the ritual of the Scottish Rite Masons in bidding farewell to a brother. The service throughout was very impressive.

Following the service the funeral cortege reformed and marched to Sixth avenue east and Third street. The funeral then proceeded to Forest Hill cemetery.

The flowers were not placed in the vault with the casket, but at the request of Capt. Charles Wilson, a brother of the deceased they were taken apart and distributed among the wards and rooms at St. Luke's hospital.

NEW PASTOR.

Lakeside Presbyterian Congregation Hears Rev. M. Sutherland.

At the Lakeside Presbyterian church, the Rev. Mr. Sutherland, of Salem, Ind., pastor-elect of the congregation, preached yesterday morning and evening. In the morning Mr. Sutherland took for his text "It came to pass."

"What I have to say this morning," said the reverend gentleman, "may not be dignified by the name of a sermon, but the time is opportune for a few personal remarks. My introduction to the Minnesota presbytery took place in 1892 in the little village of Jaspar. From there I was called to the church at Salem, Ind., and after nearly nine years in the service of the Master, on receipt of your kind and cordial invitation, ties were broken that were lasting and deep-rooted. I am no believer in chance, it simply came to pass."

Mr. Sutherland then illustrated his remarks by a few Biblical quotations. In conclusion he said he trusted that his ministry in the church would be productive of much good to the congregation, and submitted four thoughts which he earnestly desired the members to consider; first, magnify your Christian profession; second, grow in grace; third, go forward, and fourth, strive to be winners of souls.

The church was crowded at both services.

IS INVITED.

Rev. W. W. Dawley Extended a Call By First Baptist Church.

Duluth Schools Allowance From State Increased.

The Duluth public schools draw about $1000 more in state school funds this year than last. County Auditor Halden has been advised by the state auditor that the allowance per capita from the state fund this year will be $1.30, as compared with $1.25 in 1901. The apportionment is based on 9822 pupils this year and the total is $12,-768.60. Last year it was figured on 9429 pupils and the total amount was $11,786.25. The auditor's estimate, which is always made on conservative lines, was $10,000 for this year.

The Virginia and Mesaba Mountain is the largest district in the county, numerically, outside of the city of Duluth. Its apportionment is figured on an enrollment of 1185, and the total is $1540.50. Tower comes next with 648 pupils and an apportionment of $842.40. Ely is third with 599 pupils and $778.70.

AN ODD ACCIDENT.

Stove Poker Causes Death of Small Boy.

Willie, the 4-year-old son of I. McAdam, living at 431 East Eighth street, was buried yesterday. The death of the little fellow was caused through a peculiar accident which for a day was considered more painful than serious. He was playing with a stove poker last Thursday morning when he fell. One end of the poker rested on the floor and the sharp end struck the boy in the upper eyelid. It passed through the lid, glancing past the eyeball. At first it was hoped that the eye had not been injured, and it was believed that the iron had not reached a vital spot. The following day the little fellow was taken much worse and died almost immediately. It was found afterward that the poker had struck the bone of the skull and penetrated it or pushed it against the brain.

It is expected that returns will be made on two of these warrants some time during the day. All information as to indictments, either as to the identity of the persons indicted or the crimes charged, is still withheld.

CLAIM IT IS HIGH

Prospective Builders Find Cost of Building Considerably Advanced.

Difficulty Found In Making Loans Based on Present Cost.

Several Building Projects Already Dropped Because of This.

A short time ago contractors, architects and people generally looked for this to be the greatest year for building that Duluth has ever had. The number of buildings projected gave good reason for this belief, and supporting it also was the great demand for business buildings of different kinds and for residences.

Within the past two weeks or so this view has been considerably modified. Persons who have projected buildings are finding the cost of building very high. Hardly a building is figured upon now where the figures made by the contractors do not run from 25 to 50 per cent higher than the estimated cost made by architects. The result is in many cases that the idea of building is dropped altogether.

Among business buildings the high cost is proving to be actually prohibitive in some cases. Nearly every man who builds a business block expects to borrow a large part of the cost of erecting the building. The man who loans the money easily sees that the investment will pay but a very small percentage on the cost, even with rentals at a fairly good figure, as they are known to be. He feels, too, that within a very short time after the building is erected it will not be worth the money that it cost to build it by a considerable amount, for it is not to be presumed that the cost of building will remain as high as it is now for more than a temporary period. Therefore he will not loan the amount of money necessary to build.

Several buildings that were to have been erected in Duluth this year are known to have been dropped for this very reason. There is no doubt that it is a very unfortunate condition. Another exceedingly unfortunate condition is that non-resident owners of property, who are inclined to build, claim that it costs much more to build in Duluth than elsewhere and cannot understand why there should be such a difference. An outsider who plans to build in Duluth speedily drops the idea when he finds the cost much greater than it is elsewhere and he is in a better position to know what it is elsewhere than the Duluth resident.

One of the features of building against which there is much complaint on the score of cost, is in plumbing and heating apparatus. In many cases the bids for these features are said to run as high as 50 and 60 per cent above the architect's estimate and persons who are planning buildings find it hard to understand why an architect who has been conversant with prevailing prices for several years should be so far out of the way now.

Plumbing and heating are not the only things of which special complaint is made. Everything is said to be well up, except possibly plate glass. There was a combination in that line up to a short time ago, but it is broken and it is said that plate glass has not been so cheap in years as it is now.

Informal Opening of Wraps and Costumes, Millinery, Etc. at The Silberstein & Bondy Co. Establishment.

Preparations for this event had been going on for weeks and the announcement that all stocks throughout their establishment are now complete and are on display, filled their establishment with women folks who look for the very best and most stylish things the market affords—the very handsomest costumes, wraps, long coats of cloth or silk, silk waists, cotton waists, beautiful millinery, rich silks and wool dress fabrics, imported high-class wash fabrics in beautiful colors and plain white, black and ecru. Domestic cotton wash fabrics in beautiful new colors or plain white, black or ecru. Magnificent dress trimmings and garnitures of every sort; ribbons, vellings, laces and embroideries; galoons, lace collars, dress robes of jet lace or hand embroidered French embroidered silk or batiste waist patterns. Muslin underwear in rich and beautiful effects for summer; corsets in the new spring models; hosiery and underwear in plain or fancy effects; jewelry novelties such as belt buckles, belt pins, shell combs, plain or mounted, chatelaine bags and purses, hand bags and purses, belts and hundreds of other novelties. All of these are shown in kinds and sizes for women, misses and children; these together with the beautiful showing of new draperies, lace curtains, in Battenburg, Bonne Femme, Brussels, Point Irish, Point Ruffled Robbinet, Scotch Net and Point de Sprit, Madras and India Crepe curtains, Velour and Tapestry Portieres, drapery silks, upholstery goods, door panels, table covers, couch covers, denims, cretons, art ticking, Java cloths, Jap crepes, drapery fringes, gimps, pillows, etc., together with a very large stock of room and smaller sized Wilton, Axminster and Body Brussels rugs, in handsome patterns and a magnificent showing of rich Oriental rugs; all and everything in these lines are ready and complete for spring and summer. It is beyond question the most important display shown by any house at the head of the lakes and worthy of attention of people of good taste. Their business has made great strides within the last few years and they have been spurred on by their constant trade to such a point that very few retail stores outside of the largest cities show such handsome goods, and in such large variety. Their volume of business, together with the firm's personal attention to details, enables them to quote the very lowest prices consistent with the character of merchandise which they handle. The openings continue throughout the week and as many new things arrive from day to day, it is advisable to visit their store every day if possible. They heartily welcome you.

BLAKE'S LAME COW

It Figures Conspicuously In a Case Before District Court.

Mrs. Josephine Streater Sues W. B. Blake For $1500 Damages.

Unlawful Rampage of the Cow Basis of Trouble.

Mr. Blake's lame cow, and the chain of events following an episode in which it figured, absorbed the attention of Judge Ensign and a jury in district court today. The personnel of the jury includes among others P. S. Anneke, E. S. Upham, C. H. Thornton, E. G. Chapman and Dan Mahoney. The complaint recites that Josephine Streater, of 905 West Fourth street, wants $1500 damages from William B. Blake, but thus far the evidence has seemed to onlookers to be largely about the cow, Mrs. Streater's garden, a fence, a strap by which the cow with a lame leg was tied to a post by Mrs. Streter, and incidentally Mrs. Streater's thumb.

Mrs. Streater claims that Mr. Blake's bovine possessions broke through the fence surrounding her garden. She shooed most of them out into the alley, but caught the cow with the crumpled leg. She tied this gentle animal to a post in the yard. Mr. Blake had expected that his cattle were grazing out in the open. His little girl, who had been watching them, had gone home to get warmed a bit, he claims, and when he went out to see how the cattle were getting along, he found that they had strayed on to forbidden ground. The cow with the game leg was attached to the post.

There is not much dispute about principal facts up to this point in the story. But here the courses of the two sides diverge quite widely. Mrs. Streater claims that when she was tying the cow, Mr. Blake ran up and assaulted her. This assault was alleged in the complaint to consits of striking her.

On cross-examination Mrs. Streater said he might as well have struck her. He sort of pushed her arm away and untied the strap that held the cow to the post. She confesses that she was not so easily influenced by show of force by a mere man, and insisted on retieing the knot in the strap. Then she claims Mr. Blake seized her by the thumb. This thumb had been badly cut when she was a very young child. Whether Mr. Blake was aware of this did not appear, but anyway he seized her by the thumb. It is alleged that he was anything but careful in his manner toward the thumb. The member itself appeared to have been quite badly injured as exhibited by Mrs. Streater on the witness stand this morning. In the struggle, Mrs. Streater claims it was broken back and badly injured.

In cross-examination, the plaintiff admitted that the fence around her garden extended out into the alley and took in part of the public highway. She admitted that she insisted on keeping the cow as security for the damage done to the garden, and that she estimated this damage during the excitement of the chase, capture and controversy at $3. She also recollected that Mr. Blake confessed that he had no money with him. It was recalled that he had demurred to the amount of assessment which she purposed to levy on the cow for the damage done to the garden. He did not think it was worth $3. He said he would go home, get some money and settle whatever the damage amounted to. Here the lame cow proved an obstacle to the settlement of the matter, just as it had been the cause of he debate. The cow could not go until the money came. It seemed to be the beginning and end of all things.

When recess for noon was taken, the plaintiff had rested, and the defense had opened to the jury.

Decides to Decline.

Miss Jessie Cooley, of this city, received a telegram from Washington Saturday notifying her of an appointment to a clerkship in the local United States land office, a vacancy being caused by the resignation recently of Miss Florence Coffin. Miss Cooley will not qualify for the government position, as she has accepted a position in the offices of the Oliver Mining company, in this city. Miss Loretta A. Gallagher, who has been holding a clerkship in the land office here for the past seven years, has been advanced in salary from $900 to $1200 per year.

Ice on the Lake.

The Lake Superior harbor ice reports received today by Weather Forecaster Richardson show very little change in the condition at the Lake Superior ports. In the Duluth harbor the bay ice is about 24 inches thick at the thickest point, and the average thickness is 22 inches.

At Washburn the harbor ice is 24 inches thick, and there is about four inches of snow. There is from 20 to 24 inches of ice in the harbor at Ashland. The ice is covered with about four inches of slush. Snowfall is about 10 inches at Ashland. Very little ice is reported for the harbor at Two Harbors.

The ice pack that was brought into the Duluth harbor by the northeaster Saturday and Sunday is spreading lakeward again, but there still remains a large quantity of ice inside the canal.

Complaint Against Boys.

Complaint is being made by some of the residents who have to pass the Central High school that during the noon hour for the past few days a number of boys, between the ages of 12 and 16 years of age, have been in the habit of congregating on Lake avenue, in front of the building and snowballing each other and people passing. It is the latter act that is being objected to by people that are passing, and who are minding their own business. This noon one gentleman was very indignant over treatment of this nature, and he gave the boys ample warning that next time he passed Lake avenue he should go provided to deal with their case and, if necessary, he should follow them clear into the building to administer punishment where it is deserved.

DAMAGES WANTED

Suit Against Northern Pacific Road Is Before the Court.

Alleged That Damage Was Caused By Changing Grade.

Loss of Rentals and Cost of Raising Warehouse.

Judge Dibell this morning took up the trial of the case brought by E. Liedel, as administrator of the estate of his father, E. A. Liedel, against the Northern Pacific road.

The case has been up before and has created considerable interest.

The estate of the deceased Liedel owns the northerly half of los 15 and the southerly one foot of lot 15 in Transfer division of Duluth. It is dock property on Lake avenue. The complaint alleges that the Western Land association, the former owner of the property along the lake avenue slip, gave the St. Paul & Duluth road right to lay a track over the property. The track was laid, and it is alleged that the warehouses on the property were built so as to make their floors level with the floors of freight cars. This made them six feet above the surface of the water in the bay. This act, it is claimed, established the grade of the road in a legal sense.

Last year, it is alleged, the Northern Pacific, which had succeeded to the ownership of the track through acquisition of the St. Paul & Duluth, changed the grade in order to accommodate the Marshall-Wells Hardware company. The road is claimed to have raised the grade at a point opposite the plaintiff's warehouse 2 feet and 7 inches above the former level. This, it is claimed, forced the owners of warehouses built on the old level to raise their buildings. The suit is brought to recover $5000 damages alleged to have been suffered by the owner because of this change of grade. This claim is based first on the alleged loss in rental of $1000 a year, and the claim that it was practically impossible to get tenants while the floor of the warehouse was so much lower than the floors of the cars. Reparation is also wanted for the expenditure incurred in raising the building.

The spare time of the court, aside from criminal business and disposition of preliminary motions, was taken up this morning in getting a jury. Just before noon the plaintiff opened his case and introduced records as exhibits.

Lyons vs. Moran and Tischer vs. Duluth-Superior Traction company were continued. Bask vs. White Line Transportation company was placed at the foot of the calendar. Snockenbush vs. the Northern Pacific railway was stricken from the calendar.

WORKING.

Zenith Company Will Have Many Phones In Use Tomorrow.

By tomorrow morning 200 Zenith company telephones will be operating and by tomorrow evening it is expected that 400 will be ready for service. By the end of the week 600 or 700 subscribers may be taken care of and it is probable that the entire system will be operating much sooner than first anticipated.

The city and county offices will be connected tomorrow. The company has arranged to take care of the large business houses and public offices first and then push ahead with the remainder of the service.

The old switchboard of the Independent company of Minneapolis is expected to arrive this evening and a force of experts will be put to work setting it up. This board was too small for the Minneapolis business, but it is plenty large enough for temporary use here. In fact it is said to be one of the finest in the Northwest.

EXCURSIONS.

Circulars of Instruction Received By Railroad Agents Here.

Circulars of instructions regarding the merchants' excursion rates to Duluth have been issued by all the roads running into this city. These are the Duluth & Iron Range, the Duluth, Missabe & Northern, Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Chicago & Northwestern, and Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha roads.

The circulars referred to above have been sent out to agents of the roads. The jobbers, through the medium of the newly-formed Commercial club, have sent out circulars to the merchants of the Northwest inviting them to take advantage of the rates. The tickets for the next excursion will be on sale March 12 to 17, and the tickets will be good to return from Duluth between the 15th and 24th of March. The rates apply to Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Upper Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin and Nebraska.

The merchant taking advantage of the rate buys a one-fare ticket to Duluth and pays for the same at usual tariff. He receives a certificate from his local agent. On preparing to leave Duluth on his return home, the merchant takes his certificate to the secretary of the Commercial club, gets it properly endorsed and then goes to the Duluth agent of his road, who sells him a return ticket for one-fifth the amount of the regular fare.

Jobbers are also sending out circulars to their customers calling their attention to the advantageous chance offered for coming to Duluth and making purchases.

IN CONGRESS.

Washington, March 10.—When the senate convened today a joint resolution was passed authorizing the secretary of the navy to donate to the Minnesota State Historical society the steering wheel of the former U. S. S. Minesota. Bills were passed to provide for the payment of medical expenses of sick officers and enlisted men of the army while absent from duty with leave or on furlough, and appropriating $250,000 for this purpose; appropriating $30,000 for a site for a depot for the revenue cutter service near Baltimore. To establish an additional land office in Montana at Great Falls; appropriating $23,000 for a light house and fog signal at Mukilteo Point, near Everett, Wash.; to extend the time for the construction of the Omaha Northern railroad across the Omaha and Winnebago reservations in Nebraska; to reimburse the officers and crew of the U. S. S. Charleston, lost in the Philippines Nov. 2, 1899; authorizing the Central Railway of West Virginia to build a ridge across the Monongahela river at Morgantown, W. Va.

In the house, the senate amendments to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill were non-concurred in and the bill sent to conference.

Bills were passed to extend for one year the time for the construction of a bridge across the Niagara river which heretofore has been authorized by an act of congress; to grant permission to the G. A. R. to erect a monument to the memory of Benjamin F. Stevenson, founder of the G. A. R. in the District of Columbia.

The house then went into committee of the whole and the bill to classify the rural free delivery service and place the carriers under the contract system was read for amendment under the five-minute rule.

Mr. Swanson (Va.) offered an amendment providing for salaries for carriers not exceeding $900 per annum with an added provision that "no other or further allowance or salary shall be made to said carriers." This was adopted.

ROOT DENIES IT.

INDIGNANT.

Park Pointers Think the Ferry Is Needlessly Laid Up.

Park Point citizens are indignant to think that the ferry boat cannot break through the ice though they can.

Several of them have gone through and narrowly escaped drowning and they feel that the ferry service could easily be resumed.

Yesterday afternoon Alderman Neff and former Alderman Victor Johnson were walking over and Mr. Johnson went through, wetting himself clear to the neck.

Frank Bell, a well-known citizen of Park Point, was nearly drowned in attempting the dangerous passage and then the ferry boat had little difficulty in getting out through the ice and rescuing him.

The boat has been tied up at the Lake avenue dock, it being claimed that she was utterly unable to force her way through the ice. The Park Point people dispute this in an emphatic manner and say that they are simply risking their lives to save a fuel bill for the boat.

Last night and Saturday night the fog was so dense that people walking across the canal could see but a few feet ahead of them. A member of the ferry crew with a pike pole and lantern acted as escort or pilot, but the Park Pointers were highly displeased with that means of transportation as several went into holes in the ice even then.

Today only those citizens of Park Point that have urgent business up town are crossing the dangerous ice.

For fifteen years he was agent for the Northwestern road here.

Washington, March 10.—Following an illness of several weeks' duration, Mrs. Sara Jane Peffer, wife of Senator W. A. Peffer of Kansas, died here Saturday at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. N. J. After attending Bowdoin college and the general theological seminary, he was ordained to the priesthood of Christ church, Gardiner, Maine. He was elected bishop of Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico, in October, 1873. When he first came to the West there were but seven Episcopal churches in his diocese. Now there are more than 100 in Colorado alone and nearly all of them were set off as separate dioceses over twenty years ago. Western Colorado were segregated ten years ago. Opening Days for Tailored Suits Wraps and Millinery.

Informal, of course, but every bit as interesting as the formal opening days which usually take place a week or so before Easter—with us there's nothing to wait for—our display of Tailored costumes, Suits and Wraps is larger by far than it ever has been at this season of the year—our milliners are here and hard at work—styles have been set and Miss Bird has already designed many artistic creations—copies from French models—some of the French pattern hats themselves are here and more will arrive perhaps by tomorrow—many beautiful ready trimmed hats will play an important part in the millinery business this spring and we show some very beautiful styles in black or white or colors at $5, $6 and $7—and of course $8, $10, $12 and $15 if you wish to pay for it—and the French pattern hats run up as high as $50—that the exhibition is correct you may feel absolutely sure—and we heartily invite our friends to come and see this display—we invite milliners as heartily as we invite others. We owe it to our city to have this a school of styles as well as a store—and, as an exhibition it holds enough interest to warrant a half day's journey to see—for unquestionably Duluth has never had such a show of millinery—the decorations are the same as at Formal Opening Days— Palms, blooming plants, and cut flowers—and the store looks as bright and summery as a June morning—Of one thing you may be sure, when the Easter openings come everybody will be so crowded that half the pleasure in choosing will be lost—so whatever you expect to get—be it Millinery, Tailored Suit, Raglan Coat, Silk Coat, or even a Silk or Cloth Dress or Waist — get it early enough so that you will do away with the worry and bother of the last few days—besides if it's to be something that needs some alterations, plenty of time had better be given, as our workrooms are already crowded and the next ten days will see us more rushed than ever—We have many special Tailored Suits, Long Coats of silk or cloth, Short Coats of silk or cloth, Separate Skirts, Silk Waists, and garments for children that have been singled out as unusually good values—and we offer them tomorrow—

Notes of Styles.

The "DuBarry" styles will play an important part in millinery this season.

This again shows how far again famous actresses influence style—just as Maud Adams and Bernhardt carried women to the time of L'Aiglon—so Mrs. Leslie Carter has carried them to the last years of Louis XV, when the Duchess DuBarry ruled both France and the King of France, and Du Barry was transplanted from the realties of a milliner's shop to the realms of a king's advisor.

The play had not been running a month when the great Llez, of Paris, said: "The spring styles will be of the time of Du Barry, tempered by beautiful conceits of Marie Antoinette"—and this is really a contemporary renuissance, for Louis, who was to be Louis XVI, married Marie Antoinette four years before the reign of Louis XV and DuBarry had ended—is the story of the Chapeau far-fetched or its importance over-rated? No. Vierge's picture, "The Woman on the Road to Versailles"—portraying the beginning of the speedy end of Marie Antoinette—is given life by history's record of their slogan: "See her with the ostrich plumes in her hat. How proud she is!"

That is the picture.

The pigment is from the land of the Mikado and chrysanthemum. Japanese pearls, Japanese birds, Japanese flowers, Japanese straw—and the world's greatest maker of straw braids was almost dethroned a few weeks ago, when Stofel made a straw hat-braid that looks like the linked petals of the chrysanthemum.

Those the styles—and thank the S. & B. CO for giving them to you early enough so that you may guide yourself whether you buy from us or not. This is the style story and now you can come to the store and see them.

SILBERSTEIN & BONDY COMP'Y

TAXATION

Of the Public Service Corporations Is Still Unsettled.

St. Paul, March 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The conference committee on the constitutional amendment bill reached another agreement at noon today. The section on taxation of public service corporations is broader than in the bill as agreed upon at the former conference. It reads:

"There may be levied and collected an annual tax upon franchises granted by public authority in addition to the tax on the real property and other personal property of the person or corporation holding such franchise; or in lieu of the tax on such franchise alone, or in lieu of the tax on such franchises and the personal property used in connection with the exercise of the same, there may be imposed such tax upon the gross earnings of the person or corporation holding such franchise as the legislature may determine; and said tax shall be apportioned between the state, counties and municipal cities where such franchise is exercised in the same manner as real estate taxes are apportioned."

In lieu of the inheritance tax provision as agreed upon before, there was adopted a section providing for a transfer of tax of not more than 5 per cent upon the estates of all decedents above a fixed and specified sum, which tax may be uniform or graded or progressive. The exemption is left to the legislature. The amended bill was a special order in the senate this afternoon.

BOYS LOST.

Sturgeon Bay, March 10.—Considerable anxiety is felt for Clyde Stephenson and Carlisle Ramage, two boys who yesterday went out for a sail on a sail sleigh and have not since been seen or heard from. Shortly after they got out of Green Bay a heavy fog set in and it is feared they got lost and may have run into a crack or perished from exposure. A searching party left this morning to try and find them.

NAVIGATION OPENS.

Milwaukee, March 10.—Word was received here today of the opening of navigation of the Sturgeon bay canal. The Goodrich steamer Iowa, Capt. Stines, was the first vessel to go through this season. The opening is the earliest in twenty-seven years.

Freimuth's

Favored Dress Fabrics.

Exceptionally FINE SILKS.

ANY woman who is within reach of our store misses a point of personal interest if she fails to visit these departments and know how large and complete in every detail these stocks are. We mean that not one single sort of goods shall be lacking that any buyer has a right to expect. We believe there is no such lack. We are confident that nowhere in the entire Northwest is there a superior stock of Silk and Dress Fabrics—perhaps few that equal it—and we are sure that nowhere are prices more uniformly low. This is large talk, but we have the goods. So come tomorrow and see how we'll back it up. The following simply hint of the variety. With Easter only three weeks away—it's the best of wisdom to choose your materials and get your gown started early.

TEN MAY BE KILLED

The Health Department Closely Watching Cases of Glanders.

Ten Horses Now Under Surveillance of a Veterinary.

State Officer to Come Here Before Execution Takes Place.

Ten horses may suffer the death penalty for contracting glanders within the next few days.

These animals have been under the closest surveillance of the health department's expert veterinary for the past month.

They have been quarantined and tested with maline and show strong symptoms of the dread disease which has been epidemic in one of Duluth's largest livery stables during the past few months.

The ten horses will not be executed until the state veterinary arrives, as he will have to officiate at the post mortem examination of each horse. The object of this examination is to finally determine the accuracy of the local veterinary's diagnosis.

In case it is found that a horse has been killed for glanders when it has really something else wrong with it, the state has to pay four-fifths of the damages in reimbursing the owner.

As a result of the epidemic here the state and local authorities are keeping a much closer watch for diseased horses that come in carload lots from the West.

It is claimed that the present epidemic was brought to Duluth from the grazing ranges of the West. Out on the range a horse may have glanders for a long time without its becoming noticeable, but the moment the animal is taken into a city the disease shows itself very promptly.

By the slaughter of ten animals at once the authorities hope to be able to stamp out the disease, though their vigilance will not be relaxed in any way.

Removed to Federal Court.

The case of the Duluth Match company against Levi E. Ewing has been removed from district court to the United States circuit court. This suit, it will be remembered, was brought to recover $18,000 and equitable damages from the defendant. The suit is based on allegations of mismanagement of the match company, while the plant was being installed and subsequently. The removal to federal court is taken by the defendant, who alleges that he is a resident of Toledo, Ohio. He declares in his petition that he disputes the whole claim in controversy.

THEOSOPHY

Is at the Bottom of Domestic Discord.

Niles, Mich., March 10.—Dr. Mary E. Green, whose name figures in the divorce suit commenced by her daughter, Mrs. Grace Green Bohn, against John J. Bohn, of Chicago, asserts that theosophy is at the bottom of the domestic discord.

"My daughter was married to Mr. Bohn eight years ago," she says. "They were unusually happy until Mrs. Bohn espoused theosophy. She always had been a lovable, affectionate daughter—in fact, was my constant companion in study and travels for years—but when she began to affiliate with the theosophists and attend their meetings to the neglect of children and home, I remonstrated. She was so under the influence of the theosophists in Chicago that she turned with the most intense bitterness against me, even denying that I was her mother. She denounced all who do not accept this faith, and as a matter of fact her lovely home has been wrecked by theosophy."

Dr. Green is well known throughout the state as a lecturer and author. She has lived here many years.

AT WEST DULUTH

As a sequel to a couple of chapters of troubles at the West Duluth covered rink, Manager Brown of the rink this morning swore out a warrant charging three young men that reside in West Duluth with trespass. The trouble is said to have started when one of the brothers had a mix-up a few evenings ago with a Duluth young man over a certain young lady with whom both wished to skate. Afterward, for the part that he had in the trouble, the West Duluth young man is said to have been debarred from the privileges of the rink, when his brothers appeared on the scene and not only put their brother in, but, it is claimed, that they also went in and remained, without paying the customary admittance fee. The warrant will probably be served this afternoon and will occasion no little surprise.

TWO WILL VOTE FOR IT.

There is more or less speculation among West Duluthians today regarding the outcome of the anti-wine room ordinance at the hands of the city council this evening. The matter has been considered carefully by both of the West Duluth aldermen, and Alderman Barnes of the Seventh ward and Alderman Kern of the Eighth ward have signified their intention of voting for the ordinance.

As nearly as can be ascertained, the sentiment of the West End and of West Duluth, outside of the men that are in the saloon business, is very much in favor of the ordinance, and the aldermen will line up to the desires of their constituency.

Among the saloon men the sentiment is about evenly divided. Half of them are bitterly opposed to the ordinance abolishing the wine rooms, and of the other half the greater part are indifferent, while a few think the ordinance is all right for the reason that it will "hit the other fellows" hardest.

ARE TWO POCKETS.

The fact that there are two men in West Duluth by the name of Joseph Pocket, and one of them has been arrested and indicted by the grand jury for non-support of his family, has given rise to some confusion, and the other Joseph Pocket, a 'longshoreman, who also has a family, is receiving some of the very undesirable notoriety. Mrs. Joseph Pocket, wife of the 'longshoreman, wishes it fully understood by their

ALARM OF FIRE

Causes a Panic In a New York Hotel.

New York, March 10.—Several hundred guests of the Hotel Endicott, on Columbus avenue, between Eighty-first and Eighty-second streets, were thrown into a panic about noon Saturday by an alarm of fire sent through the hotel.

The guests were told by bellboys that for their own safety they had better make their escape. Despite the assurances of the hotel employes that there was no immediate danger, the frightened people bolted down the stairways and to the elevators, pushing and shoving one another in a stampede for the exits. The two entrances were the scenes of fearful crushes. A woman wearing furs emerged from a sixth floor window, and, screaming for help, began to pick her way gingerly down the fire escape. When she reached the second floor, where the fire escape ended she screamed loudly for help. "Unless you save me, I will jump," she cried. She was pulled in off the fire escape. The fire was confined to the fourth floor dining room on the Eighty-second street side. The hotel management, however, dreading a disaster like that of the Park Avenue hotel, sent bellboys and employes through the hotel to tell guests to get out. The fire was put out with hand extinguishers.

The heroine, Audrey, is a very "drayad," whose dream days fill more and more with adventure as her dreams grow into realities. LEFT SHIPS.

Striking Crews Tie Up Sealing Steamers at St. John.

St. John's, N. F., March 10.—The striking crews of the sealing steamers left their ships at midnight last night, rendering it impossible for the vessels to sail this morning. A complete deadlock prevails. The men are jubilant over the success of their movement and have telegraphed to other leading centers, appealing to the men there not to join their ships. The crews here, with their belongings, line the streets, but there is no disorder. As the weather is fair the men are not seriously incommoded by being without shelter.

Business is practically suspended.

CUPID

Threatens Benevolent Fund of Chicago Police.

Chicago, March 10.—Chief of Police O'Neill has declared war on Cupid. He insists the little fellow with the bow and arrow is responsible for threatened depletion of the finances of the Policemen's Benevolent association. His grievance is that the old policemen who have retired from active service fall in love with women so young they still continue the practice of counting each birthday.

"Well, plainly, it's this way," said the chief. "Old officers lay aside their uniforms and take the ease which should come with a pension after years of service. But then they at once fall head over heels in love with a girl of 20 or 25 years, and in the end there are wedding cards and all that. Well, if the veteran passes away his wife continues to draw the full pension until her death."

"To make matters worse," added one of the custodians of the fund, "some of these young widows marry again, but still continue to draw the pension of their first husbands."

LINCOLN HOMESTEAD.

New Yorker Pays Taxes and Prevents Sale.

Hodgenville, Ky., March 10.—The old Lincoln homestead near this place will not be sold at public sale for taxes, as has been advertised. David Crear, of New York city, sent a check for the amount of taxes due. Men all over the country have written officials of the county, expressing a desire to buy the farm. Some suggested that a public park be made of the farm, and others that the government buy it and convert it into a home for old and disabled soldiers, while some proposed it be converted into a home for ex-slaves. A farmer in Kansas said he wished to buy the farm for the purpose of raising corn, as he thought a farm which could produce such a wonderful man ought to be able to make a good crop of corn.

POISON

Mystery at Grand Rapids, Mich., Is Growing Deeper.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 10.—Clew after clew run down by the detectives who are investigating the mysterious poisoning of Mrs. Ada Klump has proved fruitless. The husband, William Klump, of Lowell, Saturday broke down and wept. He admitted his wife was murdered, but he denied knowledge of the crime, and said he knew of no possible motive for the crime.

Sheriff Chapman received the following telegram from Chicago:

"In Chicago since September. Miss Hattie Whitfield, 1584 Lexington street. This is the woman suspected by the officers investigating the case of complicity in the murder of the young wife, whose death from the effects of a poisoned headache powder has stirred up the whole county.

The sheriff had learned that Miss Whitfield had a brother in Chicago and at once set to work to learn if she had gone there. Chicago detectives had succeeded in locating her.

The local detectives and the sheriff's force are spending every energy to remove the mystery surrounding the tragedy. Klump's fondness for women, which seems generally known in the village and by those who are well acquainted with him, leads to the belief that when the plot is unraveled other besides Klump will be implicated.

Klump's first wife, who was Miss Alice S. Covell, of Lowell, says his attentions to other women were the cause of their separation. Her opinion was that he would stop at nothing if he thought sure he would not be caught, but she did not think he was smart enough to plan the murder of his young wife in the way it was carried out.

"If he did so I feel certain he was assisted by some one," she said.

It was definitely learned that Klump came to this city the last week in February and registered under the name of "E. White," and remained here two days. When asked why he did this he said he did not want it known he was here from Lowell. He just came here to look around and have a good time, he said. When brought to the jail Klump had about $170 on his person. It was reported that he had turned his personal property into cash when the case began to be investigated, but this he denies. He said it was money he saved from his wages of $1.25 a day.

The police learned of two other young women, residents of this city, who were friends of Klump. They are sisters When they were located it was found one of them had been sick several weeks with typhoid fever and the other had been nursing her, and this clew fell through. Another tip was obtained from a man of the name of Beagle, who formerly lived in Lowell and knows Klump. He reports having seen Klump with a woman in Canal street, this city, on the night of Feb. 22. Efforts are now being made to locate this woman. Meantime, the sentiment in Lowell has grown stronger than ever that Mrs. Klump was the victim of a murderous plot.

IRON ORE OUTPUT

Lake Superior District Expected to Ship 24,000,000 Tons.

This Will Be Tenth Year of Shipping From Mesaba.

Steel Corporation Will Sell Very Little Bessemer Ore.

The general expectation is that about 24,000,000 tons of iron ore will be taken from the mines around Lake Superior this year, of which all but 500,000 tons will be mined in the United States. Minnesota will furnish about 14,000,000 tons of this amount, and the Mesaba range will produce at least six-sevenths of it, or 12,000,000 tons. This will be the tenth year of the operation of the Mesaba as a mining district, and it is little less than marvelous that the district should have sprung to such an enormous production in so short a time. It is understood that of the 24,000,000 tons which will be mined about 14,000,000 tons has been covered by vessel tonnage, including the ships owned and operated by mining syndicates.

The Michigan and Wisconsin ranges are expected to show little change in their outputs. The Marquette range, which has been declining for a couple of years, may show some increase, and the Gogebic will also increase somewhat.

It is anticipated that there will be five mines on the Mesaba range that will produce 1,000,000 tons or more. This is a record that no other mining district can show.

The United States Steel corporation will mine between 5,500,000 and 6,000,000 tons of Bessemer ore on the Mesaba range, about 1,500,000 tons on the Vermillion range, and a large tonnage on the Marquette range, as well as considerable on the Menominee range. Of its Mesaba total not one ton is for sale, although some has been sold on long-time contracts. All of the ore that will be mined, it is stated, will be demanded by the furnaces of constituent steel-making companies. Not much of the steel corporation's Bessemer ores outside of this will be for sale, and the furnaces that must buy ore will probably have to rely largely on independent mines.

The Northern Pacific railroad, which owns a large acreage of land on the Mesaba, has withdrawn all of its property from sale or lease. It is believed that these lands will ultimately be turned over to the James J. Hill interests for lease or traffic on a royalty basis. It is supposed that some of them contain iron. The lands were originally made over to the St. Paul & Duluth road as part of its state land grant and passed to the Northern Pacific road as part of the St. Paul & Duluth property.

Explorations have been begun on the Mesaba range in section 34-58-19. This is nearly two miles south of what has been considered the iron ore formation. It would be very interesting from a geological standpoint if ore should be found there, and indications are said to be fairly good.

Operations are also under way in Itasca county. A number of drills have been at work on the eastern side of the county on the lands of the Mississippi River Lumber company, where indications are good. On lands of this company one find has already been made and is now being investigated by the McCormick Harvesting Machine company.

The county board of Itasca county has leased mining rights on the county poor farm to a large ore concern. Indications of iron have been found on the farm. It will be explored thoroughly.

On the McGregor lands adjoining the townsite of Hibbing on the south a find of ore has been made. S. Dosseau held the property while McGregor's explorations were carried on, and he claims his lease, although it was cancelled two years ago. It is reported that he will sue to hold it.

HARD TO GET.

Commercial Club Finds Difficulty In Getting Permanent Quarters.

The articles of incorporation for the new Duluth Commercial club have been prepared and are now being signed by the first directors selected at the mass meeting held at the city hall ten days ago. As soon as all have signed the articles will be filed.

Membership papers are being circulated among all the big concerns and through all the large office buildings. They are being generously signed by young men that have long felt the need of a resort such as it is intended the club rooms will provide.

If arrangements are made for leasing the upper floor of the new steel building for club rooms, temporary quarters will have to be provided for several months. It is said that this would be true whatever location might be selected. The committee on location has been able to find no building where adequate quarters might be ready as soon as the club would like to occupy them.

It was originally thought that the steel building would be completed by May 1, but delay in the shipment of steel has caused this expectation to be abandoned. It is said it is now hoped that the building can be finished by next October.

He is making an excellent impression with the shippers who have met him, and railroad men vouch for his ability and good fellowship. Mr. Bryan will be succeeded as traveling freight agent by Frank Ryan, one of the good fellows soliciting agents in the Chicago office of the Wisconsin Central.

TOO MUCH ICE.

Ferry Service to Park Point Is Temporarily Abandoned.

Ferry service to Park Point was abandoned for a day yesterday. The northeast wind of Saturday night and yesterday not only brought the floating ice back to this end of the lake, but it was forced through the canal and was packed so closely in the harbor that the ferry boat Estelle was unable to get away from the Lake avenue dock during the entire day. Very few of the Park Point residents made any attempt to reach the city. Some, including women, more daring than the rest, walked over on the ice to the Fifth avenue dock. These proceeded with great caution and all carried poles to prevent their going down had the ice given away under them.

A large crowd of people visited the canal and walked out on the north pier yesterday to see the ice piled up on the new pier and along Minnesota Point just a few hundred yards off the shore. It was an interesting spectacle. So tightly was the ice packed in the canal that a twenty-foot pike pole could not be made to reach under the lower surface. It is claimed that the ice at the head of the canal was packed underneath for at least thirty feet. One of the iron lamp posts on the outer end of the south pier is completely buried in the mass of ice that has been thrown and forced up on the pier. It is believed that the arms have been broken off. Two lamp posts at the outer end of the north pier were broken off by the ice a few days ago.

The ice along Minnesota Point is piled high in several places. The water is shallow because of the sand that was dumped from last season's dredging and the first ice formed in struck bottom and stayed while the succeeding masses were crowded against and over and on top of the barrier thus formed, making huge hills of broken ice. This leaves the beach comparatively free from ice. The ice floe extended out in the lake several hundred yards from the end of the pier.

BURNED HIS EYES.

V. Rakowsky Has Unfortunate Accident at Houghton.

V. Rakowsky, a Duluth young man who is attending the Houghton College of Mines was the victim of an unfortunate accident last week and it is feared may partially lose his eyesight because of it. The Houghton Gazette says of it:

"Mr. Rakowsky, with other students was working with the chemicals, when the young man picked up the test tube which was not in use and discovering that there was some sort of chemical in it, lifted it and blew into it. The result was that the chemical, which proved to be potassium hydroxide, KOH, one of the strongest alkills, was blown into both of his eyes. The alkili was so strong that it burned the pupil of the eye badly. Fortunately Dr. Koenig was present when the accident occurred and promptly applied an acid to neutralize the alkali. It is not known whether Mr. Rakowsky will lose his eyesight or not. The accident was a most unfortunate affair.

Fight Over Anti-Wine Room Ordinance to Be Pretty One.

Friends of Measure Claim They Will Have Nine Votes.

Council Will Meet Again Tomorrow Night For Organization.

The famous anti-anteroom ordinance is slated for reappearance in tonight's council meeting.

Friends of the ordinance are claiming nine affirmative votes. That is the number required to pass it.

Opponents of the ordinance say they will be able to bring about its defeat by a tie vote.

One thing is certain—the council will not be as unanimously in favor of the ordinance as was the temperance mass meeting on Friday afternoon.

The expression of public sentiment voiced by Friday's meeting is said to have entirely changed the views of one alderman who has been opposing the measure, and to have swung over one of the doubtful members recently elected.

It is probable that the meeting will abound in pyrotechnical oratory, especially from one or two aldermen vigorously opposed to the ordinance.

Alderman Moore of the First ward will lead the fight for the ordinance, and it is said that Alderman Krumlegg of the Second ward will be the leader of the opposition.

The ordinance committee has not received very valuable information by correspondence with other cities in which similar ordinances exist. For the most part the city clerks were apparently so deep in politics that they did not dare express an opinion as to whether the ordinance had been a good thing in their city or not.

They simply mailed the committee copies of the various ordinances without even so much as a marginal note. This was the case in reference sought from Chicago, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Michigan cities gave the most information. In the Wolverine state there is a general statute against wine rooms in saloons, and the state law is not enforced.

The temperance people of Duluth are considerably wrought up over the ordinance introduced by former Alderman Cromwell, and yesterday many churches endorsed it and appointed delegates to attend tonight's council meeting to give it moral support.

There will be another meeting of the council tomorrow evening. This is the meeting of organization under the new charter, which provides that the president of the council and other officers shall be selected on the second Tuesday in March.

Alderman Haven, Republican, of the Seventh ward, is slated for the presidency. L. W. Cheadle, Democrat, is scheduled for re-election as city clerk.

The mayor will also have his appointments and his annual message to send in at tomorrow night's meeting.

HUSTLING.

Loggers Pushing Their Work With All Possible Speed.

The loggers of Minnesota, who are finishing up their operations for the winter are hustling the work at every camp with all possible speed. While there still remains enough snow for good sleighing in the woods, the soft weather is fast bringing about unfavorable conditions and at the present rate of thawing it will not be long before skidding will be practically impossible, particularly in the swampy districts.

The local loggers are disposed to take exception to the statements made by some of the lumber journals that logging operations are practically at a standstill and that from 20 to 30 per cent of the logs skidded cannot be hauled to the landings. If this was the situation it would intimate a shortage in the log crop of the northern part of this state of serious proportions, and the loggers do not believe that the statement is justified. Some of the smaller operators, will, it is true, have their log crop curtailed to some extent, but the large operators expect to get out nearly all of their season's cut, if not the entire crop.

They say there is no cause for alarm and that the cry of log shortage is exaggerated. Such reports are not regarded favorably by the consumer as a rule, for they tend to make an advance in lumber prices. No advances has yet taken place and the manufacturers are waiting until they have more definite information regarding the alleged shortage before they take action.

W. P. Pearse, of the Empire Lumber company, of Winona, Minn., that is operating the logging road from Dedham, Wis., to the St. Croix river, inspected the company's operations along the line last week. He said that matters did look a little blue for a time, but the last fall of snow had put a better face on the situation and the Empire company expects to get out its full cut. To piece out the company's supply for the coming summer Mr. Pearse bought about 5,000,000 feet of logs from the Itasca Lumber company. The logs to be driven down the Mississippi river the coming season.

New York, March 10.—At the request of the German Orinoco Asphalt company, the cruiser Falke has sailed from Trinidad for Pedernales, Vez., to protect German interests there, says a Port of Spain, Trinidad, dispatch to the Herald. A battle between the government and insurgent troops is impending at Pedernales.

There is great revolutionary activity along the eastern coast of Venezuela. The insurgents, apparently, far outnumber the government forces.

THE DAKOTAS.

Court Awards $1000 On a Broken Contract at Deadwood.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Deadwood—Peter Godfrey has been awarded $1000 damages in a suit against Sol Rosenthal. The suit was brought for $2000 for failure to perform a contract. Rosenthal traded a lot and business building in Deadwood to Godfrey two years ago for Godfrey's interest in the Deadbroke mine in Blacktail gulch. Rosenthal was to have a year's rent of the building free of cost, and was to place a deed in escrow in a bank in Deadwood, the deed to be delivered at the expiration of twelve months. After the year had elapsed Rosenthal instructed the bank not to surrender the deed, asserting he had discovered some irregularity in the title to the mine. Godfrey started suit to compel Rosenthal and the bank to surrender the deed, but it was never tried, Rosenthal giving up the deed before the case was called. Godfrey says that in the meantime he had an opportunity to sell the Deadwood property at an advance of $2000, and that he was prevented from making the sale by reason of his inability to give clear title.

Miss Erma Cody, daughter of Col. W. F. Cody, and a friend, Miss Florence Turple, arrived in Deadwood from North Platte, Neb., and are visiting friends of Col. Cody's in the Black Hills. Col. Cody was expected to accompany them and a reception was being prepared for him at Fort Meade by his old commander, Col. E. M. Hayes, of the Thirteenth cavalry, under whom he did his first scouting, but important business called him East.

Flandreau—A stranger who was recently arrested here on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, representing himself as an agent of the Sioux Falls nursery, died in the county jail. No trace can be found of a relative or friend. He was about five feet six, about 30 years of age, of light complexion and had a sandy mustache, weighed about 150 pounds and gave his name as H. H. Morgan.

Sioux Falls—Some Italian fakirs who visted a Day county farmer the other day for the purpose of victimizing him, caught a tartar. The farmer purchased some shoddy goods from the fakirs, and tendered them a $20 bill. He was given $13.50 in change. When the fakirs afterwards tried to pass the bill they were informed that it was a confederate bill and therefore good for nothing. The Italians were unable to locate the man who had so neatly turned the tables upon them.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—Attorney Engerud has entered a demurrer to the indictment against Mark Murphy, charged with embezzlement of government customs funds at Portal, claiming that Murphy was not an officer of the United States, charged with the safe-keeping of public funds in the meaning of the statute, and that the indictment for this offense will not hold. Judge Amidon has taken the demurrer under advisement.

The grand jury has disposed of about twenty-five of the fifty cases to be brought before it, and will probably be in session the greater part of next week. Today the case of G. S. Farnesworth, charged with the theft of horses on Standing Rock reservation, was being tried.

Fargo—The contract for a new 3-story 60 by 150-foot block for the wholesale notion house of the Percival-Watt company has been let to J. H. Bowers. The building will be on Northern Pacific avenue and is being erected by C. H. Porritt. The contract for the 25x150-foot block of the Fargo bottling works was let to Casper Johnson. It will be three stories.

In the land case of Oscar A. Borgan vs. Bertha Osmundson the officials ordered the Osmundson entry canceled on the grounds of failure to establish residence on the claim which is near Wyndmere, Richland county. In the case of A. C. Wiber vs. Guy L. Kennedy, a hearing was ordered by the general land office on the power of the contestant to waive his right to another. The officials held in favor of Wiber and will allow him to make entry. The land is near Lake Traverse.

Wahpeton—Ren Vogan was convicted by a jury in the district court of "blind pigging." For twelve years at every term of court men have been tried on this charge, and in every case heretofore the jury has either acquitted or failed to agree on a verdict. Law-abiding citizens are greatly elated over the outcome of Vogan's case, for he has been a persistent violator of the law, and has conducted disreputable joints. It is hoped that his case establishes a precedent that juries will not hesitate to follow. State's Attorney Schuler is being congratulated upon his successful effort.

COUNT TOLSTOI

Showed Singular Proof of Literary Conscientiousness.

New York, March 10.—Count Tolstoi, who has been so seriously ill of late, has given a singular proof of his literary conscientiousness, according to a Paris correspondent of the American and Journal. Previous to his illness he had sent to a Paris review an article which will appear shortly. On the very night when he and those around him believed that he was dying, it occurred to him that he had omitted some important point in the article. His strength rallied as though for a last effort and he dictated the correction.

Negaunee Minister Receives Rough Treatment By Mob.

Negaunee—As a result of the organization of the civic federation league here last week the Rev. C. M. Gilchrist, pastor of the Methodist church, and Louis F. Pearce, a member of the league and school board, received rough treatment at the hands of a crowd of men Saturday night. While they were making a tour of the town, they were set upon by a gang of roughs and would have been severely dealt with had not three policemen with draw revolvers come to their aid. The town was "dry" Sunday, the first in its history. Arrests will follow.

Houghton—Stock raising in the Upper Peninsula—a new thing for this section of the country—has been found to be profitable, and the indications are it will become an important industry. Two years ago Messrs. Prickett and Howatt, lumbermen, established a stock farm at Sidnaw as an experiment. They gradually added to its scope until now it represents an outlay of $50,000, and pays handsomely on the investment. They have over 600 head of sheep and several hundred head of cattle, and the carload lots shipped in and sold at Chicago bring excellent prices.

Marquette—A relic of ages gone by, has been discovered at Lake Gogebic. It is a piece of tempered copper which had apparently been used as a pick by prehistoric people, who formerly mined the red metal in the Lake Superior district. The relic was found a day or two ago in the yard of A. C. Hargrave. It was buried in the ground, but chickens in scratching the dirt had exposed one end of it. An attempt to pull the object from its resting place was futile, and it had to be dug up. It is about two feet long, about an inch and a half in width and about half an inch in thickness. At one end it tapers down to a point, and at the other the metal is sharpened like a spade. Apparently it had been bound to a handle by thongs.

Munising—In Justice Peter Olson's court a replevin case of more than ordinary interest was commenced by Thomas Miller against Jerry Laflam. The circumstances which led to the commencement of this suit are as follows: Last fall Miller sold his saloon on time to Goball & Laflam. Recently Goball retired from the business which has since been conducted by his former partner, Jerry Laflam. Miller claims the payments had got behind. He therefore commenced suit in replevin to recover possession of the big red card or license issued by the county treasurer. The card was seized by Under Sheriff Peterson, who notified Laflam that he could not legally do business until he had taken out a new license. Miller has resumed business in another building.

GOLD MEDAL

Given Engineer Wyatt For His Bravery at Fires.

Kokomo, Ind., March 10.—The city council has voted a gold medal to Frank Wyatt, a Pan-Handle railway Engineer for bravery. The local lodges of the orders of Odd Fellows and Red Men also voted medals and cash to him, although Wyatt is not a member of either order.

Wyatt left his engine at three natural gas explosions last week and carried four women out of burning buildings, rushing through a mass of flame to rescue them. The women were Miss Ida Achey, Mrs. Elizabeth Phillips, Mrs. Mary Barrington and Mrs. Mary Spurgeon. The two former died of their injuries, but the others may recover. Wyatt was himself badly burned in pulling one of the women from under a fallen chimney.

Another Fight on Mr. Evans.

The enemies of Pension Commissioner Evans are about ready to try conclusions before President Roosevelt on the removal of that official. The commissioner practically won his case before President McKinley and has been allowed to rest in peace for some time, but a new agitation has now commenced. It is understood that the pension committee of the Grand Army of the Republic will place their objections to the commissioner before the president very soon in the form of a detailed statement of their grievances. To add to the pressure being brought upon the president the Kansas delegation is urging the appointment of a commissioner from their state to succeed Evans. They base their claims upon a promise made to them by President McKinley during the last session of congress. It is stated by members of the Kansas delegation that President McKinley promised that the successor to Pension Commissioner Evans should be selected from Kansas. At that time the president stated that he would not make any change in the position as long as Mr. Evans was under fire, but that when a change was made a Kansas man should have the place. It was the intention of the president at the time, so the Kansans claim, to give Mr. Evans another appointment equally as good as the position he then held and now holds. This program was carried so far, the report goes, that Mr. McKinley asked the Kansans to select a candidate for the place. In response to this the Kansans suggested the names of Samuel R. Peters and Richard Whiting Blue, both veterans of the civil war and former members of congress. Mr. McKinley had served in congress with both of the men suggested and expressed his willingness to appoint one of them. Petitions were circulated among the G. A. R. posts in Kansas and indorsements for both Peters and Blue sent to Washington. No action was taken on the matter and it was still under consideration when Mr. McKinley was assassinated. As the principal charge brought against Commissioner Evans is that he insists on enforcing the pension laws, it is probable that President Roosevelt will not take any hasty action in the matter.

Director Merriam's Difficult Task.

The position of Director of the Census Merriam at the present time is one which would not be particularly desired by any one. He is now discharging many census employes in advance of the new law for the permanent establishment, and it is necessarily a most difficult task. It is the desire of the executive branch of the government to make the number of permanet employes as small as possible, as they become eligible to the departments and the dismissals are consequently going in large blocks. The pressure instituted by the clerks themselves to avert the calamity, or, if it once falls upon them, to secure its reversal is intensified by the belief that a life position in the government service depends upon holding on until the new law becomes operative, and the position of Mr. Merriam has become a most difficult one. Mr. Merriam expects to be director of the permanent census and therefore desires to stand well with the senators who will doubtless have to pass on his nomination, and he its down to his wits ends to please them. The question of his salary has also been before them. He originally took the position at $5000 a year, but afterwards represented to the committee, and truthfully, that it was worth much more than that, especially as a temporary position. It was accordingly raised to $7500, and that salary he now receives. When the permanent bill was before the house that body, in a spasm of economy, decided to reduce salaries all along the line, in order that the permanent establishment might not seem to saddle too great an outlay upon the government. His salary was then reduced to $5000; the senate put it back to $7500, and the conference left it at $5000; in that form the bill finally passed. There are so many applicants for the comparatively few places in the permanent bureau that it is difficult to see how Director Merriam can please them all. His position is certainly most trying.

BEET SUGAR OR WHEAT?

The Commercial West voices the views of nearly every person in Minnesota when it says it is not clear why Congressmen Morris and Tawney are opposing so strenuously the plain right of Cuba to an existence under the protection of the United States. Surely they have no ground to stand on if they choose to represent the interests of Minnesota. This is a wheat state—not a beet sugar state. When Cuba is prosperous the flour millers of the Northwest can export flour to Cuba. The greater the export, the higher the price for wheat to the Minnesota farmer. And where one farmer raises beets a thousand farmers raise wheat. Of the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, South Dakota and North Dakota, only Minnesota and Wisconsin raise beets, and the item is too insignificant to call for notice as compared with the wheat interest.

The Northwest wants prosperity in flour milling, which in turn helps the wheat farmer. If Mr. Tawney and Mr. Morris want to help the farmer, why do they stand for the retention of the sugar duty? The lowering of the sugar duty is what the Northwestern farmer desires. The more prosperous Cuba is, the more of the Northwest mill product will Cuba want.

There is not one person in Duluth who is interested in having the high duty on sugar retained in order to "protect" beet sugar. There is not a farmer in the Sixth district, which Mr. Morris was chosen to represent at Washington, who favors the idea of denying justice to Cuba and refusing to obtain there a market for our flour, which would mean a greater demand for the farmers' wheat.

With the large amount of Manitoba wheat now being dumped on the Liverpool market, thus enabling the English miller to undersell the American miller abroad, with the result that the export of flour from this country has practically ceased and the milling demand for wheat here has consequently fallen off 40 per cent. It is strange that the Minnesota congressmen should oppose legislation that would create in Cuba a larger market for the flour of the Northwest. The people of Minnesota, and more especially the farmers, should let Messrs. Morris and Tawney understand that they will be held strictly accountable for the foolish policy they are now pursuing, not only in opposition to the interests of their state, but in opposition to the views of President Roosevelt and Governor General Wood of Cuba.

PRESIDENTIAL TALK.

Gossip concerning presidential candidates for 1904 is as plenty in Washington as snow has been in New York and New England the past few weeks. No one doubts the intention of President Roosevelt to secure the nomination of the Republicans, and he seems to have made up his mind to stake his chances on the West and Middle West, and strengthening himself there to force the East to support him. The recent announcement made by men who are close to the president that the administration proposes to vigorously enforce the Sherman anti-trust law, are instanced as proof that the president is not trying to make himself solid with the big financial and corporate interests that have their headquarters in the neighborhood of Wall street. As a sort of defiance to the president and to serve notice on him that he is not as popular as he was in New York, certain well known financial magnates have openly stated that they favored the nomination of Senator Mark Hanna in 1904. Unless the matter is fixed up between these two leaders beforehand, they will make a warm contest in the struggle for supremacy.

Among the Democrats much will depend on the next state election in New York. If they carry the state and return to power next fall, they can dictate the presidential nomination in 1904, and under these circumstances if New York insists on the nomination of David B. Hill the prize will go to him. If, on the other hand, Senator Hill should assume the leadership in New York and then lose the state, the stock of Arthur Pue Gorman of Maryland would go away up, and he and his friends will be able to control the situation at the next Democratic national convention. It is generally conceded that Senator Hill is more popular than Gorman with the rank and file of his party, but that Gorman has the backing of a majority of the party leaders in Washington. Notwithstanding his great skill as a manipulator of men, it is doubtful whether Senator Gorman will be able, on his return to the senate, to at once drop into the position of leader of the minority of that body. Since his retirement from the senate new men have come in as the representatives of Democratic states. Some of these new men have already displayed great ability as parliamentarians and speakers, and they have a strong following, and it is safe to say that they will resent any assumption of absolute leadership on the part of Gorman.

Much will depend on the success of the Maryland senator to the senate as to his future, and it is safe to say that he has no easy task before him. There is no doubt that Hill is out to win, and is a formidable competitor for any man. Another probability from New York is William C. Whitney, secretary of the navy in President Cleveland's cabinet. He has many elements of strength.

SOMEWHAT VISIONARY.

"Municipal reform," says Professor Richard T. Ely in the Municipal Journal, "is a subject of universal import. There is no man, woman or child in the United States to whom it has not a deep significance." The professor goes on to show the intimate connection between the dwellers in cities and those in the country. The problem of the city, he says, is the problem of a revolution, one brought about by a remarkable evolution. The general interest in municipal reform is, indeed, quite warranted, but it is not even yet adequate.

"Perhaps," says the professor, "the most familiar watchwords in the battle for municipal reform are those grouped about the business idea of the city. It is said that we want 'a municipal administration on purely business principles;' also, 'municipal government is business, not politics.' Then, as a corollary, the demand is made that business men should be put in office; 'business men,' we are informed, 'are the natural and inevitable directors of local affairs.' And when the business idea is made dominant, retrenchment is usually coupled with reform. It is urged that an extravagant administration must be replaced by an economical one and the tax rate lowered. Closely connected with the demand for business methods and business men in municipal government is the claim that there should be absolutely separation of municipal government from the politics of the state and the nation. Home rule for cities, as it is called, is also a familiar rallying cry. Civil service reform is something so obviously needed in cities that it cannot be overlooked in any platform of municipal reform, but as further plans in such a platform we frequently find the statement that it is essential that administrative power should be concentrated in the hands of the mayor, and sometimes the demand that he should hold office for one term only. Finally the failure of the so-called best citizens to take part in politics is invariably deplored, and they are entreated to arouse themselves and to save the city."

The above extract from Professor Ely's article is here published as a summary, from a scholar's point of view, of what many people in cities are clamoring for. His theory is that municipal officers, especially the mayor, should be carefully selected, picked out by some means independent of politics and not with special reference to a "business administration" in the ordinary meaning of that term, but for natural aptitude and acquired qualities, and trained for their duties; should then be secured in their positions "during life or good behavior," or for very long terms. This is a rather visionary idea. A system somewhat similar to what the professor suggests is in operation in Germany, but it would hardly do in this country. Indeed it may be properly regarded as impracticable here where the people are bound to vote on the choice of their municipal officials.

The cost of living continues to rise, and with butter, eggs, milk, potatoes, vegetables of nearly all kinds and fuel at the highest prices known in years people possessed of small incomes must be having difficulty in making both ends meet. Only in rare cases, if at all, have wages increased in equal proportion. Dun's Review publishes its index number of commodity prices for March 1, showing an increase from $90.576 on Feb. 1 to $101.593. This is the highest point reached in many years and is to be compared with the index number of $72.465 as it stood at the bottom of the decline in prices which was reached in July of 1897. In other words, the breadstuffs, meats, dairy and garden products, other food products, clothing and necessaries of life generally, which cost $72.45 in 1897, now cost $101.59. This represents an advance of 40 per cent in the cost of living and a corresponding depreciation of the dollar.

Speaking of certain peculiarities of the Chinese language, Prof. Giles, of Cambridge university, remarked in New York the other evening: "To express the words 'flattery' and 'treacherous' the Chinese use the character meaning 'woman' in connection with other characters. 'Friendship' is expressed by two hands, 'brightness' by the sun and moon in conjugation, 'goodness' by a woman and a child, and so on. Originally pictures, the characters have now become words."

A New York doctor offered himself for vivisection, but before the operation began his wife interfered and threatened to stop the experiment by injunction proceedings; now he has a large practice. This sort of advertising is supposed to be quite ethical. If he had advertised in the ordinary way he would have been expelled from the medical society.

YE HAPPY FARMER'S LIFE.

Of all ye Lives I wot of,
Ye farmer's is most Blest,
He tills ye Soil with sturdy Toil,
And wastes no Tyme in Rest.
He rises in ye Morning
When half past Two has struck,
At Tenne he hittes ye Bedde again,
If yt he has good Luck.

He journeys to ye Stable
And milks two dozen Kine,
At half past Four he hungers sore,
And for ye Food does Pine,
Of fried Pork Chops and Coffee
He gladly does partake,
And to complete ye Meal does eat
Ye luscious Buckwheat cake.

He rises from ye Table,
And follows forth ye Plowe,
But leaves his Fence I usllo emfwyp vb
But leaves his place full soon to chase
Back home ye straying Cowe,
Returning to ye Meadow
He labors hard till Noon,
And then does munch a Bite of Lunch,
Which he despatches soon.

All day he gayly labors
In Field and Stable-Yard,
Nor Weary grows as on he goes,
Nor finds his Work is hard.
He Beddes down all ye Cattle,
When roosts ye tired Lark,
A sickly Glim he takes with him,
To light him after Dark.

From one year to another
He Harvest sows, and reaps,
He lives and thinks and works and drinks
And also eats and sleeps.
What work he has not Tyme for
Is managed by his Wyfe,
All must concede 'tis good to lead
Ye happye Farmer's life.

A GROUNDLESS PLAINT.

O. S. Marden in Success: Probably nine out of ten men past middle life, if asked how it happens that they are today only barely earning their living, would tell you that they "never had a chance;" that they were kept back; that circumstances were against them; that they had no opportunities, such as other boys around them had, or that they did not have the proper schooling, or else plead some similar excuse.

The probabilities are that opportunity did visit every one of these men more than once in their youth or early manhood, but that they did not see that all good chances consisted in doing everything they undertook cheerfully, promptly, and just as well as it could be done. As boys they did not look upon every errand as a chance to be polite, prompt, energetic; on every lesson in school as a foundation stone in their success-structure. They did not think that the demoralizing hours of indolence and shiftlessness which they were weaving into the web of their lives would mar the fabric forever, and reproach them through all time. They did not realize that the impudent reply to their employer, the carelessness and indulgence which they slipped into their tasks, would come out as ghosts, in the future, to mar their happiness and success. They looked upon every duty shirked, the minutes they cut off from each end of a day, as so much gain. They did not realize that these things, which seemed so innocent, would grow into giant defects which would mar their future success.

They did not think that their slipshod methods, their careless attire, and their aggressive manners, would lie as great bars across the path of their future success and keep them back from the goal of their ambitions.

They do not think that all these things were the real causes of their being fixtures at salaries of $10 or $15 a week.

They did not think that these seeming trifles in youth would doom them to be perpetual janitors, clerks, or farm hands, and that it would be almost impossible in maturity to outgrow the defects of their youth.

Rapid Growth of the West.

Pittsburg Dispatch: While the production of grain is not increasing as rapidly as the population, the manufacturing and commercial interests of the West are increasing more rapidly than those of the whole country, manufactured products showing a ratio of 70 per cent increase for the United States as against 113 per cent for the West. Not the least remarkable feature about this development is the triumph of industry over natural obstacles. Towns without coal, iron or water power turn out manufactured products that are shipped to the ends of the earth.

A Good Manager

By Ada Patterson.

George Carleton was more surprised than were many of his friends when he married Miss Alice Greeley of the "Message From the Moon" company.

He had always held such strong views—he grew angry if anyone dared to call them prejudices—regarding the stage and the people of the stage.

His views about wives had been equally positive. He would marry a small woman and a dark woman. Not that he admired the type particularly, but he had a fancy that such women were more domestic and so made better wives and mothers. He would never marry a business or professional woman of any sort. Heaven forbid! They were so offensive, sometimes, in their quick readings of a man. A girl who had been brought up in what he chose to call the "sheltered twilight" of home was the one for him. That was fully settled.

Yet here he was, married to an actress. George Carelton was astonished. He could give no reasonable excuse to his friends or to himself. He only knew that when this tall girl, whose shining golden head was a level with his own, smiled at him equally with her soft blue eyes and her pink thread of mouth, in which her white teeth gleamed with dainty evenness, that his objections to the stage vanished. The earth narrowed to those two and faded away, and in its place was heaven. He was conscious that this, while it was human enough, was scarcely logical, so he attemtped no excuse.

He was married and he was happier than he had thought any man could ever be. He set about a necessary readjustment of his ideas.

Alice was the daughter of a manager and a leading woman, and she had all but been born upon the stage, and she had been playing almost ever since that event. She had "traveled" and had lived at hotels, spent her summers in theatrical colonies on Long Island and home had been as vague a name to her as God is to the dancing dervishes. But when they had come, after the wedding at the Little Church Around the Corner, to their tiny apartment on East Fifty-ninth street, she had dropped her shining head on his shoulder and cried for joy.

"Tears on our wedding day?" he protested.

"Forgive me, George! I was crying because I am so happy to have a home. Just think, George! A home!"

Alice was a happy iconoclast. No sooner were they married than she set about shattering all his preconceptions about actresses.

He had thought that they affected vermilion hair and screaming costumes. His wife always wore black or gray for the street.

He had thought that jewelry was indispensable to their happiness. Alice never wore it.

He had believed that their lives were a never-ceasing parade. But Alice rarely went out except for strolls up the avenue and through the park with him.

He thought they could not live except as the center of a shrieking magpie group like themselves. If their portly coffee-colored maid-of-all-work brought cried Alice was always "out," unless he insisted that she was "in."

There had been a year of this life when one morning he found her in her pretty morning negligee standing beside his desk, pressing his hard-working fountain pen to her lips. That tableau of devotion had lived with him all day, in his crying interview with prospective publishers, and in his calls with a view to collections from the old ones. It fortified him for the sight of the bulky yellow envelope that shouted "Rejected!" at him from their mail box. It made him seize the little fingers that were mending a rent in the parlor curtains and reverently kiss them.

After she had gone to the matinee the blow fell. In her hurried dressing she had drawn a paper from the drawer that was still open. It had fallen to the floor. It was so large that he thought it a contract with his last publisher. He opened it. He groaned.

"My God! I was right. They are all alike! O Alice! Alice!"

She tripped in cheerily just as the city's blackness was relieved by the turning on of myriads of lights. She turned on the gas and looked smilingly about for her husband. He was sitting at the edge of the bed, the paper still in his fingers.

"You naughty boy," she laughed. "So you've found your Christmas gift already?"

He lifted sullen, inquiring eyes to her face.

"How long have you had this?"

"Since yesterday."

"How did you get it?"

"I bought it with my savings from my salary since we were married."

"A lot at Orange?"

She nodded while the tears drowned the joy in her eyes as they had done the evening of their wedding when she surveyed the little flat and cried at the thought of a home.

"You will not be sensitive about it, dear?" she pleaded. "Those horrid publishers are so slow about seeing the value of your books, and I knew how you loved the country. I thought you could write more satisfactorily there. In another year we can build a house together on this lot, or if you haven't your last novel on sale, then maybe I can save enough to put up a small one. Aren't you glad, dearest?"

Carleton rested his forehead for a moment on her strong young shoulder. She noticed afterward that her dress was wet where his face had rested.

"Are you tired?" she asked him, wonderingly.

"I have had a bad day," he admitted, thinking of the hours he had sat at the edge of the bed holding the deed in his fingers.

"Your ability will be recognized. You will be known as one of the greatest authors of your time."

"Alice," he asked, impulsively, "can you ever forgive me?"

"For what, George?"

"For everything. For any foolish suspicions I may have ever had because you had not had a home, nor a home influence."

"But I have both, now, dear," she said, looking at him with bright, trusting eyes. "And you could never have been suspicious after you knew me."

He hung his head while pretending to rearrange his necktie.

"Dinner's ready," announced the portly, coffee-colored maid.

Claims of the Mail Men.

New York Tribune: The postal clerks want advances in salary. Their claims to higher pay deserve respectful and thorough consideration. Their work is exacting. So is that of the letter carriers. Are these faithful and efficient public servants reasonably compensated in present conditions in comparison with other men whose names are found upon the public payrolls? This is a matter which ought not to be passed over lightly.

Omar at the Dump.

Behold that old bedspring; some sweet, pure maid
Mayhap has knelt beside that thing and prayed,
Or tossed around upon it and had dreams
Of love when it was ninety in the shade.

Death may have found it oft, upon his rounds;
It may have heard full many a babe's first sounds,
Or in some boarding house it may have groaned
Beneath a man who weighed two hundred pounds.

CAPITAL GOSSIP.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, March 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The senate has disposed of the irrigation bill. What will become of the measure in the house is an open question. It is quite evident that Speaker Henderson is not particularly favorable to the irrigation policy, notwithstanding the fact that both political parties committed themselves to it in their last national platforms. There is, however, a decided determination upon the part of the Western and Northwestern men to force the house to take action and no one has been more industrious towards this end than Representative Francis G. Newlands, of Nevada. In point of population Nevada is the smallest state in the Union, but there are few states even among those ranking as the first, represented in the lower house of congress by a more able, painstaking and conscientious man than Mr. Newlands. It has not always been the largest states that have had the ablest representation in Washington. For many years the little state of Maine outclassed them all, that is, when that great quartet, Reed, Dingley, Boutelle and Milliken, filled the four seats assigned to Maine in the lower house. Delaware has sent men like Bayard, Saulsbury and Gray to the senate in the past.

Mr. Newlands, undoubtedly, has a personal interest in securing legislation on irrigation, for no state in the Union will more greatly benefit from the introduction of a national policy of water storage and distribution than will Nevada. Then, too, it must be remembered that no member representing the arid and semi-arid region has had such a long period of continued service as the Nevada member. Nor is there any one who has studied the subject in all its bearings in every country of the Old World which has attempted irrigation to the extent that Mr. Newlands has carried his investigation. Should the house finally adopt the senate bill or any similar measure success will be due very largely to the efforts of the Western man who formed a committee early in the session and who selected Senator Warren, of Wyoming, for chairman, and Mr. Newlands for secretary. This committee succeeded in bringing together the various opposing elements and they have neglected no opportunity to impress their views upon their colleagues. So well have they carried on their propaganda that there is today a clear majority in the house favorable to the policy of irrigation and this majority will express, if only the speaker will permit the question to come up for consideration.

A congressional secretary of the first class is a treasure and the right kind of man in this position is invaluable. One of these gentlemen sat at the side of an Ohio representative in the other morning when the congressman was opening the regular daily mail. "Here's a letter," he said, "asking me my opinion as to the prospects for the passage of senate bill 99999. Answer this today and tell the writer that it has no more chance than a cat in sheol without claws."

Half an hour later the letter was written. This is the way it read:

"Dear Sir: After careful inquiry among my associates in the house I regret to be compelled to inform you that the bill to which you refer in your esteemed favor of yesterday is not likely to be considered at this session, owing to the crowded state of the house calendar. I assure you, however, that it will afford me pleasure to do anything in my power to advance your interests and am yours to command."

For the past two weeks or more Washington has been virtually cut off from the rest of the world, so far as telegraphic service is concerned. There have been a few wires reaching to the outside, but not nearly enough to supply the demand of commercial and press dispatches. For a few days the only way to reach New York was by the roundabout method of wiring to Atlanta, thence to Chicago; from Chicago to Montreal by way of Toronto, and down from Montreal to Boston, thence to the metropolis.

Finally the telegraph companies succeeded in getting direct communication between the capital and the West, but there was no direct wire to New York and one of the companies sent all Western dispatches to Baltimore, whence they were sent by mail to Washington to be transmitted from here by any other roundabout method which might be available. One morning in the early part of the week one of the companies had nearly a quarter of a million words piles on the hooks to be sent as soon as wires could be obtained. On Tuesday night communication had been fairly well established, but another storm of sleet, followed in the night by frost broke down miles and miles of wires once more, and on Wednesday morning the capital was almost as badly off as it had been the ten preceding days.

It is now thirteen years almost to a day since the capital was so completely isolated as it has been this week. In March, 1888, during the storm which resulted in the death of ex-Senator Conkling, no knowledge of the serious predicament of that statesman reached the city until several days after he had been prostrated. But it was during that great storm that A. Maurice Low, correspondent of the Boston Globe, made himself famous by the enterprising manner in which he communicated an important piece of news to his paper. As soon as communication had been re-established with New York, but before the wires were open to Boston, Mr. Low sent a dispatch from Washington to the Globe, which went from New York by cable to London, where it was transmitted back by cable once more to Boston.

Fortunately in the storm of 1902 no very important events occurred except such as could be published to the world by some method. The telegraph linemen have bene busy day and night in all directions, and they have succeeded in making connections almost as rapidly as the railroad companies have reestablished their lines. It takes a heavy flood to wash out a railroad and repairs once made are frequently good for years, but a sleet storm on the wires can do more damage in a night than 1000 linemen can repair in a week.

Ex-Governor and ex-Senator McConnell, of Idaho, who was at one time Indian inspector, has created a great commotion in the Indian office by furnishing the senate absolute proof of unheard of immoralities in the Indian service. Mr. McConnell called the facts in his possesison to the attention of the Indian office many months ago, but his charges were ignored, and, after spending many months in an endeavor to have the guilty employes of the Indian office punished, he finally took his data to congress, presented it to Senator Turner of Washington, and now the initial step towards a thorough investigation of the school and medical departments of the Indian service is to be made. It is worthy of note in this connection that some of the officials of the Indian office, incensed over the action of Mr. McConnell, have published statements impugning his motives and attacking his character. Such efforts are not likely to prove fruitful in shielding the guilty officials, and if the former governor of Idaho is successful in proving one-tenth of the charges he makes against some of the school and medical employes, the investigation should result in wholesale dismissals and criminal prosecutions.

In spite of President Roosevelt's order prohibiting employes of the departments from engaging in lobbying there is a good deal of work of this sort going on. The most industrious gentlemen during the past month have been some of the chiefs of divisions of the scientific bureaus of the agricultural department. The mails have been literally flooded during the past week or two with letters from all sections of the country, urging members to vote for larger appropriations than the committee on agriculture seems disposed to recommend. All these letters evidently emanate from one source, and that is the bureau of plant industry in the department. It is natural that experts employed in scientific bureaus should use every means available for increasing the scope of the work which they are called upon to perform, but the plant industry people have exceeded the limit. If all demands of this kind should receive attention it would take the entire surplus to run the scientific bureaus of the government for one year. As it is, the committee on agriculture has been extremely liberal to these bureaus of the agricultural department, and the money provided will undoubtedly aid the secretary in extending the enquiries which have thus far proved of such enormous values to the farmers of the country.

The action of the Colombia government in the matter of the Panama canal has made it practically certain that the offer of the French company will not be accepted by congress. Evidences multiply to indicate that all the Central American countries through which a canal might be run look upon the United States as a gold mine. Costa Rica and Nicaragua propose to get a bite from Uncle Sam's surplus if they can, and the action of Colombia was undoubtedly taken with the idea of dividing the $40,000,000 which the French company asks for its so-called assets. Probably the complications which have arisen, and the developments which have been unearthed, will result in nullifying the action during the present session of congress. In any event the prospects for canal legislation seems dimmer.

HOME RULE

Question Is Rapidly Coming to the Front Again.

New York, March 10.—The home rule question is coming rapidly to the front again, says a Tribune dispatch from London. The Irish Nationalists regard the situation as much more promising than at any time since the retirement of Mr. Gladstone. They feel firmly convinced that a couple of years of genuine unconstitutionalism in Ireland will lend Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and a fighting Liberal party back into power, with home rule as the first plank in its platform. So far as the Irish question is concerned at present, however, Lord Rosebery undoubtedly has the country behind him. Campbell-Bannerman's home rule policy is only supported by two or three really influential Englishmen, such as John Morley, Sir William Harcourt and Earl Spencer. Meanwhile recent events have tended to restore the old friendly relations between the Irish Nationalists and the English Radicals. But there will be no formal alliance as there was in Parnell's time. The policy of the Irishmen is to keep aloof from both English parties and accept whatever benefits for Ireland either may propose.

BASEBALL.

No Signs of Rival Factions Yet Getting Together.

New York, March 10.—With the opening of the National League baseball season only a little more than a month away there are on the surface no indications that the rival factions are making any effort toward getting together.

Tomorrow, unless there is another postponement, the question of jurisdiction will be argued in the supreme court, and the baseball world may then learn something more definite of the situation. Just when the court will render a decision in the case it is impossible to say. It may be delayed for weeks although that is hardly probable. That the club owners contemplate action of some nature is shown by the fact that they all are making preparations to begin the season, but not one move has been made to bridge over the chasm between the clubs.

OVERDRAWN

Are Reports of Cruelty By Soldiers, Says Otis.

Chicago, March 10.—Reports of increasing cruelty among American troops in dealing with Filipinos are discountenanced by Gen. E. S. Otis, who declares that an American soldier is not capable of the brutality which has been accredited to him, says the Tribune.

"Revenge was not wreaked upon Filipinos by United States troops while I was in the island," said Gen. Otis. "That was not the spirit of the troops. Whenever occasional cases of cruelty came to the ears of officers, rigid investigations were made and adequate punishment given.

"There is less trouble with the natives as time wears on, and I am certain that the reports of cruelty are overdrawn."

MISS MAY

Will Get Her Money From Hall-Moody Institute.

Nashville, Tenn., March 10.—Saturday evening at Dresden the famous damage suit of Miss May Copas against the trustees of the Hall-Moody Institute, the leading educational institution of West Tennessee, to recover the balance due on a contract, was decided by a jury in favor of the young woman. This is the famous "too much society" case. Miss Copas is a bright, pretty, vivacious and popular girl, who was employed as an instructor in the institute. After a while the venerable trustees scratched their heads and decided that the young lady was devoting too much time to her social duties and this reduced her usefulness as a teacher.

As a result she was deposed. Among her friends there was indignation and they insisted on her bringing suit to recover salary for the year. The case was taken up early in the week and the greatest interest was shown in the proceedings. All the way from 500 to 1000 people thronged the court room daily and hundreds of ladies were present. On the stand Miss Copas testified that she had received company three times a week, and that she could not help it if she was popular and invited to social functions in the town. She further testified that she needed the recreation and did not feel the board had anything to do with the number of callers she had or the number of times each week she should go out socially.

The case attracted great attention and public sentiment has been with the young woman. Saturday evening when the verdict was returned there was an unusual scene in the court room. It was not so much a question of money with those present, but they were anxious to see the popular young woman win what they characterized as her rights. The defense made no attempt to combat the testimony of the plaintiff except to say that too much society mitigated against Miss Copas' usefulness as a teacher, and they discharged her.

New York, March 10.—Prince Henry of Prussia, was the central figure yesterday in another round of entertainment arranged in his honor. He first listened to a concert at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, largely made up of his favorite American songs, the concert being arranged at his request. When that was over he drove to the University club to a luncheon which was not concluded until mid-afternoon. In the evening he was the guest at dinner of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and met a large party made up of persons of social prominence.

The dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt in honor of Prince Henry began at 7 o'clock. The Vanderbilt home at 606 Fifth avenue was handsomely decorated and brilliantly lighted. Mrs Vanderbilt received the prince and his staff and then presented her other guests. Oval-shaped dining tables were placed in the dining room and conservatory and there the dinner was served. Mr. Vanderbilt and Prince Henry at her right and Ambassador von Holleben at her left and Mr. Vanderbilt had Admiral Evans at his right and Gen. Corbin at his left.

When the prince bade farewell to the company at the Vanderbilt home he went to the New York Yacht club for an informal reception, and the hour was late when he returned to the Waldorf-Astoria for the night. He found time between the four main events on his program of the day to receive a delegation representing the Commercial club of St. Paul and several callers and to finally complete the arrangements for the last two days' stay in the country and his departure for home. He had intended to be present at the religious services on the imperial yacht Hohenzollern in the morning, but the case of scarlet fever which developed there several days ago altered that plan. Instead he remained at the hotel, arising late and breakfasting at his leisure.

It was the Arion Society of Brooklyn, winner of the kaiser's prize at the singing festival in Brooklyn, in 1900, that furnished the morning concert for the prince at the hotel. It had been originally arranged that the singers should serenade the prince aboard the Hohenzollern yesterday, but in the change of plan the serenade was abandoned. The prince met Dr. W. John Schlilfe, the chairman of the music committee of the society, at the dinner Saturday night and expressed regret that he was not to have a chance to hear the club sing. The doctor suggested that it might still take place at the hotel and the prince approved the idea. It was midnight, but a few hours to arrange the affair remaining. Telegrams and telephone messages were hurried out to the members and by 11 o'clock 150 of them had reached the hotel.

The concert took place in the Astor gallery and begun at 11:30. The prince sat in the center of the hall, surrounded by the members of his suite, the Ambassador von Holeben, Consul General Buenz and Consul Geissler. The prince was delighted with the music and after shaking hands with the officers of the society addressed the members briefly in German.

The luncheon at the University club was given by the committee named by President Roosevelt to arrange for the visit of the prince and escort him in his tour, and the hosts were Gen. Corbin, Assistant Secary of State Hill, Admiral Evans, Col. Bingham and Commander Cowles. The party left the hotel at 12:45 o'clock with mounted police as special guard for the carriage of the prince. A great crowd saw the departure from the hotel and the arrival at the club, but there was no special demonstration. An elaborate luncheon was served and there was an interesting discussion of the trip throughout the country just concluded.

Thomas Cochran and F. C. Bradbury, representing the Commercial club of St. Paul, Minn., today called upon Prince Henry at the Waldorf-Astoria and during a personal interview with the distinguished visitor, invited him to attend the unveiling of the commemorative tablet on the American Line steamer St. Paul next Tuesday. Prince Henry promised to be present if possible, but doubted his ability to do so, on account of his sailing for home that afternoon.

At the concert given by the Armstrong association for Prince Henry, Booker T. Washington, the colored educator and leader, was presented to the prince. The two chatted for fifteen minutes, during which time the prince asked many questions as to the negroes. He asked Mr. Washington for a book on negro melodies and the latter promised to send him one.

The case was tried before Judge Gallen in the police court and sensational testimony was supplied by a number of witnesses. Sanderson was acquitted of the charge and subsequently secured a divorce from his wife, who still lives here.

Rheumatism

Rheumatic pains are the cries of protest and distress from tortured muscles, aching joints and excited nerves. The blood has been poisoned by the accumulation of waste matter in the system, and can no longer supply the pure and health sustaining food they require. The whole system feels the effect of this acid poison; and not until the blood has been purified and brought back to a healthy condition will the aches and pains cease.

Mrs. James Kell, of 707 Ninth street, N. E., Washington, D. C., writes as follows: "A few months ago I had an attack of Sciatic Rheumatism in its worst form. The pain was so intense that I became completely prostrated. The attack was an unusually severe one, and my condition was regarded as being very dangerous. I was attended by one of the most able doctors in Washington, who is also a member of the faculty of a leading medical college here. He told me to continue his prescriptions and I would get well. After having it filled twelve times without receiving the slightest benefit, I declined to continue his treatment any longer. Having heard of S. S. S. Swift's Specific recommended for Rheumatism, I decided, almost in despair however, to give the medicine a trial, and after I had taken a few bottles I was able to hobble around on crutches, and very soon thereafter had no use for them at all. S. S. S. having cured me sound and well. All the distressing pains have left me, my appetite has returned, and I am happy to be again restored to perfect health.

SSS the great vegetable purifier and tonic, is the ideal remedy in all rheumatic troubles. There are no opiates or minerals in it to disturb the digestion and lead to ruinous habits.

We have prepared a special book on Rheumatism which every sufferer from this painful disease should read. It is the most complete and interesting book of the kind in existence. It will be sent free to any one desiring it. Write our physicians fully and freely about your case. We make no charge for medical advice.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

The result was that only 28 voted to suspend the rules, four less than was needed. Senator Daugherty, when he found out that T. J. Walsh was responsible for the bill, made the speech reported Saturday, in which he alleged that Mr. Walsh was not interested in mining, but was a peanut politician, seeking to place the St. Louis county delegation on record in order to make political capital. When he sat down he turned to Senator Baldwin and accused him of being a party to put the St. Louis county Republican senators in the hole. Senator Hawkins also turned to Senator Baldwin, and the trio could plainly be seen to be engaged in a heated discussion. The talk was not overheard, but it is understood that it was very warm, and that Senator Baldwin, in very plain terms, denied the truth of Senator Daugherty's charges against him.

After the session a number of senators stated that if anything had been necessary to place Senator Baldwin high in the estimation of his fellow-members of the senate, his action on this occasion was sufficient. From their conversation it was clear that they had absolute faith in him, and that they were so satisfied that he was representing his constituents and not any other interests that, as one senator put it, "he could have anything he wanted."

As a matter of fact, if the session were longer, the incident would have a great deal of effect upon legislation affecting St. Louis county. Senator Baldwin has always stood well in the senate, but in view of what took place Saturday his influence would produce almost any result he desired if the session were to be continued.

The whole trouble is that unfortunately there has sprung up in the legislature a feeling that the St. Louis county delegation represents certain interests and not particularly a subdivision of the state. This was evident from the surprise which everybody greeted what appeared to be the remarkable spectacle of a senator from St. Louis county leading an attack upon those interests.

If the bill had been introduced two weeks earlier, it would have gone through both houses beyond any question. The vote that it received in the senate is a sufficient indication of what would happen there, and though the house adopted the report of the reception committee indefinitely postponing it, after it had gone through the senate it would come to the house, it could easily have been put through that body. The injustice of the present freight rates is an easy matter to argue, and, undoubtedly, had the bill been prepared in time, it could have been passed.

Senator Halvorson, in Saturday's debate, said that the bill was to have been handed him two weeks earlier, but through some oversight it was delayed. Not coming in until it did, there was absolutely no chance of passing it. Even had the rules been suspended and it had gone through the senate, the rules would have had to be suspended again in the house to get it through in time, and that is something that it has not been possible to do for a week, as it requires eighty votes and many members have been absent.

The bill would have had a better fate had it been handed to Senator Baldwin and prepared earlier. Senator Baldwin had no part in its preparation, and, indeed, did not know that it was coming in until the morning it was introduced. It took him quite as much by surprise as it did the other senators.

The constitutional amendments got into a perilous condition Saturday afternoon. Just when everything looked lovely, and the conference committee had agreed, and the senate had passed the bill agreed upon, the house tackled the bill and made some changes in it. This necessitated its going back to the conference committee, and to the senate again. Then ensued a game of battledore and shuttlecock, with the bill as the shuttlecock. After the conference committee had agreed again, Senator Young and J. F. Jacobson, of the committee, stuck in some words that were intended, they said, to be explanatory. They provided that the franchise tax should be in addition to all other taxes. This has been understood, but not expressed. When the senate found that this change had been made there was a fight on it, and its consideration was put over to today. This was looked upon by many of the "friends of the bill," meaning those who have worked for the various tax bills that have gone in, as meaning the defeat of the bill. One of the changes that were made in the bill provides for an income tax in lieu of any personal property tax.

While the senate and conference committee were sweating over the constitutional amendment bill the house worked all the afternoon in general orders, cleaned up the slate, and played horse for a while in the hope that the bill would come in to be acted upon. It was nearly 6 o'clock when the house gave it up and adjourned.

* * *

Among the bills that won out while the house was in committee of the whole and that were recommended for passage were the Nichols bill to make it easier to pass constitutional amendments, Sherman Smith's bill raising the personal property exemption to $200, the Baldwin-Pennington bill taxing foreign corporations, and Plowman's bill appropriating money to pay wolf bounties.

* * *

The senate, in acting upon the Anderson real estate tax bill Saturday afternoon, struck out the provision for the publication of notices of expiration of redemption. The bill was finished when the senate adjourned, and it was handed to a committee composed of Senators Baldwin, Lord and Roverud to fix up for passage today.

* * *

This is really the last day of the session. No bills can be passed tomorrow, and everything that gets through must get through today. Tomorrow's business will be confined largely to approving the journal.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

THE BIDS

For Fitzsimmons-Jeffries Fight Will Be Opened Saturday.

New York, March 10.—Bids for the championship battle between Robert Fitzsimmons and James J. Jeffries will be openeed in San Francisco next Saturday, and it will be then decided where the battle shall take place.

When articles of agreement were signed last month it was agreed upon to give all the clubs desiring the match until March 15 to put in bids, the contest to go to the club offering the best inducements.

Jeffries is now on his way to San Francisco, and with his manager will be on hand when the bids are opened. It is expected that the California clubs will be the successful bidders, and the champion favors the coast, as he realizes that a big championship battle can be pulled off without any interference by the authorities, while Fitzsimmons would prefer an Eastern club for the fight.

Both fighters are anxious to have the club selection made as soon as possible, as they wish to have at least a month's training near the scene of the contest.

If the contest goes to 'Frisco, Jeffries will train at Harbin Springs, where he prepared for his bout with Gus Ruhlin, and Fitzsimmons will leave at once for the coast to complete his preparations.

For several weeks the former champion has been working like a beaver with Gus Ruhlin at his Bath Beach training quarters, and he is well satisfied with his condition. If the fight goes to the Pacific coast, it likely will be put forward a month, and instead of taking place in May, may be held the latter part of April. The racing season there closes at that time, and it is figured that the turf crowd will be an important factor in the gate receipts.

Balky Stomachs.

They Show No Structural Defects, Exhibit No Evidence of Real Disease—Because they Are Fagged, Lazy or Contrary, They Won't Work.

Food Lies in them for Hours, Decomposing, Rotting, Fermenting, Forming Noxious Compounds, that Poison the System, and Overtax those Organs that Have to Eliminate It, Instead of Nutritious Chyle that will Enrich the Blood so it May Feed the Various Tissues and Structures of the Body.

When the stomach won't work the whole body suffers as every tissue or structure of the body depends on the stomach for nourishment and renewal.

If the stomach is weak, inactive and unable to properly digest food it not only subjects the body to a state of chronic semi-starvation or habitually half-fed condition that weakens it and renders it less productive of accomplishment and less resistant to disease, but it allows of the absorption of half-digested, rotting material that is a positive poison to it and taxes the eliminative organs to expel it from the body. Thus it will be seen that the inconvenience and distress, the disturbed rest, the horrors of insomnia, and the dreadful caprices of nightmare, are the most insignificant part of indigestion and that real danger lurks behind the condition.

Few people seem to realize the dangers of weak, defective and disordered digestion. Health reports do not give it as cause of death because some other disease sets in to work destructive changes, only made possible by the imperfect digestion, and the death is accredited to them.

There are many medicines on the market intended to correct and improve perverted or impaired digestion, but none are so safe, so economical, so convenient, so effective, so satisfactory, so popular as are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Whether the dyspepsia is of long standing or is only a case of temporary indigestion, they give prompt and pronounced relief. Their regular use for a time will cure all forms of gastric insufficiency so that "good digestion will wait on appetite and health on both."

By promoting perfect digestion all tissues and structures are better fed and take on healthful activity, the blood becomes rich, the flesh sound and firm, the nerves strong, the eyes bright, the skin clear, the mind alert and cheerful, and one begins to feel the lust of life—the joy of mere living.

Mr. Thomas Seale, Mayfield, Calif., says: "Have used and recommended Stuart's Tablets because there is nothing like them to keep the stomach right."

Mr. E. H. Davis, of Hampton, Va., says: "I doctored five years for dyspepsia, but in two months I got more benefit from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets than in five years of the doctors' treatment."

Phil Brooks, Detroit, Mich., says: "Your dyspepsia cure has worked wonder in my case. I suffered for years from dyspepsia but am now entirely cured and enjoy life as I never have before. I gladly recommend them."

Mrs. Lydia Bartram, of Assyria, Mich., writes: "I have suffered from stomach trouble for ten years and five different doctors gave me only temporary relief. A Mr. E. R. Page advised me to take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and four boxes did me more permanent benefit than all the doctors' medicines that I have ever taken."

Rev. J. R. Hoag, of Wymore, Neb., writes: "For six years I have been troubled with dyspepsia. Last fall I became very much alarmed at some symptoms of heart trouble and came to believe there was a sympathetic relation between the two diseases, or rather, that the stomach trouble was the cause of the heart disturbance. I hit upon Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for a remedy and invested a dollar and a half for three boxes which lasted me three months, and I can eat any kind of food I want and have a good, vigorous appetite. Although I am 77 years old, I now feel perfectly well and without being requested by anyone - make this statement as a compliment to the virtues of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets."

Henry Kirkpatrick, of Lawrence, Mass., says: "Men and women whose occupation precludes an active outdoor life should make it a daily practice to use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals; I have done so myself and I know positively that I owe my present health and vigor to their daily use. From the time I was 22 when I graduated from school with broken health from overwork until I was 34, I scarcely knew what it was to be free from stomach weakness. I had no appetite whatever for breakfast and very little for any other meal. I had acidity and heartburn nearly every day and sometimes was alarmed by irregularity and palpitation of the heart, but all this gradually disappeared after I began using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and I can eat my meals with relish and satisfaction which I had not known since I was a growing boy."

If your stomach won't work, try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and be convinced of their merits. All druggists sell them at 50 cents a box. Once use them and you will become their advocate and friend.

MARKET WAS WEAK

Wheat Started Out With an Advance But Declined.

More Favorable Weather Outlook In Winter Wheat Sections.

Flax Market Was Strong But Ruled Very Quiet.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 10.—The wheat market started out with a fair degree of strength this morning, the influence being of a bullish character. The cables were firmer, and the dry weather in the winter wheat fields in the Southwest continued to raise apprehensions as to the crops. The advance was not held very long, however, and the market turned weaker on more favorable news from the winter wheat country. The slump from the high point made in the early morning was about 1c.

The foreign markets were all strong. Liverpool was up 5/8d. Berlin was 1½c higher than Friday, and Antwerp was ⅝c higher. Paris was the strongest market, being up 1½c.

Cash wheat prices continued at 1½c under May for No. 1 northern, 4c under for No. 2 and 6c under for No. 3. Sales were 75,000 bus.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Bullish on Cables and Dry Weather.

Chicago, March 10.—May wheat started out bullish today, opening ⅝c to ¼c higher at 75¾c to 77⅞c on firmer cables and the continued dry weather in the Southwest in the winter wheat fields. There was good buying by commission houses at the outset and prices advanced for May to 78¼c. The local crowd, however, sold moderately for profits around 78c and on the somewhat restricted trade—which was waiting for the government report—May eased and sold at low at 77⅝c. Local receipts were 34 cars, 1 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 445 cars, making a total for the three points of 479 cars, against 502 last week and 654 a year ago. World's shipments were 8,011,000 bu, against 7,142,000 bu last week and 7,742,000 bu a year ago. On passage, breadstuffs increased 920,000 bu.

Late reports of rain in the winter wheat country started liberal selling by the Southwest and by commission houses. There was also a feeling that the government crop report would be bearish and May sagged sharply and closed weak ⅝c lower, at 77c.

The early wheat bulge and the prospects of continued light receipts fo corn caused May corn to open 1¢ to 1¼c up at 62⅝c to 62¼c. Cables were somewhat firmer, but there was some uncertainty over the tone of the forthcoming government report and trade was curtailed. May sold as high as 62½@⅝c and eased later to 62¼c on liquidation. Receipts were 101 cars.

The late action in corn was influenced by the wheat pit. Speculators were waiting for the crop report and as wheat sagged commission houses sold out long corn. May slid off to 61½@⅝c and closed weak 1½@⅝c lower, at 61⅝@¾c.

Oats were steady with a moderate trade at the opening. Reports had it that there was considerable stuff to be shipped out and that local crowd bought to some extent on the strength of the situation. May started ⅛c higher at 44⅜c and hovered between that figure and 44⅝c—the closing price Saturday. Receipts were 132 cars.

An excess of 10,000 in today's receipts of hogs at the yards brought a drop in the hog market and with it lower prices all around in provisions. Some buying checked the decline, but there was no early feature to the market. May pork opened 12½c to the lower at $15.17½ to $15.20, sold to $15.22½ and later eased to $15.17½ again. May lard opened 5c down at $9.35@9.37½, and May ribs 2½@5 lower at $8.35 and eased in sharp.

Close: Wheat—March, 75½c; May, 77c; July, 77⅝@¾c; September, 76⅝c. Corn—March, 59¾c; May, 61⅝@⅞c; July, 61⅜@⅝c; September, 62⅝c; December, 49⅝c. Oats—March, 44½c; July, 35⅜@⅝c; September, 30¼@⅜c; December, 28⅜@⅝c. Pork—March, $15.06; May, $15.25; July, $15.40@.45. Lard—March, $9.22½; May, $9.37½; July, $9.47½@9.50; September, $9.60. Ribs—March, $8.25; May, $8.35@8.37½; July, $8.47½@8.50; September, $8.60. Flax—Cash Northwestern, $1.71; Southwestern, $1.68; May, $1.72. Rye—March, 56½c; May, 57⅝c; July, 57⅝c. Barley—Cash, 58@63½c. The weather map this morning shows no rains in the Southwest except .08 inches at Kansas City and a trace in Iowa. There was no precipitation in the Southwest Sunday.

It is cloudy this morning generally and there is a "low barometer" over Kansas.

The total visible supply of grain is as follows: Wheat, 53,155,000; corn, 10,085,-000; oats, 4,014,000; rye, 2,125,000; barley, 1,855,000.

W. H. Bartlett, of Chicago.—The smallest farm reserves of corn ever reported by the government was four hundred and seventy-five million bus in a year when we had ten million less mouths to feed than now, so that it seems to us that anything under that amount would at this time be very bullish and a reserve of fifty or seventy-five millions less than that amount would be sensational.

THE CROP REPORT.

Washington, March 10.—The government report shows 2% per cent of wheat in farmers' hands; corn, about 20 per cent; oats, about 30 per cent.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, March 10.—There was a large and active trade in wheat today and the market after ruling strong early owing to higher cables from abroad and continued dry weather throughout the Southwest, later became weak on predictions of showers. Longs sold freely and there was also heavy selling by bears. Prices broke 1½c from higher point and the market closed weak, ⅝c lower than Saturday. Liverpool reported their market as firm, ⅝d higher for the day in sympathy with our advance of Saturday and smaller shipments to their market. Continental markets were also strong and higher. There was a good demand for cash wheat and the seaboard reported a good business done there for export. Minneapolis reported a large amount of wheat sold by elevator people to local millers which will be taken out of store. Government report on farm reserves, which will be issued this evening, is generally expected to be bearish and we think its effect has been discounted and unless we get good general rains throughout the Southwest prices will certainly go higher again. Light receipts with no good, estimated receipts for tomorrow, 90 cars.

The corn market, after ruling firm early owing to the light country offerings, later declined in sympathy with weakness in wheat, but closed steadier, ⅜c to ½c per bu lower than Saturday night. Foreign markets were firm. Liverpool closed ¼d higher for the day. Country offerings were very light, practically nothing, while there was a fairly good cash demand. There was also a good cash demand in the Southwest. Trade was fairly large all day and the disposition was to even up pending the government report on farm reserves, which will be issued this afternoon. We cannot see how the government can fail to show anything but a bullish situation, as farmers have undoubtedly fed enormous quantities and the weight of the hogs that are now coming to the market show this to be so. Besides, judging from the prices the farmers have been getting for their live stock, it certainly has been better to feed than to ship to market. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 170 cars.

Oats ruled quiet within a narrow range and no special feature to the market. The market closed, May ⅜c; July ¼c and September ⅜c lower than Saturday in sympathy with wheat. Country offerings were very light, and demand fairly good. The government report which will be issued thies afternoon in our opinion should show a very bullish situation. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 180 cars.

Provisions opened very weak on enormous receipts of hogs and ruled dull and easy until the last half hour when the market was advanced sharply on aggressive buying by one of the leaders and closed strong. It is a market that apparently needs support on the enormous receipts of hogs at the tail end of a season with quality steadily improving and small demand. We think the market needs attention every moment to maintain present prices and advise selling on all such forced markets as today. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 32,000 hogs.

reception room, which had been simply and tastefully decorated with flowers and the American and German colors.

Mayor Ashbridge extended the freedom of the city to the royal visitor and presented to the prince a handsome album containing his address of welcome beautifully engrossed. The mayor's address was as follows:

In welcoming you to our city, we wish to express to your royal highness the gratification of our people at your visit to Philadelphia, where the declaration of independence was written and proclaimed, where the constitution of the United States was promulgated, and where independence hall still stands, a mute witness to the courage and patriotism of the men who laid the foundations of the republic. Philadelphia is well named the city of homes and is distinguished in the arts and manufactures and especially for the genius and skill displayed in its industries. Were you to stay longer there is much here worth study. Our magnificently equipped system of public and private schools, our great colleges, our institutions of art, and philanthropy, our numerous and varied manufacturing industries, would, we believe command your admiration and respect.

Your visit to this great nation, brief as it is, has been sufficient to suggest its limitless possibilities and great resources, but nowhere, we are sure, have you seen a more typical American city than Philadelphia. We beg leave to assure you that the cordial relations which exist between the Imperial German empire and the United States are fully appreciated by all our people and it gives me great pleasure to extend to you the freedom of our city, as exemplified in the resolution of select and common councils and the address o fwelcome contained in this casket. May your visit to Philadelphia remain always with you, as one of your most pleasant memories."

Prince Henry made a brief response. He said: "This is but another of the many acts of kindness that have been extended to me in this country. I assure you that I deeply appreciate it. I thank you for the freedom of the city which you have given me, and for this handsome souvenir, which I shall preserve. Again I thank you."

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Strength Shown at the Start But Decline Set In.

Net Loss of One to Two Points Were Established.

Closing Was Moderately Active at About the Lowest.

New York, March 10.—The tone of the opening stock market was extremely irregular, but the changes were small and there was no important features. Colorado Fuel made an advance of 1½ and Pacific Mail rose nearly a point. There was an active demand for the Republic Steel stocks, but they gained only small fractions. Dealings generally were on a small scale.

The market recovered and aided by vigorous bidding up of special stocks. Large amounts of the Colorado & Southern stocks were taken and the common and second preferred reached record prices with gains of 1⅜. Rock Island rose 1½, Chicago & Eastern Illinois, St. Paul and Texas & Pacific a point or more and Northwestern lost 1¾. North American was active and rose 3½ while colorado Fuel touched 96. There were but few noteworthy changes in the minor stocks, but Chicago Great Western preferred A, Missouri Pacific Lead preferred and Virginia Carolina Chemical lost 1. The latter recovering and Manhattan Beach and Republic Steel preferred advancing 1.

The leading stocks generally did not move widely and many of the important ones hung below last week's close. Missouri Pacific lost about a point. Rock Island advanced to 166½; Northwestern was suddenly lifted 4½ and there was heavy buying of Mexican railroad stocks and bonds. Mexican Central gained 1½ and the St. Joe & Grand Island stocks, Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg, Rubber Goods Preferred, and Chicago Terminal preferred improved 1¾. There was some pressure against minor stocks which recently advanced, American Ice preferred losing 2⅜ and United States Reduction, Westinghouse Electric and Detroit Southern preferred a point. The market sold off before noon in realizing causing a reaction of 2 in Rock Island and 1¾ point rise in Mexican Central first incomes made the feature.

There was very little activity in the market outside of a few specialties. Iowa Central advanced about a point, the pfd 2¾ and American Woolen pfd 1½. Colorado & Southern rose 2 in all, and American Ice pfd rallied 2½. Pullman lost 4⅜ on one sale, and St. Louis & St. Francisco second pfd declined a point. Business was very limited in the usual favorites, and they were slightly lower, especially the coalers and the transcontinental stocks. There was losses ranging up to 2½ in the United States Express and a point or more in bag pfd, St. Louis & San Francisco, St. Paul and Omaha, General Electric and Great Northern pfd, American Telegraph & Cable dropped 2 and Virginia-Carolina Chemical pfd rose 1½. The news of a serious British reverse in south Africa and reports of the break of crop damage indorsed active selling all through the list and the leading stocks reacted a point or more. Consolidated Gas fell 3 under Saturday.

The volume of selling fell away for a time, but rallies were feeble and the decline set in again. Earlier gains were all wiped out and net losses of 1 to 2½ points were established in a number of coalers, Pacifics, Pennsylvania, Manhattan, the high-priced industries and recently active specialties. The closing was moderately active and weak at about the lowest.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The bank statement is no worse or better than was expected and is hardly worthy of consideration accorded it in view of the fact the trust companies assume in important financial operations and as the features most adverse to an advancing market are all known there is nothing to induce further liquidation of stocks than has already taken place. It is quite notable how strong the market has held and the gradual hardening of prices for the past few days is indicative of more aggressive activity for an advance in the near future and I should strongly advise buying the standard shares on any further recessions from present prices.

* * *

Strong & Sturgis to W. H. Laidley & Co: The announcement of the bank statement is variously regarded, but our own judgment is that while the loss in reserve is somewhat larger than anticipated the shrinkage of deposits and reductions of loans are conservative and conditions of banks has been one of the weak spots in the outlook of this market. If loans are reduced to reasonable proportions and the business of the banks of the country brought closer in line, we think it will have a desirable effect.

OFFICIALS—A. L. Smith, President; M. L. Derrig, First Vice President; Wm. Hunter, Second Vice President; John Hunner, Treas.; O. B. Hollis, Secretary.

DIRECTORS—A. L. Smith, Spokane, Wash.; ex-treasurer Spokane county; James Kenny, Marquette, Mich., agent Standard Oil company; John Hunner, Spokane, Wash., ex-treasurer state of Wisconsin; O. B. Hollis, Spokane, Wash., mine owner; M. L. Derrig, Duluth, Minn., ex-assistant manager Standard Oil company.

In exploring and developing the oil fields of Crook county, Wyoming, considerable light has been thrown on the main features of the oil question—that of the grade.

Many companies whose officials are thoroughly competent fail even after locating oil on account of the grade being so low as to prohibit sales on a paying basis.

Eastern oil experts, California oil experts, the United States Geological Survey department and the state geologists declare the oil to be the highest grade found in the United States. It is a natural lubricant of high fire test, straining being all that is necessary to rendering it marketable.

This company owns 320 ACRES OF OIL proven land located in the heart of the field, about eleven miles north of Moorcroft. DRILLING IS BEING CARRIED ON DAY AND NIGHT. Two stratums of oil have already been cut in gaining depth. The drillers are now encountering oil in shale formation.

Geologists say the main oil stratum will be reached at approximately 500 feet. The company has a market for the oil. While this crude oil is now bringing from $6.00 to $8.00 per barrel it is far from the company's desire to make statements which subsequent results will not verify. The company, however, can see their way clear to realize at least $4.00 per barrel for the product.

Connected with this company as officials and stockholders are men who are thoroughly versed in matters pertaining to oil from the ground up to the marketing.

Investigation of officals and holdings are courted. The first block of 50,000 shares of treasury stock is now going rapidly at FIFTEEN CENTS PER SHARE. To those wishing to make a good sound investment withall things pointing to quick returns, the opportunity is now offered; do not delay, as the stock cannot be gotten as cheap again. Considering the work already accomplished and the showing made, the company is not asking a high price for the stock. In disposing of the stock the company is not offering investors inducements of a "guaranteed gusher or cash refunded" or of a high rate of interest on cash invested from the moment the investment is made. The company has spent thousands of dollars in acquiring and improving the property before placing this treasury stock on the market. The stock may be advanced to par or may be withdrawn altogether in case of locating the main stratum. The cash accrued through sales of the stock will go toward developing the property only. The company guarantees an honest and judicious expenditure of moneys accrued through sale of stock. All investors of the stock share in profits of the company's transactions. There are no personal liabilities attached. Samples of the oil and asphaltum may be seen at 409 Torrey building. Prospectuses sent on request. Send all orders accompanied by draft or money order to

THE COPPER STOCKS.

Boston, March 10.—Tremendous activity in Centennial today, lots as large as 10,000 shares at one time being traded in. Of course this is manipulation. Lawson's work. The price was advanced to 28 and the advance well held. Osceola broke to 68 on publication of the annual report which shows it did not earn the dividends paid during the year. The management is very frank, however, and says it made a mistake regarding the metal market and in addition it says the extraordinary expenditure which no longer occur made the copper stand the company over 12 cents. Arcadian and Michigan were also manipulated for the advance. Mohawk and United States Mining do not advance so sharply, but are slowly creeping higher. There is no news yet regarding the Old Dominion contest. It is observable that while stocks of operating and producing mines decline, non-producers advance.

COPPER GOSSIP.

The Osceola mine produced last year 13,710,752 pounds of copper, and sold it at an average of 13 9-10 cents per pound through the United Metal Selling company. The profit is given as 1.71 cents per pound, making the cost 12.13 cents or below the current market price. The directors say no dividend would have been paid the last half of the year if the decline in copper could have been foreseen.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—The market turned today on the announcement that Gen. Methuen had been captured by the Boers. The news broke the New York market and the coppers declined sympathetically. A good volume of buying orders were found in Coppers a point or two below the highest, although bear traders were heavy sellers in the last hour prices were well maintained. If the reaction runs much further we think it well to buy the best of coppers for a good turn.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, March 10.—Cotton opened easy and four to five points lower under very active selling for both accounts. The first decline carried May to 875 and July to 879, and for a time a serious break seemed inevitable. Then came a positive turn for the better in Liverpool and there was every assurance that port receipts would fall short of those of same day last year, etc. Before 11 o'clock May had stiffened to 880 and July to 883 on eager new buying and a small scare of shorts.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 1-16 lower; middling uplands, 9¼; middling gulf, 9⅝; sales, 4100 bales. Futures closed barely steady: March 8.83; April, 8.81; May, 8.74; June, 8.77; July, 8.79; August, 8.64; September, 8.32; October, 8.10; November, 8.00; December, 8.00.

TRYING TO AGREE

Efforts to Reach Compromise on the Cuban Question.

Washington, March 10.—All the leaders of the Republican party in both the senate and house have been busily engaged endeavoring to agree upon some basis of compromise on the Cuban question. The members of the beet sugar contingent are nominally standing firm, but it is well understood they are beating their tomtoms in a frantic endeavor to keep up their courage.

If the issue were brought directly before the house there is scarcely any doubt that the ways and means proposition for an honest reciprocity with Cuba could be passed readily. Enough Democratic votes undoubtedly would be given for Cuban reciprocity to offset the loss of the beet sugar contingent.

This latter faction is not in itself a large one. There are not twenty members of the house in those districts beet sugar is really an important industry. The sugar men have had behind them a majority of the party vote merely because they have gathered in many other Republicans who are opposed to the general principle of reciprocity because they fear it may be used as an attack upon the high tariff theory.

On a record vote there are not twenty Republicans who would dare to place themselves in opposition to the last speech of William McKinley and to the first message of Theodore Roosevelt. Everyone knows who understands the situation that President McKinley himself assured the Cuban delegates that if they accepted the rather stringent restrictions of the Platt amendment he would personally urge the granting of special concessions to Cuba by the United States.

In view of this well known fact it is not believed that the beet sugar men could muster a score of votes in open opposition to the administration. The difficulty is that a special rule is necessary or is deemed necess

UNPLEASANT

Was Trip of a Fast Freight In New Jersey.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 10.—The fast freight, east-bound, due here at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, had a rather unusual and unpleasant experience between Trenton and this city. Two dead men were encountered, one of them having been killed by the train itself, and once the train was stopped to search for the body which could not be found.

The run from Philadelphia was uneventful until, as the train approached Princeton Junction, it hit and killed a man. The train was stopped and the body cared for and left at the junction to be shipped to Trenton, it being in Mercer county.

When near Monmouth Junction the train was stopped at a signal from the head brakeman, who said it had hit another man and he had seen the body hurled into a ditch. A search of the track for a mile back failed to locate the supposed victim. The train was again started east, and as it neared Millstone, the glare of the head light revealed the body of another man lying by the rails. The engineer stopped and the body was picked up and brought to this place. It was that of Howard R. Breeze, of New Brunswick. He is supposed to have been struck by another train while walking home from Franklin Park.

Resumption of Business on Lakes Expected Soon.

Chicago, March 10.—The earliest opening of navigation on the great lakes since the straits of Mackinaw became a factor in the commerce of the country seems to be at hand. A resumption of business by April 1 on all the upper lakes, two weeks earlier than usual, is now predicted by vessel owners.

From all points reports indicate less ice than ever before at the corresponding period of the year. There are only sixteen inches of ice in the straits and even less than that in Mud lake, the last place in the Soo passage to thaw out.

FIFTH VICTIM

Falls to Gang of Murderers at Beaumont.

Beaumont, Texas, March 10.—The body of the fifth victim of a gang of murders and robbers was taken from the Neches river in the eastern suburbs of Beaumont at noon yesterday. The first of the five bodies was recovered in the early part of January.

At the finding of the fifth body every officer in the town was set to work on the mystery, and yesterday afternoon eighteen hoboes, who have been living in the river bottom opposite the city, were arrested and locked up on the suspicion that they are at the bottom of the series of robberies and murders.

FIELDS OF HARD COAL

Description of the Pennsylvania Anthracite Coal Region.

Chronology of the Development of the Field.

Large Central Plants Are Replacing Isolated Smaller Plants.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, March 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The good or the bad condition of the Pennsylvania anthracite coal mining industry affects happily or unhappily the lives of hundreds of thousands of our people throughout all grades of society, from the coal picker to the millionaire capitalist; and the discussion of this great industry is of corresponding interest. The third port of the twenty-second annual report of the United States geological survey, now passing through the press, contains the description of "The Pennsylvania Anthracite Coal Field," by H. H. Stock. Speaking broadly the anthracite coal field, consisting of long, narrow, upland valleys and located in East Central Pennsylvania, may be said to be bounded on the west by the Susquehanna river, on the north by the north branch of the Susquehanna, and on the east by the Delaware and Lehigh rivers. The anthracite region lies mainly within Lackawanna, Luzerne, Carbon, Schuylkill and Northumberland counties, though the measures overlap into Wayne, Susquehanna, Wyoming, Sullivan, Columbia, Dauphin and Lebanon. Of the total anthracite territory, only about 484 square miles are underlain by workable coal measures; nor is this productive area continuous, but consists of detached basins. Of the four main geographic divisions, the northern basin, including the Wyoming and Lackawanna valleys, contains 176 square miles. The eastern-middle basin has a total coal area of about 33 square miles. The southern basin extends 70 miles from Mauchchunk on the Lehigh river west to Dauphin on the Susquehanna, and contains 181 square miles. The western-middle basin contains 94 square miles. This anthracite coal field is divided for trade and labor purposes into the Wyoming region, or labor district No. 1; the Lehigh region, or labor district No. 7; and the Schuylkill region, or labor district No. 9.

It is probable that only a very small part of the coal measures originally deposited in this region has escaped erosion. In the report of the coal waste commission (Harrisburg), D. W. Smith estimates the original contents of the anthracite coal field before mining began at more than 16,500,000,000 tons, and he thinks that this amount of coal represents not more than 5 per cent, probably about 2 per cent, and possibly only 1 per cent of the vast original coal deposits before erosion took place. The development of the anthracite coal field may be briefly suggested by the following chronology: 1762, Anthracite coal discovered in Wyoming valley by Connecticut settlers; 1769, Obadiah Gore first burned anthracite in his blacksmith forge; 1802, anthracite first burned in a grate in Philadelphia; 1812, anthracite first successfully used in an iron furnace at Philadelphia; 1825, first cargo of anthracite shipped around Cape Cod to Boston; 1820-1840, period of canals and navigation companies; 1840-1901, period of railroad exploitation; 1855, important development of lake and Western trade; 1900, large number of individual collieries bought up by railroads. After a protracted contest with the railroads, the individual operators consolidated their interests in 1896 with the Pennsylvania Coal company and incorporated a railway for themselves; whereupon, in January, 1901, the Pennsylvania Coal Company was bought by Pierpont Morgan & Co., at an increase of 732 per cent upon the par value of the stock; this property was then immediately sold to the Erie railroad, and thus the contest was closed.

The mining is by "stripping" where the coal outcrops and can easily be reached, and by the room and pillar system for underground work. Slopes and shafts are the prevailing form of mine opening. Anthracite is universally mined with hand rotary drills and by the use of black blasting powder, dynamite or giant powder being sometimes used. The reports of the bureau of mines give 30.3 tons of anthracite mined as the approximate result per keg of powder of bituminous coal mined during the same period. The coal is not undercut as a general rule and mining machines have never been applied successfully to the anthracite field. Ventilation is universally by rotary fans and the system exists in a number of mines in such quantities as to render it necessary to work then entirely by the use of safety lamps. Every known form of haulage—mule haulage, rope haulage, locomotive haulage—is to be found in the anthracite mines, there being in 1900, 632 engines of various kinds, and 15,708 mules for hauling coal.

Unlike bituminous coal, anthracite must be broken, sorted to sizes, and have the impurities picked out before it can be marketed. The coal is broken by toothed rolls, and screened in circular or horizontal screens, the slate being picked out by machinery or by boys and old men. The cost of mining anthracite can hardly be given in general terms. It is probably not far from $1.50 per ton. Some years ago the anthracite miners were mainly American, English, Welsh and Irish; but at present a great many nationalities are represented in the anthracite fields. The percentage of nationalities are about as follows: American, 21; Irish, 16; English, 7; Welsh, 9—a little over 53 per cent—Polish, 27; Hungarian, 6; Italian, 3; German, 4, and Austrian, Slavonic, Scotch and Lithuanian, over 1 per cent each. In 1900 the amount of employes inside the mines was 92,223; of outside employes, 45,-433—a total of 140,656. The production of coal in the anthracite field by decennial periods since 1850 has been, in round numbers: 1850, 28,700,00 tons, valued at $42,300,-000; 1860, 46,500,000 tons, valued at $66,400,000; 1900, 57,400,000 tons, valued at $86,000,000.

Concentration of interests in the anthracite coal fields has been the policy for the past few years in connection with the mining and preparation of coal, as well as in the ownership of the properties. Large central plants are rapidly replacing isolated smaller plants. One large breaker now does the work formerly done by a number of small ones. A single modern boiler plant has replaced possibly half a dozen scattered individual plants of old-fashioned cylindrical boilers, and mammoth central pumping plants or drainage tunnels are now draining whole basins, where formerly a large number of smaller plants were doing the work. This concentration naturally tends to better management, and to a saving in fixed expenses, and in labor. These economies have resulted from the increase of capital and in labor required to produce anthracite, without a corresponding increase in demand for it. In 1880, coal royalties were from 20 to 25 cents per ton for prepared sizes, the sizes below chestnut being neglected or thrown away; now royalties are 25 cents for pea coal, about 10 to 12½ cents for sizes below pea, and from 10 to 20 cents for prepared sizes above pea. In 1875, the average number of days worked per year was 246; 1897, it was 152. The cost of opening a colliery in 1887 was $100,000; now it is from $400,000 to $500,000. Owing to requirements of cleaning, about 14 per cent of the coal product which was formerly saleable must now be thrown upon the dump. In 1887, the average daily breaker output was 599 tons; in 1897, the average of all breakers was 889 tons. In 1880, 88 per cent of the coal sold was of the size which was sold at a profit; in 1897, only 70 per cent. In 1877, 38 per cent of all coal mined was grate and larger sizes not requiring preparation for sale; in 1887, only 26 per cent; in 1897, 15 per cent. The selling price of prepared sizes at tide water was $3.26 in 1877, $3.57 in 1887, and $3.46 in 1897. Deeper workings, heavier machinery, greater costs in many ways of mining, have greatly increased cost of preparation. Nevertheless, pessimists to the contrary, says Mr. Stock, the anthracite industry, with an invested capital of some $700,000,000, with natural annual profits of from $35,000,000 to $100,000,000, with a freight traffic worth $40,000,000 per year to the carriers, cannot be rapidly wiped out of existence.

The coal beds very in thickness from mere traces of coal to the 50 or 60 feet of the Mammoth bed. The Wyoming basin of the Northern field, 31.8 per cent of the total coal may be considered marketable; in the Eastern-middle field, 75 to 77 per cent; in the Southern field, 72 per cent; in the Western-middle field, 75 per cent.

ETRURIA

Arrives Safely at the Azores With All Well.

Porta, Azores, March 10.—The Etruria anchored here at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. All on board are well.

She had a comparatively uneventful passage, except for the breakdown, which occurred during the dinner hour of Feb. 26. When this occurred the Etruria had just finished speaking by wireless telegraphy with the Cunard line steamer Umbria. After the accident was discovered the Etruria called the Umbria wirelessly for one hour, but without success.

Upon examination it was found that the ship's propeller had broken off outside of the tube, and that the rudder had been carried away by the propeller. The Etruria then sent up rockets, which were seen by the British steamer William Cliff. The latter bore down and was alongside in fifty minutes after the accident. She stood by until daylight when, after several attempts, she succeeded in passing a hawser aboard the Etruria. The tank steamer Ottawa arrived on the scene at this time. The William Cliff then attempted to tow the Etruria, while the Ottawa attempted to steer her. The hawser, however, snapped. The Ottawa stood by for two days and then left for Fayal, bearing the second officer of the Etruria, to report the disaster and obtain assistance.

In the meanwhile the crew of the Etruria had made every effort to rig a jury rudder. The first such rudder was carried away immediately when an attempt was made to use it. After further efforts another was adjusted and is still in position.

The passengers of the Etruria were satisfied they were in no danger, and they praise the conduct of the captain and crew of the vessel. Before the accident the passengers amused themselves with the usual deck sports and concerts were held in the first and second cabins. Only those who were anxious concerning business matters chafed at the unusual delay. The Etruria reports having sighted the Italian mail steamer Sardegna, from Naples, Feb. 26, for New York, last Wednesday, March 5. The Sardegna stood by, but finding she could be of no assistance, proceeded on her course.

The Etruria was hoping to communicate with the North German Lloyd steamer Kron Prinz Wilhelm by wireless telegraphy, but her mast wire broke in several places and she was unable to repair it until the weather had improved, when it was too late. After the accident the passage of the Cunard steamer was entirely uneventful and there occurred nothing of interest beyond the daily runs of the vessel, which ranged from sixty to 100 knots.

The Etruria will wait here for the arrival of the royal mail steamer Elbe, which left Southampton for Horta yesterday. The Elbe will carry the Etruria's passengers to England. The Etruria will then be towed home by the two tugs which are now on their way out from Liverpool for this purpose.

HILLIARD TOO WISE

Notorious Crook Tried to Work the Former Actor.

Said He Was Son of President of Cincinnati Bank.

Disposed of Bonds He He Bought With a Bogus Check.

New York, March 10—Robert Hilliard, former actor, but now manager for Boody, McLellan & Co.'s branch banking office at 10 West Thirty-third street, is congratulating himself upon his narrow escape from making his firm the prey of a swindler to the amount of about $5000. The branch office over which Mr. Hilliard presides is on the second floor, and opposite the Waldorf-Astoria.

The place was opened on Feb. 3, and scarcely had office furniture been arranged when in came a genteel young man, and introduced himself as Albert Hummell, a dentist.

"I have always admired you as an actor," said the visitor, "and noticing as I looked over from the Waldorf that you were just opening in a new line of business, I thought I would come in and give you my patronage."

The young man said he had $5000 worth of Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern bonds which he would like Mr. Hilliard to sell, and asked about commissions. Mr. Hilliard made memorandum for his customer.

Taking this memorandum the man away and soon returned with the bonds. Mr. Hilliard asked him for a reference.

"Why," was the response, "I am surprised that you ask for reference in a transaction of this kind. These bonds are negotiable the same as a bushel of wheat."

"I have no suspicion that these are not your bonds and registered under your name," said Mr. Hilliard, 'but it is a precaution we are obliged to take, and I must require a reference."

Mr. "Hummell" then said that his father wa spresident of the Atlas bank in Cincinnati, but he had forgotten the name of the bank's New York correspondent. He said he would come in again with the bonds after he had obtained the reference.

Mr. Hilliard didn't hear again of his pleasant young customer until last Friday, when Mr. Boody called up from the main banking office and congratulated Mr. Hilliard on saving the bank the loss of $5000.

A few hours later a detective appeared at Mr. Hilliard's office with a large portfolio of photographs and asked Mr. Hilliard if he could identify the young man's photograph. Mr. Hilliard soon put his finger on a photo, saying, "That's the man."

"Yes, that's the man," replied the detective, "and one of the most notorious crooks on a big scale in the country. His name is Curtis."

Mr. Hummell, after failing to dispose of the $5000 block of bonds, of which he had $20,000 worth, went to Philadelphia and obtained letters of introduction to brokerage firms and sold to De Haven & Townsend the $20,000 worth of bonds, receiving a large check. Meantime it was learned that "Hummell" had procured the bonds from a Boston house upon a worthless check, and that search was being made for him. Payment on the De Haven & Townsend check was stopped.

It was learned in Philadelphia that "Hummell" had telegraphed to the Hotel Manhattan here to have it hold a bag which he had left there. The detectives seized this bag, and in it they found the little memorandum which Mr. Hilliard had written. The detectives expect to have the swindler in a short time.

PLAYED INDIAN.

Nine-Year-Old Boy Is Dead as Result.

Denver, Col., March 10.—Stewart Hill aged 9 years, died here yesterday from the effects of a bullet wound in the breast received while engaged in a mimic Indian battle. James Butson, aged 12 years, is under arrest, charged with murder. Four boys, all 12 years of age or under, stationed themselves behind barricades about thirty yards apart, and had exchanged about twenty shots when Hill fell, pierced through the lungs.

According to the other boys, Hill had stepped out into the open, when Butson took deliberate aim and fired. Chief of Police Armstrong intends to take measures against those who are responsible for the boys having firearms.

AT CLOQUET.

Cloquet, Minn., March 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—A caucus to nominate town officers for the ensuing year was held in the open air, on Saturday evening. W. H. Skemp was named as chairman and R. D. Vibert as clerk and the following ticket placed in nomination: For chairman, Fred Bowling; supervisors, H. M. Seimser and A. F. Monroe; clerk, A. M. Olson; assessor, R. D. Vibert; justice, William Kelly; constable, Andrew Nelson.

Rev. T. G. Sykes left for St. Paul Saturday afternoon. He preached yesterday at Arlington Heights church with a view to the pastorate.

A. Paupore was summoned from Catlin yesterday, his little child being dangerously ill.

Scarlet fever is still claiming victims in the east end of the town. Ever Everson's boy died Saturday evening, making the seventh death for the week.

Dr. Harrington, of Minneapolis, has been sent here by the state health officials as special health inspector. He commenced work Saturday and found several cases where not even a physician had been called. The houses were promptly quarantined. Dr. Harrington made a remark which the local board of health and the village fathers will do well to keep in mind for future reference. He said that sanitary conditions in certain portions of the city were frightful. This is true. There was no general clean-up last year. Owners of property, when notified, neglected to remove a nuisance because of the expense, and claimed it was the business of the council to clean the streets and alleys. It matters not who has to stand the expense; there must be, for the preservation of health, a general clean-up this spring, and the local board of health should promptly prosecute parties who persist in maintaining a nuisance.

Work has been resumed on the library building and it is hoped that the structure will be turned over to the board in a month or six weeks from date.

A large composite building is to be erected on the corner of Boardway and Avenue C, this spring, by Frank Elm.

A Swedish Baptist church is to be erected this spring on Fourteenth street east.

W. L. Case will move into his newly acquired residence on or about April 1.

W. H. Skemp will occupy the house vacated by Mr. Case.

Roy Snyder is the new stenographer for the Cloquet Lumber company.

Rev. Tallier Giraux held services at Carlton yesterday.

Prof. Cobb and wife will spend the enforced vacation in the Twin Cities.

Joe Yell has just completed his new barber shop and moved from his old shop on Thursday last. Mr. Yell has one of the finest tonsorial parlors in Cloquet and there is nothing finer west of Duluth. It is fitted out with plate glass mirrors and the latest patented Koch chairs. The parlor is on Cloquet avenue, just west of Ninth street.

PUBLIC CONTROL

Urged By Ex-Governor Altgeld In Speech at Buffalo.

He Favors People Owning All the Public Utilities.

Sees Some Obstacles That Would Have to Be Overcome.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 10.—Former Governor John P. Altgeld of Illinois delivered the principal speech at the banquet of the Independent club here Saturday night.

The topic of the evening was municipal ownership of public utilities. Mr. Altgeld was received with cheers and his remarks were received with much interest as coming from a man who has had official experience in the matters of which he spoke, and his declarations regarding Chicago street railways were applauded.

Mr. Altgeld took as his text, "Shall the people own the monopolies," and said in part:

"The inventions, the discoveries, and the progress of the sciences during the last century tended to shorten distances, to bring the different parts of the earth together, and made it possible for man to not only go quickly from one point to another, but they made it possible for him to execute his will simultaneously in various places. Out of this condition has come an era of consolidation and concentration; little things are giving way to great things. The result of this consolidation in itself should be beneficial; it cheapens the cost of production, and in governments it should cheapen the cost of operation, while in the railway world it greatly increases the convenience of the public."

Mr. Altgeld, continuing, said these conditions are permanent and should be beneficial if properly managed, but instead have wiped out competition in many fields and established monopolies. He argued that under these conditions labor has been specialized and is no longer independent, but interdependent. Each city and town and each individual has become dependent on others. Water, light, and local transportation in cities have become absolutely vital, not only to the comfort and convenience of the people, but their happiness and even their lives.

On this point Mr. Altgeld said: "We have, then, this anomalous condition: That the things absolutely necessary to the comfort, prosperity, health, and even the life of the American people are owned and controlled not by themselves, but by monopolies—that is, they are owned and controlled by a few private individuals. The people are in the power of these few private individuals.

"Some years ago the legislature of Illinois passed some acts which practically turned the city of Chicago over to the street railway companies and the gas companies for half a century, without giving any protection to the people. As executive of the state I felt it my duty to veto those acts of legislation. A few days thereafter I was in Chicago and the president of two of the great street railway systems, controlling three-fourths of the street railways of that city, and also interested in the gas companies, asked for an interview.

"The question of protecting the public was discussed and I said we had in that state then a board known as the railway commission, which had power to control steam railroads and to fix freight rates and passenger rates and compel the companies to furnish adequate accommodations, etc., and I asked him what he thought of the idea of having the law amended so as to make the street railway companies also subject to the control of this board.

"'Well, now, governor,' said he, 'that simply means that we must own another board, and we already have too many boards.'

"This was a candid statement from as able a man as I ever saw, and it stated the whole case in a sentence. The corporations control the boards, and when a board is found once in a while which they cannot control then they succeed in getting some federal court to paralyze the board with its injunction."

Mr. Altgeld argued that the railroads prevent the enforcement of laws and scorn the interstate commerce commission. He told of discrimination in freight rates and declared the people of America are being subjected to all sorts of extortion by trusts and corporations, and he held congress to be a dismal failure in dealing with the subject. He said monopolies have shown their ability to crush out all efforts at securing an advance in wages.

Mr. Altgeld then took up government ownership, using European nations as examples.

A FOOL ERRAND

Caused By Blunder of Kansas City Chief.

Kansas City, March 10.—A man arrested here last night on suspicion that he was Bennett, the supposed murderer of Nora Fuller, a San Francisco girl, proved to be a well known Kansas City character and was discharged. Capt. Seymour, of San Francisco, arrived here last night on the strength of a message from Chief Hayes and returned West today, declaring the suspect was not the man wanted. Chief Hayes realizing soon after the arrest that a mistake had been made failed to make the matter public.

NINETEENTH YEAR. LAST EDITION. TUESDAY, MARCH 11, 1902. TWO CENTS.

SESSION HAS ENDED

Legislators Now Return to Their Homes.

Set of Amendments to the Constitution.

From The Herald
State Capitol Bureau.

St. Paul, March 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—The special session is over.

Formally it ended at noon today, but really it ended shortly before 6 o'clock last night, when both houses carried motions to adjourn to today with a rush, and the scuffle of hurrying footsteps scarcely sufficed to drown the squeals of dying woodchucks which the adjournment executed.

Before adjourning, the house and senate agreed to a set of constitutional amendments, passed the Anderson real estate tax law and the Anderson income tax law with some changes from their original form, voted $50,000 for the St. Louis exposition and appropriated $7000 more to pay the expenses of the session over the $40,000 appropriated at the beginning of the session. This last bill was a Jacobson measure, and for once there was unanimity on a Jacobson bill.

The most important thing of the day, and, indeed, of the session, was the passage of a set of amendments to the taxation features of the constitution, to be submitted to the people for their vote this coming fall. This amendment is interesting, and it is therefore given here in full. While it does not leave the door wide open to tax legislation, it leaves it considerably ajar. It follows:

Section 1—The power of taxation shall never be surrendered, suspended or contracted away. The legislature shall provide for all annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated ordinary expenses of the state for each year, and whenever it shal happen that such ordinary expenses of the state for any year shall exceed the income of the state for such year, the legislature shall, at its next session, provide for levying a tax sufficient to pay such deficiency. And whenever the income of the state from other sources shall be sufficient to defray all of its ordinary expenses without the levy of any annual state tax, such tax levy shall be omitted.

All taxes to be raised in this state shall be levied and collected for public purposes only, and all property on which taxes are to be levied, except as herein otherwise provided, shall have a cash valuation and shall be equalized and uniform throughout the state; provided, that whenever the levy of a tax for state purposes is omitted as above provided, the taxes levied for local purposes shall be upon a valuation of the property within the several counties and the subdivisions thereof, which shall be equalized and uniform throughout each county.

The legislature may be general or

CLOSING PROCEEDINGS

Bury's Bill Permitting Lake County to Bond Itself For a Jail Is Vetoed By the Governor.

From The Herald
State Capitol Bureau.

St. Paul, March 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—The special session of the Minnesota legislature ended promptly at noon today, both houses adjourning sine die without any further casualties. The morning was not productive of great results, as under the constitution no bills could be passed. As far as that was concerned, however, no constitutional limitation was necessary, as both houses got beyond the mood of passing bills yesterday afternoon. The governor sent in a message, saying that he had vetoed Mr. Bury's bill permitting Lake county to bond itself for a jail, explaining that he did it because of the discovery that the bill would repeal a law under which several counties have issued jail bonds. A substitute bill died yesterday when the legislature adjourned until today.

Nothing was done this morning except to approve yesterday's journal, though there were a few exchanges of messages and pleasantries. Senator Daugherty and a committee from the senate came into the house and notified that branch that the senate had no more work to do. Then a committee, consisting of Messrs. Roberts, Pugh and Bush, was appointed to wait upon the governor and tell him the end of the session had arrived. Mr. Laybourn was appointed on the committee, but he asked the chair to put Mr. Pugh in his place, which was done. When the committee returned

TWO WOMEN SHOT DOWN

Unknown Men Fire Upon Defenseless Women In Suburbs of Camden, Killing One and Fatally Wounding the Other.

Camden, N. J., March 11.—Mrs. Lafe Gruss and Mrs. Frank Gowie, of Westmont, four miles south of here were shot at 9 o'clock this morning on the outskirts of the town by two unknown men who made their escape. Mrs. Gruss was killed instantly and Mrs. Gowie was brought to Cooper hospital in this city, in a critical condition. Physicians say her recovery is doubtful.

The police are looking for Lafe Gruss, the husband of the murdered woman, who had been separated from his wife for about a week as a result of a quarrel.

Mrs. Gowie is the wife of Frank Gowie, who is prominent in Westmont and vicinity.

SEALERS ELUDE STRIKERS

St. Johns, N. F., March 11.—Two sealing steamers, the Terra Nova and the Neptune, with partly completed crews, eluded the strikers here and went to sea this morning. They will complete their crews at various fishing hamlets. The strikers are assuming a more threatening attitude. They have visited all the sealing ships in port, and have driven ashore the men they found on board of them, disregarding the mounted and foot police on the scene. The authorities are apprehensive of trouble during the day if any others of the sealing vessels attempt to leave.

ASSAULTED THE ENGINEERS

Cincinnati, March 11.—After the failure of the conference last night to adjust the differences between the proprietors of Cincinnati, Covington and Newport and the United Brewery workmen, there were several engineers assaulted and two of them are reported seriously injured today. As the stationary engineers insist on remaining under the jurisdiction of the Engineers' union, and refuse to abide by the orders of the United Brewery workmen, the engineers at the breweries are the ones who are attacked most, but the new drivers and all others who are working for the breweries at this time are subject to assaults from the crowds that assemble about the breweries.

EIGHT SOLDIERS INJURED

Omaha, March 11.—Eight soldiers were injured, several of them seriously, at Fort Crook, by the derailment of a Burlington coach on the train which brought the Twenty-second Infantry to the fort early today. The train was being sidetracked, and one of the coaches was derailed and overturned. It was loaded with soldiers, most of whom were asleep. The names of the injured and the nature of their injuries have not yet been learned but all are reported to have been taken to the post hospital.

Pelles, an Italian, residing at Greytown, both largely interested in the Caribbean & Pacific Transit company, operating on Lake Nicaragua and Rio San Juan, between Greytown and Granada, Nick., are negotiating, the former in London, the latter through G. Amslink & Co., of New York, for a loan for the Nicaraguan government of $2,500,000 gold for a term of fifteen years, at a hight rate of interest. The security is to be Nicaragua's gauge railroads.

DASTARDLY

Attempt of Moulder to Injure Non-Union Workmen.

York, Pa., March 11.—Benjamin F. Butler, a molder, has been arrested here charged with placing a number of cartridges in a mould at the foundry of the Pennsylvania Agricultural works last week. Butler's arrest was based on the fact that he is known to have purchased cartridges similar to those found in the mould, and at the only place in this city where they are known to be sold. The accused is secretary of the local Iron Moulders' union. There has been a strike on at the works, and it is believed the cartridges were placed in the mould to injure non-union men.

SURGICAL OPERATION

Is Performed on Governor Taft at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, March 11.—William H. Taft, governor of the Philippines, underwent a surgical operation today at the Jewish hospital, in this city, as contemplated ever since his consultation with an expert in New York, immediately after his return. The operation is not regarded as a serious one, and it was successfully performed this morning. The patient is reported as doing nicely. He will be in the hospital perhaps three weeks.

BRONZE FOR ST. PAUL

Commemorative Tablet, the Gift of the Commercial Club of St. Paul, Will Be Presented With Appropriate Addresses.

New York, March 11.—The services of the steamship St. Paul, of the American line, in the war with Spain will be commemorated today by the unveiling at the foot of the staircase of the main companionway of a bronze tablet and a bronze plate with appropriate exercises and addresses by distinguished persons. The commemorative tablet will relate the part taken by the vessel in the war with Spain under Capt. Sigsbee. It was designed by Edith H. Ogden, of St. Paul, and cast by students of the St. Paul mechanics' art school. The metal used was taken from Spanish guns and from the sunken United States steamship Merrimac and Spanish vessels Reatormel, Terror and Maria Theresa. It will be presented by the Commercial club of St. Paul.

The bronze will be unveiled by Miss Anita Furness, granddaughter of Alex Ramsey, ex-secretary of war and war governor of Minnesota. Addresses will be made by Capt. Sigsbee, United States Senator Moses E. Clapp and Representative C. Stevens, of Minnesota, and Capt. Henry A. Castle, auditor for the postoffice department.

BIG DOG SAVES FAMILY

Baltimore Widow, Aroused By Animal When House Is Full of Smoke, Succeeds In Escaping With Family.

Baltimore, March 11.—A big shepherd dog awakened Mrs. Rosalie Pressfrick and her seven children at 3 o'clock Sunday morning in time to save them from suffocating or being burned to death at their home on Stricker street.

The woman, who is a widow, was aroused by the dog barking and jumping against the door of her room. The apartment was full of smoke. When she opened the door flames shot up the only stairway. She threw open the windows and aroused her children in adjoining rooms. The younger children were nearly overcome by smoke.

By this time the halls and stairway were burning. The mother got all her children to the third story. The firemen were delayed. The woman determined to make a desperate effort to get to the back windows of the second story, which opened over a shed. Wrapping the youngest children in blankets and carrying two of them she bade the others follow her and dashed through the smoke and fire. All reached the back window, although Mrs. Pressfrick and several of the children were burned, their night dresses taking fire. One after another, the mother leading the way, all jumped to the roof of the shed, from where they were rescued by neighbors.

LOCATED IN QUEBEC

Gaynor and Greene Who Are Wanted By Federal Authorities at Savannah Have Been Traced to Chateau Frontenac.

New York, March 11.—Col. John F. Gaynor and his partner, W. D. Greene, charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States government, and wanted for hearing in Savannah, Ga., by the federal authorities, are registered at the Chateau Frontenac, according to a Herald dispatch from Quebec. They arrived there two days ago, and Mrs. Gaynor joined her husband Monday.

Col. Gaynor, in response to questions, would only say: "My name is registered properly at this hotel. Any one having business with me will know where to find me."

Col. Gaynor is well known in Quebec, where he has extensive interests.

Col. John F. Gaynor, who, with his wife and his partner, D. B. Greene, is stopping at the Chateau Frontenac, in this city, said to an Associated Reporter that he and Mr. Greene are not here in hiding from the United State's court at Savannah, Ga. Asked if they intended returning to the United States, Mr. Gaynor replied that they might return on the 17th inst.

POLICEMAN DOES WELL

Kills One Burglar and Wounds Another Who Were Attempting to Break Into a Hardware Store at Peekskill, N. Y.

Peekskill, N. Y., March 11—One burglar was shot and killed and another was wounded by a policeman here early today. The men had broken into the hardware store of Durham Bros., and were seen by two policemen. The burglars tried to escape, and fired two shots at the policemen, one of whom returned the fire. The dead man was Clarence Outhouse, 30 years old, of Peekskill. His companion, who is under arrest, refuses to give his name. Outhouse was shot twice. One bullet lodged in his breast and another passed through the heart, causing instant death. The policeman fired a third shot, which struck the other burglar in the hand.

STRIKERS PLEASED

Eight Thousand Men Are Now Out In Boston.

Business Interests Are Seriously Affected.

Boston, March 11.—With more than 8000 men actually out and with promises of support from unions whose membership, it was claimed, would bring the total up to 25,000 if it became necessary for them to join the movement, the striking freight handlers and men of allied interests today began the second day of the contest to prevent the employment of non-union labor by railroad and other corporations. The labor forces declared themselves this morning to be in a most satisfactory position, backed by the large force already involved, and by the prospect that before tonight, even, some 2000 men from the general team drivers' union and the expressmen's union would have stopped work.

The two railroads principally affected by the strike, the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Albany branch of the New York Central, by the employment of non-union men and by drawing help from their forces in other cities, were able to announce that they were prepared to carry on business as usual.

While the railroads, especially the New Haven system, against which the strike is chiefly aimed, have thus far escaped serious consequences, other business interests of great magnitude have felt seriously the effect of the strike. The freight accumulations of another twenty-four hours will cause a serious congestion and add to the difficulty of making shipments when the trouble is over.

A tour through the strike district disclosed everything quiet and orderly this morning. It was expected by some that the express team drivers and helpers would strike the first thing today, a vote to that effect having been passed by the union at 10 o'clock. The Adams, American and New York & Boston Dispatch company were doing business as usual.

The General Team Drivers' union mebmers, however, began to leave the first thing, and at 10 o'clock it was estimated that 70 per cent of the total number were out. This gave the strike force an addition of about 1500 men and brought the total up to 9500. These drivers handle mainly building material.

President Ryan, of the 'Longshoremens' union, has ordered a general strike of all 'longshoremen and dock freight handlers in sympathy with the New York, New Haven & Hartford men. This union embraces 2500 men.

HURRICANE AT OMAHA

Heavy Windstorm Unroofs Buildings, Smashes Plate Glass Windows, Scares the People and Creates General Disturbance.

Omaha, March 11.—A storm from the northwest swept through the northern portion of Omaha at 1 a. m. Light rain and hail were followed by a veritable hurricane, which did a great amount of damage. Wires were blown down, windows shattered, several buildings unroofed and sidewalks torn up.

The effects of the storm were made more apparent with the break of dawn, and it is now known that half a hundred buildings were damaged more or less. Cuming street from Eighteenth to Twenty-fourth, and Twenty-fourth street north of Cuming are strewn with debris from damaged buildings, signs and fences. Nobody is thought to have been injured, but Bicycle Patrolman Dan Baldwin had a narrow escape. The storm struck him before he had dismounted and the force of the wind threw him heavily to the pavement, but he managed to get to a place of safety.

The Coliseum building is the worst wrecked of the larger structures. It was directly in the path of the storm. Nearly all of the skylights are gone and the roof is badly twisted. The high board fence surrounding the building was also carried away. Anderson's match factory, immediately east of the Coliseum, was badly wrecked and a row of five flats across the street were twisted and all the windows torn out.

Five large plate-glass windows in the Taggarts' undertaking parlors at 2224 Cuming street were blown out and the furniture and interior wrecked.

The storm created considerable excitement for a short time and aroused the entire population in the north part of the city, who thought the town was in the grasp of a real twister.

PASSENGERS SCALDED

Electric Car In New York Broke Off the Valve of a Boiler, Causing Injury to Fifty People.

New York, March 11.—A Madison avenue electric car, on which were almost 100 persons, has met with a peculiar accident. About fifty of the passengers were injured, none of them seriously.

A new building is in course of erection at Forty-fourth street and Madison avenue, at which a portable hoisting engine is used, the engine being in the street. It stood close to the track. The motorman stopped the car as he approached, and the engineer told him to wait until he could move the engine. The car conductor thought there was room to pass and ordered the motorman to proceed. This he did, and the car shaved off a valve which extended from the boiler.

The suddenly released steam broke the windows in the side of the car next to the engine and covered the passengers, scalding them on hands and faces. Others were bruised by being crushed and thrown to the ground during the ensuing panic.

HUNGARIAN COUNT SUICIDES

Waco, Tex., March 11.—Ignotz Lowinger, by birth a Hungarian count, a native of Temeswar, Hungary, committed suicide at the McClelland hotel by shooting himself through the temple with a revolver. No cause can be assigned for the act. For political reasons about thirty years ago the count left his native land and came to Waco, where he amassed a large fortune. About three weeks ago he married a wealthy widow and appeared happy up to the time of his death.

ANNUAL MEETING

New Council to Effect Organization This Evening.

Mayor Will Send In a Number of Appointments.

Annual Message Will Also Be Presented---Some Features.

The annual meeting of the council will be held this evening.

Mayor Hugo will make a few appointments and many disappointments.

The aldermen will perfect their working organization for the ensuing year and listen to the reading of the mayor's message.

Despite current rumors on the streets today, all appointments will be made, except that of chief of police and possibly that of a fire commissioner.

Mayor Hugo deems it best not to name his chief of the police department until after the mayoralty contest is settled in the courts. Acting Chief Troyer will hold over until the office is formally filled.

At a late hour today the mayor was still undecided as to the man he should name to succeed William M. Abrahamson on the board of fire commissioners. It is possible that this appointment will not be made tonight.

As to the other appointments Mayor Hugo has taken no person into his confidence. It is probable, however, that Oscar Mitchell will be reappointed city attorney, W. B. Patton is also said to be selected for another term as city engineer.

Charles W. Wilson, though a Democrat, is likely to stay on the board of public works for another three years by virtue of reappointment. He is an experienced contractor and has a large non-partisan endorsement.

Dr. J. M. Robinson will probably be selected to again handle the affairs of the health officer and J. H. Robinson seems to have again drawn a winning card for the office of building inspector.

Of the several names mentioned in connection with the appointment to the board of fire commissioners, Lewis R. Bondy seems to be the leading favorite, but as stated before the selection has not been determined definitely.

The council elects a president, vice president, city clerk and city sealer of weights and measures. Alderman A. D. Haven has been decided on for president. H. W. Cheadle has the city clerk re-election for a certainty. He will reappoint Axel E. Zimmerman and John Connelly as his office assistants.

Noble Sampson will probably be re-elected city sealer of weights and measures. This is an office that pays a salary of $65 a month and necessitates the keeping of a horse and buggy. Despite the fact that it is not a plum, there are six candidates for it.

Unless some arrangement is made between tonight and next Monday night, the Democratic members of the council will vote solidly against the confirmation of the mayor's appointments.

After the council meeting last night caucuses were held by both Republicans and Democrats. This was obviously a move for unity on the appointments, but it failed in its purpose.

However, it is not very material to the Republicans whether the appointments are confirmed or not. They are all re-appointments and the present incumbents will hold over till their successors are duly qualified.

* * *

The mayor's message is probably one of the most able explanations of the needs and commendable features of the city government ever presented to a new council.

However, it has the advantage of excessive length, which prevents many good citizens from reading that which all citizens should know. The mayor started out for a brief message of condensed outlines of expanded policies, but gave up the idea at the conclusion of the first paragraph.

It is impossible to touch all the points of importance which should be touched upon and at the same time produce a short message.

The message will highly compliment each department of city government for the efficiency of its administration during the past year. It is probable, however, that the council will be scored somewhat for constantly wrangling with the board of fire commissioners over the letting of hose and other fire department contracts. The mayor is known to have pronounced views against internal squabbles in municipal affairs.

In connection with the fire department the mayor will also urge the necessity of a fire tug for the protection of property along the water front.

He may also call attention to the fact that the new council has a more perplexing problem than the wine room ordinance in the extension of Railroad street.

Some of the largest interests of the city demand the opening up of Railroad street to Garfield avenue. That either means an extremely dangerous grade crossing, or an expensive viaduct, across which would pass the elevated tracks of the Eastern Minnesota company. It is a much more delicate problem than appears on the surface.

Struck By Car.

Alma Peterson, the 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peterson, of the West End, was struck by a street car last evening and narrowly escaped death or serious injury. She was playing in the street near Nineteenth avenue west and Superior street when a Lakeside care came along from the barn. The motorman, E. A. Carey, saw her in time to partially check the car, but she was struck by the fender and thrown to one side landing in a puddle of water. She was carried to her home and examination made. No broken bones were found and there was no sign of internal injuries.

IS ARRESTED.

Otto Snyder Must Go Back to Stillwater--- Broke Parole.

Otto Snyder was arrested last evening for volating his Stillwater prison parole.

Not long ago the morning paper had some breezy stuff about him capturing pieces of heavy British siege artillery, two troops of cavalry and a brigade of infantry down in South Africa, or something to that effect.

However, Otto Snyder has not been outside the United States since leaving Duluth in 1899 though his brother, formerly employed in the local post office has been in Germany and South Africa.

Young Snyder is a son of Mrs. Snyder who figured in the burning of the London road half-way house and attempted murder three years ago. At that time he was serving a three-years sentence for robbing the Fred Miller Brewing company. He was paroled with only nine months to serve, but having violated this parole will go back to Stillwater this evening.

LOGGING ON BOUNDARY.

R. N. Marble Tells of One of Novel Features.

R. N. Marble has returned from a trip to the Alger-Smith company's logging camps on Pigeon river. Mr. Marble went via Winnipeg and overland to the camps. He say that when he left that country there were sixteen inches of snow on the ground, but as this was soon after the blizzard much of it has probably disappeared.

A novel feature of logging along the international boundary at this point is that many of the logs are cut on the top of high hills, and are dropped down until they reach the river. One case of this kind in the Alger-Smith operations, Mr. Marble says, involves three drops. The logs are hauled from the top of the hill to the verge of a large descent and then rolled down the steep decline. Then they are hauled another short distance and dropped again. This occurs three times before they finally reach the bank of the river. The descent in all is equal to about the height of the Spalding house.

The Court Filings.

Judgment by default for $653.70 was taken in district court yesterday against John Anderson by Koebler & Henricks. The complaint which was filed at the same time sets up that the amount is due for merchandise furnished defendant.

Judge Cant has ordered a decree of divorce for Mamie A. Warner from Frederick A. Warner.

C. E. Peaslee, as receiver of the Manufacturers' bank, of West Duluth, has released from judgment lien against H. W. Wheeler's property, the ne¼ of the nw¼ of section 15-58-19.

Affidavit of garnishment has been filed by the Stone-Ordean-Wells company in an action against Robert Thompson & Sons. William O'Brien and the Cloquet Lumber company are named as garnishees.

William E. Larson has filed a petition in district court asking that he be allowed to change his name to William T. Lawson. He says he is in the meat market business at 1804 Piedmont avenue west, this city.

Sheriff Sargent has made returns on an execution issued in the case of the First National bank, of Mauch Chunk, Pa. The returns show that several certificates for ninety-five shares of West Duluth Land company stock were sold to A. W. Stedman for $48.

Flax Movement Light.

The movement of flax in this market has about ceased. Last week's receipts were only 27,000 bushels. Since Dec. 1, 2,753,000 bushels of flax have been received here. In the past two months the movement has amounted to 1,845,581 bushels as compared with 170,039 a year ago. The shipments by rail since the close of navigation have been about 670,000 bushels, whereas in the same time last year they were only about 57,000 bushels.

No More Wars.

Many prominent people of this country and England profess to see the realization of their hopes for universal peace in an Anglo-American alliance. Their plan is to settle all future difficulties by international arbitration. This news will be joyfully received by everybody, but especially by the soldier who is at present engaged on some foreign battlefield. The news that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will positively cure stomach, liver and bowel complaints will also be gladly received by every sufferer from sick headache, dizziness, flatulency, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation or biliousness. IS TO BE EXTENDED

Alger-Smith & Co. Road Figuring on Coming Into Duluth.

Extension to the Boundary Said to Be a Possibility.

Company's Timber Extends Entire Distance to Line.

Another railroad from Duluth to the international boundary, and probably to the Vermilion range. That, it is believed, is the purpose of the Duluth & Northern Minnesota road. The road is owned by Alger, Smoth & Co., and at present extends thirty miles north by northeast from Knife River Junction, on the Duluth & Iron Range.

The first step in the carrying out of the plans of the owners of the road is said to be the application just made for permission from the railroad and warehouse commission to increase its capital stock from $200,000 to $1,000,000. Surveyors have been at work for some time making a preliminary location of an extension of the line into this city. The southerly terminus is now about twenty miles from Duluth. The line that has been surveyed enters the city at a point near Alf Merritt's house on West Duluth. It is said to take one of the last routes open to entrance from that direction. It is said, however, that this survey is not only not final, but that it is only a very preliminary affair. Whether the road will ever enter the city over that survey is as yet undecided.

The road has been steadily extended since the first rails were laid north by a little northeast from Knife river. Of late the trend of the line has been more northeasterly than before. Of the fifty miles of road that has already been built, thirty miles leads steadily toward a junction with the Port Arthur, Duluth & Western road, which has lately been absorbed by the Canadian Northern. It is figured from a state railroad map that a straight line could be run from the present northerly terminus of the road, due northeast, to a junction with the Port Arthur road, and that an extension of only about eighty miles would be required. The route for an extension of the Duluth & Iron Range from Ely to a junction with the Port Arthur road has been estimated at about seventy-five miles. The distance is practically the same as the route of the Northern Minnesota would, it is said by those that have been over the ground, a few miles back from the lake shore, would be much easier to build and have much easier grades than such a connecting link built from Ely.

All sorts of rumors have been current about the significance of the surveyors' work at West Duluth. It was said that the survey was being made for a line that would run to the Vermillon range; that the Vanderbilts were back of the project, because they were not in the United States Steel corporation, and wanted to produce their own ore, pig iron and steel rails, and that the mills would be situated at West Duluth. The story was a little too fanciful to be true, it turned out that the Alger-Smith people were making the survey for an extension of their road into West Duluth.

John Millen, who is the active head of the Alger-Smith interests in this section, was inclined to deprecate the importance of the company's application for an increase of its capital stock, when seen this afternoon.

"If we were going to build to the boundary right away," said Mr. Millen, "we should need $5,000,000 instead of $1,000,000. The fact of the matter is that there isn't much to say just now. We are extending our line all the time through our timber, and need the additional capital to continue the work. Of course we have talked over extending the road into Duluth, and also extending to the international boundary. It is true that we have timber extending northeast from the present northerly terminus well up into Cook county, and that this timber is in line with a direct route from the end of our road to the boundary. If we don't do anything else with our timber, we shall naturally have to extend the road in order to get out the timber. But there isn't anything settled definitely as yet. We have crossed the Duluth & Iron Range by passing under its tracks. The old line we cross in 53-11 and the new line in 54-11. We are going to keep right on extending the road as the cutting of our timber tracts require. That is about all that we can say definitely just now."

The Alger-Smith company is now controlled by Gen. R. S. Alger, Benjamin A. Arnold, of Albany, N. Y., and Mr. Millen. Mr. Arnold acquired the interests of Mr. Smith after his death. He is a young capitalist with resources plenty large enough. It is said, to easily build the road himself if he chose to do so.

The report of the extension of the road has been received by all that have heard of it with great gratification. These interests have carried on their great business here so agreeably and pride are felt in the rapid development of their plans in this region. No project of this kind could be more popular than one originating with the Alger-Smith interests.

WILL LOCATE HERE.

George Gray Decides to Return to Duluth.

After spending over two months visiting the more prosperous cities of the Eastern and Central states, looking for a promising opening for a specialty store, George A. Gray returned to Duluth yesterday convinced that this city offers the best opportunities for present business and future growth.

"In making my investigations as a prospective merchant and citizen," said Mr. Gray, "among other things I have taken particular notice of the newspapers and I do not hesitate to say that Duluth is well served in that respect." For evidence in favor of municipal ownership of public utilities, Mr. Gray mentions the cities of Logansport and South Bend, Ind. The rate for an enclosed arc light, for store lighting, in the former city, where the lighting plant is owned by the city, is $2.50 per month. In South Bend, where both gas and electric light plants are owned by private corporations, the rate per light for a slightly higher power is $4.40 per month.

Mr. Gray believes that there is a good opening in Duluth for a specialty store carrying a full line of ladies' furnishings and ready-to-wear goods and will open a business of that kind here if he can find a suitable location.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

AN UP-TO-DATE ESTABLISHMENT.

First Month's Business of the Brockton Shoe Co. a Most Gratifying One.

That Duluth appreciates a store specially devoted to men's shoes is evidenced by the splendid business already done by the Brockton Shoe company, 311 West Superior street, of which Mr. D. Casmir is manager. There are but two prices governing the whole of the large and varied stock shown, $2.50 and $3.50, and the goods are celebrated in every city in which they are sold for their excellence of material and workmanship. The store throughout presents a very up-to-date and attractive appearance. The management is to be congratulated on securing the services of Mr. Robert Buddes, who has had a through experience in this line, both here and in the East, and who is well known throughout the city.

THE POOR BOARD.

Sixteen Applications For Aid ---Poor Farm Row.

Sixteen applications for aid were considered by the county poor board at last night's semi-monthly meeting. Five were granted orders for wood or for groceries. One application had been put in by a member of the order of Elks, but the matter came to the knowledge of the local lodge and was attended to by them.

The appeal of Arthur Creighton, a former teamster at the poor farm, from discharge by Matt Haug, the superintendent of the farm, brought up quite a story of jealousy among the teamsters over what they believed was the fact that each was doing more work than the other. The result was a fist fight. Haug was summoned and separated the belligerents. He told them that if they fought again they would be discharged. He had no sooner left the scene than hostilities were renewed. Four of the belligerents and their partisans were "fired." All dropped down and out without a protest except Creighton. He didn't propose to give up his keys, one of which unlocked the mortuary vault at the farm, but Capt. Pendill cast a hypnotic spell over him and the keys were disgorged. The action of the superintendent was fully approved.

The board discussed the advisability of building a county poor hospital. It cost $5800 to care for the sick poor last year and it is believed that this expense can be shaved.

PRINCE IS RETURNING

Has Started on Homeward Trip to the Fatherland.

Spent the Day In Saying Good-Byes to Friends.

Gave Lunch at Noon on Board the Deutschland.

New York, March 11.—Prince Henry of Prussia, who went on board the Deutschland about 1 o'clock this morning, after the gala performance in his honor at the Irving Place theater, spent a quiet morning on the steamship. It had been planned that the prince would make several farewell visits, but it was said this morning that he felt need of rest, and that the leave takings would occur on the Deutschland. Those who were expected to call were German Ambassador Von Holleben, Rear Admiral Evans, Adjt. Gen. Corbin, Col. Bingham, Commander Cowles, Assistant Secretary of State Hill, Karl Buenz, the German consul general at New York and the mayor of New York.

The police of Hoboken made extra preparations to keep in order the large crowds which gathered in the hope of seeing the prince before the steamer sailed. The time set for the steamer to leave was 3:30 p. m. Prince Henry breakfasted at 8:30 o'clock with the members of his suite and Capt. Albers of the Deutschland. During the breakfast the band played German and American airs. After breakfast, Prince Henry promenaded the deck of the Deutschland smoking a cigarette, and while he was doing this the life saving drill signal was sounded aboard the big freighter Pretoria, moored a few piers away. In a twinkling after the alarm was blown, the lifeboats were freed and ready for launching. This was followed by a fire drill, and in less than five minutes after the alarm was given, a dozen streams of water were pouring over the side of the vessel. The prince was interested in the exhibition, and said the response to the calls was very prompt. Several members of the prince's party went this morning to Elizabethport, N. J., to visit the Nixon shipbuilding yards.

The prince spent all of his last day in America on board the Deutschland. He occupied the entire forenoon in writing letters and dispatches in his apartments on board, which include the captain's cabin and three other rooms especially assigned him near the center of the ship. The president's delegates arrived on board about 11 o'clock and Ambassador Von Holleben appeared shortly afterward. For the luncheon which the prince had arranged to give at noon to the members of the party which has accompanied him on his travels in th's country, covers were laid for twenty-eight persons. The table was decorated with German and American colors and American beauty roses and the luncheon was entirely informal. There were no speeches and it was stated that the prince would make no formal farewell statement before sailing for home.

Before the Deutschland sails Prince Henry will be serenaded by the United Singing societies of Hudson county, N. J. The singers will be stationed on the after deck of the excursion yacht Princess Louise, which is alongside the Deutschland.

A committee of forty-five New York letter carriers, representing the New York branch of the National Letter Carriers' association, presented Prince Henry of Prussia this morning with a tablet in commemoration of the three murdered presidents of the United States—Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley. The presentation was made to Admiral Von Sickendorff in his cabin on board the Deutschland. The admiral received it for the prince and after thanking the committee on behalf of his royal hignese he announced that the prince would in return send the New York Letter Carriers' association his portrait and autograph to hang on the wall in the rooms of the organization in New York.

GEN. HUGHES

Continues His Testimony Before the Philippine Committee.

Washington, March 11.—Gen. Hughes continued his testimony before the senate Philippine committee today. In reply to a question by Senator Patterson, he said the death rate among Spanish prisoners was far beyond what it should have been. Investigation proved that the prisoners were so debilitated by reason of their long stay in the heat, and by their service, that they were unable to rally from any illness which attacked them. He said he had urged the return of United States troops to this country after two years' service.

Senator Patterson called attention to the "water cure," as used in the way of torture, but Gen. Hughes said it never was practiced in his command. It was tried in one case, he had learned by the Maccabebe scouts, who, however, had promised not to repeat it.

In response to questions by Senator Beveridge, Gen. Hughes said that a ward in the general hospital had been set aside for wounded or sick Filipinos.

Any Filipinos, he said, answering a question by Senator Beveridge, who have come into contact with an American either at the posts or camps, and have gotten away from their presidentes, and within the protection of the United States, had been entirely friendly.

The concentration policy, as pursued by Gen. Bell and other commanders, was intended as a matter of protection and not of punishment, he said.

It was intended to put them out of harms way and not as a measure of punishment."

Gens. Otis and MacArthur were summoned to appear before the committee at some future time.

The committee then adjourned.

it reported that the governor had no further communications to make, except that he sent good will.

Speaker Dowling made a little talk in which he expressed his feelings at this parting of the ways and said that the house had made an excellent record both at the regular and special sessions. As an education to the people on tax matters, he thought the special session was worth every cent it cost.

On motion of Mr. Anderson, the house voted thanks to the speaker and other officers for good service and courtesy, and the vote was unanimous, the press gang taking part in the rising vote. Mr. Nyquist, the dog tax man, moved that the house adjourn sine die, which was done.

The senate session was very similar. The comittee to wait on the governor included Senators McGovern, Stockton and Wilson. In accordance with custom, Senator Stockton, the dean of the senate, was elected president pro tem.

WORK OF THE SESSION.

List of the Measures That Were Passed.

St. Paul, March 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first special session of the Minnesota legislature in twenty-one years and the third special session in the history of the state adjourned at noon today, having been in session exactly five weeks. The session met Feb. 4 to consider the tax code and constitutional amendments prepared by the tax commission provided for at the regular session one year ago. The work of that commission, however, was rejected, the bills submitted being defeated as too radical in the changes proposed. Within twenty-four hours of adjournment other tax measures were passed and provision was made for the submission of other constitutional amendments to a vote of the people. These amendments allow the legislature to impose a general income tax in lieu of all taxes on personal property. A tax not to exceed 10 per cent per annum on the income from all credits, in lieu of any other tax on credits is provided for, and also an income tax of not more than 4 per cent on all salaries in excess of $1000 a year.

Three methods for the taxation of public service corporations are allowed by the amendments; a gross earnings tax in lieu of all other taxation; a gross earnings tax in addition to the tax on real property and a franchise tax in addition to taxes on real and personal property.

The amendment abolishes the inheritance tax, but provides in its stead a tax not to exceed 5 per cent on transfers of estates of descendants.

One member of a family is allowed a personal property exemption of not more than $300.

Two important tax measures, to be effective under the present constitution, were passed—the inheritance tax bill and the real estate tax bill, both introduced by Representative W. B. Anderson, of Winona.

The real estate tax law enacts the provisions of the tax code relating to the collection of real estate taxes, amended so as to be compatible with the existing statutes. These revisions are expected to entail a large reduction in the cost of collecting real estate taxes.

The inheritance tax law imposes a tax of ½ per cent on direct inheritances, and of 5 per cent on collateral inheritances in excess of $10,000.

A bill introduced by Mr. Johnson, of Hennepin county, and passed, provides that the public examiner shall inspect the accounts of the railroads doing business in the state and report whether these lines are paying their proper taxes.

Some attention was paid to the merger of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern roads, and the sum of $25,000 was appropriated to furnish the attorney general with some of the sinews of war needed to prosecute the fight. When it was learned that under the decision of the supreme court the state had no standing in the federal courts, the legislature adopted a memorial to congress urging an amendment to the judiciary act so as to give the state the same standing as a citizen in these courts.

The last bill to pass both houses was the bill appropriating $50,000 for a state exhibit at St. Louis next year. This passed the senate just before adjournment.

English Merchants Fear For Their Trade In Cuba.

London, March 11.—Delegates from a number of chambers of commerce visited the foreign secretary, Lord Lansdowne at the foreign office today and presented a memorial relative to British trade with Cuba, pointing out that it was feared that when the administration of that island was handed over to the Cubans, a reciprocity treaty would be negotiated admitting Cuban products at reduced tariff into the United States and granting corresponding preferential terms to American products and manufactures by Cuba.

"The United States," says the memorial, "when declaring war on Spain, expressly stated that their action would be limited to freeing Cuba from Spanish rule. It was therefore understood by those in Europe engaged in trade with Cuba, that no measures would be adopted at the conclusion of the war which would restrict or destroy their trade with that country. Such a reciprocity treaty after that anticipated would naturally put an end to European trade with the island. The chambers, therefore, most earnestly request that the utmost effort be made by his majesty's minister at Washington to prevent the signing of any such treaty, or, at least, to secure that the most favored nation treatment be continued by Cuba to his country. It is represented that French and German interests would also suffer by a reciprocity treaty and it is suggested a joint protest might be effectual in preventing a change adverse to the interests of our own trade with Cuba."

The interview was private, but the Associated Press understands that while promising to look into the matter Lord Lansdowne gave but faint encouragement to the delegation.

THE PRESIDENT

Sees an Amusing Comedy at Town Pump.

Washington, March 11.—Though President Roosevelt is a prodigious walker, and speeds along like a schoolboy who has left home a few minutes late, he never fails to observe everything that crosses his path. While going up Seventeenth street last week on his way to call upon his sister and Commander Cowles, he suddenly halted at K street and stood for some moments watching a group of ragged, dirty negro children operating an old-fashioned wooden pump that stands at the corner.

The water was "hard to come," as the pickaninnies termed it, and one by one they laid hold of the handle with a will, but no result. Finally an urchin about big enough to play pinpoint with a terrier flew toward the pump, seized the handle, and, bounding in cake walk attitudes with each upward movement, sent the water gushing from the spout. Immediately a dozen battered tin buckets, cans, and almost anything that would hold water were thrust under the pump.

The president laughed over the scene as the little negro in rags bobbed like a buzzard on a clothes line, his companions filling their pails and rushing off toward their homes. One by one they disappeared, never stopping to thank the boy at the pump handle. He had no bucket, and had evidently stopped just to show what he could do when he tried. Finally he jumped forward and put his great red mouth under the pump spout just in time to catch the last few drops. The president took a coin from his pocket and tossed it into the ragged cap that lay upon the pavement by the pump. One glance at the quaint landmark, and the president strode off at a rapid gait toward N street.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD.

Philadelphia, March 11.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Pennsylvania railroad was held today. The approval of the annual report, and the adoption of a resolution increasing the appropriation for the pension fund from $230,000 to $300,000, comprised the principal business of the session.

CLAPP WAS PRESENT.

Washington, March 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Senator Clapp left this morning for New York to attend the unveiling exercises at the presentation of the tablet given by the city of St. Paul to the ship St. Paul, owned by the International Navigation company, and which vessel during the Spanish-American war was used by the United States as an auxiliary cruiser.

LUMBER SHIPPING

Vesselmen and Shippers Look For an Early Opening.

Report From Cleveland That $2.50 Rate Is Fixed.

Amount on Docks at the Opening Will Be Large.

It is fast nearing that part of the season when the lumber shippers and vesselmen look forward to the opening of lake navigation with no little degree of interest, in fact the opening is now regarded but a few weeks off. It is reported from Cleveland that the season rate on lumber from the ports at the head of the lake to Lake Erie ports has been fixed at $2.50.

By the local lumber shippers this is taken to mean that $2.50 has been decided on by the Lake Lumber Carriers' association as the minimum opening rate, and not that the freight rate will remain stationary throughout the season at that figure. The shippers would indeed be pleased to have an arbitrary rate established that the vesselmen would hold to for the entire season, but it is claimed that while it would be a very convenient thing, it is impracticable.

While it is conceded that the opening rate of $2.50 per thousand feet of lumber from Duluth to Lake Erie ports is a good figure, the shippers are not inclined to say that it is out of proportion as regards the lumber business. A few years ago when lumber was selling for $2 and $3 per thousand feet less than it is this season the shippers would have complained bitterly of an opening rate of $2.50, but with the present condition of the lumber market and the outlook for the season of 1902, they are disposed to be liberal and let the vesselmen share some of the general prosperity.

Some of the vesselmen from the lower lake ports that have been in the city for the past few days predict that not only will there be an early opening of navigation in general, but that there will be a rush of the lumber fleets to the head of the lakes for the business. The rate of $2.50 for the opening of the season's shipping business offers every inducement to the lumber carriers and it is claimed that the custom will not prevail this spring as it has in some years past of holding the lumber boats back until after the first of May before starting into the season's business. In past years there have been instances where the vesselmen, for fear that the season would be too long and rates would suffer in consequence, have made an agreement among themselves to hold their boats back until May 1, even though navigation had been open for several weeks. This year the rate is high enough to start with, the lumber stocks on the docks at the Duluth-Superior harbor and at the other Lake Superior ports are so large and the owners so anxious to get their stocks moved away before the tax assessors visit the docks, that there will be no attempt to hold the boats back, but the lumber fleet will make its appearance here just as soon as the boats can get through from the lower lakes.

It has been estimated that the lumber stocks on the docks at the head of the lakes by the time the boats begin to run, will be in the neighborhood of 175,000,000 feet. The indications point to a large cut at the mills around the harbor and shipping will be steady and heavy during the season of 1902.

The ice in the bay is rotting very rapidly and at many points open water is beginning to be noticed. The mills nearer the harbor will be enabled to begin operations first, as the ice will go out here first before it will in the upper bay and the St. Louis river.

Work is going on at all of the mills that are not running, placing them in repair and in readiness to begin cutting. Three mills are now running steadily day and night, two of which have been cutting all winter. These are Alger, Smith & Co.'s mills, the Scott-Graff company's mill and the Hubbard & Vincent mill. The Scott-Graff mill will not close down for repairs, as was erroneously reported a few days ago, but will keep on cutting steadily through the spring, summer and fall. The Richardson & Avery lumber which is being cut at the Scott-Graff mill will be in the neighborhood of 53,000,000 feet. The increase in the cut of this firm alone may be taken as one of the straws to show how the wind is blowing as regards the 1902 lumber market, for the firm of Richardson & Avery, at the outset of the winter, planned to take out only about 30,000,000 feet.

FOR ASSAULT.

County Supt. Park Arrested---To Be Tried Thursday.

A. Tyndall Park, county superintendent of schools, was arrested today charged with disorderly conduct and assault.

The complaint is made by Charles Brown, proprietor of a skating rink at West Duluth. He includes James D. Park and Edward Park in the charge of disorderly conduct, and expects to be able to substantiate all charges when the case comes up in court on Thursday.

Until the case comes up for hearing the true facts of the difficulty will not be known, but it is claimed that Edward Park, a 17-year-old boy, had a fight in the West Duluth rink and the proprietor declined to allow him in again.

Last Friday evening the young man went to the rink with his two brothers. His admission was paid, but the rink man said he could not enter. The two brothers then escorted the young man into the rink against the violent protest of Brown.

The Park brothers entered pleas of not guilty to the charges through their attorneys, Adams & Miller.

BUTCHERS.

Lake Superior Association Is In Session In Duluth.

Today and tomorrow will mark a red letter event among the retail butchers of the head of the lakes, for the Lake Superior Butchers' association is holding its annual convention in Duluth. The convention began at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Kalamazoo block. The business sessions will probably be finished up this afternoon, and this evening and tomorrow the head of the lakes butchers will entertain the out-of-town visitors by showing them the city. Tomorrow evening the convention will be brought to a close with a banquet at the McKay hotel.

The butchers of Duluth have planned to make this banquet a splendid event. The dining room of the hotel will be beautifully decorated. Covers will be laid for about seventy-five guests. The Olympic orchestra will play during the evening, and a number of the head of the lakes singers will render selections. Toasts will be responded to by the loyal butchers and their visiting guests.

The Lake Superior Retail Butchers' association embraces all of the territory in Northern Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan. Delegations are arriving in the city today from all the range towns, and the towns of Northern Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan. George Stentz, a prominent butcher of Ashland, Wis., is president of the association.

It was estimated that there were from forty to fifty visiting butchers in the city this noon to attend the convention, and many more are expected this afternoon and evening.

Among the visitors registering at the McKay this noon, who are here to attend the convention, are: John Lightner, John C. Roehm, M. H. Berg, William Werner, N. Hanten, J. T. Wells, of Ashland, Wis.; Gust Swanson, S. Reed, of Ironwood, Mich.; William Waters, Bessemer, Mich.

There are three indictments against Hopperman. He is alleged to have practiced in the brick house on First street opposite the government building. Lambert, who was arrested on the same charge, has no connection with Hopperman. He, it is claimed, has been practicing in the office of Dr. Spangler.

Reinhart Heinze and John Beattie, who held up a lumberjack and robbed him of $3, were arraigned this afternoon and pleaded guilty to the charge of grand larceny in the second degree. The charge on which they were indicted was grand larceny in the first degree.

BROKEN RIBS.

Damage Suit Against the City---The Cow Case Ended.

Calvin Bush's suit for $1625 damages against the city of Duluth was on trial before Judge Cant in room No. 3 in district court this morning. John Jenswold, attorney for the plaintiff, opened to the jury, and described the accident by which Bush was thrown from his wagon on the Grand avenue bridge Nov. 30, 1901, and injured. It was represented that Bush was driving a wagon for the Duluth Ice company on the night in question. He drove down to the Grand avenue bridge, which was then in course of repair. There was no barrier across the entrance to the bridge, Mr. Jenswold claimed, nor were there red lights or lanterns to warn that the bridge was in dangerous condition. Bush is claimed to have driven his wagon on to the bridge and onto a pile of planks. The wagon was upset and Bush thrown out. Several ribs were broken and a membrane of the lung was caused to adhere. Mr. Jenswold said that if a man suffered through the carelessness of the city he should be entitled to recover damages, no matter whether he be riding in an automobile, a carriage, on a bicycle or on an ice wagon.

The jury in room No. 2, which had been listening to the trial of the Blake-Streator case retired late yesterday afternoon. A verdict was reached an hour later, but it was not read until this morning. It was for the defendant, so that Mr. Blake's lame cow is again restored to its former place in neighborhood repute.

Judge Ensign took up this morning the trial of the suit brought by William Scott against W. C. Sargent, as sheriff. The suit in reality is against a firm for which the sheriff carried out replevin proceedings. The plaintiff in the former action, of course, gave bond, and the burden of the defense of the present suit falls on him. The suit is for damages for property converted.

Before Judge Dibell, in room No. 1, the suit of Liedel against the Northern Pacific is still on. The attorneys—Marlon Douglas, for the plaintiff, and J. L. Washburn, for the defendant—have been arguing a question of law since 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Volumes of legal gray matter sprawled all over the attorneys' tables this morning, and everybody concerned seemed to be watching anxiously for the hour hand of the court room clock to reach 12. The question in controversy arose from an objection by Mr. Washburn to an effort by Mr. Douglas to introduce testimony as to the value of the property involved before the Northern Pacific raised its track running along the Lake avenue slip and afterward. Mr. Washburn contended against the admission of this testimony.

BRAIN TUMOR

Causes the Death of H. H. Martindale, Formerly of Duluth.

Herbert H. Martindale, formerly of Duluth, died this morning at Osego, Mich.

Mr. Martindale came to Duluth from that city in 1898 and entered the real estate business in partnership with George H. Crosby.

He became a prominent and leading member of the local lodges of Modern Samaritans, Maccabees and Woodmen. He was a member of the Imperial council of Modern Samaritans and until recently was the imperial treasurer of that order. He was also a member of the board of water and light commissioners for a year and a half.

About a year ago he and Mr. Crosby dissolved partnership and Mr. Martindale located in Fargo and entered the land business. He had been there but six months when a tumor developed in his brain, and he was removed to Osego.

Recently an operation was performed for the purpose of removing this tumor, but it did not prove as successful as anticipated.

The deceased was 32 years of age and is survived by a wife, a son and a daughter. The son is 9 years of age and the daughter 6.

Although not unanticipated, the news of Mr. Martindale's death has caused profound sorrow among his former friends and business associates in Duluth.

MAY LOSE AN ARM.

Edward Rhone Is Struck By an Engine.

Edward Rhone, a colored man, had a narrow escape from death in the railroad yards at the foot of First avenue west this morning.

He was crossing the tracks and stepped back to let a train go by. He did not notice another train backing down toward him and was knocked down. The wheel of the first car partially passed over his right shoulder and broke the right arm in two places.

He was taken to St. Mary's hospital. The attending physician was unable to say whether the amputation of his arm would be necessary or not.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

"Domestic Science" was the subject discussed at the central W. C. T. U. meeting yesterday. Mrs. R. H. Pattison presented it in an excellent paper and was followed by Mesdames Stewart, West, Keyes and others. The weak side of woman afforded Mrs. McLeod scope. Mrs. Thompson touched upon woman's abnormal desire to get a living rather than benefit mankind. Mrs. Holt gave some happy thoughts from the outlook, and a vote of thanks was given to the leader of the day. Notice was made of the coming of Mr. Johnson, war correspondent of the Voice, and Mr. Brown, of the Anti-Cigarette league.

Witnesses Threatened.

David Cullen and William Cullen, of Garfield avenue, were arrested this afternoon for alleged threats against certain grand jury witnesses.

The two young men were before the grand jury charged with boring holes through grain cars and stealing wheat and flax. The jury failed to indict them.

Sunday afternoon one of the witnesses against them was informed that his life was in danger and there was great activity on Rice's Point.

The Cullens will have their police court hearings on Thursday and have been released on their own recognizance.

FLURRY IN THE HOUSE

Caused By Statements of Thayer on Cuban Reciprocity.

Alleged That Sugar Trust Would Be Chief Beneficiary.

A Resolution to Investigate Was Quickly Squelched.

Washington, March 11.—When the house met today Mr. Thayer (Mass.) created something of a flurry by rising to a question of privilege which he said involved the "dignity of the house and safety of its members."

He therefore presented a resolution setting forth many rumors regarding Cuban reciprocity, together with allegations that the sugar trust was to be the chief beneficiary of such reciprocity; that it was subsidizing newspapers, establishing literary bureaus and in other ways attempting to create public sentiment in favor of Cuban reciprocity. The resolution declared that the dignity of the house was involved and called for a special committee of seven members to investigate the subject.

Mr. Loud made a point of order against the resolution, which was sustained by the speaker.

Mr. Thayer appealed from the decision of the chair.

"I move to lay the appeal on the table," instantly cried Mr. Payne, the Republican floor leader.

Mr. Thayer demanded the ayes and nays and the roll was called. The Republicans voted solidly for the motion to lay the appeal on the table, while two Democrats, Messrs. Fleming (Ga.) and McClellan (N. Y.) broke away from their party associates and voted with the Republicans. The appeal was laid on the table, 125 to 37.

The house then went into committee of the whole, Mr. Littlefield, of Maine, chairman, and entered upon the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill. The main cause of the increase, Mr. Loud explained, was the increased salaries of postal employes, which, under this bill, would aggregate $6000.

Mr. Brantley (Ga.), taking advantage of the latitude allowed in general debate on an appropriation bill, discussed the question of Cuban reciprocity. He contended that whatever was to be done should be done speedily. He favored reciprocity.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, March 11.—The senate, when it convened today, at the request of Mr. Cullom (Ill.), one of the conferees, disagreed to the conference report on the bill providing for the carrying into effect of the stipulations of article 7 of the Paris treaty. The senate insisted upon its amendments and Messrs. Cullom, Lodge and Morgan were named as conferees.

Article 7 relates to the payments of claims in Cuba and the bill proposes to amend the act creating the Spanish claims commission so as to provide for the attendance of witnesses. In a privileged statement, Mr. Berry (Ark.) said he had introduced early in the present session a resolution providing for the election of senators by direct vote of the people. This, together with a similar resolution adopted by the house of representatives had been referred to the committee on privileges and elections. The house had passed such a resolution four times, but the question never had been considered by the senate.

Mr. Burrows (Mich.), chairman of the committee on privileges and elections, after saying that what Mr. Berry had said was true, added: "I will say to the senator that there is no disposition on the part of the committee to shirk responsibility in connection with the resolution. Action upon it will be taken and a report on it will be made."

At the conclusion of the debate, which had been proceeding by unanimous consent, the senate passed eighty-one private pension bills.

Other bills were passed as follows: Amending the act of Feb. 2, 1901, to increase the efficiency of the permanent military establishment so as to provide for the transfer of officers from the line to the staff for four years' service.

The senate then at 2 p. m. resumed consideration of the ship subsidy bill. Mr. Mallory (Fla.), one of the Democratic members of the committee on commerce, addressed the senate in opposition to the measure.

Ripped the Roof Off.

Thomas Hunt was severely burned about the hands today in extinguishing a fire in a house on Twelfth avenue west.

The fire was discovered in the rear of the home of J. E. Evans and Mr. Hunt sprang up to the roof of the kitchen and tore out the burning shingles.

He succeeded in extinguishing the fire without aid from the department, but was scorched about the hands in consequence.

To Oppose Daugherty.

John Brady is authority for the statement that Tommy Walsh is going to run against Senator Daugherty in the Fiftieth district next fall. He says this explains Mr. Daugherty's jocose allusions to Mr. Walsh last week. Mr. Walsh looks pleased over the report, but somewhat surprised. Mr. Walsh, too, by the way has never been without a pocket full of peanuts since Senator Daugherty's reference to him as a peanut politician.

Boston Banker Here.

W. A. Paine, of Boston, of the firm of Paine, Webber & Co., bankers and stock brokers, who have recently established an office in this city was in the city today with W. C. Brown, who is the manager of the office here. They dined at the Kitchi Gammi club today with G. W. Hibbard, of Marquette, general passenger agent of the South Shore road; J. T. McKeever, of Houghton, manager of the Copper Range road, and Mr. Dampher, of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. This afternoon they were taken for a ride about the city in the street railway company's private car.

PASSED THE SENATE.

Millers Bill For Investigating Iron Range Roads.

St. Paul, March 11.—In the senate, Senator Miller's resolution calling upon the attorney general to investigate the consolidation of the Duluth & Iron Range and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroads, and institute legal proceedings against the company which controls them, was passed.

Senator Stockwell's resolution, calling upon the president to stop the Philippine war, was defeated by a vote of 12 to 32.

The informal opening went as merry as a marriage bell—the town turned out to see the most fascinating and interesting hats we have ever shown, and the weather man did his best to help things along. There was but one opinion: The hats, though teeming with beauty and exquisite in their combinations of color and line, are practical; there was probably not one style out of fifty that any woman in Duluth would not consider quiet—Those who read the styles in last evening's announcement of this paper are well posted—in a word it is to be a "Marie Antoinette" season—taken from the famous play of "Du Barry," which is all the rage in Paris and at whose performances (by Mrs. Leslie Carter) in New York—it is next to an impossibility to get seats—and then only by paying an exhorbitant price or applying for them weeks ahead—so DU BARRY—or the history of Louis XV and Marie Antoinette is the basis for millinery styles this season—but the extreme styles will only be worn by a very few—the more practical kinds—those taken from the original and adopted to American women are the kind you want most—but come and see—tomorrow, or any day this week—and you can judge for yourself whether the imported hats—or our own American ideas suit you better.

The $5 and $6 hats are suggested by the same thought as the highest priced ones—so you will get style at $5 as well as at $50—here.

The Opening of All That's New In Tailored Suits and Wraps!

We could fill a page with descriptions alone of new things that are coming in — we've only just had time to tell you of one lot of beautiful new things when another lot arrives—and by the time we tell of the other lot, more are here—so it goes throughout the day—packages upon packages and boxes upon boxes are being unpacked—every day — every hour of the day we should say—but our sales are already large and it takes lots of new arrivals to keep the stock freshened up constantly. We'll not attempt to describe—simply come! and see—we invite you again and again—you are under no obligation whatever to buy—and you should keep posted on the prevailing styles! We are trying to give Duluth and our people a metropolitan store in every way—and they fully appreciate it—We are building our business—getting a constantly larger sales force and working force—and we expect a kindly support of the Duluth public, so uniformly generous for more than thirty-two years—(starting when Duluth was but a small village) providing it is described, and not otherwise—

Spoken frankly then, we repeat it frankly now; we want your patronage only when we deserve it.

If you can find richer, better or more exclusive dress goods and silks elsewhere, go get them.

If your money will buy better things for you than house anywhere else, spend it there.

If another store treats you better, makes shopping more comfortable and you more at home, go to that store.

No temporary stones are wanted in this structure to crumble later on and spoil all the hard work. We are building not on friendship, but on service.

But we would like to know whenever we fall short of the best that's possible. An outsider's eyes are better than ours at seeing faults, and we ask your criticism of the store and its doings.

CIVILIZED

Warfare Is All That the Boers Ask of England.

Washington, March 11.—O. H. Wessels and A. D. W. Wolmarans, the Boer delegates in this country, had a talk with President Roosevelt today at the conclusion of the cabinet meeting. They called to pay their respects and to say goodbye, as they will leave for Europe about the 20th inst. after visiting Chicago and a number of other places.

In the course of their interview they stated that they desired particularly to make known to the president that they neither asked for, desired or expected intervention on the part of this country or any other country.

"A number of mistakes have been printed about our mission to this country since we came to Washington," said Mr. Wessels. "And the worst one is that we are trying to get intervention. We know that this is not possible, and as a matter of fact we don't want it. What we do want, however, and have laid before the American government, is that a civilized warfare be insured in South Africa. That is all we want. We have not put before the authorities any request that this or that plan be adopted to insure the carrying out of the rules of civilized warfare, but we will leave that wholly to the government to take whatever steps it sees fit.

"We want a fair and square fight. We are confident that we will be able to keep this war up for a number of years yet, and we think that all civilized nations, especially the United States, are interested in the proper rules of warfare being carried out. We can point out numerous instances of foul work. It is particularly noticeable that the English press itself comment on a probability that Gen. Methuen will be given decent care and attention by the Boers who captured him a few days ago. Yet what did they do with Gen Scheppers and a number of others? They killed Scheepers without a chance. That story from England points its own moral and an important one, too.

"President Kruger is not seeking intervention in Europe and all stories of that kind may be denied whenever they are seen. The Boers have nothing to lose and all to gain by keeping up this fighting. They may call it guerilla warfare if —ey want, but it is at least humane warfare."

TO SECURE EXTRADITION.

Washington, March 11.—The officials of the department of justice will make every effort to secure the extradition from Canada of Gaynor and Greene, who are charged with complicity in the Savannah frauds for which Capt Oberlin M. Carter was sent to the penitentiary.

CABINET

Discussed Philippine and Cuban Tariff Questions At Length.

Washington, March 11.—The cabinet today discussed at length the Philippine tariff question and the necessity of keeping up the "open door" policy of our government in the Philippines, exactly as this government expects it continued in China and throughout the East.

The Cuban tariff question was also discussed. It is understood that the effort to secure reciprocity with Cuba is an administration measure, that President Roosevelt is carrying it out in pursuance not merely of the policy but of the promise of President McKinley and with the most hearty belief in it as being morally called for; that this administration like the former administration, the policy of which it is continuing, is pledged to the relief of Cuba.

ACQUITTED.

Judge So Directs Verdict In Case of Meserve.

Omaha, March 11.—Judge Baxter, in the district court this afternoon, in the case of John Meserve, ex-state treasurer, charged with the embezzlement of state funds, called the jury before him and directed a verdict of acquittal. The point of law was made by Meserve that the interest received on deposits of state money in a South Omaha bank was not the property of the state.

On this point the court made its ruling in favor of the defendant and ordered the verdict of acquittal.

A PROTEST

Made By China Against Re-Enactment of Exclusion Act.

Pekin, March 11.—The China government has presented to the United States minister, Mr. Conger, a strong memorial against the re-enactment of the Chinese exclusion law by the United States. The government here particularly objects to the exclusion of Chinese from the Philippines and Hawaii, representing that the Chinese had acquired extensive commercial interests there and were closely connected with the islands by family ties, so that repression of free intercourse would result in peculiar hardships.

ON TITLE WORSHIP

Mrs. Astor, New York's Social Leader, Is Disgusted.

Deplores Existence of Many Crude Millionaires From West.

They Only Reach the Edge of the Smart Set.

New York, March 11.—The name of Mrs. Astor, New York's social leader, has not been mentioned in connection with the attempt to entertain Prince Henry to the point of exhaustion. Mrs. Astor thus explains it.

"I do not entertain foreigners—of title or otherwise—who come to America unless they bring letters to me. Why should I?

"The interest some Americans take in persons of title amazes and disgusts me. Why, when the duke of Marlborough came over here to be married, people stood for hours in the rain before his hotel waiting to catch a glimpse of him. They went mad about this little man of no distinction. And the duke himself was so annoyed that he has sworn never again to set foot in America. The duchess has sometimes spoken of returning, but he will not come."

Mrs. Astor was willing to talk on the subject of publicity. It was suggested that many of the details of social life which found their way into print are educating to numbers of people, that the wonderful social adaptability of the American women of all classes may be partly due to the intimate knowledge of the doings of the great world she thus obtains.

Mrs. Astor did not acquiesce in this view. She said the only newspaper notices she approved were the unobstrusive ones in the English papers giving dates set for dinners and the names of the principal guests.

"You know," she continued, "I really go out little in society in New York now. European society is so much quieter. There is less noise, less display, and, at the same time, one meets interesting people.

"English society is more liberal than we are in this respect. Irving goes everywhere. And the best artists and literary men also. There are few, very few, of these in the smart set of New York. Actresses are generally undesirable, but some of the great singers are received. Miss Eames, for instance, goes everywhere."

When asked her opinion on a prospective volume on "The Social Leaders of the Nineteenth Century," she replied:

"Such books are difficult to write. Mr. McAlister wrote one of the same nature. It was ridiculous; everybody dropped him on account of it."

In discussing English society Mrs. Astor thought that Queen Alexandra would be most representative of England in the book, as the late Queen Victoria led a retired life, and was only nominally a leader. But she did not concur in the view that the Empress Eugenie had been the great factor in French social life.

"I never heard," said Mrs. Astor, "that Eugenie was a woman of brilliant intellect, or that she could do anything except buy pretty clothes and wear them prettily. She involved her husband in a great war by making him believe there were 100,000 more men in his army than he actually possessed.

"No, I don't think it required intelligence to bring on a war. And she was cruel to her son, I have heard. She would not allow him enough pocket money nor permit him a horse to ride.

"I met her years ago and she was gracious. Still, I cannot think that she had any dignity. If I had been driven from a country as she was from France, I certainly would never return to it. Yet I have seen her constantly in Paris, and I have gone up with her in the ascenceur (elevator) of the Hotel Continental many times.

"Still, such a book will be a difficult undertaking."

Regarding the inability of singers of note and others to return the favors received from social leaders, Mrs. Astor said:

"They should not be expected to entertain. Everyone knows that artists live in studios. There are many poor people in the smart set—many who dine with me several times a winter and from whom I expect no return. Others, not possessing millions, take rooms at Sherry's, and toward the end of the season give, perhaps, one or two little dinners to eight or ten persons.

"It is a mistake to think that everybody in the smart set is wealthy. There are, of course, rich people from the West of whom one reads that they have so many thousand millions, who go down to Newport, spend money lavishly, and get a questionable footing on the edge of society. I have not met them. But, of course, they are not desirable.

"The men who have amassed their millions in all sorts of ways have not had advantages in their youth. They have never had the college education, without which no man can be a gentleman. They come here and build large houses, filled will ill-assortd splendid things. They are either too pushing or too shy, and stand around silently in corners, not knowing what to do or say.

"Personally, I like to entertain people of real distinction. Bismarck, I think, was a great man, who made his own place in the world. His son, Count Herbert, once asked me to Friedrichsruhe, and I have always regretted that I did not go."

PAINE'S Celery Compound

Makes Sick People Well and Strong.

A House-to-House Canvass Would Show That Thousands Are Being Cured.

The people who have not heard in some way of Paine's Celery Compound and its wonderful triumps over the diseases and ailments of life, cannot be counted on as newspaper or magazine readers, nor are they amongst those who are in touch with the medical progressiveness of the times.

A house-to-house canvass (if that were possible) of families where Paine's Celery Compound is being used during these early spring days, would disclose an overwhelming amount of evidence regarding the implicit confidence that is placed in this greatest of all spring medicines. It would show the enormous number of people who are being cured of one form of nervousness, sleeplessness, dyspepsia, indigestion, neuralgia, rheumatism, headaches, kidney and liver diseases.

Now is the time when Paine's Celery Compound can show astonishing and happy results to the sick. Now that spring is with us, giving a promise of fine weather and new beauties, it should lend encouragement to the work of getting well and strong.

The use of Paine's Celery Compound for a few weeks will truly astonish every debilitated, weak, and sickly man and woman. The change from a muddy and sallow complexion to a fresh, healthy color, with bright, sparkling eyes, unclouded brain, the enjoyment of refreshing sleep, clear, fresh blood coursing through the body, will be sure reward of every user of Paine's Celery Compound. Accept no substitute or imitation. See that the name PAINE'S is on the wrapper and bottle.

THE DAKOTAS.

Engineer Badly Hurt By Breaking of Connecting Rod.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Hot Springs—When about five miles north of Buffalo Gap the engine of the north-bound passenger train on the F. E. & M. V. railroad had a mishap that came near killing Engineer James Stanton, of Chadron. While descending a grade the side rod of the drive wheels broke and in flying around struck the side of the engine cab from below, tearing it out, and throwing Stanton against the top of the cab with terrible force. He was made unconscious and it was at first thought he was fatally hurt. He was brought to the hospital in this place and it was feared his spine was injured, besides being painfully bruised about the body. By some chance the flying rod struck the lever that controls the air brake and turned it so that it put on the brakes, thus stopping the train quickly, and possibly preventing a wreck.

Sioux Falls—The youngest smallpox patient in the world is claimed by the town of Sherman, a few miles from Sioux Falls. Up to this time the youngest child to contract the disease, so far as reported in the leading medical journals of the world, was a child 12 days old. The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Fehlrafer, of Sherman, when six days old, developed a genuine case of smallpox, which it contracted from its mother. The case has been reported to the Medical Record, of New York, by Dr. Halverson.

As a result of several meetings held by the temperance element of Sioux Falls the question of license or no license for saloons will be a feature of the regular municipal election to be held April 15. The anti-saloon people have filed with the city auditor a petition askng that the matter be submitted. This, with other matters coming up for settlement, insures one of the liveliest municipal campaigns in the history of Sioux Falls.

Lead—The generosity of Lead people is shown by the manner in which they contributed to the relief of Mrs. William Price, whose husband was killed in the mine a few days ago. The woman and several children were left without means, and a hose company to which Mr. Price belonged promptly raised a fund of $500, of which $30 is paid to the family monthly. The Knights of Pythias collected $150, and of this $25 is paid monthly.

Deadwood—Dr. C. B. Clark, presiding elder of the Black Hills Methodist conference, has commenced the publication of the Christian Outlook, a periodical devoted to the interests of the church. Dr. Clark was formerly stationed at Huron, Mitchell and other points in Southeastern South Dakota. His wife, Mrs. Anna Morris-Clark, is associated with him in the management of the paper.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Cooperstown—N. C. Anderson, a farmer living at Romness, this county, met death in a tragic manner. He went to the river for wood and in returning home the ax slipped from the load, caught in the wheel spokes and struck Anderson in the forehead. He laid out several hours and finally got home the next morning, dying a few hours afterwards. He leaves a widow and family.

Lishon—The Searchlight, a fusion paper, has suspended publication.

Sharon—The State Bank of Sharon will shortly open its doors. The next bank is capitalized at $10,000.

Fargo—E. J. Antrum cured himself of the tobacco habit, but is dead. His doses were too large, affecting the heart and stomach.

Milton—About the luckiest man in North Dakota is K. Koppang. He had a hunch that a valuable quarter of land near Lark River was not properly homesteaded and has begun a contest and will undoubtedly get the land.

Bismarck—The validity of the action of the board of equalization in equalizing the personal assessments of North Dakota has been attacked in an action brought by the Duluth Elevator company against members of the state board. It is asserted the state board exceeded its authority.

BILL WILL BE PASSED

House Leaders Claim the Cuban Reciprocity Measure Will Win.

Beet Sugar Side Not So Strong as Is Claimed.

Morris and Tawney Are at a Loss to Explain.

Washington, March 11.—Among the old wheel horses on the Republican side of the house there is no doubt that reciprocity for Cuba will be the outcome of the present apparent disintegration. There has been a careful count of noses going on for the last forty-eight hours, and it was shown that the beet sugar men have been doing some interesting lying regarding their strength. The count shows they have not half as many men as they have claimed. From present appearances they could not muster forty Republicans on an open record vote in the house on the main question as to reciprocity with Cuba. There has been, it is said, no time at which the ways and means reciprocity proposition could not be passed on its merits in the house by a safe majority.

The difficulty has been and still is that a special rule shutting off all amendments cannot be passed without the help of the beet sugar men. The Republican leaders are discussing the advisability of calling the bluff of the beet sugar men by allowing the Cuban bill to go before the house, subject to amendments. The men who are now opposing reciprocity with Cuba, including even the Michigan delegation, would be the first to vote against the Babcock amendment and everything else in the direction of tariff reform. Under the circumstances they would be forced to unite with the Republicans in opposition to every amendment offered, and then the Cuban bill could be passed without difficulty by a combination of Republican and Democratic votes.

The leaders on the Republican side do not wish to proceed to extremes. They prefer a policy of conciliation and personal entreaty, and will pursue this line as long as there is any chance of success. The present outlook is that no action will be taken at the conference today, but Speaker Henderson, Chairman Payne, Uncle Joe Cannon, Gen. Grosvenor, Mr. Dalzell, Mr. Long, of Kansas, and the other wheel horses of the Republican side are all supporting the administration.

Under the circumstances, therefore, it is natural to predict that by the end of this week the sentiment in the house will be such as to justify the leader in starting the Cuban bill on its travel. The house leaders say it will get through the house long before the end of the month.

Members of the house who have allied themselves with the beet sugar interests are having a hard time explaining their motives. For instance, Mr. Tawney and Mr. Morris, of Minnesota, have been two of the most outspoken opponents of President Roosevelts' policy of a commercial union between the United States and Cuba. Curiously enough, too, Tawney and Morris have been willing to tax the people to pay a rebate to the republic of Cuba, but they are entirely unwilling to vote for reciprocity, in which their own state would be one of the greatest gainers. When the figures of the last census are examined it is difficult, to say the least, to understand Morris and Tawney's action, which seems perversely antagonistic to the interests of their own commonwealth. They are willing to pay a rebate or bounty, but are opposed to reciprocity in spite of the fact that Minnesota, the greatest flour center in the world, while its beet sugar interests are, to say the least, insignificant.

The last census reports, prepared under the direction of a distinguished citizen of Minnesota, show that in 1899 there were exactly eleven sugar factories in the whole state. The capital employed was only $156,945 or an average of $14,268 each. The total product of all the beet sugar factories of Minnesota was only $605,603. The employes of the beet sugar factories of Minnesota aggregated exactly seventy-one, and of these twelve were women, so that Morris and Tawney have been defying the last wishes of President McKinley and the first message to congress of President Roosevelt for less than four score employes, one-fifth of whom were women.

Cuba raises no wheat and must import all its flour. Morris and Tawney's own state has 512 flouring mills with an aggregate capital of $24,125,781, and a total product of $83,877,709. These flour mills employed 4086 persons, of whom only 147 were women. The leaders here cannot understand what infatuation possessed the Minnesota members to induce them not only to rebel against the president and the recognized party leaders, but to put forth schemes of their own which would eliminate all reciprocity and deprive their own state of an exclusive and profitable market for its flour, which, next to lumber, is the most important manufacture of the state of Minnesota. It is said Mr. Morris and Mr. Tawney are already having a hard time explaining to the wheat farmers and the flour millers why they were so ready to sacrifice their interests.

SILENCE!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of free consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Doctor R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

"Having used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery' during the past year," writes Mrs. Mattie Long, of Plouts Valley, Perry Co., Pa., "I can truthfully recommend these medicines for all female weaknesses. I have used several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' which I consider a great blessing to weak women. I was so nervous and discouraged that I hardly knew what to do. Your kind advice for home treatment helped me wonderfully. Thanks to Dr. Pierce."

Biliousness is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

IN MICHIGAN.

Boy Killed By Falling Down Shaft of Mine.

Ironwood—John Collins, 12 years old, son of John Collins, an Ashland miner, fell from the first level to the bottom of the Ashland mine Sunday night and was instantly killed. Collins and several small boys were playing about the mine and had started to go down the shaft, when the accident occurred. The mouths of the shafts are left open and there is nothing to prevent children from going down if they want to.

Sault Ste. Marie—A Hamilton, Ont., capitalist has closed a deal for 350 feet of valuable water frontage near the west ferry dock, at the Soo, Ont., and will construct a fueling and merchandise dock, representing an investment of $50,000.

Escanaba—George Trudeau, aged 24, an oiler in the Escanaba woodenware plant, was ground to death between two big cogs. His remains were scattered twenty feet from the scene of the accident.

Ontonagon—Reports come from Greenland, this county, that dogs in that section are daily chasing and in many instances killing deer. Wolves have been held responsible for the carcasses of deer found in the woods at various times, but it now develops that canines are also assisting in the slaughter, one farmer alone reporting four deer killed near his farm by dogs. A game warden has been appointed for the county, but owing to the fact that the salary is but $40 annually he has so far failed to qualify.

Houghton—It is rumored on the streets that after the coming election in Houghton the president and most of the trustees will wage war against all gamblers in the village. Whether or not the new council will decide against gambling is not known but it is the opinon of some of the knowing ones that the council will not do anything of the kind unless made to do so by out and out reformers.

Marquette—The success of municipal lighting is being well demonstrated here. The local plant, which is operated by water power, is not only earning money, but its rates are declared to be the lowest in the state. For residence consumers the charge is but 7 cents per thousand watt hours, or less than three-eighths of a cent per hour for a sixteen-candle power light.

Business places are taxed but 5 cents per thousand watt hours, or but a quarter of a cent per sixteen-candle power per hour. The plant is located on Dead river about two miles from the city and is equipped with the best of machinery.

SYMPATHY

For Gen. Methuen Expressed In the Prussian Diet.

Berlin, March 11.—In the Prussian diet today, the foreign seretary, Baron Von Richthoff, after reading the answer of the British government, permitting the delivery of German charitable gifts to the Boers in the South African concentration camps, under the surveillance of the camp authorities, declared that the reply guaranteed a just distribution, and added:

"The English and German nations are connected by ties of blood, race and friendship. They are cousins who may again find themselves side by side. Gen. Methuen deserves our complete sympathy. As the military attache to the British embassy in Berlin he enjoyed the esteem of the Emperors William and Frederick."

FRAUD IS CHARGED

Marshal William O'Hara of Biwabik Is Under Arrest.

Indicted For Presenting Fraudulent Bills to the County.

Claimed to Have Duplicated Bills For Taking Prisoners to Jail.

The veteran village marshal of the Mesaba range was arrested yesterday for malfeasance in office.

He is William O'Bara, one of the leading citizens of Biwabik and well known throughout the range towns. For eight years he has been marshal of Biwabik.

The recent grand jury which went down in history as the only and original grand jury that found all public offices conducted in good shape, indicted Mr. O'Hara on three counts.

Two of the charges are that he has been trying to duplicate his bills for bringing prisoners from Biwabik to the county jail. The third is that he has charged for the trip of one prisoner that was never delivered in the county jail.

The grand jury, in looking over the bills of the county board, found that Mr. O'Hara had a bill before the board at its November meeting for $17.50 for bringing a prisoner named John Page from Biwabik to Duluth. The bill was paid on Dec. 11.

At the February meeting of the board he presented another bill of the same amount for the same service and the same prisoner.

The second indictment says that Mr. O'Hara was paid $17.25 on Dec. 11 for bringing Louis Feidt from Biwabik to Duluth. At the February meeting another bill for the same amount and the same prisoner was presented.

The third indictment is that a bill for $16.75 was presented at the February meeting for bringing Patrick Casio to Duluth, and it is claimed that such a prisoner was never delivered in Duluth by the Biwabik marshal.

It is claimed that in regard to this third indictment the prisoner escaped at Two Harbors, and that it cost $16.25 to get him that far.

Mr. O'Hara will appear in court tomorrow morning to answer the charges formally. Friends put up $750 bail for him.

Today is election day in Biwabik and the indicted marshal is a candidate for reelection.

Ida Saleen was brought into court charged with keeping a disorderly house in Biwabik. Her case will also be taken up tomorrow morning.

AMUSEMENTS.

"MAM'SELLE 'AWKINS."

Tonight at the lyceum an operatic comedy "Mam'selle 'Awkins" will be seen. Miss Delia Stacey who appeared here some time ago in "The Bachelor's Honeymoon" heads the cast. She is said to have a very pleasing role and her songs are catchy and popular. In the company are Miss Carolyn M. Heustis, Miss Ella DeVine, Harry Wilson, J. P. Sullican and others.

FREDERICK WARDE.

One of the greatest of American actors, Frederick Warde, in his new play, "The Mountebank," will be the attraction here Thursday evening at the Lyceum. Friday evening he will present "Julius Caesar." Mr. Warde has added new laurels to his career in this characterization which has been revived with every evidence of enduring popularity. It also serves admirably to bring out the full strength of his splendid company—said to be the best he has ever had. A fine scenic production of "The Mountebank" is carried by Mr. Warde. In his company this season are Charles D. Herman, Barry Johnstone, Miss Antoinette Ashton, Miss Virginia Drew Trescott, Miss May Warde, Miss Aileen Bertello and about fifteen others.

GOOD THING.

J. Adam Bede Thinks Extra Session Has Been Good Investment.

J. Adam Bede, who has been spending a few days in the city, considers that the money spent for the special session of the legislature has been well invested.

"You can't always turn your money right away," said Mr. Bede. "Sometimes your best investment seems to be the most unpromising for some time after it is made. It seems to me that it is just so with this special session. It was called to consider wholesale changes in the tax laws. It was found when the legislature got up against the extensive changes suggested that it was too large a proposition to be acted upon without further consideration and compromise of the radical views of the various sections of the state. The best legislation is usually the result of compromise, because it is stripped of its radical, and often unwise, features.

"Taxation is a big subject. It requires deliberate thought and plenty of discussion. Radical changes in laws made suddenly are often unwise and frequently unjust. Such important changes should be discussed thoroughly by all the people interested. This special session, I believe, will be the cause of the people giving it more thought during the next year than any proposed legislation has received before. The fight in the legislature has awakened the people of the whole state to the importance of the proposed changes. They will think them over, talk them over, and when their representatives come back to St. Paul next winter to the regular session, they will be in an enlightened frame of mind and more ready to strike a happy medium between the outside courses. I am inclined to believe that if the tax matters had gone over until the regular session, without consideration this winter, the matter would not have been generally investigated or given general thorough attention. This extra session will have that effect, and for this reason I believe it has been money well spent."

MISS CARS.

Feature of Transfer System Against Which Complaint Is Made.

Complaint is being made against one feature of the street railway transfer system. Passengers coming from the west who desire to take cars up the hill are given transfers at Fifth avenue west and are to take the hill cars at that point. If they wish to go out on the Woodland line, that is all right, for the Woodland cars pass that point.

If, however, they wish to take the East or West Fourth street lines they will get left unless they are aware of the fact that those cars do not go as far as Fifth avenue west, but switch in the middle of the block between Fourth and Fifth avenues and start back on their run up the hill.

Every day passengers can be found on the corner of Fifth avenue west who miss hill cars in this manner. They cannot be expected to know of the arrangement under which two of the lines switch in the middle of the block, and they wait on the corner for the car to come, and, of course, get left.

It has been suggested that if Fourth avenue west was made the transfer point this would be avoided.

THEORY OF POLITICS

Prof. Walker of Superior Presents Psychic Side Interestingly.

Traces Evolution of Parties In the United States.

Always Progressive and Conservative Parties---The Latter Leads.

The temperament of the people, rather than the logic of statesmen or the fine work of ward workers, has directed the trend of American politics since the founding of the republic. That was the conclusion arrived at by Professor Elmer W. Walker, of the West Superior normal school faculty, in a discussion of his theory that there is a psychic side of politics.

Professor Walker traced the development of his theory from the adoption of articles of confederation in a manner most entertaining to those that attended the meeting of the Unity club last night. The audience evidently expected to listen to a dry disquisition along scientific lines, rather than a presentation of historical facts, with incidental references to the theory itself.

Professor Walker exhibited a chart twenty-eight feet long, on which he had traced the evolution of his theory. He showed this in the tracing of two parallel lines along the bottom of the chart. A red line represented what Professor Walker, for want of a better word, denominated the progressive party in American politics. A blue line represented the conservative party. The lines converged or diverged as the policies of the two approaches or departed from one another. Lines drawn from top to bottom of the chart represented the different administrations.

Professor Walker began with the assumption that there are two parties in every division and sub-division in this country, beginning with the nation, and extending down through states, counties, cities, into churches, schools, neighborhoods and families. One party was the progressive, the other the conservative. It mattered not what name the party might pass under, its purpose was either one or the other. And one was just as essential to the success of the nation as the other. A progressive party, unimpeded or unbalanced by a conservative party, would likely lead to revolution. The effect of one or the other, Professor Walker likened to the hauling of a heavy load up one of Duluth's hills by a single team. The driver either carried a brake or a stone with which to block the wheels in order to rest the team. The stone made an additional load, but if something of the sort were not provided, the team might break away from the load and each run in opposite directions, making two progressives. The stone was the conservative force, the team the progressive.

These forces began in national politics with the adoption of the constitution. The Federalist party was the progressive party, not because it was the best party, but because it desired change. The anti-Federalists were the conservative because they were satisfied with the situation as it was. The Federalists wanted a greater centralizing of the power of government. The anti-Federalists insisted on leaving the states with plenty of power. Down to Monroe's time the lines followed by these two parties ran about parallel, neither one deviating from its course or gaining any particular advantage until the conservatives were drawn toward the progressive at that time. Then followed the era of good feeling, in which nothing was accomplished. The placidity of events gave rise to discontent which led to the forming of several parties, each one standing for various gradations or sides of one policy. The team broke away from the wagon, and the horses went in one direction and the wagon in another. The ultimate result was the civil war. Again after the civil war the diverging lines were drawn together. There was concord of views between the progressive and conservatives on the great question of the day—the negro problem. Both parties were satisfied on all but one point—that of finance. This one sentiment had not thoroughly developed, but finally settled down to the belief that it would right itself. Then the lines diverged again. Absolute content has given rise to discontent, and several new lines branched out. Now the two lines were running parallel again on the question of expansion, the progressive dragging the conservatives with them.

The result of this demonstration was to show that the progressive party had gradually won. It made no difference under what name it made its battle, the Conservatives had steadily been drawn along and up by it. If it had been politicians with their logic eloquence that had foremarked the trend of events, Professor Walker contended progression would have always been under one banner. It was not ideas it was temperament that blazed out the pathway. The development of the country had steadily been along the line of progress. By progress, he reminded his hearers, he meant change. This progress, from the time Hamilton declared that he favored a constitutional monarchy, had been persistently toward the development of greater governmental power. More had been yielded by the states at each crisis in the history of the country.

A man is a Republican or a Democrat, not because of the name. The name of either one signified nothing as compared with its original application. A man's son was a Democrat because his father was a Democrat, not merely, but because the father might have handed down to the son certain qualities of temperament that caused him to lean toward the policy of his father's party. As soon as that party diverged from the course that that temperament would favor, the son left the so-called party of his father. If the temperament were progressive, then he followed to the progressive party, whatever name it went under. If it were conservative, he followed that course regardless of party lines. The splitting up of party membership over expansion was instanced. Men left their parties, not so much because they believed or did not believe in one side or the other, as because they temporarily were committed to the progressive or the conservative.

Professor Walker also spoke of a theory that was coming into his mind that the history of the country was marked by cycles of thirty-six years. The great changes as he had traced them on his chart were brought about in these periods. He believed that this was due to the ascendency of a new generation. These cycles were of the same life as a generation. The next change under this theory would come in 1932. What change that would be, he could not foretell, but intimated that it would be along the line of progress, rather than conservatism.

Professor Walker expressed the belief that this nation, like the older ones, will be subject to rise and fall. Thus far, the movement has been one of progress, but when the destiny of the nation has been attained, like all other nations, he believed it would begin to decay. Nations partake of the same character as individuals. They are born, grow to maturity, become old, and fall into decay. He could see no other ultimate end for the United States, but he did not look for this to result for thousands of years.

There was a little general discussion, but less than usual, and very little directly bearing on the theory developed by Professor Walker.

VALUE OF TESTIMONY

Greater Than Assertion.

There is none of us so hardened but that when we have been able to aid our fellow-creatures by conferring a benefit or bringing a little comfort into their lives we like to have appreciation shown. This generally affords more pleasure than the performance of the act itself, and in this connection the following letter from a Paris, Texas, lady is of more than usual interest: "Dear Friends: I address you as such, for you have been such to me. I suffered for three years off and on with piles. I was treated at the hospital, and the new and elegant hospital, of Memphis; they only gave me temporary relief. I came West, thinking the change of air and water would benefit me; five months ago the bleeding piles came back on me, and bled so much that I thought I would die. I have had four of the finest doctors in this section of Texas; all they did was to finally nearly let me go to my grave; all they wanted was a big sum of money from me and to operate on me. I said no, no surgeon's knife would enter me; if it was my time to die God knew it, and when I died I would die all together. I began hearing about your medicine. I had no faith in you, but I sent and got a box of your Pyramid Pile Cure; in two days the blood flow had slackened to one-half the amount, and in one week I felt so much better I walked four blocks and did a little housework. I was not bleeding then; in three weeks I was well. God bless you for putting such a wonderful medicine within the reach of suffering men and women. I shall never cease to recommend your medicine or be without it; also I used your Pyramid Pills. Sallie A. Herndon." Testimony like this should be more convincing than all claims and assertions, and should leave no doubt in the mind of the reader as to the merit of the remedy. Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by druggists for fifty cents a package, or will be mailed by the makers to any address upon receipt of price. Write Pyramid Drug company, Marshall, Mich., for their book on cause and cure of piles.

KEEP STRONG

Vinol is a Wonderful Tonic and Strengthener.

The Reason Why We Endorse It So Emphatically.

We have had considerable experience in being able to watch the effects produced by various tonics. We can emphatically state that we know of nothing that will act as a general rebuilder, strength restorer and flesh creator, better than Vinol.

When we feel as sure as we do of the good that can be accomplished by this scientific remedy, it would seem strange did we not endorse it and recommend it as highly as we are continually doing.

It is painful for us to see any of our friends or fellow townspeople, weak and debilitated and unable to enjoy life and in a condition where they are apt to succumb to some serious illness, when we feel as sure as we do, that if they would but take Vinol, they would find it to be a strength builder and a health maintainer.

We know that Vinol contains in a highly concentrated form, those important medicinal elements that have always made cod liver oil famous. We know also that Vinol does not contain grease and is delicious to take and we know best of all of hundreds of people who have been cured and made strong by it. Here is one of many.

Mrs. G. W. Henry, 205 First Ave., Joliet, Illinois, says:

"I take the greatest of pleasure in recommending such a fine toning and strengthening medicine as Vinol. I felt run down and was always tired. I had no appetite and did not seem to digest the food I ate properly. I have been taking Vinol for about two weeks and feel strong and well. I now thoroughly enjoy my meals and my domestic and social duties, which used to fatigue me, are now a source of pleasure. I am now a sincere friend of Vinol."

When we talk of Vinol, we know whereof we speak and will refund your money if you are not satisfied after giving it a fair trial, that what we tell you about it is absolutely true.

REPAIR WORK COMPLETED.

Lamborn Avenue Bridge at Superior Again Open.

The repair work to the Lamborn avenue bridge, near the shipyards, was finished yesterday afternoon, and shortly after 4 o'clock the interstate cars began to make through trips instead of transferring passengers at the bridge. It is claimed that the bridge service will be very much improved this coming season, and that there will be no more long and annoying delays whenever the bridge has to be swung. The street railway company has also made a number of improvements at the approaches to the bridge, and has put in some new patent appliances that will effectually prevent the trolley jumping the wires whenever the car goes on or off the bridge.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

Baptists Entertain For Rev. B. R. Patrick.

An informal farewell reception was given last evening at the First Baptist church for Rev. B. R. Patrick, retiring pastor of the church. It was an informal affair, and was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Patrick has been a very popular pastor, and the church members greatly regret his leaving. An orchestra gave a program and refreshments were served.

Rev. Mr. Patrick does not know as yet just when he will leave to take the position as chaplain in the navy. He has not yet received his commission but expects it at any time.

Drops the Case.

Judge Danielson of West Superior, who recently brought a libel suit against Attorney Frank Ross, of that city, because of a story that the latter told at the Douglas county bar banquet, has dropped the case. Judge Danielson says that an understanding has been reached, and he considers that his action has set him right in the eyes of the people.

ACTION IS DELAYED

The Wine Room Ordinance Goes Over For Another Week.

Would Have Failed By One Vote---An Amendment Proposed.

Bids on Municipal Subway to Be Called For.

The council last night:

Postponed voting on wine room ordinance one week.

Proposed an amendment to the wine room ordinance.

Called for estimates on a municipal subway system.

Introduced an ordinance making park police poundmasters.

Declined to pay John Link's perjury defense bill.

Received offer of free old company telephone service.

Adopted the T. J. Davis plan for naming streets.

Gave control of market hall to board of public works.

Once more diplomacy saved the anti-wine room ordinance from defeat.

Had its friends endeavored to force it through it would have failed by one vote.

Seeing that such action would result in defeat, it was agreed to postpone the vote for another week.

If the promoters of this ordinance are willing to adopt the Chicago ordinance as a compromise, they will get the requisite number of votes at the next meeting.

The Chicago ordinance does not prohibit the wine rooms, but simply says there shall be no doors or partitions to the booths. Everything is open to those that desire to see into the booths by stepping down in front of them, but the interior of the booths are not visible from the bar.

The ordinance committee presented a clause of the Chicago ordinance as an amendment to the original measure last evening. This amendment prohibits the sale of vinous or intoxicating liquors in any restaurant, cafe, dining room, ordinary or other victualing place to any party of less than four, unless all members of the party are of the same sex.

This amendment is regarded as more sweeping than the original ordinance by some. The restaurant habit has become somewhat prevalent in Duluth. Frequently a man and woman go to a restaurant and order wine with their meal. The proposed amendment prohibits this unless there is more than one couple or unless those in the party are all of the same sex.

However, this amendment is favored by three aldermen that are at present opposed to the original ordinance, and one of them says that such a provision would go a long way in preventing the downfall of both young women and men if properly enforced.

The council chamber was filled to the doors in anticipation of the wine room ordinance discussion, and there was some disappointment when the committee perpetrated its stroke of life-saving diplomacy.

Alderman Krumsieg introduced a resolution of extraordinary importance, in view of certain recent misfortunes resulting from overhead electric wiring.

He called for a city engineer's estimate of the cost of constructing a subway system in Michigan street from Sixth avenue west to Lake avenue and in the alley between Superior and First streets from Sixth avenue west to Second avenue east.

Mr. Krumsieg's idea is to have this subway system built by the city and operated as a municipal ownership enterprise. All telephone, telegraph and electric companies would be compelled to put their wires under ground and the city would derive a rental from these companies for the use of its conduits. Mr. Krumsieg's resolution was adopted unanimously.

The idea is generally favored by business men who say that the danger of fire and accident from overhead wires will increase as the city grows and it is now incumbent on the city to take some such step for the protection of life and property.

* * *

Alderman Kern introduced an amendment to the pound system ordinance, making all park policemen poundmasters without additional compensation. This ordinance is for the protection of park property throughout the city, though it will especially apply to the new Fairmount park at West Duluth. The amendment was referred to the ordinance committee

Patrolman John Link will not be reimbursed by the city for expense incurred defending himself against a grand jury indictment last December.

The grand jury asked Mr. Link if he was ever in a saloon on Sunday and he, misunderstanding, said he had not been. The jurymen had evidence that he was and indicted him for perjury. The indictment was subsequently quashed by the court. It was recommended that the city reimpurse the officer for the expense incurred. Alderman Moore signed this recommendation and last night he explained that while the expense was undoubtedly a burden-ship on Mr. Link, that the indictment did not hold, he had nevertheless come to the conclusion that its allowance would establish a dangerous precedent. The appropriation failed by a vote of 8 to 7.

An effort was made to have the telephones of the Duluth company reinstated in the city hall. The company offered free service and the city officers petitioned for the old 'phones.

Manager Kritzer, of the Zenith City Telephone company, was called on for a statement as to the length of time that would be required in getting the Zenith system in operation again. He said the city hall telephones would all be connected by 9 o'clock this morning. The Duluth company's offer was referred to the committee on city property.

After a great deal of red tape the city officers were instructed to include the T. J. Davis system of street naming in all cement walk specifications during the coming season.

This system is to have the names of avenues and streets impressed in the corner stones of cement walks, as are the names of contractors at present. Under the new system the free advertising of the contractors is prohibited.

It is expected that the new scheme will be quite a success. Pedestrians can see the names of the streets and avenues right at their feet while walking.

The bureau of labor and employment commissioners sent in a report against accepting the Lake avenue site offered for the free employment office. It was claimed that the Lake avenue site would be more inconvenient than the Armory building, in which the bureau is now located.

The commissioners urged a more suitable site nearer the other employment offices of the city.

* * *

Mayor Hugo vetoed the resolution passed at the last meeting, renting surplus space in the Armory for $55 a month. The vote was sustained by a unanimous vote.

Alderman Mannheim solved the difficulty by presenting a resolution giving the board of public works entire charge of the market hall floor of the Armory, with permission to sublet any surplus space that the department might not need.

* * *

The board of fire commissioners recommended the plan of Alderman Olson to secure rock now for the extension of No. 2 fire hall. The rock is now available cheap on account of the Piedmont avenue widening. In the near future much rock will have to be used in enlarging the fire hall, and the Sixth ward alderman and fire commissioners believe in taking advantage of the present situation.

* * *

The board of public works sent in an urgent recommendation for a sewer outlet at Twenty-eighth avenue west. It is claimed the present thawing weather has made the Twenty-eighth avenue sewer decidedly unsanitary and annoying.

* * *

Petitions for sewers were received. One was asked for in Jefferson street, between Twentieth and Twenty-first avenues east, and the other was for Third street, near Twenty-ninth avenue west. The committee on drains, sewers and parks and the board of public works will give these petitions immediate consideration.

ELKS' CLUB.

Lodge Has Taken Action Favorable to Its Establishment.

The Elks' lodge has taken action favoring the establishing of an Elks' club. The report of the committee appointed a number of weeks ago, which investigated the success of similar clubs in other cites, was received at the last meeting of the order, and the committee instructed to continue.

It is said that the Elks will have club rooms of some sort at any rate. How extensive a plan they will be opened on will not be determined until the general character and scope of the new Commercial club is developed. The Elks will be considerably influenced by the course of the latter organization.

DREAMING.

Superior Club Believed to Be Laboring Under Hallucination.

At a meeting of the Hundred Thousand club in West Superior last evening, J. W. Palmer, of that city, one of the speakers of the evening, declared there should be closer connection between that city and West Duluth. He said that the West Duluth Commercial club is going to have the street railway line extended to the river and that efforts should be made to get a line to the river on the Superior side and a ferry run between the two points. A committee was appointed to confer with the West Duluth Commercial club regarding the matter. The committee is comprised of J. W. Palmer, O. K. Anderson, William Kennedy and A. A. Campbell.

So far as can be learned the West Duluth Commercial club has never entered seriously into the proposal of such a scheme and it is believed that somebody has been giving the members of the Hundred Thousand club a pipe dream.

The matter of a bridge or some other means of communication between West Duluth and West Superior has been talked of occassionally, but it has nearly always been broached by West Superior interests that have been laboring under the idea that they could draw trade from West Duluth to that city. Less than a year ago the old wagon bridge scheme was revived across the bay, but it died a natural death as West Duluthians took little or no stock in the scheme.

A Pretty Game of Politics.

Attention was called in The Herald's Washington correspondence yesterday to the fact that the employes of the agricultural department, or part of them, were paying but little attention to the order of President Roosevelt forbidding lobbying in their own interests. It appears that a rather pretty game of politics has been played by parties on the payrolls and friends interested in their advancement. In the preparation of the appropriation bill in the last congress the members of the house committee on agriculture were requested to change the title of a number of heads of divisions in the department and to designate them as chiefs of bureaus. The request was granted. Now the department has asked that the chiefs of bureaus have their salaries increased from $3000 to $5000 per year in order to have the same financial standing as the heads of bureaus in other departments of the government. The subcommittees of the committee on agriculture have not reached an agreement upon these requests for increases in salaries, but the indications are that the requests will be denied. An increase of $2000 each per annum is asked for the chiefs of the bureau of plant industry, the bureau of forestry, the bureau of chemistry and the bureau of soils. The agricultural appropriation bill at the last session carried $4,577,420. The estimates of the secretary for the coming fiscal year amount to $5,650,000, and it is understood that several supplemental estimates are yet to be received. Members of the committee are not in favor of increasing the appropriation more than $1,000,000 unless there is urgent necessity for it. And there certainly does not seem to be any occasion for the increase of the salaries desired. It is time to call a halt on this growing mania for larger salaries and the sooner the initiative is taken in the matter the better.

Teachers in the Philippines.

Some of the teachers who went to the Philippines and wrote home bitter letters, complaining of their condition have now changed their minds to a very great extent and are trying to undo the wrong impressions which they created in their first moments of disappointment and homesickness. The question of safety of the teachers has recently been aired by Representative Weeks of Michigan, who visited the islands last summer. It seems that the 530 American teachers, of whom 250 are women, have been assigned to about 450 towns. Of these about half are garrisoned. No Americans in the Philippines are safer than the teachers, and very few are placed in a position of so much security, aside from the friendliness of the native population to them on account of their occupation. At the same time the area into which it has not seemed best to send American teachers is considerably larger than that indicated on the may recently prepared, showing the parts of the archipelago which were unsubdued. The area inaccessible to English instruction includes Mindoro, Infanta, Principe, the interior of Mindanao, Samar, the interior of Bohol, the barrios of Batangas, and several small islands. The question of the safety of teachers has not arisen practically in the islands, even though it has occurred to travelers. No town has been given a teacher unless it has been vouched for as safe, loyal and desirous of having one. This educational experiment in the Philippines is attracting a great deal of attention, not only in our own country but among European students of colonial government. Much complaint has been heard, to be sure, but those who are earnestly working at their posts without a murmur seem to be accomplishing excellent results which will sooner or later become apparent. It is difficult to judge of educational results in one year or two, but those who are watching the test are sanguine of the end and are entitled to all credit and encouragement in their undertaking.

THE "MERGER" CASE.

The attorney general has begun proceedings to test the legality of the alleged combination of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, through the Northern Securities company acting as a holding corporation. The action is brought under the so-called Sherman anti-trust law, it being claimed that the alleged "merger" is in unlawful restraint of trade and commerce. The proceedings are begun in the United States circuit court, and it is understood that the case will be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible until a final decision has been handed down by the supreme court at Washington. Even under the most favorable circumstances the result of the proceedings cannot be ascertained for several months. While the attorney general has said that he believes the Northern Securities company has violated the Sherman law by holding a controlling interest in the two roads, the able attorneys who have the interests of the company in charge are equally confident that the courts will hold that nothing illegal has been done or attempted to be done.

The issues involved in this suit are of very great importance. Far-reaching results must follow their decision. The Northern Securities company and the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington roads are not the only corporations that would be seriously affected if the attorney general should win his suit. If he can break up this so-called "merger" of the two Northwestern roads, why may he not, and why should he not, go ahead and break up all the great railroad systems which have come into existence within the last ten years, or since the passage of the anti-trust law? The movement would practically end nowhere short of the disruption of all great railroad systems of the present day. For what purpose should these great railroad systems be disrupted? What good could come from it? Who would benefit by it?

All students of the railroad question must agree that the Sherman anti-trust law is positively harmful to the public interests, so far as the great transportation agencies are concerned, whatever may be the value or bearing of the law in other lines. The railroad industry is a natural monopoly. The closest students of the subject believe that public policy demands that it should be treated as such, and on that basis regulated and controlled. Wherever anti-trust legislation or the anti-trust idea has touched the railroads, it has been to the disadvantage of the public. Many examples might be given of the fact. Independent of what is generally understood by the term "rates," there are important incidents of railway service and charge, such as classification, storage, demurrage, car service rules, respecting which the public interest requires uniformity, stability and certainty, and yet it cannot be denied that any arrangement between the companies for a uniform policy in these particulars is to a greater or less extent a restraint upon competition. For instance, if two or more competing roads agree on a 48-hours' demurrage, or on points of classification, or on the amount of free storage they will allow, or the mileage they will pay on private cars, those roads, by that agreement, have subjected themselves to the anti-trust law. And yet all these arrangements may be wholesome and even beneficial to the public. The truth of the whole matter is that if the railroad operations were conducted in accordance with the principles of the anti-trust law the country would see such a condition of transportation chaos as it has never beheld.

Of what benefit to the people of Minnesota and the Northwest would be the dissolution of the so-called "merger" of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific roads? Governor Van Sant and his newspaper organs talked excitedly about the awful things that this combination would bring about—and one of the first things that followed was a reduction of freight rates! They shed bitter tears, for political effect, over the terrible fate in store for the people when competition was destroyed, and yet it is well known that for five or six years past at least there has been no competition, such as brings about destructive rate wars, and a thorough understanding has prevailed all that time between the two roads which has ensured stability and uniformity of rates and classifications. Those who have maintained this understanding are still in control of the two roads, and it was with a desire to preserve this "community of interests" that some of them formed the Northern Securities company to hold their stock in the two roads and maintain unchanged the policy which has proved so beneficial to the Northwest as well as to the roads themselves. There is good reason to believe that the courts will hold that in taking this course they acted within their rights as individuals and did nothing in violation of the anti-trust law.

A good satire at the expense of the Baconian cipherists has been perpetrated by an anonymous Englishman, who shows by methods quite as defensible as those used in demonstrating that Bacon wrote the Shakespeare plays, that Shakespeare really wrote the book of Psalms. For his system it is necessary to spell the poet's name either Shakespear or Shakespeare, both of which are permissible. In the name of "Shakespear," he points out, there are four vowels and six consonants, which make the number 46. Turning to Psalm 46, the 46th word from the beginning is "shake" and the 46th word from the end, excluding the "selah," is "spear." What could be plainer?

THE CONSULAR SERVICE.

The Adams bill providing for the reorganization of the consular service, and which provides for the placing of that important department on a business-like basis, has one most commendable provision, and that is, that only citizens of the United States shall hereafter be eligible to the service. There are 305 United States consular agencies abroad, and 290 of them are filled by foreigners. These agencies employ 180 clerks, and 120 of them are foreigners. In Germany 24 of the 40 United States vice and deputy consuls are of foreing citizenship. In the British empire there are 114 United States vice and deputy consuls, of which 83 are foreigners of different nationalities. These men are in social and commercial positions that prohibit their taking an active part in the extension of our trade, no matter how conversant they may be with the American trade aims and methods, which is rarely the case. The fees for these foreign members for the consular service for the last year amounted to more than $220,000.

Objection to the proposed increase in the pay of consular agents, which is provided in the bill, is answered most effectively by Mr. Dubois, who was formerly consul geneal to Switzerland, and who ppeared before the committee of the house on foreign affairs. He showed that while he was consul general at St. Gall, Switzerland, he increased the revenues on embroideries from that point alone on shipments to the United States more than $1,000,000 a year, or within $75,000 of the entire annual service. Soon after he took up the question of imports from St. Gall he discovered wholesale frauds were being perpetrated by a system of undervaluation. He started an investigation, and out of the first 500 invoices examined 364 were undervalued from 4 to 118 per cent. In the first twenty-five invoices examined, only one gave an honest valuation. After a year's work the investigations showed that the shipments were almost invariably valued at their honest price. In one year the shipments of these goods to the United States amounted to more than $8,000,000, and by an honest system of work in the consular service the United States revenues were increased by more than $1,000,000. With honest Americans in the consular service, instead of foreigners, Mr. Dubois urged, the receipts from fees would support the service, and the income to the government from tariff collections would amount to millions annually.

Such arguments in favor of Americanizing the service are most encouraging, and, coupled with the abolishment of the fee system and the substitution of salaries, would render the service much more effective. The Adams bill will be carefully considered, and in all likelihood will receive a favorable report.

The growth in the number of employes who are on the payroll of Uncle Sam during the last six years has been astonishingly large as shown by a statement just compiled by the civil service commission. The last time a similar statement was prepared was June 30, 1896, at which time the total number of classified positions was 87,115, while there were 91,569 unclassified offices, including the fourth-class postmasters. The only exceptions were those in the consular and diplomatic service, and the employes of congress and of the courts. The total government employes in the executive service in 1896 was accordingly 178,684. On Feb 1, 1902, the people in the classified service numbered 119,405, while those in the unclassified service were 111,469, a total of 230,534. To this total there should be added about 5500 employes, to include those in the lighthouse service and the marine hospital service, of whom not less than 5000 are classified. This would make very close to 125,000 employes in the classified service at the present time as against 87,115 in 1896, an increase of 37,000 against a gain of about 20,000 in the unclassified list.

The Welsh settlers of Patagonia that Canada wants for colonists seem like desirable immigrants, the kind likely to turn to profit the wheat lands of the Northwest, and the Dominion government is offering liberal inducements for them to go to Canada. The colony, now numbering about 2000 people, has had a hard-luck experience in Patagonia for several years. The land was not too promising at the start, but by hard work the Welsh were beginning to look forward to success, when floods came that destroyed their crops and completely discouraged them. The Argentine government has been kind to them, but they want to forsake Patagonia.

The Des Moines News has made the following prediction: Theodore Roosevelt will be the next candidate for president on the Republican ticket. Four years after that the contest for nomination will be between Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana and A. B. Cummings of Iowa.

FLOATING FANCIES.

Chicago Tribune: Medium—The manifestations we shall have this evening will be from what might be called sample spirits.

Flippant Auditor—They'll do. Rap 'em up.

Brooklyn Life: Bighead—Remarkable man, that Jones.

Gayboy—In what way?

"He has failed in so many ways that from the point of view of having experience his life is a success."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "If Prince Henry visits the Chicago stockyards he will see 50,000 hogs."

"He'd see a good many more if he'd ride on the street cars."

Washington Star: "My wife says she wishes I would learn to play poker," said Bliggins.

"I thought she objected."

"No, sometimes she wishes I would either learn or quit trying."

Boston Transcript: Mrs. Piper—Mr. Voxtel is a fine singer, there's no denying that; but I think he sings louder than he ought.

Mrs. Kackle—That's just what I think. At last night's concert Mrs. Chinner and I could hardly hear a word each other said, he sang so loud.

Philadelphia Press: "Yes," said the head of the firm, "Miss Addle is a good bookkeeper, but she makes some queer mistakes."

"What, for instance?" asked the silent partner.

"Well, she enters our messenger boy's wages under the head of running expenses."

Somerville Journal: When a man tells you what he thinks is a funny story, always laugh. You may want him to laugh at a story you tell some day.

Chicago Post: From the window she saw him coming up the steps.

"He comes!" she exclaimed, joyfully.

There was a bit of ice on the top step. He struck it. Then he struck each of the other steps in succession.

"Heavens!" she cried; "he has foozled his approach."

DE WET.

Ho, sing me a song, both deep and strong,
Like the thunder of hoofs as they roll along
Let the music ride with a swinging stride,
Like the gallop of steeds in their strength and pride,
When they reach at their bridles and foam and fret,
For I sing of a rider, De Wet—De Wet.

Through the black still night comes a
And the dark is a-clatter with horses' feet.
With the rattle of arms as they wheel and pass,
And the dull, deep thunder across the grass.
Who rides by night when the moon is set?
And the night owl answers, "De Wet—De Wet."

His home is the free veldt's open face;
His roof is the azure of endless space;
He sleeps where he loosens his saddle girth;
And his only bed is good, red earth.
Such a leader of men we ne'er have met;
And he fights for freedom, De Wet—De Wet.

Full many a time we have held him fast,
And have vainly boasted we have caught him at last;
We have ringed him round with a ridge of steel,
And have dreamed he was lying beneath our heel;
But the lion was up and had torn his net,
And was out in the open, De Wet—De Wet.

He strikes us here, with his troop, today
And tomorrow a hundred miles away;
He sweeps, a wolf, o'er the open veldt;
And he carries death in his cartridge belt.
He has sworn an oath he will pay the debt,
And in death he will keep it, De Wet—De Wet.

His name is a word we have learned to fear,
When the clouds are thick and the night is drear,
When the rains beats hard on the sodden sward,
And the wild beasts crouch and the wind's abroad;
When the starless sky is as black as jet,
Then he rides on his errand, De Wet—De Wet.

In the dead of night, when the camp's asleep,
Though the sentinels guard and the rocks are steep,
There's a shot in the dark—there's a sudden cry,
And the men rush out from their tents to die.
Who strikes by night, when the moon is set?
And the dead make answer, "De Wet—De Wet."

Women as Insurance Risks.

American Medicine: The majority of companies charge women higher premiums, the differences in this respect being illogical, while not a small number make no extra charge whatsoever. The claim is made that the increased risk is actually justified by the function of maternity. Some companies, therefore, make no extra charge after the age of 50. It is pertinently asked why some companies find female risks profitable at ordinary rates. We suspect the explanation of the whole problem will be found to lie in prejudice and custom and that great financial success will come to those companies which invite the women at ordinary rates. There is no reason in vital statistics for excluding or fining them.

The Strength Of His Plea

By Angela Morgan.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

"Listen to me, Lucille. You have been looking at this thing so long, from one limited point of view, that you don't know, don't even dream of the reasonableness of the other side.

"I say it is wrong for you to sacrifice your happiness and mine for the sake of a morbidly mistaken idea of duty.

"Lucille, I love you. I want you for my wife. There is nothing on earth that should keep us apart. It is a falsely rigid conception of your obligation to others that stands in the way.

"They cannot do without you at home? They need you so? Yes. And why? Because you've let them lean on you so long. They've grown so accustomed to it that they can't see the wrong in it.

"Why should you make yourself forever a slave to them? It is wrong, wrong, I tell you. Oh, Lucille, can't you see, can't you understand?

"Do you owe nothing to yourself? Is life never to hold anything else for you? Why, Lucille, you've become so used to doing without in the service of others that you don't even expect happiness for yourself—it seems wrong, selfish, to want it.

"Ah, dear, did you think I couldn't understand? I know all about it. Oh, that pale, tense little face of yours, how it speaks to me! You're fighting against your own wishes because you think they're selfish.

"You're a brave little girl, Lucille, but you're not brave enough to claim your own right to happiness. Do you know, dear—forgive me—that it is a form of cowardice that holds you back? You're afraid of what they will think, what they will say—they at home who have always depended on you. You fear they will think you inconsiderate, unkind, heartless, to leave them. Is it not so?

"Listen, dear. Be yourself. Think for yourself. You've all your life thought as they wanted you to think. You've lived for them as they wanted you to live. They would let you go on all the rest of your life sacrificing your own interests for theirs. Forgive me—I do not mean to be harsh, but is it not true?

"Do you know that such absolutely selfless devotion for those who do not need it is harmful to them as well as to you? It cripples their best efforts—makes them learners and dependents.

"It isn't as if they were realy helpless, Lucille. They can do without you. Give them the chance to try it. Indeed it will be one of the greatest kindnesses that you could do for them.

"You need to be guided, helped to see the right track, dear. Let me help you. O, if I could but convince you, could but show you the truth.

"Now is the time for you to assert yourself—to shake yourself out of that habitual thought of utter self-denial that has possessed you for so long.

"You have been too willing, too ready to efface yourself for others. You have given them the right to impose upon you and they have done it. Shall you now, at this time, let that false idea keep from you your life's happiness?

"Now is the time when you must decide for yourself. Let no one influence you. Even I, great as is my love for you, would not want to feel that I had influenced you against your own judgment. I want you to see this thing for yourself—to realize it fully from your own standpoint, as well as mine.

"O, my little girl, I do so want you to be happy. And I—I know I can make you happy, dear. You love me, Lucille, you said it once—I haven't forgotten. You love me now, I know it. I feel it. Don't fight against it, dear.

"Look at me, Lucille. Ah, your eyes don't lie. Those little hands—let me hold them, dear. Don't shrink from me, my darling. Are you still afraid to be happy? It is not wrong. It is not selfish—this love of ours. It is God's best gift to you and me.

"Ah, Lucille, you do love me, you do! My little one—mine! And is it yes, dear? Say it again, and yet again. I can't hear it often enough. It seems too good to be true. Mine—all mine!

"Dear one—is this not best, after all?"

TO DENVER.

Northern Pacific May Furnish Duluth a Direct Line.

New York, March 11.—A special from O'Neill, Neb., says engineers of the Great Northern are surveying a line from Sioux Falls, S. D., to connect with the Burlington at Broken Bow, Neb. The party arrived at O'Neill and began work in both directions. J. B. Van Syckle, a close friend of Abel Anderson, of Sioux City, says the work will commence on the road immediately.

If what Mr. Van Syckle says is true, there will be developments in Western railroads which will change existing relations to transcontinental lines. He stated that at a conference recently held in New York among the money powers strong efforts were made to shut off this line, which will give the Northern Pacific people a short line from Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul to Denver, and in the event of the Burlington building to Salt Lake to connect with Senator Clark's Los Angeles road a short line to the Pacific coast.

The route of the new road is west of Sioux Falls to the Rosebud Indian reservation, soon to be opened for settlement, then southwest to Broken Bow, 300 miles. The survey appears to be in line with the policy of the Great Northern, which leased the Sioux City & Northern and the Pacific Short line, which will meet the new road at O'Neill.

The Yacht Constitution Will Be Put In Commission.

New York, March 11.—There is much reason to believe, says the Herald, that the yacht Constitution will be placed in commission the coming season. The five New York Yacht club members who built the yacht are not satisfied that it is inferior to the Columbia, either in speed or weatherly qualities, but on the contrary, hope to demonstrate that she is the best of the cutters for the cup defense ever turned out by the Herreshoffs.

August Belmont is the head of the syndicate owning the Constitution, and he has engaged Capt. Barr, who sailed the Columbia in her America's cup races, with the understanding that he shall take charge of his seventy-footer, the Mineola, or the Constitution as required. If the Constitution is put in commission it will be with the object of tuning it up with a view to defending the America's cup in 1903.

CAUGHT REDHANDED.

Forger Nabbed as He Signed a Blank.

Clinton, Iowa, March 11.—A clever capture of a forger was effected here, and Charles Castle is a prisoner in the county jail, being bound over to appear before the next grand jury.

Castle went to the real estate firm of W. E. Buell & Co. and said he was David Wagner, a well known farmer of Olive township. Castle said he wanted to borrow $800 on a seventy-acre tract of land. He was given an application blank and was told to go to the office of Skinner & Co., who would look up the title and fill out the application.

Castle did as directed. He called on Mr. Skinner and told his errand. Mr. Skinner asked him if his name was Wagner. Castle said it was. Skinner then telephoned to the chief of police and in the presence of the officer again asked Castle if his name was Wagner and, receiving a reply in the affirmative, told him to sign his name to the application.

Castle signed the name of David Wagner. Mr. Skinner then stated Wagner was one of his clients and told the officer to arrest Castle, which was done.

DREDGE FOR DULUTH.

Appropriation In the River and Harbor Bill.

Washington, March 11.—The river and harbor bill, in addition to the liberal appropriations between St. Paul and Minneapolis contains one additional appropriation of $143,000 for a government dredge at Duluth. The lock and dam appropriations between St. Paul and Minneapolis cover an expenditure of $695,000 for the next two years.

Congressman Fletcher today said that the report that Speaker Henderson had refused to give consideration to the London dock charge bill is entirely erroneous; he said:

"The speaker treated me very fairly and said that the bill would be given consideration when the call of committees is reached. In addition, Congressman Sherman, of New York, who is opposed to the bill, has agreed to have it come before the house for discussion."

The Great Solvent and Eliminator of URIC ACID and other POISONS

An Especial Boon to Nervous and Broken-Down Women.

Dr. I. N. Lowe, of New York, Former Professor of Clinical Medicine and Diseases of Children in College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Marion Sims College of Medicine, St. Louis, etc., etc., in the Medical Mirror, February, 1901, says:

"Women who lead inactive lives, whose nerves are on edge most of the time, whose secretions are nearly always torpid, who breathe vitiated atmospheres, instead of being flattered into believing that they are victims of neurasthenia, and thus rendered chronic invalids for life, can, in the majority of instances, be relieved by a proper selection of diet, a stimulation of all the excretory organs, a life in the open country, the breathing of pure air, the indulgence in healthy exercise and proper massage together with a liberal use of several times a day, to favor the elimination of URIC ACID and other ACCUMULATED POISONS (which are oftentimes the most potent causative factors in their distress), far better than by coddling and powerful drugging.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

"In PREGNANCY the tendency is toward the ACCUMULATION of POISONS, which cause engorgement of the kidneys and pelvic organs, thickness of the blood and torpidity of the circulation, aches and pains and general discomfort, and oftentimes the intense and dangerous nausea and vomiting of pregnancy, and in some cases the conditions that accompany or precede the awful PUERPERAL CONVULSIONS, so much dreaded by practitioners; AND THESE POISONS SHOULD BE ELIMINATED.

"I have had several patients who suffered from these unfortunate conditions, including PUERPERAL CONVULSIONS. Uniformly by the attention to the hygiene of the patient, proper exercise, judicious diet, outdoor life, proper purgation, and keeping the kidneys flushed with BUFFALO LITHIA WATER each day, they have escaped the affliction, and made rapid recoveries."

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is for sale by Grocers and Druggists generally. Testimonials which will defy all imputations or questions sent to any address.

PUGILISM.

Sharkey and Ruhlin Have Agreed to Go Abroad.

New York, March 11.—Tom Sharkey and Gus Ruhlin have reached an agreement with representatives of the National Sporting club of London, now here, to appear at that club during coronation week and meet any heavyweights that the organization may select.

Sharkey will begin training at once. Ruhlin is in fine fettle, being in daily practice with Fitzsimmons. It is said that the latter and Jeffries may be the men chosen by the club to meet Sharkey and Ruhlin, for they have been invited abroad.

Frank Erne, Joe Walcott and Tommy Ryan are included in the list of American pugilists who have accepted the National club's invitation to appear in London.

Los Angeles, March 11.—Champion James J. Jeffries has arrived in Los Angeles and will spend several days here visiting his mother. He has entirely recovered from the cold he contracted in New York. The champion has been in consultation with the officials of the Century Athletic club, who have made an offer of $20,000 for the coming battle for the championship. He thinks the choice of a meeting place lies between this city and San Francisco. He will be present in the latter place when bids are opened next Saturday.

TIDAL WAVE

Causes Death and Disaster at Central American Ports.

San Francisco, March 11.—The Pacific Mail company's steamer Newport from Central America and Mexican ports, brings details of a recent disaster between La Libertad and a point thirty miles north of Acajutla. Without a moment's warning a terrific tidal wave burst over all the length of the coast, and when the Newport sailed for San Francisco it was said that fifty-three bodies had already been recovered and buried. No possible estimate of the full loss of life could be made. The wave went entirely over the barriers that had been built along the coast and swept the towns of La Libertad and Acajutla, carrying away the fresh water pumps of the latter place. "There seems to have been not the slightest warning of the disaster," said the officers of the Newport. "The only thing that will account for it is some terrific volcanic eruption far out at sea. The wave rolled in like a mountain and there was not a break to it until striking the beach, when it swept over the embankments, covering them to a height of four or five feet, completely inundating the whole coast and almost wiping out all the small buildings in La Libertad and Acajutla.

When we left the work of rescuing the remains had just begun, while nothing had been done in the way of repairing the damage except replacing the fresh water pumps."

SENSATIONAL

Fight Between Charley McKeever and Jack O'Brien.

Philadelphia, March 11.—After coming within an ace of being knocked out in the first round last night by Charley McKeever at the Washington Sporting club, "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien pulled himself together, and during the remaining five rounds had clearly the better of the go.

The first round was in a way sensational, and worked the spectators up to a high pitch of excitement. Both fighters started in at a rattling pace, and while mixing it up lively, McKeever suddenly shot his right across and caught O'Brien squarely on the jaw. The English champion went to the floor with a bang, and for a moment it looked as though he was out, but he came to his feet just as the limit of the count was reached. After that he fought hard and fast, but McKeever, who was fighting magnificently, managed to stay with O'Brien to the scheduled limit of six rounds. McKeever, however, was considerably punished, his face being much battered up.

This was the first meeting of the men since they met in London a few weeks ago, when O'Brien was awarded the decision on a foul.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The grand jury of Middlesex county reported an indictment on four counts against Joseph Wilfrid Blondin, alias Joseph Barnard, charging him with the murder of Margaret Emma Blondin, his wife. Blondin is under arrest in New York.

John M. Wisker, the New York Central railroad engineer who was indicted for manslaughter in causing the death of seventeen persons in a collision in the Park avenue tunnel, pleaded not guilty Monday in the court of general session. Counsel for Wisker filed an application for authority to inspect the minutes of the grand jury. Decision on this matter was reserved.

The strike on the Northern Pacific train crews was declared off Monday and trains will resume running as usual. The men conferred concerning the rules of the road and the organization to which they belong and say the walk-out was not warranted by the circumstances.

Harry S. New, of Indianapolis, has declined the offer of the office of first assistant postmaster general, tendered him some days ago by President Roosevelt. Mr. New's business would not permit him to accept.

Brady, the theatrical manager, and Monday that the bubonic plague is prevalent in Sydney and Melbourne, Australia, and that several prominent theatrical companies, among them being that of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, and the "Way Down East" company, now playing at local theaters, have cancelled their Australian tours as a result of cable advices telling of the malady.

Legality of Northern Securities Company To Be Tested.

Action Is Brought Under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

St. Paul, March 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—By direction of the attorney general of the United States, a bill was filed here yesterday, in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota in the case of the United States, complainant, against the Northern Securities company, the Great Northern Railway company, the Northern Pacific Railway company, and others, defendants, to test the legality of the alleged combination or merger of the two roads and others named in the bill. The action is brought under the act of July 2, 1890, known as the Sherman anti-trust act.

After reciting the fact that the Northern Securities company is a corporation organized under the laws of the state of New Jersey; that the Great Northern railroad was organized under the laws of the state of Minnesota, and the Northern Pacific railroad under the laws of Wisconsin and that the two last named companies are common carriers, doing an interstate business, and that these companies at, and prior to the doing of the acts complained of, owned and operated two separate, independent, parallel and competing lines of railway aggregating over 5500 miles in length, the petition goes on to say that they were the only transcontinental lines of railway extending across the northern tier of states west of the great lakes, from the great lakes and the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean and were then engaged in active competition with one another for freight and passenger traffic among the several states of the United States and between such states and foreign countries, each system connecting at its Eastern terminals, not only with lines of railway, but with lake and river steamers to other states, and to foreign countries, and at its Western terminals with sea-going vessels to other states, territories and possessions of the United States and to foreign countries.

That prior to the year 1893 the Northern Pacific Railroad company was owned and operated by the Northern Pacific company, a corporation organized under certain acts of congress; that during that year the company became insolvent and was placed in the hands of a receiver. While in this condition awaiting foreclosure and sale, an arrangement was entered into between a majority of the bondholders of the Northern Pacific company and the Great Northern Railway company, for a virtual consolidation of the two and placing the control of the Northern Pacific system in the hands of the Great Northern. This arrangement contemplated the sale under foreclosure of the Northern Pacific company to a committee of bondholders who should organize a new corporation to be known as the Northern Pacific Railway company. One-half of the capital stock of the new company was turned over to the Great Northern company, which in turn was to guarantee the bonds of the Northern Pacific Railway company.

"The carrying out of this arrangement," says the petition, "was defeated by the decision of the supreme court of the United States in case of Pearsall against the Great Northern Railway company, which was decide March 30, 1896, in which it was held that the practical effect would be the consolidation of two parallel and competing lines of railway and the giving to the defendant, the Great Northern Railway company, a monopoly of all traffic in the northern half of the state of Minnesota, as well as of all transcontinental traffic north of the line of the Union Pacific, to the detriment of the public and in violation of the law of the state of Minnesota.

Early in the year 1901 the defendants, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, in contemplation of the ultimate systems under a common source of control, united in the purchase of the total capital stock of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railway company, of Illinois, giving the joints bonds of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies. In this manner the Great Northern and Northern Pacific companies secured control of the vast system of lines known as the Burlington system, about 8000 miles in length. The attempt to turn over a controlling interest of the Northern Pacific Railway company to the Great Northern, having thus, in the year 1896, been defeated by a decision of the supreme court, the defendants, James J. Hill and his associate stockholders of the Great Northern, owning or controlling a majority of the stock, and the defendants, J. Pierpont Morgan and his associates, owning or controlling a majority of the stock of the Northern Pacific company * * * entered into an unlawful combination or conspiracy to effect a virtual consolidation of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern systems and to place restraint upon all competitive interstate and foreign trade or commerce carried on by them and to monopolize or attempt to monopolize the same, and to suppress the competition theretofore existing between said railway systems in said interstate and foreign trade, or commerce, through the instrumentality and by the means followin, to-wit: A holding corporation, to be called the Northern Securities company, was to be formed under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $400,000,000, to which, in exchange for its own capital stock upon a certain basis and at a certain rate, was to be turned over and transferred the capital stock, or a controlling interest in the capital stock, of each of the defendant railway companies.

In this manner the individual stockholders of these two independent and competing railway companies were to be eliminated and a single common stockholder, the Northern Securities company, was to be substituted; the interest of the individual stockholders in the property and franchises of the two railway companies was to terminate, being thus converted into an interest in the property and franchises of the Northern Securities company. The individual stockholders of the Northern Pacific Railway company were no longer to hold an interest in the property or draw their dividends from the earnings of the Northern Pacific system, and the individual stockholders of the Great Northern Railway company were no longer to hold an interest in the property or draw their dividends from the earnings of the Great Northern system, but having ceased to be stockholders in the railway companies, and having become stockholders in the holding corporation, both were to draw their dividends from the earnings of both systems, collected and distributed by the holding corporation. In this manner, by making the stockholders of each system jointly interested in both systems, and by practically pooling the earnings of both systems for the benefit of the former stockholders of each, and by vesting the selection of the directors and officers of each system in a common body, to-wit: the holding corporation, with not only the power, but the duty to pursue a policy which would promote the interests, not of one system at the expense of the other, but of both at the expense of the public, all inducement for competition between the two systems was to be removed, a virtual consolidation effected and a monopoly of the interstate and foreign commerce formerly carried on by the two systems as independent competitors established.

In further pursuance of the unlawful combination or conspiracy aforesaid, and solely as an instrumentality through which to effect the purposes thereof, on or about the 14th day of November, 1901, the Northern Securities company was organized by the election of a board of directors and the selection of a president, James J. Hill, and other officers, who, with their associate stockholders of the Great Northern Railway company, assigned and transferred to the Northern Securities company a large amount of the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway company, constituting a controlling interest therein, and complainant believes a majority thereof, upon the agreed basis of exchange of $180 par value of the capital stock of the Northern Securities company, for each share of the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway company; and the defendants, J. Pierpont Morgan and his associate stockholders of the Northern Pacific Railway company, assigned and transferred to the defendant, the Northern Securities company, a large majority of the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Railway company, upon the agreed basis of exchange of $115, par value, of the capital stock of the Northern Securities company for each share of the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Railway company; and thereafter the Northern Securities company offered to the stockholders of the defendant railway companies to issue and exchange its capital stock for the capital stock of such railway companies upon the basis of exchange aforesaid, no other consideration being required. The defendant, the Northern Securities company, has acquired an additional amount of the stock of the defendant railway companies, issuing in lieu thereof its own stock upon the basis of exchange aforesaid, and is now holding, as owner and proprietor, substantially all of the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Railway company, and, as complainant believes, a majority of the capital stock of the Great Northern Railway company. By reason whereof a virtual consolidation under one ownership and source of control of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway systems has been effected, a combination or conspiracy in restraint of the trade or commerce among the several states, and with foreign nations, formerly carried on by the defendant railway companies independently and in free competition one with the other, has been formed and is in operation, and the defendants are thereby attempting to monopolize, and have monopolized, such interstate and foreign trade or commerce, to the great and irreparable damage of the people of the United States, and in violation of the act of congress of July 2, 1890, entitled "An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies."

If the defendant, the Northern Securities company, has not acquired a large majority of the capital stock of the defendant, the Great Northern Railway company, it is because the individual defendants named and their associates in the combination or conspiracy charged in this petition, or some of them, since it became apparent that the legality of their corporate device for the merger of the stock of the competing railway companies through the instrumentality of a central holding corporation, would be assailed in the courts, have purposely withheld, or caused to be withheld, a large amount of the capital stock of said railway company from transfer for the stock of the Northern Securities company, and have purposely discouraged and prevented the transfer and exchange of such stock for the stock of the Northern Securities company, all for the purpose of concealing the real scope and object of the unlawful combination or conspiracy and of deceiving and misleading the state and federal authorities, and of furnishing a ground for the defense that the Northern Securities company does not hold a clear majority of the stock of the Great Northern Railway company.

The Northern Securities company was not organized in good faith to purchase and pay for the stocks of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific Railway companies. It was organized solely to incorporate the pooling of the stocks of said companies and to carry into effect the unlawful combination or conspiracy aforesaid. The Northern Securities company is a mere depository, custodian, holder and trustee of the stocks of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific Railway companies, and its shares of stock are but beneficial certificates issued against said railroad stocks to designate the interest of the holders in the pool. The Northern Securities company does not have and never had any capital sufficient to warrant such a stupendous operation. Its subscribed capital was but $30,000 and its authorized capital stock of $400,000,000 is just sufficient, when all issued, to represent and cover the exchange value of substantially the entire stock of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railway companies, upon the basis and at the rate agreed upon, which is about $122,000,000 in excess of the combined capital stock of the two railway companies taken at par.

If the government fails to prevent carrying out of this combination or conspiracy, not only will a virtual consolidation of two competing transcontinental lines with the practical pooling of their earnings, be effected, and a monopoly of the interstate and foreign commerce formerly carried on by them as competitors be created and all effective competition between such lines in the carrying of interstate and foreign traffic be destroyed, but thereafter, to all desiring to use it, an available method will be presented whereby through the corporate scheme or device aforesaid, the act of congress of July 2, 1890, may be circumvented and set at naught, and all transcontinental lines, indeed, the entire railway systems of the country, may be absorbed, merged and consolidated, thus placing the public at the absolute mercy of the holding corporation.

The petition prays that the Northern Securities company, its stockholders, officers, etc., be perpetually enjoined from purchasing, voting, etc., any of the shares of the capital stock of either of the Northern Pacific or Great Northern companies and that a mandatory injunction may issue requiring the Northern Securities company to recall and cancel any certificates of stock issued by it in purchase or in exchange for any of the shares of the capital stock of either of the said railway companies, surrendering in return therefor the certificates of the stock in the respective railway companies in lieu of which they were issued. It is also asked that the defendants, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern Railway companies, their officers, stockholders, etc., be perpetually enjoined from in any manner recognizing or accepting the Northern Securities company as the owner or holder of any of the shares of their capital stock, etc.

The petition is signed by Milton D. Purdy, attorney of the United States for the district of Minnesota; Philander C. Knox, attorney general of the United States, and John K. Richards, solicitor general of the United States.

IN ONE LARGE GRAVE

Will the Five Children of Scanlon Be Buried.

Binghamton, N. Y., March 11.—"Dig one large grave; children all dead."

So reads a telegram received yesterday by his sister in this city from Thomas Scanlon, whose five children were burned to death at Shinhopple, Delaware county, last night. They were Mary, aged 13; Thomas, aged 13; Nellie, aged 8; Dennie, aged 4, and Michael, aged 2.

The bodies will be brought here in one large coffin for burial. No details of the accident can be secured. Shinhopple is a small settlement near Hancock, comprised of only a few houses and the Pinch-Ross Chemical company works, where Scanlon was employed. The family removed there from this city five months ago. It is presumed the home was burned at night while Scanlon was away and that all the occupants except Mrs. Scanlon perished.

MARKET WEAKER

Wheat Started Higher But Turned Weak and Declined.

Weather Conditions the Ruling Factor In the Market.

Flax Trading Very Dull But the Market Strong.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 11.—The wheat market started out with an advance this morning but turned weak and declined. The government report on farmers' reverses was construed as bullish and the cables were slightly higher, despite the sharp decline in the American markets yesterday, but the market was entirely governed by the weather conditions, and rains in Oklahoma and Texas caused a bearish sentiment. The decline was checked somewhat by reports of export demand, the seaboard reporting it loads taken for export.

The Liverpool market closed at a decline of ½d. Paris was 10¢@c lower and Antwerp unchanged.

Primary receipts of wheat were 457,000 bus, last year 558,000 bus. Shipments 166,000 bus, last year 294,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 240,000 bus. Bradstr. t reported a decrease of 1,025,000 bus in the world's visible.

Corn and oats were stronger than wheat, the former advancing ¼-¾c and the latter ¾c in the Chicago market. Primary receipts of corn were 357,00 bus, last year 782,000 bus. Shipments were 233,000 bus, last year 359,000 bus. Clearances were 480 bus. Bradstreet's report of the world's visible showed a decrease of 45,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 286 cars, and at Chicago, 82, a total of 368 cars, against 336 last week and 425 last year.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was light and the market very quiet, showing far less interest after the government report than was anticipated. It opened 3c up at 70¾c, sold down to 70½c at 9:35, reacted to 70¾c at 9:57, fell to 70½c at 10:27 and 70¾c at 11:35. It rallied from there to 75¼c at 11:43, sold at 75¼-⅛c at 12:45 and closed at 75¼c, a decline of 3c. Chicago declined ⅝-1c and Minneapolis ⅜-⅝c.

Cash prices were unchanged, continuing at 1c under May for No. 1 northern, ¾c under for No. 2 and 3c under for No. 3. Sales were 25,000 bus.

Flax was very dull, but strong, selling up to $1.74 and closing there. Cash and to arrive sold also advanced 1c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat: Cash, No 1 hard, 76¾c; No. 1 northern, 75¾c; No. 2 northern, 74¾c. No. 3 spring, ——. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 76¾c; No. 1 northern, 75¾c; May, 75¼c; July, 76¾c. Manitoba—No. 1 northern, cash, 72¾c; May, 73½c. No. 2 northern, 69c. Oats, 42c. Rye, 54c. Barley, 49@58c. Flax—Cash, $1.71½; to arrive, $1.71½; May, $1.74. Corn, 61c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 196; last year, 103; oats, 10; rye, 1; barley, 1; flax, 12.

Receipts—Wheat, 110,974; barley, 2360; flax, 4839.

Shipments—Corn, 10,411; flax, 1960.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Despite Bullish Factors Wheat Looked Sick.

Chicago, March 11.—Despite numerous bullish factors the wheat market looked sick at the opening today. The government report showing 156,170,000 bus of wheat reserves was construed by the crowd as decidedly bullish. Cables were slightly higher in the face of a sharp decline here yesterday. Commission houses bought to some extent as did also New York. Offerings were not large and receipts were still small. There was a report of 1,000,000 bus sold late last night to Minneapolis millers. Yet the weather conditions ruled the market and turned the sentiment bearish. Rains were reported in Oklahoma and showers helped many sections in Texas. The Southwest was very bearish and the markets there were lower. This took the viger out of the otherwise firm market. The opening for May was ¼c higher to unchanged at 71¾c to 71c. Prices eased to 70⅝@⅞c of selling, but reacted again to 71c on buying supposed to be covering. At the end of the first hour, May was weak at 70¾c. Local receipts were 82 cars, one of contract grade. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 296 cars, making a total for the three points of 378 cars, against 336 last week and 425 a year ago.

Weakness continued in wheat throughout the session and prices were pressed by selling for the Southwest. Toward the end trade became fairly active. May sold as low as 70¼c and closed weak ⅜@½c lower at 70⅝@⅝c.

Corn started strong and entirely independent of wheat. The government reserve report indicating 234,000,000 bus in farmers' hands was the lowest estimate on record and compared very unfavorably against last year's 776,200,000 bus. The crowd at once took to the bull side and in consideration of the firm cables and light receipts started a fair trade with higher prices. Commission houses bought to some extent and May, which opened ½@⅝ to ⅝@¾c higher at 62¼@62¾c, held up well. There was some small selling for profits as the day advanced and May ceased to 62c and steadied. Receipts, 186 cars.

Late in the day the wheat weakness showed some effect on corn. May was forced down to last night's closing price, 61⅝@¾c, but the strength engendered by the reserve report held at the last and May closed firm, ¼@¾c up at 62c.

There was a large crowd in the oats pit at the opening expecting an active trade in May because of the bullish government report. Business was slack, however, and prices continued to fluctuate narrowly much after the fashion of last week. Corn strength had some influence. The statistical report showed reserves to be only 198,000,000 bus as compared to 292,000,000 bus last year. Contract stocks shipped out late yesterday. Locals bought to some extent. May opened 1@c up at 44½c, sold off to 44c, acted to 44¾c and then went back to its opening price. Receipts 197 cars.

The run of hogs at the yards was 7000 smaller than had been estimated and in consequence prices for hogs and provisions advanced. Trade in the pit was light, but there was some buying on the course grains strength. May pork started 2½c lower at $15.22½ and sold to $15.27½. May lard 2½c higher at $6.40 and sold between that price and $6.37½. May ribs sold a shade to 2½@5c up at $5.37½ to $5.40 and eased to $5.35@5.37½.

Close: Wheat—March, 74⅝c; May, 70½@⅝c; July, 75c; September, 69¾@⅞c. Corn—March 61¾@⅞c; May, 62c; July, 61¾@⅞c. September, 59⅝c; December, 49½c. Oats—March, 43½c; May, 44¾c; July, 35¾c; September, 30¾@⅞c. Pork—May, $15.22½. Lard—May, $6.35 July, $6.50. Lard—March, $6.27½; May, $6.40; July, $6.50; September, $6.65. Ribs—March, $5.40; May, $5.40; July, ——; September, $5.62½. Flax—Cash and Northwestern, $1.72; Southwestern, $1.65; May, $1.73. Rye—March, 56½c; May, 57¾c; July, 57½c. Barley—Cash, 58@63½c. Timothy—March, $6.65. Clover—March, $8.50@9.50. Cash: Wheat—No. 2 red, 82½@84½c; No. 3 red, 79½@81½c; No. 2 hard winter, 75½@76c; No. 3 hard winter, 75½@76½c; No. 1 northern, 76¾@78c; No. 2 northern spring, 74½@77c; No. 3 spring, 74½@76½c. Corn—No. 3, 59c. Oats—No. 2, 44½@44c; No. 3, 44¼-.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

W. H. Bartlett, Chicago: A farm reserve of corn of 394,000,000 bus is only half that of last year, and nearly 100,000,000 bus below that of 1895, the lowest previous record. This represents not what is left from last year's crop, but the total amount on farms, including any reserves from previous crops. It means that farmers in four months since harvest have disposed of 906,000,000 bu from the 1901 crop in addition to all their reserves carried over from previous crops. During these four months 10,375,000 hogs have been marketed in the West, breaking all previous records by nearly 1,000,000 hogs. Hogs and cattle are still coming at an abnormal rate, prices are high and at the recent rate of feeding they would use up all the corn in the country in three months. It is eight months to a new crop. The season of hard farm work during which work animals must be fed grain is at hand. After hogs, cattle and horses are served where will the bear get corn to fill his short sales?

Broomhall estimates that Russia, the Danube and Argentine will be able to supply 96,000,000 bus of corn during the ensuing eight months. European requirements will be about 112,000 bus, leaving approximately 16,000,000 bus to be supplied by America, or 2,000,000 bus a month.

* * *

Bartlett, Frazier & Co., Chicago: A customer says: "I note there is not as much wheat, corn and oats altogether in farmers' hands now as there was corn alone a year ago. In four months hogs have eaten over two-thirds of our year's corn supply. We are eight months away from a new crop, with hogs prices relatively higher than corn. The hog is outbidding the bear for corn."

* * *

A. H. Farnum's Chicago morning gossip: The government report will show consumers and jobbers that supplies of grain in the West are very light. They won't be afraid to buy more freely, and in this way the report will help the market. The report estimates reserves of oats 198,000,000 bus, the smallest reserves ever reported, about 100,000,000 less than last year. The reserves of corn are under 400,000,000 bus, half what they were a year ago; the visible supply half what it was. Surely these figures are almost sensational with eight months before another crop. We raised 150,000,000 bus more wheat last year than in 1900, still we have only 20,000,000 bus more on hand than last year. This, with the shortage in corn and oats and the unpromising outlook for winter wheat makes wheat seem low enough.

* * *

N. H. Perrin, Chicago: Government report is bullish on wheat and I believe if we get a bulge early, wheat should be sold. Weather conditions will still rule the market. Corn and oats should do some better on the report, but remember that we have already had good prices.

EDITOR MURPHY

Of Dubuque Dies While Seated at Work.

Dubuque, Iowa, March 11.—John S. Murphy, for many years editor of the Dubuque Telegram and later of the Telegraph-Herald, died last evening while sitting at his table engaged in editorial work. He died literally in harness.

The paper being printed while he was dying contains his last published utterances.

Up to the moment of his death he had appeared to be in the best of health. His age was 57.

The name of John S. Murphy is known all over Iowa and the Northwest as that of the most uncompromising advocate of the 16 to 1 financial policy of the free silverites and an ardent supporter of Bryan. While many disagreed with his political and financial views, all gave him credit for honesty and sincerity of purpose. In his private life he was the soul of honor.

STRENGTH IN STOCKS

Was Visible During the Greater Part of Session.

Sugar and People's Gas Lifted One to Two Points.

Market Became Weaker and Closing Was Heavy.

New York, March 11.—The support extended to American stocks in the London market had a strengthening effect on the local dealings at the opening and there was no trace of yesterday's late selling movement. International stocks showed fractional improvements, particularly Pennsylvania and St. Paul. Colorado & Southern and Manhattan were pushed up sharply but Reading showed heaviness on apprehension regarding the labor outlook. The general market was quite active and decidedly firm.

Large buying orders were distributed in some of the low-priced specialties and when they bounded up strongly many high-priced stocks sympathized. Standard railroad issues, however, did not respond to any extent and there was some pressure against Missouri Pacific and the coalers which kept the general list active list within narrow limits. Advances elsewhere reached from 1 to 2½, including Colorado & Southern and the second preferred, Wisconsin Central stocks, the Virginia-Carolina Chemical stocks, Des Moines & Fort Dodge, St. Joe & Grand Island, Chicago Terminal preferred, Northwestern, Colorado Fuel, People's Gas and Pacific Mail.

The announcement of $1,250,000 gold would be transferred to San Francisco through the sub-treasury to finance the street railway deal started a general selling movement which cancelled or largely reduced the gains. The usual market leaders fell below yesterday's close and Missouri Pacific and Erie first preferred lost a point. Business was very active on the decline. Toward noon the selling decreased and there was some fitful rallies. Chicago Terminal preferred was pushed up anew to 37¼, the common stock and Cotton Oil also rising a point. Amalgamated Copper was lifted a point over last night and People's Gas 1½. The market became very dull at the rally. Bonds were steady.

The general market was practically inert and only obscure specialties moved. American Cotton Oil gained 1½ and the preferred 2 and American Central rose a point. There was a drop of 3½ in Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie pfd., and Detroit, Southern pfd., Manhattan Beach, American Snuff, American Smelting pfd., Westinghouse Electric and American agricultural chemical lost one to two points. Stocks became firmer all around and this was slightly increased, purchase of the grangers bringing St. Paul and Rock Island up to the highest. Some other prominent stocks showed marked strength including Sugar and People's Gas, which were 1 to 2 points better. Renewed purchases lifted Wisconsin Central stocks 2 @3, Virginia-Carolina Chemical pfd, 2½, and Cotton Oil pfd. 3; New York, New Haven & Hartford advanced 3 to 2½. American Ice dropped 2 points.

The market sagged under a dribbling of offers which made only a slight impression on the general list. There was a slight covering movement by shorts, but the closing was dull and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

New York to B. E. Baker.—The Stock Holder says the signs of promise are still for a steady if not active market. There will be more interest in the money position with banks' surplus reserves approximating the vanishing point, and fears of hardening rates, even if not realized, will not be without effect upon the speculation.

* * *

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.—There is talk of an increasing firmness in money and the disaster to Lord Methuen in South Africa is likely to add to the demand for gold. These developments may send stocks somewhat lower, in which even conservative observers believe they should be bought. One result of the tightening of money the war news and rumors of labor trouble is a large increase in the short interest which is now more extensive than any time in several weeks, especially in coalers, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio and United States Steel stocks.

* * *

Town Topics.—A feverish and spotty market is to be looked for, but tangible evidence of inside support will not be lacking in the Northwest, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and St. Paul. The Gates' contingent is very bullish on Union Pacific. Holders of Steel preferred should average around 94. There is considerable short interest in Atchison, Readings, and Erie and these should be bought for a turn on any further dip. Nothing yet decided on Amalgamated dividend, but insiders are selling on all firm spots.

* * *

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.—The market was irregular, but on the whole exhibited strength. As for some time past, the strength was in specialties and apparently due to pool buying in spots. A characteristic of the market continues to be the absence of any great selling pressure from long stocks. Considering the fact that call money loaned as high as 4½ per cent, published condition of the New York banks with loans of over $600,000,000, and reserves practically exhausted, offers very little hope for anything but stiff rates for money, this absence of selling pressure is, we think rather remarkable. The conditions for the growing crop today are more unfavorable by reason of springlike weather and rains where most needed.

THE COPPER STOCKS.

Boston, March 11.—The principal feature today was the break in Osceola. Prices were lower all around; the principal sellers were local traders and the lake a buyer. We believe there will be no more dividends for the present. The Standard Oil people will try to get the price as low as possible and then gobble it up into the Amalgamated. The same applies to Tamarack. We believe these two as far as the mines themselves are concerned are the two cheapest lake stocks, but the present manipulation wi.. be on the bear side. Remember there are only 96,000 shares of Osceola and 60,000 shares of Tamarack. Manipulation of Centennial, Tri-Mountain and Trinity by Lawson brokers was very quiet today and no material change in prices. We don't think there is any hurry about buying of the coppers and in spite of everything should prefer not to tie up that blind, Amalgamated.

Following are the closing quotations of copper stocks at Boston today, reported by W. H. Laidley & Co., Spalding hotel:

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, March 11.—Cotton opened firm with prices 2 to 5 points higher and further improved after the call on firmer Liverpool cables. May reached 8.80 and July 8.86, after which heavy selling by a prominent commission house sent the whole market off 5 points to below the opening figures. Then on a small estimate from Boston for tomorrow's receipts, prices steadied up. Trading was active.

STEADFAST

Are the British In Determination to Overthrow Boers.

London, March 11.—Expressions of steadfastness have today succeeded the expressions of humiliation which were heard here yesterday on the publication of the news of Gen. Methuen's disaster. There is little disposition to minimize the incident, but everywhere is heard the determination to maintain the tradition that blows serve to strengthen and stiffen British resolution. Lord Rosebery struck the popular note today in a speech before the Glasgow students. He admitted that it was heart-breaking, after all the expenditure of life, time and money, but he added:

"It will not dishearten us. We have got to see this thing through. We must take blows which fortune deals us with equanimity, showing ourselves worthy of better fortunes."

Lord Rosebery expressed the hope that more prosperous times were in store, and that in the future "it would be our proud memory that when our country is through the storm, we did not for a moment flinch and were not for an instant dismayed."

Reports from the continent that the defeat of Gen. Methuen was followed up by another fight, also favorable to the Boers, occasions some anxiety, owing to the absence of news from Gen. Grenfell's column of 1300 men, which left Klerksdorp to join Gen. Methuen. It is thought that possibly Gen. Delarey may have attacked Grenfell.

The war secretary, Mr. Brodrick, when asked in the house of commons today, what steps had been taken, in view of the success of the Boers against Gen. Methuen, to send Lord Kitchener reinforcements, said 6000 yeomanry would be immediately embarked with large drafts of cavalry and infantry. Lord Kitchener would be given all the assistance he asked for.

ADMISSION OF WHEAT

Into France Discussed By Our Consul at Marseilles.

The Trade Is Deeply Concerned About the New Law.

Commercial Relations Between Spain and United States Revived.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, March 11.—(Special to he Herald.)—Robert P. Skinner, United States consul general at Marseilles, under date of Feb. 11, writes to the state department an interesting letter relative to the temporary admission of wheat into France.

Consul General Skinner, in his communication to the state department, says:

The important questions involved in the proposed modification of the regime governing the temporary admission of wheat into France have been settled by the promulgation by the president, on Feb. 4, of the new law, which had been approved by the senate and the chamber of deputies.

Under the terms of the old law, an exchange of money was not essential to secure a certificate of importation. Upon the arrival of foreign wheat in the bonded warehouses, a certificate of importation was issued, and the wheat itself was cleared for consumption without payment of duty, upon the delivery into the bonded warehouses of an equivalent of the manufactured product of other wheat. The whole transaction became a matter of bookkeeping, and the certificates in the hands of importers had a fluctuating market value, as they could be transferred to exporting millers. Thus, the importer who was expected to pay 7 francs per 100 kilograms ($1.35 per 220 pounds) upon foreign wheat, after selling the certificates for from 1 to 3 francs (19.3 to 57.9 cents), was practically enabled to defeat the tariff law to just the amount for which he disposed of his certificate upon the market. Under the new law, only the actual exportation of the merchandise will be considered justification for the reimbursement of the certificates, and the amount of the duty must in all cases be paid in cash upon the arrival of the wheat.

The wheat and flour trade is deeply concerned about the new law, as methods of evading its terms have been suggested and will doubtless be passed upon by the courts in due time. If the trafficking in the certificates of importation is effectually prevented by the law, the effect will be to stiffen the

MOTHER'S FRIEND

There is Danger in Deafness.

The above cut illustrates how a distinguished lawyer and politician was seriously injured because he could not readily hear the ordinary sounds of the street.

This accident or incident is one to which many who are hard of hearing are frequently exposed.

Two acquaintances of the writer were run down and killed by the cars in one year. Both had catarrh of the head, which had extended up the eustachian tubes, leading from the throat to the middle ear, and were quite hard of hearing. In both cases the coroner's jury decided that they came to their death because of inability to hear and heed signals that were intended for them. What happened to them is of frequent occurrence, and in three cases out of four might have been prevented by the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets.

Catarrh of the tubes leading from the throat to the middle ear, is the cause of three-fourths of all the deafness. Stuart's Catarrh Tablets will cure the catarrh and thus restore hearing.

That they actually do this is a fact of daily occurrence, as attested by such letters as the following:

"I suffered for years from catarrh deafness and spent hundreds of dollars with specialists without relief. Stuart's Catarrh Tablets completely cured my catarrh in a few weeks and today I can hear as well as I ever could.—James W. Brown."

Mr. C. R. Rembrandt, of Rochester, N. Y., says: "I have suffered much from catarrh of the head, throat and stomach. I used sprays, inhalers and powders for months at a time with only slight relief and had no hope of cure. I had not the means to make a change of climate, which seemed my only chance of cure. last spring I read an account of some remarkable cures made by Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and promptly bought a 50-cent box from my druggist and obtained such positive benefit from that one package that I continued to use them daily until I now consider myself entirely free from the disgusting annoyance of catarrh; my head is clear, my digestion all I could ask and my hearing which had begun to fail as a result of the catarrh, has greatly improved until I can hear as well as ever."

Mrs. June Barlow, the well known modiste, says: "I finally had to give up personal attention to my customers, because of my increasing deafness and in consequence many of them went elsewhere. I was in despair for specialists seemed powerless to help me. Stuart's Catarrh Tablets cured me in just a little while so completely that now I hear as well as ever."

Army Surgeon C. S. Beverly became so deaf from catarrh that he was forced to resign his position, and abandon his profession. He says: "Of course my inherent professional prejudice was hard to overcome but knowing the great benefit you had received, my dear general, through the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, I used them. The great relief I experienced was truly astonishing. I am now entirely cured and go back to my old post next month."

Mr. F. Mitchell Hawes, the famous barytone, in a personal letter to a friend said: "I am going back to my beloved profession next month. This will surprise you I know, for when I last saw you I never expected to sing again, but I am entirely cured of my catarrh and my hearing is now as acute as ever. I used Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and in three weeks they had done for me more than all the specialists to whom I paid thousands of dollars, and now I am entirely well."

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are for sale at every drug store for 50 cents a box. Write to F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich., for their free book on catarrh and its cure.

AT CLOQUET.

Albert Marchand Committed Suicide By Shooting Himself.

Cloquet, Minn., March 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Albert Marchand, residing with his brother Bert Marchand, on the latter's farm, about one mile out of the village, committed suicide yesterday by the shotgun route. He was unmarried, about 22 or 23 years old, and up to the time of committing the fatal act, seemed in good health, and spirits. His brother with his wife came to town yesterday and left Albert at home with the children. On their return they found the children alone in the house, and on asking where Albert was, were told that he went out, and that the children had heard a loud noise in the hen house. Upon investigation it was found that Albert had climbed into a little loft over the hen house, and had taken his own life. The body lay upon the floor, the butt of the gun resting between the feet and the muzzle toward the mouth. The head of the unfortunate man was nearly blown off his shoulders, only the lower jaw and part of the ears remaining. The roof of the structure was spattered with blood and brains.

It is fitted out with plate glass mirrors and the latest patented Koch chairs. The parlor is on Cloquet avenue, just west of Ninth street.

RAILROAD STRIKE.

Missoula, Mont., March 10.—The Rocky mountain freight division of the Northern Pacific, from Helena and Butte to Hope, Idaho, is tied up by a strike called by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and Switchmen's union. The trouble originated over a train crew being discharged some days ago, because it refused to run around another crew.

No trains are moving today, except the mails.

YERKES SUCCEEDS AT LAST.

London, March 10.—After many months of negotiations Charles T. Yerkes has concluded a deal with the Baker Street Waterloo railway, giving him control of four different underground railroads.

APPEAL IN VAIN

Congress Will Not Act In the Anti-Merger Cases.

Attorney General Cannot Shift Responsibility In That Way.

It Would Be Radical Departure From Government's Policy.

Washington, March 11.—There will be several meetings of the Minnesota delegation to consider Attorney General Douglass' appeal and the memorial of the state legislature asking congress to come to the relief of the attorney general in the anti-merger cases.

While some of the members of the house and the two senators express a perfect willingness to aid the state's legal representatives to the fullest possible extent, the proposition of Attorney General Douglas and the petition of the state legislature cannot and will not be seriously entertained by congress.

In the first place, it proposes an entirely new departure from the policy of the government since the constitution was adopted by extending federal jurisdiction to a class of cases where the parties who are made defendants are residents of the state bringing the action.

Such a proposition will be fought tooth and nail by both the judiciary committees of the senate and house, and if it ever came into either branch of congress it would precipitate a discussion that would involve the entire policy and theory of federation.

The Southern Democrats would stay in Washington for a year discussing the invasion of the state's rights proposed by any such legislation.

No political party could afford to make an issue of the general extension of the jurisdiction of federal courts.

There is a very general prejudice against extending federal jurisdiction to the United States courts, and the labor organizations all over the country have petitioned congress against any extension.

When the bill to protect the president from anarchy was up in the senate, Senator Bacon of Georgia talked for days against extending the jurisdiction of the federal courts.

It looks as if Attorney General Douglas was trying to shift the responsibility onto congress, inasmuch as the state has not undertaken to get service and commence suit on the officials of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Northern Securities company, who are citizens of and have residence in the state of Minnesota.

OF BRAZIL

Dr. Rodriguez Alves Has Just Been Elected President.

New York, March 11.—Senor A. Fontoura Xavier, Brazilian consul general in this city, has received a private cable dispatch from Rio Janeiro announcing the election of Dr. Francisco De Paula Rodriguez Alves as president of Brazil.

Dr. Rodriguez Alves, for many years has been a conconspicuous figure in the politics of Brazil. He is a native of the state of Sao Paulo and is now governor of that progressive and rich state. He resigned a federal senatorship to become governor.

As a financier it is said by his friends that Dr. Rodriguez Alves has no superior in South America. His ability was recognized by President Piexito, who apointed him minister of finance in his cabinet. President Moraes retained him in that place.

The president-elect is a lawyer and has occupied a leading place at the bar. He has been elected as a candidate of the Republican party and his election is considered a great triumph because of the high standing and prominence of his defeated opponent, Dr. Ubaldino Do Amaral.

Dr. Rodriguez Alves will be inaugurated on Nov. 15, the anniversary of the proclamation of Brazil's independence. The tenure of office is four years.

Constipated Old Age

Isn't it too bad that so many people, when they get old, get cranky and rickety and mean, and don't feel right toward themselves or anybody else; yet it need not be so.

"Cascarets make me feel so light-hearted and lively, that though I have seen three score and three, a few more scores I yetigay age."—James S. Millar, Villa Park Cal.

"For many years I have been troubled with constipation. I used one 25c and two 50c boxes of Cascarets and they have effected a permanent cure. Since my discharge from the army in 1865, I have never before found a lasting remedy."—H J. Metzvern, 90 Chapline Street, Wheeling, W. Va

"I was troubled with something that baffled the skill of physicians for 25 years; I used five boxes of Cascarets and am in better health than ever before."—C. C. Redick, Chase City, Va.

"Six month's ago I took Cascarets for constipation contracted during the War of the Rebellion. The result is wonderful and I advise all old soldiers to try them."—Jas. Putman, late Capt. 33rd Ill., Haney, Wis.

"I was feeling bad, losing flesh, had dull headache, cold feet, and couldn't sleep well. I took Cascarets, and in four weeks gained 18 pounds, am feeling fine now."—A. B. Story, veteran Mexican and Civil Wars, Epworth, Ia.

"I have been using Cascarets for some time for constipation, and their greatest benefit has been to cure me of asthma. I am in my 80th year and had been suffering with asthma for years."—T. M. White, Bob Lee, Georgia.

All old people's muscles get weak and flabby, and it's the same with the muscular walls of their intestines as with the muscles of their arms. When the bowels grow weak, the old folks get constipated, billous, sick, helpless, irritable, and that's the chief cause of their death. Old folks should take Cascarets Candy Cathartic bowel tonic, keep their liver lively, their bowels regular and strong, and live to be a hundred.

CORRUPTION

Charged to Minister Wu and as Promptly Denied.

Pekin, March 11.—A prominent Manchu censor has memorialized the throne for the removal of uW Ting Fang, the Chinese minister to the United States.

The censor asserts that Wu Ting Fang corraptly retained, ostensibly for repairs to the Chinese legation in Washington $80,000 of the Tien Tsin silver refunded by the American government.

According to a dispatch from Washington, dated Jan. 23, Secretary Hay that day handed to Minister Wu Ting Fang a draft on the United States treasury for $376,600, the value of the silver bullion captured by American marines at Tien Tsin. The Washington dispatch continued that as Minister Wu was charged with the payment of salaries of the Chinese consuls in the United States, and with defraying the expenses of the Chinese legations in Washington, Lima and Madrid, it was believed the money would be applied to those purposes.

Washington, March 10.—Minister Wu said last night that he promptly informed his government as soon as the United States turned over to him the Tien Tsin silver fund and the money was placed at its disposal.

An acknowledgment was received by telegraph. Not one cent of the fund, Mr. Wu said, could be misappropriated, and if any portion of it were to be used for any purpose whatever this could be done only by the sanction of the Chinese government. The minister has not heard officially of the presentation of the memorial for his removal, but he treats the matter very lightly. There is, he says, no foundation for the statement that he retained $80,000 from the fund for repairs to the legation in Washington.

There has been some talk of building a new Chinese legation quarters in Washington recently, but Minister Wu declined to make any statement touching intentions in that direction.

THE POPE

Urges Mgr. Sbaretti to Conciliate Americans In Philippines.

New oYrk, March 11.—When the pope received Monsignor Sbaretti Monday, before the departure of the latter for the Philippines, he urged him to make every effort to work with and conciliate the Americans, from whom, including President Roosevelt himself, says the Rome correspondent of the Tribune, the papal government had received such evident marks of friendliness.

The words of the portiff are the more important, since he has recently received many warm petitions from the friars and their protectors urging him to maintain their moral and material supremacy in the Philippines and recommending him especially to prevent their removal.

Several cardinals consider that if Washington insists the friars must ultimately be gradually withdrawn.

DELIGHTED.

William Redmond Pleased With Defeat of the British.

New York, March 11.—Regarding news of the capture by the Boers of Lieut. Gen. Lord Methuen, William Redmond, who is in this city in the interests of the Irish nationalists, is quoted as having said:

"I am not at all surprised and I need not say I am quite delighted. I am proud of the fact that I was the leader in all the divisions in the house of commons against the war when it first broke out in 1899.

"The Irish members have, I need hardly say, fought the war policy of the British government, all through.

"The Irish nation has been solidly on the side of the Boers. We would not accept our own liberty at the price of sanctioning the oppression of the Boers or any other race."

UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Illinois Anti-Trust Statute So Declared.

Washington, March 10.—The United States supreme court today decided the Illinois anti-trust statute to be unconstitutional because of the provision of the law exempting agricultural products and live stock from the operations of the law. The decision was rendered in the case of Thomas Connelly and others against the Union Sewer Pipe company, of Ohio, and was delivered by Justice Harlan.

ROBERTS EXONERATED.

special law, authorize municipal corporations to levy assessments for local improvements upon the property fronting upon such improvements, or upon the property benefited thereby, or both, without regard to a cash valuation, in such manner as the legislature may prescribe.

There may be levied and collected an annual tax upon franchises granted by public authority, in addition to the tax on the real property and other personal property of the person or corporation holding such franchise, or in lieu of the tax on such franchise and the personal property used in connection with the same there may be imposed such tax upon the gross earnings of the person or corporation holding such franchise as the legislature may determine; and said tax shall be apportioned between the state, counties and municipalities where the said franchise is exercised, in the same manner as the revenues from real estate taxes are apportioned.

A transfer tax not to exceed 5 per centum may be levied and collected upon the estates of all decedents above a fixed and specified sum, which tax may be uniform, graded or progressive.

There may be levied and collected a registry tax upon all real estate mortgages, which shall be in lieu of all other taxes on the debt secured by such mortgages, and a tax upon the income from all credits owned by persons or corporations, as such credits are now, or may be hereafter defined by law, and also on the income from all personal property, and also upon the income of all persons in this state above the sum of $1000 per annum, not arising from such credits or personal property, or from property otherwise taxed in this state. Such income tax shall be uniform throughout the state, and shall be levied at a rate not to exceed 10 per centum upon the income from such credits or personal property, and at a rate not exceeding 4 per centum upon such other income.

Laws shall be passed taxing all real and personal property; provided, that credits and personal property shall not be subject to other taxation than the income or registry tax herein authorized, while the law imposing such income or registry tax shall be in force; provided, the public burying grounds, public schools, public hospitals, public library associations, colleges, universities and all seminaries of learning, all churches and church property, used exclusively for religious purposes, and personal property to an amount not exceeding three hundred dollars ($300) of each individual, shall be exempt from taxation, but such personal exemption shall not be allowed to more than one member of the same family.

Provided further, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to affect, modify or repeal any law providing for the taxation of the gross earnings of railroads.

Senator Baldwin's bill arranging for the taxation of foreign corporations doing business in this state passed the house with only four votes against it, but it died on the way to the senate because of the adjournment. It was a little curious that of the four votes against it three were cast by Duluth members, Messrs. Alford, Mallory and Miller voting against it and Messrs Laybourn and Pugh not voting upon it, though they were present.

* * *

Among the bills that expired because of the adjournment were Mr. Bury's bill permitting Lake county to build a jail, and Mr. Alford's bill cutting down the fees paid peace officers for bringing prisoners to the county jail at Duluth.

* * *

The railroad committee never got a chance to bring in its divided report on the Halvorson ore rate bill. Eight members of the committee comprising a majority and including Senators Hawkins, Stockton, Potter, Sheehan, Buckman, D. D. Jones, E. J. Jones and J. H. Smith, voted to indefinitely postpone the bill. There was to have been a minority report recommending the bill to pass, signed by Senators Baldwin, Thompson, Miller, Halvorson, Sivright, Jepson and McGovern. Had the bill been reported Senator Baldwin and other friends of the measure had votes enough pledged to pass it under a suspension of the rules, which would have required forty-two votes. However, the hurried adjournment cut off the fight.

* * *

An attempt was made in the house to pass the senate bill taking the state university out of the hands of the board of control, but it was impossible to suspend the rules, so the bill was referred to its proper committee. This means, of course, that the bill is dead, as the committee will never meet or report. Mr. Laybourne opposed it because it left the normal schools in the hands of the board of control, and Mr. Mallory said that there were a lot of the members last winter that were anxious to get the board of control, and now they would have to keep it until they were ready to wipe it out altogether.

* * *

Speaker Dowling yesterday afternoon got a bill in appropriating $25,000 to pay for publishing the session laws in the newspapers, but it fell by the wayside. He tried to get unanimous consent to introduce it, and Mr. Roberts, of Hennepin, blocked that move. Then the rules were suspended to get the bill in, but they could not be suspended again to pass it.

* * *

When the adjournment came in both houses there were lawmakers struggling to get their pet little woodchucks through, but the majority wanted to quit, and quit they did. There was nothing to do today but to approve the journal and draw pay.

* * *

The attempt that was made to get through a bill loosening the restrictions on the adoption of constitutional amendments by permitting them to go through with a majority of the votes cast upon them instead of a majority of the votes cast at the election, failed in the house, though the senate passed the bill.

REVIEW OF SESSION

It Was Remarkable For What Was Not Done.

It Is a Hard Blow to the Republican Party.

St. Paul, March 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—St. Paul is deserted by legislators today. They have nearly all departed, and by this time have settled down into simple, everyday citizens. In most cases they are willing to sink their prominence as members of the legislature into the obscurity and oblivion of private life, for while on every hand there are many attempts to prove that the special session was not so bad after all, there are no attempts to prove that it was an excellent thing in its results.

The session was more remarkable for what was not done than for what was done. That which was done is small in size and doubtful in value. That which was not done is much larger and of greater or less value, depending upon the way in which it is regarded.

The session was called to consider a tax code and a set of constitutional amendments submitted by a tax commission appointed by Governor Van Sant under a law made by the same legislature last winter at the regular session. The law called upon the tax commission to create a just and equitable system of taxation of all forms of property, and to submit its code, together with such constitutional amendments as might be necessary to carry it into effect, at the next general or special session. By agreement the regular session adjournment some days earlier than usual, and after long hesitation Governor Van Sant called the special session for Feb. 4. In his proclamation he said that it was to consider the tax code and such other matters as might properly come up.

It was evident when the session began that there was strong opposition to the tax code, but before the sentiment of the legislature was crystallized it seemed likely that the code would go through in some form. Later this grew more and more doubtful, but at no time prior to the taking of the vote on the bill in the house was there an absolute certainty one way or the other. The result when the vote was taken was so close that those who had been in doubt or who had made the wrong guess as to the outcome felt endorsed.

Duluth sent its delegation down strongly impressed with the feeling that in two points at least the proposed code was dangerous. These points were the propositions to tax grain in elevators and vessel property at their full value. At the same time the Duluth delegation partook in some measure of the general feeling that the main provisions of the code, particularly the so-called "drastic and inquisitorial" features, were likely to prove bad. But at the beginning the Duluth delegation centered its efforts on the work of getting the code amended so as to be less harmful to Duluth.

BUILDING DESTROYED

Chicago, March 12.—Frost leaving the ground caused the destrucion of a new four-story brick building, valued at $60,000, here today. The structure, owned by the H. J. Heinz Co., was begun last December. Apparently sufficient calculation of the then frost hardened earth was not taken, according to the city building commissioner. The weather recently has been sufficiently warm to soften the ground, and the foundation of the structure sank perceptibly today. A cordon of police was drawn around the building, and shortly afterwards one corner of the building fell. It was then determined to pull down the other walls, and the work of completing the destruction was begun by firemen at once. It is stated that they only hastened what would have occurred within a few hours.

FERGUS FALLS MAN KILLED

St. Paul, March 12.—A Fergus Falls, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: B. Heatherington, a deaf and dumb man, who has resided here for several years, was struck by a Great Northern train as it was entering the yards this morning and killed almost instantly. Heatherington's eyesight was good, but he stepped on the track and faced the train, which was too heavy to be stopped. It looked like a case of suicide.

BODIES OF MINERS FOUND

Milwaukee, March 12.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Negaunee, Mich., says: The bodies of four of the ten victims of the Negaunee mine disaster of Jan. 7 were recovered today. Some of the other bodies are in view of the workmen, and it is expected that all will be recovered within the next twenty-four hours. The bodies are mutilated beyond recognition. The drift where the bodies are is in a treacherous condition, owing to quicksand.

A NEW ARMORY AT ST. PAUL

St. Paul, March 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Van Sant has signed the bill allowing cities to issue bonds for the purpose of building armories for the National Guard and the St. Paul companies will make an effort to secure a new armory. The proposition favored by the guardsmen is to donate the site of the present armory on condition that the city issue bonds to such an amount that the interest and cost of maintenance will be something less than the present appropriation of $4000 per year, which is paid by the city for the lease of the present building.

TO COMPROMISE ON TARIFF

Washington, March 1.—There are indications that the Republicans of the house will compromise on Cuban reciprocity, the basis being a 20 per cent reduction, to continue for two years. Leaders on both sides have been conferring during the afternoon with a view to reaching an agreement on these lines. The overtures of compromise are to be considered by three Republicans from each side, namely: For the ways and means, Chairman Payne, Representatives Dalzell and Cannon; for the opposition to the ways and means, and Representatives Dick (O.), Fordney (Mich.) and Morris (Minn.)

A FATAL LAMP EXPLOSION

St. Paul, March 12.—An Ishpeming, Mich., special to the Dispatch says: A lamp exploded last night, between 11 and 12 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Marie Bankson, in this city. Her daughter, aged 38 years, was burned to death and the mother and three sons were more or less seriously burned, though all will recover. The blaze was extinguished without much damage to the house.

POLITICIAN SHOT HIMSELF

St. Joseph, Mo., March 12.—Charles Michaelis, a retired merchant and prominent politician, committed suicide last night at his home in this city by shooting himself through the right temple. Continued illness and despondency over the recent death of his wife are supposed to have been the causes which led to the suicide. Michaelis was 68 years old and a veteran of the civil war and prominent in G. A. R. circles.

AS LARGE AS EVER

Coal Men Find No Decrease In This Year's Consumption.

On the Contrary Northwest Has Used More Anthracite.

Coal men have complained this winter about mild weather and slow sales. Yet when they come to take stock of what anthracite coal they have left on dock they have to admit that the trade here has been larger than ever before. They hardly realized it themselves. Indeed, they were so hypnotized by the balmy weather that it would have been difficult to convince them that they were doing such a large business.

Prices have been about the same as last winter, and yet there has been a material increase in the consumption in the Northwest. Coal men attribute this fact to a variety of causes, all grouped under the head of prosperity. There are more people to keep warm. More people burn coal out of the total of fuel-consumers, and fewer burn wood. But above all, it is said, there is in prosperous times that disposition to have a warm house at all hazards. The fact that the weather is warmer and less coal is required leads many people to keep their houses warmer than they would if times were not so prosperous, or if more coal had to be burned to keep warm.

The amount of anthracite coal on the fifteen docks at the head of the lakes at this time is estimtaed to be not much over 100,000 tons. Considering the numerous grades of coal that are carried, and the number of docks among which the total amount is distributed, it is believed that the stocks for this time of the year are quite light. Ordinarily some cold weather would still be looked for before the stocks could be replenished by water. Whatever the weather may be the demand during the rest of the winter season is likely to reduce the stocks on most docks to the minimum stage before the fires in plants and furnaces are allowed to go out.

As an indication of the active trade in anthracite coal this winter, it is pointed out that the receipts of hard coal last season were about 650,000 tons. Some estimate it at 680,000 tons, and Capt. Gaillard put it at 900,000 tons. But taking 700,000 tons as a fair figure, it will be seen that the stocks remaining constitute only about 14 per cent of the total receipts by lake. The receipts have varied from 432,000 tons during the past seven or eight years to the amount received last season. Usually it has run between 500,000 and 600,000 tons.

Only about 10 per cent of the receipts of soft coal of all kind remains on the docks here. These receipts amounted to approximately 2,000,000 tons, and scarcely 200,000 tons of commercial and blacksmith coal are still on hand. As far as the commercial coal is concerned all that is on hand here is owned by the railroads running in here, and even some logging roads have been obliged to have their supplies shipped in all-rail from the mines.

SENSATIONAL

Lawsuit Between Two Well Known Mandan Men Begins.

Mandan, N. D., March 12.—A very sensational law suit has been begun by C. H. Brown against Dr. Goeschel, both of this city and well known throughout the state. Some time ago Dr. Goeschel entered a claim against Mr. Brown for fees for medical services rendered to Mrs. Brown. Mr. Brown filed a counter claim for $1000 against the doctor as damages for alleged criminal assault upon his wife. Both parties are very resolute and a bitter legal contest is likely to ensue.

NEW BASIS

Des Moines, March 12.—By a vote of 33 to 9 the senate has passed the ways and means committee bill for the taxation of railroad property on a basis of stocks and bonds, net and gross earnings and physical condition. The measure requires publicity of the records of the executive council in making the assessment, and its reasons for reaching results. An effort to substitute the Nichols' stocks and bonds law of Ohio for the committee measure failed.

It is predicted that the measure will pass the house also. The house committee on railroads has voted to report for passage the Carter bill, reducing the passenger fare on railroads in Iowa to 2 cents a mile, and to report without recommendation the Donahue bill to require railroads to furnish all public officials with passes.

TRIP POSTPONED.

New York, March 12.—Count Von Waldersee has postponed his journey to the United States for a year, says a Herald dispatch from Berlin. An amusing story is going about to the effect that Countess Von Waldersee reading the accounts of what happened to Prince Henry and the almost superhuman efforts he was called upon to make during his visit, has become much alarmed lest anything like it should fall to her husband's share, so the story goes. Countess Von Waldersee, who is anxious about her husband's health, resolved that the American trip, about which she was enthusiastic recently, be deferred until the American pro-German enthusiasts have time to cool off.

TWENTY THOUSAND

Are Idle In Boston on Account of Strike.

Business Men Staggered By the Situation.

Boston, March 12.—The strike of 600 New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad freight handlers, which began last Saturday, has extended until now there are 20,000 men idle in this city. Of these, 3000 to 5000 were employed by manufacturing concerns, which have been compelled to shut down because of difficulty in handling freight. The various lines of industry directly reached by the strike include freight handlers, team drivers, wool handlers, longshoremen and railway switchmen. If the threats of the strike leaders are borne out, today will see the movement extended to the building trades union and to unions connected with the foreign steamship traffic.

Business men of the city seem to be staggered by the extent of the strike. Many conferences have been held, the influence of the civic federation has been invoked, and the state board of arbitration has tried to find a ground for agreement between the parties at war, but apparently there is little prospect of settlement.

There is some hope that a meeting arranged by Governor Crane between the labor leaders, railroad officials and merchants, to be held at the state house today, will show some way out.

The New York, New Haven & Hartford road and the Boston & Albany systems of the New York Central have forces adequate to handle all traffic. There is no trouble over the movement of outgoing freight, but incoming merchandise has accumulated.

At the docks of the steamship lines doing a coastwise business great quantities of merchandise are piled up and the wharves are choked. The longshoremen are out and the material cannot be moved. The express companies are tied up and there is a threat that the hack drivers will join the strike if an issue is made because they carry passengers with trunks, large parcels or matter which should go by express. The strike of the coal teamsters presents one of the most alarming features of the trouble, as it menaces not only many industries, but also the welfare of householders and especially the people in the poorer quarters of the city.

KRUGER'S GREAT FAITH

Oom Paul Is More Confident Than Ever of the Ultimate Triumph of the Boer Cause In South Africa.

New York, March 12.—A dispatch from Utrecht over the signature of former President Paul Kruger to the American and Journal says:

"There will be more good news yet from Delarey. This victory of his reminds me of Gen. Botha's allusion a year ago to the miracle of faith that saved Daniel out of the lion's den.

"My confidence in the ultimate triumph of the Boer cause could not be greater than it is now, and, indeed, it never has been shaken.

"I hope England will show that she sees her folly of attempting to subdue the Boer race by recognizing it now and by restoring independence to the Transvaal republics. By doing this she will spare herself as well as the Boers further bloodshed and expense and will retain the republics as friendly neighbors."

A RICH GOLD STRIKE

Excites Miners of Dawson and Vicinity Who Make a Stampede to Pelly River, the Location of New Find.

Tacoma, March 12.—Dawson and towns adjacent are excited over an important gold strike made in February on a tributary of the Pelly river, between that stream and Yukon, forty miles from Fort Selkirk. Out-coming miners say dirt running as high as $700 per pan was taken out. When the news reached Dawson the stampede to Koyakuk stopped immediately and scores of miners started for Pelly river. The discovery was made by Dick Butler, an old Yukoner, who staked a discovery claim and then went out to Yukon to spread the news.

Up to March 1, about 200 claims had been staked. Prospecting showed that most of them were rich in gold from the surface down.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH

Of a Young Woman Living Near Crookston Has Caused Great Excitement and an Investigation Will Follow.

Crookston, Minn., March 12.—The citizens of Sullivan township, northwest of this city, are much wrought up over the mysterious death of a Miss Hendrickson, whose parents are reputable and prosperous farmers of the township.

Miss Hendrickson has been employed for the past two years as a domestic in the family of Alfred Peterson, an influential farmer in the township.

About two weeks ago she was taken sick and a doctor was summoned, but when he arrived he was told that his services would be of no avail, and he returned without seeing the patient. Shortly after Miss Hendrickson died.

Her parents now claim that they had no knowledge of her sickness until they learned of her death. They have made complaint to County Attorney Rowe, asking to have the body exhumed. He has summoned witnesses, and will make an investigation.

GROWS GRAVE.

Strike Situation on Northern Pacific Is More Complicated.

Butte, Mont., March 12.—A special to the Miner from Missoula says: The strike situation on the Rocky Mountain division of the Northern Pacific has assumed a graver aspect. The committee of the Trainmen and Switchmen's Union called out the trainmen and switchmen of the Helena, Butte and Wallace yards and on all work trains operating between Deer Lodge and Thompson's Falls. But four trains have moved out of the yards since Monday, those being made up by the yardmaster and his assistant and taken out by new men. Assistant General Superintendent Law, of the Northern Pacific, has arrived in Missoula as the representative of General Superintendent Kimberly. Mr. Law was waited upon by a committee of the strikers, but nothing decisive was done. A conference with the strikers will be held this afternoon when Mr. Law will take up the grievances of the men.

FITZ KICKS

On Proposed Change of Date For Big Fight.

New York, March 12.—There will be a hitch in the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight if it is awarded to San Francisco promoters and they wish to pull it off in April instead of May, as called for by the articles of agreement, says the World. It has been intimated that the date might be brought forward in order to catch the racing season.

Fitzsimmons wanted three months to train for the fight, and when articles were signed Feb. 15, the date was set at May 15. In regard to the proposed change Fitzsimmons is quoted as saying:

"Not for me. I am going to be in condition for this fight and I am not going to cut one week off of what I think is the proper training, to suit anybody. I am going to win and then I am going to retire and die the champion.

"If it is a question of money or a chance to win the fight I will throw away the money before I will throw away my chances."

ALTGELD IS DEAD

Former Illinois Governor Expires at Joliet.

Had Made a Strong Speech at Pro-Boer Meeting.

Joliet, Ill., March 12.—Former Governor John P. Altgeld died in this city at the Hotel Munroe this morning at 7:09 o'clock. He had been unconscious since midnight.

Mr. Altgeld was the principal speaker at a pro-Boer mass meeting last night in the Joliet theater. Just at the close of his speech a sudden dizziness seized him and he was assisted from the stage. The meeting proceeded, the audience not realizing what had happened. Mr. Altgeld was taken to the door of the theater, where he was seized by a spasm. This continued for nearly an hour and was so violent he could not be removed meanwhile to the hotel.

Physicians were hastily summoned, and when the vomiting had been checked Mr. Altgeld was carried to the Hotel Munroe, across the street. He retained consciousness and urged the newspaper men not to publish anything concerning the occurrence lest it should needlessly alarm his wife. Shortly before midnight he became unconscious, remaining in that condition until death.

At 3:41 this morning it was thought he had died, but he revived, and from that time until shortly before the end showed wonderful vitality, although remaining motionless.

The medical men here had a banquet last night, at which Dr. J. B. Herrick, of the Rush Medical college, of Chicago, delivered a lecture on heart disease. He and other physicians were called from the banquet to attend the patient. They remained with him the remainder of the night. They employed all known means to restore respiration, but to no purpose. The cause of death given is cerebral hemorrhages. The vomiting was at first supposed to indicate ptomaine poisoning, but it was later determined that this was a manifestation of the brain trouble. The physicians desire to hold a post-mortem if the relatives will agree.

Mr. Altgeld came to Joliet yesterday afternoon, having been advertised as the principal orator of the big Will county pro-Boer meeting. He said he was not in the best of health, being troubled by some apparently unimportant stomach ailment. He would not allow this to interfere with his engagement, however, his great interest in the South African struggle having been heightened by the announcement of the Boer success in the capture of Gen. Methuen.

It was noted during the address that the ex-governor threw an unusual amount of energy and feeling into his words, and the collapse, the physicians think, resulted from over straining his already weakened powers.

Ever since the failure of the Globe Savings bank, in 1896, in which he was involved, Mr. Altgeld has not been well, and for some months after the Spalding crash, it was feared that his life was in peril. Even when serving his last year as governor his health was poor. For a time he suffered from locomotor ataxia; but he rallied from this, although he never again was his old vigorous self. Lately, however, the disease marked him strongly, and quite recently his appearance caused grave forebodings and anxiety, still his mind was as clear and active as ever.

Clarence Darrow, a life-long friend and later a law partner of the ex-governor, reached here this morning. He said that the governor died as he had lived, pleading the cause of the lowly. Mr. Altgeld, in the speech which was fated to be his last, declared that all friends of humanity owed a debt of gratitude to Governor Yates for issuing a proclamation soliciting assistance for the Boer women and children in their concentration camps, which the British are maintaining in South Africa.

The speaker said that the people of America had raised a large sum of money with which to relieve the distress of the Boer women and children, but were unable to send it to them because Lord Pauncefote, the British ambassador at Washington, objected to it. He further charged that Lord Pauncefote had for years meddled in American affairs. There were eighteen counts and specific charges in Governor Altgeld's indictment. He said in substance:

"Just before the beginning of the Spanish war, Lord Pauncefote, representing the aristocracy, meddled in our affairs and tried to unite the governments of Europe in making a joint protest against America's interference on behalf of Cuba. But when the American people asserted themselves, and our government was compelled to go to the rescue of Cuba, England issued a strong neutrality proclamation, forbidding all of her subjects from furnishing us any aid or doing anything that would in any way be a violation of the strictest neutrality."

It was a speech typical of the old governor who had risen from the towpath to the chief office of the state. It was Governor Altgeld who pardoned the three Chicago anarchists.

Mr. Darrow, upon his arrival, took charge of the body and opened scores of telegrams from all parts of the country. Some sent before death came, asked for early information of the patient's condition, while those that came later expressed the deepest regret at the former governor's demise.

ENTERTAINING GEN. FUNSTON

Chicago, March 12.—The entertainment of Gen. Funston, which began here last night with a banquet given at the Marquette club was continued today despite the rain. He visited Gen. Otis at army headquarters, spent a few moments at the board of trade and then went to the stock yards. Later he attended a reception in his honor at the Press club. This evening Gen. Funston will be a spectator at the Studebaker theater where George Ade's "Sultan of Sulu" had its premier appearance last night. After the theater he will attend the Chicago Yacht club's banquet.

EXPLOSIONS WRECK HOMES

Peru, Ind., March 12.—Two natural gas explosions early this morning wrecked two buildings and injured six people. Frank Kiley, Sr., is supposed to be fatally injured. Others injured are: Frank Kiley, Jr., James Kiley, Bridget Kiley, Mrs. John Hayes and baby. The first building wrecked was occupied by Mrs. Hayes. The explosion awakened the Kiley family and they rushed to the porch. While standing there another explosion wrecked their house and buried the members of the family into the yard. The elder Kiley was found buried in the debris.

ROAD PAYS FOR CHILDREN

El aso, Tex., March 12.—M. L. Riddle, the father who lost three children in the recent wreck on the Southern Pacific, has gone to Redlands, Cal., in company with his wife and only one child, aged 5 years, after accepting a check for $10,000 from the railroad company as payment in full for damages.

The amount of money paid out by the Southern Pacific in settlement of claims arising from the wreck has thus far exceeded $73,000.

WOMAN JUMPS FROM BRIDGE

Minneapolis, March 12.—Margaret A. Hosmer, of Chicago, who was visiting Thomas H. Jones at 2310 Lyndale avenue north, Minneapolis, last evening jumped from the Plymouth avenue bridge into the river. The fall was about thirty feet and the woman fell upon the ice. A watchman rescued her and took her to the home of Mr. Jones, but she died a few hours later. There were no bones broken, and the doctor was unable to state the cause of her death. She was about 51 years old.

MARKET IS SHORT

John Panton Finds Unprecedented Condition In the East.

Late Buyers Unable to Get the Stock They Need.

Eastern Men Say Power Scheme Means Manufactories For Duluth.

John Panton, of Panton & White Co., returned yesterday from an extended visit in the Eastern markets with the firm's corps of buyers. Mr. Panton says that he found a condition in the Eastern markets that he has never before noted since the establishment of the Glass Block store. So great has been the demand for spring and summer goods that many of the buyers that have been a little late in getting into the market will be disappointed when they attempt to get their stocks this season.

The wholesalers told Mr. Panton that they never before experienced a season like the present one. The demand for goods has simply been unprecedented. The Glass Block buyers were fortunate in getting into the market early and were thus enabled to buy a complete assortment for the big store, a larger stock of spring goods, in fact than Panton & White ever before purchased at one time.

The Eastern manufactories are running to their full capacity, but are way behind in their orders for spring and summer goods. It is considered doubtful if they will be able to catch up with their orders for in about two weeks many of the manufacturers will begin to get ready for making fall goods.

The Eastern wholesalers say that this enormous demand for manufactured goods indicates one of the greatest eras of prosperity that the country has ever had. The demand comes not only from the Eastern trade, but there has been at least a 50 per cent increase in the Western trade.

News of Duluth's big enterprise, the Highland canal scheme, is already making its way into the East and inquiries were frequently made of Mr. Panton regarding the extent of the power and any other information that he could give regarding it. He was assured by the Eastern manufacturers that the power canal should be considered as one of the best things that ever came to this city and that Duluth's future prosperity is secure. They said that the manufactories of the East are scarcely able now to keep up with the demands from the Eastern trade alone and with the constant increase of the Western trade there is bound to be a manufacturing center established in the West to look after that trade within the next few years. Attention is now being directed toward Duluth as the logical manufacturing center and the announcement of the Highland power canal is doing much to confirm the belief that Duluth is destined to be the distributing point of the West. Mr. Panton was told that the problem of cheap power was all that has been preventing the locating in this city of manufactories, but now that cheap power is to be provided, there is no reason why the progress of the city to the front as a manufacturing center should not be rapid.

Easterners are remarking on the tide of emigration that is setting toward the Northwest. This is said to be one of the greatest factors in the promise of increased trade in this region of the country. At the present time there is much Eastern capital invested in Duluth and Mr. Panton says that the coming season will see a great deal more brought into this city. The city is being more widely advertised and moneyed men are being more interested in the future prospects of the Zenith City.

The Glass Block store, says Mr. Panton, had a season of prosperity last year that has never before been experienced since the firm began business here. The sales far exceed those of former years and the Panton & White company expects to enjoy a still further increase of trade the coming season. The additional floor space that will be provided by enlarging the store building will place the firm in an excellent position to take care of the constantly increasing trade.

Among the buyers of the Glass Block store returning with Mr. Panton were George T. Miller, T. W. Walsh, Alex. Reid, G. W. Walton, Theodore Tonskempser, C. G. Brown, F. W. Pride, J. W. Scott, W. E. Proctor and D. B. Rosenblatt.

IMPORTANT.

New Railroads to Boundary Would Greatly Aid Duluth.

The importance of two new railways to the International boundary to the grain trade of Duluth during the next crop year is being commented upon considerably. The roads referred to are the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy River and the Duluth & Northern Minnesota. Whether the latter will be put through to the boundary in time to cut any figure in the bonded wheat traffic, is quite questionable. The Cook & Turish road, however, will be pushed through to a connection with the McKenzie & Mann road by the opening of the new crop year. It is believed that these lines and the new Minnesota & International, now building north from Walker, will all add greatly to the bonded wheat movement here. If these three roads had been through the past winter, they would have relieved the congested situation greatly. Everything points, it is claimed, to a very large increase in the receipts of Canadian wheat in this market next season.

A railroad man, in speaking of Mr. Millen's statement that if the Duluth & Northern Minnesota was to push through to the boundary right away it would need $5,000,000 of capital, instead of $1,000,000, remarked that the fixing of the capital of the road at $1,000,000 did not presubsequent increase of the capital stock, vent the issuing of bonds, or in fact the HANG ON.

Coffee Topers as Bad as Others.

"A friend of our family, who lived with us a short time, was a great coffee drinker and a continual sufferer with dyspepsia. He admitted that coffee disagreed with him, but you know how the coffee drinker will hold on to his coffee; even if he knows it causes dyspepsia.

"One day he said to me that Postum Food Coffee had been recommended, and suggested that he would like very much to try it. I secured a package and made it strictly according to directions. He was delighted with the new beverage, as was every one of our family. He became very fond of it, and in a short time his dyspepsia disappeared. He continued using the Postum, and in about three months gained twelve pounds.

"My husband is a practicing physician, and regards Postum as the healthiest of all beverages. He never drinks coffee, but is very fond of Postum. In fact, all of our family are, and we never think of drinking coffee any more." Mrs. Mary E. Brown, Waterford, Va.

Postum is delicious if made after the simple directions. All grocers sell Postum. POSTUM-CEREAL CO., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

EARLIEST ON RECORD

Opening of Ore Shipping Season Expected to Be That.

Preparations For Opening Are Already In Evidence.

One-Third of the Steel Fleet Is Lying Here Now.

The earliest opening of the ore shipping season on record is what the present prospect points to. Heretofore ore-carrying vessels have never gotten through the Soo before April 15. If the present mild weather conditions continue, this season is likely to break the record. At last reports there was fifteen inches of ice in the shallow waters connecting Lake Superior with the lower lakes. It is customary at this time for the ice in those waters to be 25 or 26 inches thick. The ice in the straits of Mackinac is so thin and so honeycombed that it is said a favorable wind any day would clear the straits for the opening.

What guesses are made now on the date of the opening of the Soo are made with many qualifications. The principal one is the weather. Thus far this season the weather has been so mild that everybody has been looking for retaliation by the frost king at the last end of the winter. If the temperature continues so high that ice does not freeze at night and the sun so warm that it continues to melt the barriers by day, the opening of the Soo just before or soon after April 1 would not surprise people. The earliest opening of navigation on record at Duluth was April 11 in 1888, and this was approached in 1896, when navigation began on April 12. This, however, is said to have been purely local traffic on Lake Superior.

But at anyrate, renewed spirit has been put into the preparations for the opening of the ore-handling season here. There is an air of greater activity aboard the vessels laid up here for repairs and fitting out. Just a little more hustle is evident about the docks and in the offices of the ore-handling roads the people are looking forward to a very early beginning of the season, instead of still dwelling on the accomplishments of last year.

While an exceptionally early opening might catch these roads with some of their docks not in the most complete shape for the handling of traffic on a large scale, each road has so much dock capacity and the opening on the lakes usually comes so gradually that all would probably be able to take care of all the vessels that could be placed at their docks.

Vice President Philbin, who has charge of the ore-handling business for the Eastern Minnesota road, and watches it pretty closely, is expected home today after a vacation of several weeks in Montreal, the East and Chicago. His mother, who was seriously ill, has recovered somewhat and no immediate danger is looked for. It is said that the Eastern Minnesota will not begin hauling ore until there is no chance that it will freeze in the cars or in the pockets. With a continuance of the present mildness, it would be safe to begin hauling at once. Nobody in the ore transportation business would be surprised, however, if another brief cold snap were to occur. Present weather conditions are so much more favorable than is usual at this time, or has ever been the case before, that they seem too good to be true. If ore were to be carried down, and the available pockets and cars filled with it, awaiting the opening of navigation, and a cold snap were to occur, the haste in getting started would result in greater delay, it is said, than as if nothing had been done. Another thing that will cause the railroads to be a little conservative about beginning hauling from stockpiles is the fact that, according to their claims, the vesselmen are never ready to handle as much ore right after the opening as the roads are themselves. All three of the roads are now prepared with so much equipment and so much dock capacity to rush the ore movement on short notice that they can take care of all the vessel capacity that would naturally be gotten ready for them.

The Pittsburg Steamship company, which has thirty-five vessels—one-third of its fleet—laid up here, is hastening the completion of repairs with all possible speed. The work is so far advanced that the fleet here could be hurried into commission at any time now if navigation should open.

President House of the Duluth & Iron Range has returned to the Pacific coast, where his family is spending the winter. As soon as definite indications appear that the opening of navigation is at hand, he will be advised and will hasten back. His road is in good shape for the opening. Work on the rebuilding of one of the docks at Two Harbors is progressing rapidly now. For a time there was a delay owing to the failure to get timber from the coast as soon as was expected. Two of the big engines leased to the Chicago Great Western road during the winter have been returned, and all the rest that were let out during the winter are on their way back to their home road.

Vice President Olcott of the Missabe road is South, but is expected back April 6. The repairs the Missabe made during the winter were pretty well progressed before Mr. Olcott went away, and could be hurried forward, so that the first boats that come to the dock can be taken care of with dispatch.

WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES

Regard Peruna as Their Shield Against Catarrh, Coughs, Colds, Grip and Catarrhal Diseases.

Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood, Late Candidate For the Presidency.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the eminent barrister of Washington, D. C., is the only woman who has ever been a candidate for the presidency of the United States. She is the best known woman in America. As the pioneer of her sex in the legal profession she has gathered fame and fortune. In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, she says:

"I have used your Peruna both for myself and my mother, Mrs. Hannah J. Bennett, now in her 88th year, and I find it an invaluable remedy for cold, catarrh, hay fever and kindred diseases; also a good tonic for feeble and old people, or those run down, and with nerves unstrung."
Yours truly, BELVA A. LOCKWOOD.

Any one who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well nigh universal; almost omnipresent. Peruna is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh out of its victims. Peruna not only cures catarrh, but prevents it. Every household should be supplied with this great remedy for coughs, colds and so forth.

Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for free book on catarrh.

Miss Flora Wilson, 2472 Seventh avenue, New York city, writes:

"For anyone who is as susceptible to coughs and colds as I am, Peruna is a blessing. I am never too careful, and am always catching cold, which sometimes develops into an annoying catarrh of the head. Peruna I have found is excellent for this, being very quick in its action, besides being a most excellent tonic."

Miss Helen Sauerbier, St. Joseph, Mich., writes:

"Last winter I caught a sudden cold which developed into an unpleasant catarrh of the head and throat, depriving me of my appetite and usual good spirits. A friend who had been cured of Peruna advised me to try it and I sent for a bottle at once, and I am glad to say that in three days the phlegm had loosened and I felt better, my appetite returned and within nine days I was in my usual health."

Mrs. Leslie Carter, probably the most prominent actress in America, says the following of Peruna:

"Peruna is sure to prevent a cold. It will stop a cough before it becomes settled. It cures all catarrhal affections like magic. No money could tempt me to be without this remedy for even a day. It is just the remedy that all women need, especially such women that are exposed to the vicissitudes of climate as I am.

"I never neglect an opportunity to recommend this remedy to my friends. It is America's greatest remedy for America's greatest enemy, catarrh and catarrhal effections. I would not have catarrh for a million dollars, and as long as I have Peruna at hand to check the slightest symptoms of its approach, I feel perfectly safe from this disease."
N. LESLIE CARTER.

Colds are considered one of the necessary ills of life. One is liable to catch cold both summer and winter. Very often a cold is the starting point or cause of a lengthy and dangerous catarrhal disease. Colds are always dangerous and should never be neglected a day.

A cold is the beginning of catarrh. It may cause catarrh of any of the internal organs—the head, throat, lungs and stomach especially. A remedy that will cure a cold, then, would cure all these direct effects of colds. Peruna is such a remedy. We have letters from all over the United States attesting to this fact. The poor and rich alike use and recommend it. A book of testimonials in the exact words of the writer sent to any address free of charge by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

The Winnipeg Free Press contains the following with reference to a former resident of Duluth: "Jacques Bureau, M.P., of Three Rivers, who visited the West about a month ago, and while here spoke in the interests of D. SKETCHES THAT COMPEL ATTENTION.

Some Decidedly New and Original Work Being Done By a Duluth Artist.

A great deal of attention is being attracted by a series of original sketches on exhibit at the art store of Engels & Co. The sketches are the work of Miss Alice M. Cook, who has recently returned from New York city, where for the past several months she has been pursuing her studies, and are particularly worthy of notice for their life and expression. Miss Cook has opened a studio in the Masonic Temple building and will make a special feature of portrait work and original designs for advertising use, as well as class instruction.

A Store That Deserves Its Popularity.

The Silberstein & Bondy company's store seems to be a place of unlimited interest these early spring days. The new things keep coming in so fast that women folks hardly realize that a novelty is there before it is gone. Mr. Gidding, of the firm, informs us that they never have had so satisfactory business as this spring. Notwithstanding the fact that their business has been increasing from month to month, it is one of the busiest establishments in the Northwest, and people who travel from coast to coast say that no city in this country the size of Duluth, or even much larger, can boast of a store carrying such magnificent goods, or that caters to their trade in such a liberal manner as does this progressive house. Everything about thir establishment is up to date. Their merchandise is of a high grade and is constantly kept fresh and new, and their store service second to none. It is a place worthy a visit by every lady in Duluth, and the firm heartily extend their hospitality.

Returns From the East.

William Mies, Duluth's leading tailor, returned this morning after a month's absence in the East purchasing a new stock of novelties for spring and summer wear and studying the changes in styles. Mr. Mies says the stock he will show this season will equal that of any in the large Eastern cities.

THE CONTEST.

Mayoralty Case Expected to Come Before Court March 24.

The mayoralty contest will be taken up in the district court on March 24.

The case will be heard by Judge Ensign, Judge Dibell, and Judge Cant. They deem it of such public importance that all three will pass on the 139 challenged ballots.

Judge Ensign notified the attorneys late yesterday afternoon that if entirely satisfactory to them, the case would be taken up before the regular court cases on the calendar and just as soon as the jury cases could be disposed of.

Oscar Mitchell, attorney for Mr. Hugo, said that the argument would suit him and J. B. Richards, attorney for Mr. Truelsen, expressed himself as well pleased with the arrangement.

It is said that the legal forces on both sides have their cases prepared and the fight for the office of mayor will be intensely interesting.

The attorneys of the contestant and contestee are not saying much, but those close to the contending parties express a great deal of confidence as to the result.

The more conservative Democrats are claiming Truelsen's election now by three votes, while the Republicans are offering to bet good money that Hugo will have at least three and probably five to spare when the courts finish their work.

We speak today of half-dollar neckwear only, because we are making a special showing that we want all the men of Duluth to see.

Of course, we've higher priced scarfs—some worth up to $3—more beautiful than ever, and, if anything, better value than before, but you'll certainly want at least to examine our Easter neckwear tomorrow at 50c.

THE DECIDING GAME.

Freimuth and Company A to Meet Thursday.

The "rubber" of a series of hard-fought and interesting games of indoor baseball will be played tomorrow night at the Armory between Company A and the Freimuth club. Each team has two games to its credit and each is determined to make this the third. Both sides are hopeful and enthusiastic, and each will have a large and powerful-lunged contingent of rooters to disheartten the opposing nine. The department store men claim to have a brand new, specially prepared style of play which they will spring on the military men for the first time, and which is guaranteed to make their score look like a regulation army target after the firing squad has shot a volley at it.

But the Company A men say that they are not afraid for all these threats, and assert that they also have picked up some new ideas on the question that will cause surprise, dismay, discomfort and chagrin to the knights of the scissors and yard sticks. With all the talk and the feeling of rivalry that exists between the teams, the game will be by far the most interesting that has been played this season, and there will not be another until after April 17.

An Electric Belt Free

Send Your Application At Once To The Physician's Institute.

They Will Send You Absolutely Free One of Their 100 Guage Supreme Electric Belts, the Belt Which Has Made so Many Wonderful Cures—You Needn't Send Even a Postage Stamp, Just Your Name and Address.

Seven years ago the State of Illinois granted to the Physicians' Institute of Chicago a charter.

There was need of something above the ordinary method of treatment for chronic diseases, something more than any one specialist or any number of specialists acting independently could do, so the State itself, under the powers granted it by its general laws, gave the power to the Physicians' Institute to furnish to the sick such help as would make them well and strong.

Ever since its establishment this Institute has endeavored in every possible way to carry out the original purposes of its establishment under the beneficient laws of the State.

Three years ago, the Physicians' Institute, realizing the value of electricity in the treatment of certain phases of disease, created under the superintendence of its staff of specialists an electric belt, and this belt has been proved to be of great value as a curative agent. From time to time it has been improved until it reached that stage of perfection which warranted its present name of "Supreme."

This belt is the most effective of all agents in the cure of rheumatism, lumbago, lame back, nervous exhaustion, weakened or lost vital functions, varicocele, kidney disorders and many other complaints.

This "Supreme Electric Belt" is made in one grade only—100 guage—there is no better electric belt made and no better belt can be made. Whenever in the opinion of our staff of specialists the wonderful curative and revitalizing forces of electricity will cure you we send you, free of all cost, one of these Supreme Electric Belts, and if is not sent on trial, it is yours to keep forever without the payment of one cent. This generous offer may be withdrawn at any time, so you should write today for this free "Supreme Electric Belt" to the Physicians' Institute, at 2111 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ills.

South Shore Offices Certainly Coming Here From Marquette.

Officials Making Leases of Houses In Anticipation of It.

Understood That Fourth Floor of Lyceum Has Been Rented.

The presence of General Passenger Agent Hibbard as the date approaches when it is supposed the South Shore road will move its general offices from Marquette to Duluth, naturally causes his friends to inquire of him as to the truth of reports that have been current for some time. Mr. Hibbard insists that he has heard nothing that he could give out on the subject, or that would throw any light on it.

It is learned from other sources, however, that some of the general officers of the South Shore who now live in Marquette have already closed leases for houses in Duluth. Others are said to be looking for homes here and have friends and real estate men on the lookout. Vice President Fitch has been to Montreal to consult President Shaughnessy of the Canadian Pacific railroad in regard to his plans for moving the general offices to Duluth, and it is said that Mr. Shaughnessy has approved his plans for taking a floor in the Lyceum building. About thirty offices will be occupied, and as soon as possible it is intended to get them all on one floor.

CRIMINALS.

Trial of Their Cases Taken Up In District Court.

Judge Dibell took up the trial of criminal cases in court room No. 1 of district court this morning, and the first case on the list was that against Thomas Maloney, charged with burglary in the third degree. A jury was drawn this morning, and the case was still on trial at noon.

William O'Hara, the erstwhile village marshal, who was indicted on three counts for malfeasance in office, pleaded not guilty to all three indictments.

David McMillan, indicted for burglary in the third degree, pleaded guilty.

Grace Williams and Fay Wilson, indicted for assault in the first degree for carving up Marie Carter in a row in a colored resort on St. Croix alley, withdrew their pleas of guilty yesterday afternoon and pleaded guilty.

Albert H. Fisher, indicted for keeping a house of ill-fame at Hibbing, was arraigned and furnished $50 bail.

Andrew Morgo was arraigned for assault in the first degree, and bail was fixed at $500. Morgo is accused of disturbing a christening party at Chisholm, Jan. 26 with a cutting act.

GOOD WORK.

Proper Food Makes Marvelous Changes.

Providence is sometimes credited with directing the footsteps by so simple a way as the reading of a food advertisement.

A lady out in Shelbina, Mo., says, "About two years ago I was compelled to retire from my school teaching because I was completely broken down with nervous prostration.

I suffered agony in my back. My hands and feet would swell up nights. I was in a dreadfully nervous condition, irritable, with a dull, heavy headache continually, had no appetite and could not digest anything if I tried. I was unable to remember what I read and was, of course, unfit for my work.

Some said I had consumption, others said dropsy. One day, as if by providence, I read the testimonial of a lady whose symptoms were much the same as mine, and she told of how Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food had cured her, so I concluded to try it.

I left off the old fashioned breakfast and began with Grape-Nuts, a little fruit and a cup of Postum Food Coffee. That was 8 months ago and I have steadily improved in both body and mind. Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food has done more for me than all the medicine I have ever taken, and I am now well again and able to return once more to my school duties and able to do anything necessary in my work.

My mind is clearer and my body stronger than ever before. Please do not publish my name." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

BUTCHERS

Spend the Morning In Pleasure Rather Than Business.

The Lake Superior Retail Butchers' association, which began its sessions at the Kalamazoo block yesterday afternoon, is holding another business session this afternoon, at which it is expected that the officers of the association for the coming year will be elected. There was no morning session, the visiting butchers going over to Superior, where they were entertained by the butchers of that city.

The head of the lakes butchers are entertaining the visitors in royal manner, and they declare they have had a splendid time since coming here. The event looked forward to with pleasure by the members of the association is the banquet which will be held at the McKay hotel this evening. About seventy-five persons are expected to participate in the festivities.

GOOD HAUL

Titusville, Pa., March 12.—Safe-crackers blew open the vault of the Farers' bank of Townsville, this county, last night and stole $7000 or $8000. Of this, $5000 was in bills, $1300 in silver and the balance in gold. There is not the slightest clue to the perpetrators of the robbery.

New Castle, Ky., March 12.—The Bank of New Castle was robbed of $4500 cash, a lot of jewelry belonging to Isaac W. Kelly, its president, and $500 worth of stamps deposited by the postmaster early today. Citizens were aroused, but were held at bay until the six burglars made their escape.

OFFICERS ELECTED

New Council Meets and Effects Its Formal Organization.

Alderman Haven President and H. W. Cheadle City Clerk.

Mayor Hugo Sends In a Number of Appointments.

The only council meeting of the year required by the charter was held last evening.

Reland D. Haven, Republican alderman from the Seventh ward, was elected president.

Watson S. Moore, Independent-Republican from the First ward, was elected vice president.

PRESIDENT R. D. HAVEN.

H. W. Cheadle, Democrat, was reelected city clerk without serious opposition.

Noble Sampson, Republican, was reelected city sealer of weights and measures.

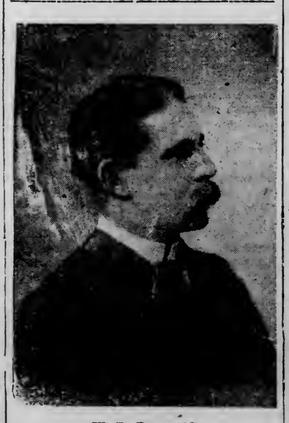
The mayor sent in the appointments of L. B. Manley as member of the board of water and light commissioners for a term of five years; C. B. Nunan, to succeed himself on the board of civil service commissioners for a term of five years.

The following reappointments were made:

Oscar Mitchell, to be city attorney; W. B. Patton, to be city engineer; Dr. J. M. Robinson, to be health commissioner; Charles W. Wilson, to be commissioner of public works for three years; J. H. Robinson, to be building inspector. The confirmation of these appointments will come up for a vote next Monday night.

* * *

On the first ballot for president, Alderman Haven received eight votes and Alderman Krumsieg was given a complimentary vote of five. Alderman Moore received two votes on this ballot.



W. B. PATTON, City Engineer.

Mr. Haven was elected on the second ballot, receiving twelve votes to Alderman Moore's three. In adressing the council Mr. Haven said:

"Gentlemen, I thank you most sincerely for the honor you have conferred upon me, and trust that no action of mine during the ensuing year shall cause you to regret your action at this time.

"We all must realize the peculiar political complexion of this council. Evenly divided as we are politically, it would be an easy matter for either side to block vital legislation. I trust that we will all overlook our party affiliations to the end that our city's interests may be best conserved. I will do all I can to make our relations harmonious."

* * *

The balloting for vice president was interesting. Alderman Moore started off with eight votes against four for Alderman Cullum, two for Alderman Wing and one for Alderman Trevillon.

On the fifth ballot Mr. Wing got six to Mr. Moore's eight. On the seventh and eighth ballots each received seven votes. Then Alderman Moore worked back to eight and finally won out on the eleventh ballot by 10 to 5 over Mr. Wing.

* * *

There was a little excitement when it came to electing a city clerk. H. W. Cheadle was the choice of every alderman. He knew it and was feeling modestly confident.

Alderman Neff decided to have a little fun and fixed up a scheme by which Mr. Cheadle only received two votes on the first ballot, the others scattering to various persons who were more surprised than Mr. Cheadle.

On the second ballot some of the aldermen wanted to keep up the suspense a little longer, and consequently Mr. Cheadle lacked four votes that he was entitled to, but secured enough to elect him.

He has been in the city clerk's office for the past eight years, and this makes his fifth term as city clerk. Despite the fact that he is a Democrat, his ability and general courtesy has kept him in office through several Republican councils.

* * *

Alexander Longmuir, a Democrat, tied Noble Sampson for city sealer of weights and measures on the first ballot, but on the second Mr. Sampson was re-elected by a vote of 9 to 5.

* * *

All the mayor's appointments made last night require confirmation except those of C. W. Wilson, as a member of the board of public works; L. B. Manley, as member of the board of water and light commissioners, and C. B. Nunan, as member of the civil service commission.

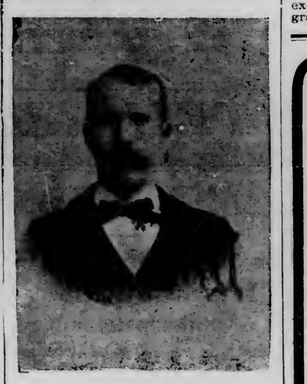
SUPERIOR FERRY SERVICE.

Capt. Mayo Expects It to Begin April 1.

It is quite probable that the ferry service between Duluth and West Superior will be resumed by April 1. Capt. Majo of the Independent ferry line figures that the harbor ice will have thawed out by that time enough to permit of interrupted service between the two cities and it is expected that by the first of the month the harbor tugs will have opened the channels.

The present period of warm weather is fast making its effect felt on the harbor ice and at the present rate of thawing there will be open water at the interstate bridge within a few days. It was not expected that the vessel season would open so quickly at the head of the lakes and the work of repair on the harbor tugs and the ferry boats has been somewhat delayed. From now on to the actual opening of navigation the repair work and repainting will be pushed as fast as possible.



J. H. ROBINSON, Building Inspector.

AMUSEMENTS.

"MAM'SELLE 'AWKINS."

There is not a minute during the action of "Mam'selle 'Awkins" that drags and that is something that cannot be said of many of the similar productions of the day. This musical comedy, of which Richard Carle is guilty of the book and Alfred E. Aarons perpetrated the music, was presented at the Lyceum last evening in a most satisfactory manner and to the pleasure of those present. It is a mirthful, tuneful and withal, most entertaining. From a literary or a high class musical standpoint, it would hardly bear a critical analysis, and yet there are passages bright and witty, and music of the most catchy order. The latter is of the jingling variety that causes the feet to patter, while the rhythm permeates the entire atmosphere.

The staging of the comedy was excellent. A chorus of goodly numbers executed various pleasing features with grace and good singing ability, showing careful training; their concerted work being especially fine and the ensembles worthy of liberal praise. Miss Stacy, who assumes the title role, is well known to Duluth theatergoers and her appearance last evening detracted nothing from the esteem in which she is held. To her efficient work Miss Huestis proved a most valuable adjunct and shared the honors with the star. She is an exceedingly hard working actress and was a favorite from the moment of her appearance. The limelight effects on the individual work of these artists proved very pleasing and called for repeated encores. The supporting company was all that could be desired. All are excellent singers and their work proved most effective.

FREDERICK WARDE.

There is no actor that is more popular with theatergoers than Frederick Warde, the eminent actor, whose appearance here is announced for Thursday and Friday evenings. The first evening he presents his famous comedy-drama, "The Mountebank." That is the feature of his repertoire this season. It has been a great financial and artistic success. The play is located during the reign of Louis XVIII. The plot of the play is very strong, and is said to offer Mr. Warde the greatest opportunities for the full measure of his grand talents. He brings a large and exceptionally strong company, as well as a complete scenic production.

Friday evening Mr. Warde will present "Julius Caesar."

"THE SULTAN OF SULU."

Chicago, March 12.—"The Sultan of Sulu," a new Filipino opera by George Ade, author of "Fables in Slang," "Artie," etc., etc., was produced at the Studebaker theater, Chicago, last night, by the Castle Square Opera company, under the direction of Henry W. Savage. A rollicking performance by an admirable company roused the audience to almost continuous bursts of applause. The scenery, which accurately represents the bay of Manila and the coast of the island of Sulu, formed a charming background for the display of the picturesque and magnificent costumes worn by the gorgeous sultan, his numerous wives and his American guests. All concerned in the production, principals, chorus, authors and managers, were obliged to respond to many curtain calls. The audience was the largest ever assembled at a first Chicago production of a Chicago opera.

Commander Mill Will Be Increased One-Half In Size.

The Commander flouring mill, at Wset Superior, the only mill at the head of the lakes that has been running of late, has closed down for several weeks to permit of extensive repairs. The capacity of the mill will be increased from 600 to 900 barrels per day. The new machinery will be put in immediately. A new 100-light dynamo, a new pump, six new purifiers, three dust collectors and two reels are being added to the mill's equipment. Manager Bilss of the mill figures that the repairs will be completed in about three weeks and the mill will thereafter run day and night. The management regards the future prospects of the mill as very good.

The mill is owned by Gregory, Cooke & Co., composed of Minneapolis men and J. H. Cooke, of Duluth.

WARM ROAST.

Superior Authorities Get One From Wisconsin Supreme Court.

The citizens of West Superior are much stirred up over the decision handed down by the Wisconsin state supreme court at Madison, yesterday, in the case of the Northern Trust company against I. N. Snyder, former sheriff of Douglass county. The decision of Judge Vinje, of the circuit court, is reversed and Justice Marshall holds that the county board, having once placed the sheriff on a salary basis, cannot rescind the resolution without supreme legislative authority. In this decision the court holds that the sheriff of Douglass county is under the salary system for work inside the county.

As to the payment of claims not legally made out, the court holds that such is a disregard of clearly expressed legislation and an abuse of power. The proper way, says the court, to pay the sheriff for services outside the state would be to employ the sheriff at a reasonable compensation. The sheriff is held to be entitled to mileage of 10 cents on unsuccessful trips in the state when he has a warrant to execute, subject, however, to the discretion of the county board.

The court bestows a further roast by declaring that the sheriff and county board have ignored the statutes and abused their power in regard to taking persons to penal and charitable institutions and that the actual time taken for performing the service should have been taken as the basis of payment.

The court says that the county board should learn that public revenues are not for private use and that the action indicates pretty clearly a long course of official infidelity, of utter disregard of statutory restraints.

Justice Marshall, who wrote the opinion, was formerly circuit judge in the district embracing Douglass county.

It is expected that the case will have an important bearing on all the sheriff's bills allowed since 1898. Attorneys claim that an action for the money had received would lie against the sheriff since that time for all fees allowed over the salary of $1500 and the regular expenses of the office.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Henry Salzer and Horace McKinley, heading a party of La Crosse capitalists, have just bought 110,000 acres of timber land in Oregon. There is 500,000 feet of standing timber on the land on the banks of the Willamette river, where a mill will be built by the company.

A great many farmers of Stevens county, Minn., took advantage of the fine weather of the past few days and have begun their seeding, the earliest for the past fifteen years.

Francis Skinner, a broker, committed suicide in his office in New street, New York, Tuesday. He was found dead in his office with a bullet wound in his right temple and a revolver lying under his body.

Two sheep men have discovered near the Bridges mountain and not far from Lost Cabin, Wyo., twenty-five flowing oil springs, together with a lake of oil. The formation resembles that of the Lander oil fields, and the oil is the same as is found there.

The Allis-Chambers company has posted in the shops at Milwaukee a notice that on and after April 1 a raise of 3 per cent would be made in the wages of all employes, and they would be given a Saturday half holiday.

The 5-story brick warehouse of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company, located at Wells and Superior streets, Chicago, was practically destroyed by fire Tuesday night. The flames spread so rapidly that for a time the company's factory, which adjoins the warehouse, was threatened. A large quantity of ammonia and inflammable material stored in the building handicaped the firemen, as explosions were expected at any moment. The loss is $75,000.

* * *

The mayor read his third annual message to the council last evening at the conclusion of that body's organization.

Although the reading took forty-five minutes the aldermen and others present listened with the closest attention.

The message is as follows:

To the president and common council of the city of Duluth: Gentlemen—I have the honor of presenting to you my third annual report, and congratulate you and the citizens of Duluth on the prosperous condition of the city, and the splendid showing made by the several departments, as shown by their reports.

The past year has been a busy one and rapid strides have been taken, much needed public improvements have been made, although more still remains to be done.

We cannot expect that we can get along for years and neglect necessary repairs, without meeting the inevitable day of reckoning, when we will have to pay dearly for our failure to follow one of the fundamental principles of business management, that of keeping up repairs.

This neglect may have been necessary in the past years, but those responsible should not now object to being called on to make good the result of their failure or inability. Our duty is to get the municipal plant again in first class working condition, as rapidly as the stockholders, the taxpayers, can stand it. Then it can be run far more economically than at present.

This report will be more general in its nature than otherwise, the details may be found in the reports of the several departments to you, which I recommend should be printed as speedily as possible.

As a rule the delay in the printing of public documents is an imposition and unnecessary. The people want them when the matters referred to are fresh in their minds, and not several months after they are forgotten. In my opinion if not printed promptly it is a waste of money to print them at all as far as our own citizens are concerned.

ASSESSOR.

The report of the assessor shows an increase of $369,976 in the total valuation of taxable property over the previous year, $151,235 of which is personal property, representing bonds, stocks and cash put on the tax rolls.

This year an assessment of the real estate is made, but the time has come for a complete re-valuation which, however, cannot be made with the present appropriation, but I recommend that when the next assessment of real estate comes around in 1904, provision be made for such a re-valuation.

FINANCE.

The reports of the treasurer and comptroller have placed before you the financial condition of the city, so that it is not necessary for me to do more than call to your attention the necessity for some changes which will prevent the reduction of the permanent improvement revolving fund, and a suggestion as to the disposal of lots held by the city for back taxes and assessments.

PERMANENT IMPROVEMENT REVOLVING FUND.

As to the first, that of the shrinkage of the permanent improvement revolving fund. Before an improvement of any kind for which an assessment is to be made can begin, the city engineer's office and board of public works are to some expense for the plans, advertisements, etc., and during its progress there is additional expense for inspection, etc. This is calculated at 10 per cent of the cost, actually from about 6 per cent to 10 per cent. When the assessment is made the amount of the contract is set down, let us say for example, $100, then 10 per cent is added, and the cost is said to be $110. If this amount is paid within a certain time a rebate of 10 per cent is made, $11, wholly cancelling the $10 for expense, and drawing $1 from the permanent improvement revolving fund. The result is that every time $100 of the permanent improvement revolving fund is turned back to it, there is a loss of $1 or 1 per cent, so that it is easily seen that it will not be long before another issue of bonds will have to be made to keep up our working capital. As it will require an amendment to the charter to authorize this the result will be evident.

Better amend the charter so that it will provide that if the original amount of the contract, divided into assessments on the property liable for it, is paid within a certain time, the city will stand the cost of engineering, advertising, etc. (if you believe that is a fair proposition) but that after the expiration of that time, 10 per cent will be added, in this way, we will preserve the fund intact, and give encouragement to the citizens assessed, to pay promptly.

This seems to me an important matter, and I recommend it to your consideration.

The second question under this head is that of the disposal of certain lots to which the city has claim by reason of back assessments due.

The amount involved is about $50,000, and these lots if sold would be live property, and subject to taxation. Unless there are some of these lots that would be valuable to the city for any purpose, such as a play ground, or for a city hospital, or any such purpose, they should be disposed of, to the original owner, if possible, but disposed of, and got on the assessor's books as speedily as possible.

SINKING FUND.

It will be noticed that for the next four year the amount of bonds coming due is very small. The sinking fund will therefore increase and need careful investment so that it may be earning something, as the charter contemplates.

PUBLIC WORKS.

The last twelve months have witnessed a greatly increased activity in public works. After over thirteen years of usefulness the old cedar pavement on a portion of Superior street has been replaced by vitrified bricks, and while it would be premature to express an opinion on the wisdom of the choice, based on experience, still it may be said that up to date nothing has developed to lead anyone to believe that anything else would have been an improvement over the brick.

In addition to this, Michigan street for eight blocks was paved with rough sandstone blocks, also Fifth avenue south, at a total cost, for all paving contracts, of approximately $100,000. With these main streets paved it would seem to be good business policy to next improve the avenues leading to them, in the down town district, in order to obtain the greatest benefit from the work already done, because the loads hauled must be proportioned to the worst portions of the streets or avenues traveled; besides, where the avenues above any street are unpaved it is difficult and expensive to keep the streets clean by reason of the material making its way down hill.

The tar macadam pavement suggested by the city engineer seems to offer many advantages as a solution of our problem. We can utilize our own raw material to a great extent, and it promises well for our avenues and some streets. The choice of this pavement for Nineteenth avenue east, will give an opportunity to gain more definite knowledge as to its practical value.

SIDEWALKS.

About twenty-five miles of sidewalks have been built, at a cost of over $88,000 but the proper material has not yet been found.

Wooden walks would be the best but for their rapid decay, frequent need of repairs, and general unsanitary condition. These disabilities practically disappear when cement walks are used, but in cold weather they become so slippery as to be dangerous, especially those with the smooth surface, which should never be allowed to be put down. Our avenues require walks of a special character, but until that material is found the city regulations should require that coming nearest to solving the problem. As it is now cement sidewalks are more serviceable when the snow is left on them. It has been suggested that in some cities a temporary wooden walk is laid on the cement or stone walk during the cold weather. Its practicability is doubtful, although it would overcome the problem of slipperyness.

SEWERS.

Almost three miles of sewers have been built, and considerable more is under contemplation for the future. It is to be regretted that the charter amendment regarding the main trunk sewer in the western portion of Duluth was defeated, as it deprives a large district of needed sewer connections. The building of sewers should be encouraged by every proper means; they are a necessity in these days, being a sanitary measure, and as such lessening the cost of municipal government to the taxpayer, to say nothing of the comfort and convenience of such public necessities.

VIADUCTS.

The Garfield avenue viaduct is nearing completion, the entire structure being assembled and only awaiting the work of planking and paving, and the hand railing. This viaduct will be opened for traffic about April 10. The foundation of the Tenth avenue viaduct is completed, but further progress is retarded by the difficulty in procuring steel. The Twenty-seventh avenue west viaduct is in use.

SHIP CANAL FERRY BRIDGE.

The foundations for the ship canal ferry bridge are in process of construction, permission to permanently occupy government land for bridge purposes having been secured through an act of congress introduced by Hon. Page Morris. The impossibility of securing steel will prevent the completion of this structure till next year.

STREETS AND GUTTERS.

In my opinion the most serious problem before you today is the renovation of the thoroughfares and gutters of the city, especially the avenues. They have arrived at a stage when it is not economy to allow them to get any more out of repair, the top dressing is worn off, the crown gives place to a hollow; the foundation of the street itself is being worn away and soon will have to be remade, instead of being renovated.

The gutters are either worn out or higher than the street; we are liable to serious washouts during any storm, and the repairs incident to such a condition cripple the funds of the board of public works to such an extent that the necessary cleaning of streets must be dispensed with.

I urge upon your honorable body the serious consideration of this subject, a correct solution of which will do much to save money for the taxpayers, and be in the best interests of the whole city.

The board of public works calls attention in its report to certain improvements which will tend to decrease the liability to damage in case of a flood, all of which seem to be practical and promise good results. I direct your attention to them as being worthy of your earnest consideration.

ATTORNEY.

Many important cases have been before the courts in which the city attorney has represented the city, many of them personal injury suits of which but one verdict has been secured against the city, and that for such a sum that it was deemed cheaper to pay than take an appeal.

The several stages of the forty-eight cases are noted in the report of the city attorney. The report of the assistant city attorney, treating more particularly on the cases in the municipal court, shows active, persistent work.

The work of the city attorney is most important, and it is gratifying to note that the present incumbent possesses the confidence of all the officials. This materially aids in securing that harmonious working of the several departments so necessary where they are so hedged and hampered by red tape.

CONFERENCE COMMITTEE.

The conference committee continues to exercise a wise supervision over the financial affairs of the several departments, and the fact that the several departments have lived within their income, while due, principally, to the desire of the heads of the departments to make a good showing, it cannot be denied that the monthly scrutiny of their transactions by the conference committee encourages to economy and watchfulness.

This feature of the new charter is now complete in its organization and system of reports, and after a twelve months' trial has demonstrated its usefulness.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The record of the fire department again gives the citizens renewed confidence in its efficiency and it is entitled to receive every encouragement.

Their report calls attention to the frequency of chimney fire calls, and it seems to me that their request for relief is very reasonable, and the arguments convincing. Because we have a department we are proud of, is no same argument for exposing it to damage and consequent expense at unnecessary times, merely because we like to seen them run.

A department should be reserved for times when it can be of service, and then every element of strength should be brought into action, and no excuse taken for inefficiency.

The department needs some more hose, and it would be well to have the question of the selection and purchase straightened out once and for all; it seems unbusinesslike and undignified to have a disagreement between the council and the fire commissioners every time an order of hose is purchased. Let there be some definite rule adopted and stuck to, and get rid of this, the only remaining relic of the aforetime contention between the departments. The citizens certainly do not look on this controversy with favor.

FIRE TUG.

I again call your attention to the necessity for a fire tug, but can add little to what has been said in my two previous addresses, and repeated in each report of the fire commissioners, except that each year adds to the value of the property which can only be protected properly by a fire tug, and the increased danger of delay.

We cannot always expect to be as fortunate as we have been, and a fire on our docks would lead to such disastrous results that the citizens generally fear to consider it.

I recommend that steps be taken to secure such an important piece of fire apparatus at the earliest opportunity. It is not necessary to wait until we can afford such a fire boat as New York or Chicago would install, but we can get one according to our means, and as we grow we can do better. It is poor business judgment to wait in such cases, merely because we cannot afford the best that can be obtained. Let us get the best we can afford, and have the benefit of it till we can do better.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

The inadequate number of patrolmen still prevent this department from accomplishing much it would otherwise like to do, and bringing the standard of efficiency up still higher.

There has been, however, a marked improvement in the general conditions dependent on the police control, and all said in the address of a year ago might be repeated here.

MOUNTED POLICE.

There has seemed to be a demand on the part of those living in the outlying portions of the city for some police protection, and after careful study of the situation it was decided that a few mounted patrolmen would accomplish more, for the money, than any other scheme.

I therefore recommend to you the plan of adding not to exceed four mounted patrolmen; these mounted men to furnish their own horses and keep them, receiving additional $17.50 per month. This is the plan adopted in many cities, the city supplying the accoutrements. These men can cover a large territory at present not attempted to be protected, and do more than eight men on foot, for that work. They will control the rowdy abuses prevailing where police protection does not extend, will stop the reign of the boys and hoodlums, and will give to the isolated citizen a comfortable feeling of security.

LIBRARY.

The new Carnegie library building so nearly approaches completion that we may look forward to an opening in a short time.

The report of the library board gives great encouragement and evidence of the literary tastes of our citizens. We cannot be too proud of our educational system, and the library, as an important adjunct of the continued education so necessary to complete and round out our career, must meet with the hearty support accorded to our school facilities.

The suggestion of the library board that the opening of the new library building be appropriately observed is a proper one, and one in which all citizens will concur, as giving an opportunity to express our appreciation of the generous gift of the donor.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.

This board has met the demands upon it by the several interested departments, and the selection of officials has been much simplified. I would recommend that as many of the employes of the city as possible be added to the list of those coming under its rules.

As a necessary part of the system, however, there must be fixed an age limit, or the departments will be filled with men too old to properly do the work. This is an unfortunate result of being human; we do get old, and we will be wise if we recognize that fact. The proper method is to fix a flexible age limit, and have a system of pensions.

We look with horror on the proposition to retire a faithful servant who has given the best years of his life to our work, but the service will suffer if some provision is not made for such a certain contingency, and I recommend this subject to your consideration, which, perhaps, can best be solved by a reference to the civil service commission.

FREE EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

In my address to your honorable body a year ago, I had the pleasure of announcing the formation of a board of commissioners to manage the free employment bureau, to go into effect May 1, and I am gratified to state now that it has succeeded beyond our expectations. As stated then it was somewhat in the nature of an experiment and it was not considered wise to incur any more expense than possible, consequently advantage was taken of spare room at the Armory and the office located there.

By the report which is appended it would seem as if the scheme had passed

The Letter Carriers Are Busy.

Like the employes of the agricultural department, the letter carriers seem to be ignoring the order of the president prohibiting the attempt to influence legislation. Members of congress say that they still get almost daily reminders from constituents that a bill is pending for the increase of the pay of letter carriers. Most of these letters are from persons not in the service, but it is said that many of them are penned by men who wear the government gray. Members of congress, however, do not seem to be concerned over this fact and show little disposition to refer such letters to the authorities for investigation. The members of the United States civil service commission are on a keen search for such letters and will not hesitate to haul the offender up if one can be caught. The commission was recently considering whether or not it could put a stop to the activity of the official organ of the letter carriers, which is urging congress to pass the increase of salary bill. It was decided that although the editors of this paper are supported by the carriers, the commission could not properly push them for trying to have the pending measure adopted. In all probability the letter carriers will get their bill passed. They are naturally greatly interested in the measure and it is not strange that they do everything possible to further it, even to practically violating the president's order.

The Public Building Grab-Bag.

The time is at hand when the watchdog of the treasury must be turned loose and urged on to do his duty as the protector of the public funds. This is necessary for Chairman Mercer, of the committee on public buildings of the house is about ready to pass upon the various building measures that are before his committee. There are 377 of these bills, aggregating something like $50,000,000. There has been no general legislation for public buildings for a couple of years, and as soon as it became known that some money would be allotted for this purpose during the present session, there was a rush to file bills. Some of the economists are much disturbed over the prospect of wholesale passage of these measures, but after Chairman Mercer gets through the examination of them the total will be very materially reduced. A number of statements have been circulated regarding the reckless attack that has been made on the treasury through this medium, and attention has been called to the incongruity of putting up million-dollar postoffices and federal courts in towns of 5000 and 10,000 inhabitants, as is proposed by some hustling congressmen. Chairman Mercer has obtained a mass of information regarding each city for which a public building bill has been presented. This has been tabulated in regular form so that the committee can tell without much difficulty just what the situation is in each locality. The weeding out process will begin at once when such bills as are plainly unreasonable will be dropped. This will be kept up until the committee has got rid of all measures except those that can be supported on the floor of the house. These will then be favorably acted on and reported. The public building bill, like the rivers and harbors bill, appears to some congressmen to be a regular grab bag and they seem to be determined to get all there is in it. Public buildings are of course, a necessity and should be built wherever there is a just demand for them, but the committee should see that no unnecessary raids are made on the treasury.

THE MAYOR'S MESSAGE.

The Herald presents to its readers today the annual message of Mayor Hugo to the common council. It is a lengthy document, but it contains so many matters of interest to the citizens that it deserves careful reading. The messages of the mayor of a city are in many respects of far greater importance to the taxpayers of the municipality with whose affairs it deals than are the messages of the president of the United States.

Mayor Hugo has dealt in a thorough manner with all the questions that are now prominent in connection with the city government, and has made a number of recommendations that deserve careful consideration from the aldermen and the citizens generally. Chief among these recommendations are the following: Placing all electric wires underground; acquisition by the city of the West Duluth water plant; purchase of public playgrounds and parks; a pension system retiring aged city employes; a revaluation of all real estate in 1904; the purchase of a good fire fighting tug; the organization of a meunted police squad; opening the new public library with appropriate ceremonies; another submission of the defeated charter amendments; municipal inspection of all plumbing; building of a new detention hospital; better observance of fire limit regulations; restriction of permits for moving houses about the city; municipal supervision of bill board advertising; building of sanitary sewers at West Duluth; close watching of corporations with local franchises.

These recommendations constitute a program of work for the new council that should keep that body very busy during the coming year. There is another suggestion which The Herald would add—that an electric inspector be appointed by the city to supervise all construction, both outside and inside, by the telegraph, telephone and electric light companies, with full control over the placing of wires and the adoption of precautions for the safety of the public.

JOHN P. ALTGELD.

An able and really remarkable man was ex-Governor John P. Altgeld, of Illinois, whose sudden death is announced today. Mr. Altgeld died as he had lived, pleading the cause of the lowly and oppressed, being stricken with his fatal illness at the close of a lengthy and impassioned speech in behalf of the liberty-loving Boers, who are making a gallant struggle against tremendous odds to maintain the independence of their little republics in South Africa. He was the principal speaker at a pro-Boer meeting at Joliet, Ill., last night, and is said to have spoken with an unusual amount of energy and feeling. Evidently he over-strained his already weakened physical powers, and at the close of his speech he was seized with a severe spasm, at midnight became unconscious and seven hours later he had passed into the other world. It was a shockingly sudden ending to a life of great usefulness.

Governor Altgeld was a much misunderstood man. He possessed strong convictions and was so intense in the expression of his views on all public questions that he created many enmities and caused much bitter feeling on the part of many from whose views he differed. Yet in private life he was genial and sociable and made many strong friendships. His honesty and integrity were unquestioned and his sympathy with the poorer classes, although he was himself a comparatively rich man, was well known.

Governor Altgeld was born in Germany in 1847, but at a very early age he came to America, where his father took a farm in the state of Ohio. When 16 years of age he entered the Union army and carried a musket for six months in the campaign around Richmond. Afterward he taught school in Ohio. In the spring of 1869, when 21 years old, he started to seek his fortune in the growing West. Traveling across Southern Illinois on foot with a limited amount of loose change, but with the same quiet, invincible spirit of determination to get there that distinguished him ever afterward and landed him well up on the ladder of fortune, he arrived at the Mississippi river opposite St. Louis with undiminished energy and 15 cents in his pocket. After working awhile in St. Louis he went to Southern Kansas, which was having a boom. Here he was taken sick and in that new country was reduced to severe straits. Again native grit pulled him through, he walking 100 miles in his bare feet across the open prairie in order to get north. He then settled in Northeastern Missouri, where he taught school and studied law.

In 1872 he was admitted to the bar. His ability and tireless perseverance had already become so well known that he was immediately appointed city attorney of Savannah. Subsequently elected states' attorney of Andrews county, he soon became known as one of the foremost lawyers of that part of the state. Feeling the need of a larger field, he resigned in 1875 and went to Chicago. He soon built up a large practice, his connection with the Storey will case bringing him into prominence. Inevitably drifting into politics, for which he seems to have had a natural bent, he was nominated in 1884 to congress from the Fourth district, comprising the North Eide and several country districts. He was defeated, but increased the Democratic vote by several thousand. In 1886 he was nominated for a superior court judgeship, was endorsed by the Knights of Labor and after a hot fight elected by 15,000 votes, the Knights of Labor giving him 26,000 votes. As a judge he discharged his duties ably and fearlessly, dealing out even-handed justice, and, besides being a hard worker on the bench, found time to build a number of downtown mercantile blocks.

In 1892 he became the Democratic candidate for governor of Illinois and was elected by a large majority. He ably discharged the duties of governor. While filling that position he aroused much hostile comment by pardoning the Chicago anarchists. His reasons for this action have been much misrepresented. It was not due to sympathy with anarchism, but because he was convinced that they were unjustly convicted that he extended the executive clemency to these men. He was defeated for re-election to the governorship and thereafter devoted most of his time to his large private interests. The failure of the Globe bank of Chicago swept away a large part of his fortune and his health was much impaired by the shock. During recent years he has delivered numerous lectures and addresses throughout the country, particularly in denunciation of the Republican policy towards the Filipinos and in behalf of the Boer patriots in South Africa.

Governor Altgeld also found time somewhere for literary work, and in addition to various papers on the questions of the day published two works on "Our Penal Machinery and Its Victims" and "Live Questions." He was a firm believer in the individualist theory and in the dignity and manhood of the individual, and thougat that about all the advance made in art, science, industry, or government was the result of individual effort, which has forced progress, while the government and officialism have oppressed it until pressure from the people has caused a move forward.

HASTY LEGISLATION.

The senate finance committee is still struggling with the house bill repealing the war revenue taxes, but has thus far been unable to come to a satisfactory conclusion. It was amended in various ways at yesterday's session, but is not yet in a desirable form. As a matter of fact, the bill has been found to be loosely drawn, and it may be necessary to report an entire substitute for the measure. It is not the purpose of the committee to change the intention of the bill to repeal all the war taxes, but only to put it into language that will carry out that intention.

The most serious defect is said to be in the tobacco schedule, which in the form passed by the house would not only remove the war tax, but in all probability would also reduce it below the rate which existed before the passage of the house bill. It provides that the tobacco section of the war revenue act and the amendments to it by the law of last March shall be repealed and in lieu of the tax of 12 cents per pound now imposed by law on manufactured tobacco, snuff, etc., the rate shall be 6 cents a pound. The reduction made by the act of last March, however, was not accomplished by specific amendment of the tobacco section of the war revenue act. A separate paragraph provided merely for a rebate of 20 per cent on the tobacco stamps sold, which practically reduced the tax from 12 cents to 9 6-10 cents per pound. As that provision is not repealed by the house bill, which fixes the rate at 6 cents a pound, the tobacco manufacturers would still be entitled to the rebate of 20 per cent, and the tax would therefore be 3 8-10 cents a pound.

A great many bills are carelessly drawn, especially so when prepared in a hurry, and very frequently, if a popular measure, are rushed through without due consideration. This was the case with the repeal bill in the house, and it is fortunate that the defects have been discovered by the senate committee. The bill can now be properly prepared and then passed in a form where it will be effective and not injurious.

A Washington dispatch to the Minneapolis Journal says the millers are in a fair way to get what they want in the matter of importation of Canadian wheat, grinding it into flour and by-products and exporting the manufactured articles without the necessity of waiting for the payment of rebates of duty or for paying any duty at all. The idea is to establish a bonded manufacturing warehouse. The collector has been directed to secure the necessary bond required under the treasury rgulations. Under these regulations one entire mill must be set aside for the manufacture of export flour from Canadian wheat. It is specially provided that nothing but this kind of wheat shall be ground in the bonded mill. All importing and exporting must be done under the supervision of a storekeeper of customs. Not a scrap of residue of wheat is to remain in this country. This plan is good as far as it goes, but it is not entirely satisfactory. Perhaps it is the entering wedge and will result in enabling all mills at Minneapolis and the head of the lakes to grind Manitoba wheat in bond.

Ferdinand W. Peck, who was vice president of the Columbian exposition and United States commissioner general at the Paris exposition, is quoted as saying regarding the St. Louis world's fair: "I believe the coming show will be greater than any which has yet been held. There have been nine years of progress since the world's fair at Chicago, and the St. Louis fair should be better by that much. I am very much interested in this project, both as a citizen and because I have had considerable experience in international expositions." The Minnesota legislature appropriated $50,000 for a state exhibit. This sum is not enough. It should be increased to $200,000 by the next legislature.

The millers of the Northwest want reciprocity, and it is not surprising to learn that the attitude of the Minnesota delegation in congress upon this question, so vital to the business interests of the state, does not please the men who are making the export flour. The millers want reciprocity, not only with Cuba, but with European nations, and they believe it is bound to come. They would like to see the Minnesota delegation leading the movement, instead of blocking the way. It may be necessary to send to Washington next year men who will not misrepresent the Northwest.

Governor Taft's remark that the average American cannot remain longer than three years in the Philippines because of his health, leads the Atlanta Journal to remark that it doesn't make any difference; we are not in the Philippines for our health, anyway.

The special session of the legislature did not do much, but the Duluth members covered themselves with glory by preventing some legislation that would have greatly injured this city.

Intolerance has its merits as is shown by the fact that the citezens of Alton, Ill., will not permit a big, healthy slob who is too lazy to support his family to live in that town.

Goodbye, Heinrich. Tell the kaiser he should also take a trip to America. He can be assured of a good time.

"Some days must be dark and dreary," says an exchange. But not in Duluth; this is the land of perpetual sunshine.

Seen From The "L"

By Hildegarde Hawthorne.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

Washburne came into the club hurriedly and asked the boy at the desk if there had been a call for him on the 'phone. There had not, and he seemed relieved. Seeing Thorndyke in the corner he sat down beside him.

"I saw a mighty pretty girl as I came up the block," he observed. "You catch sight of a face now and then that strikes you so forcibly you'll feel sure you'll never forget it."

"I saw a face once for about a second that I've never forgotten, nor ever shall," Thorndyke replied, slowly. "It was a woman's."

"I suppose she was the limit?"

"Well, no, I shouldn't call her exactly beautiful; but interesting—decidedly interesting."

"Let's have it."

"I'd been busy down town and got through in time to take one of the early expresses to Harlem, where I was living then. Got a cross seat by the window, and settled down snugly with my paper. There was the usual crowd, for it was Christmas week and the Universe seemed to be crammed into the 'L' cars every afternoon. People hanging to every strap and fat men squeezing in at every stop. But presently we left the last station and started into the regular express swing. I finished my extra and folded it preparatory to sticking it into my pocket, when a headline, 'Stabbed to Death,' caught my eye, and I read the story idly enough. A woman had stabbed her lover in their flat uptown, jealousy the motive, and then walked off to drown herself. Ordinary enough, you'll say? Yes, but—"

"Just as I finished reading I turned my head and looked out. Directly opposite was a large open window, through which was visible part of a room. A beam from the setting sun shone into this room and sitting in a chair facing me, but bending over reading what looked like a letter was a man. His head was too low for me to see his face. At the very moment in which I looked at him a woman stepped from behind a door or curtain, raised her arm, and I saw the gleam of a knife, which, with a movement quick as light, she buried between the man's shoulders. As he fell forward she lifted her face and our eyes met.

"All this took place in a second of time —the man reading, the step and the knife thrust, the uplifted face, our eyes meeting over the dying. It was gone in a breath, the train was flying on and I sat rigid before the window, trying to find myself. I couldn't realize the actuality of the thing—it had followed the reading of the murder in the paper like cause and effect. But that face still seemed to stare at me—white, wild-eyed, the teeth showing between the lips. I should know it anywhere.

"Suddenly the full purport of what I had seen burst upon me. With an inarticulate cry I struggled to my feet. The train lurched at the instant and I was precipitated into the arms of the man opposite, who growled out something about 'Keep still, you d— drunkard.' I suspect I stepped on his pet corn. But it brought me to my senses. I realized it was no use saying anything here. I must wait till I reached One Hundred and Sixteenth street —and then go back to the—but where on earth were we anyway? I glanced out mechanically and saw we were passing Ninety-third street. But several minutes had gone by; I had no idea how far back that window was, one among hundreds. Nothing about the room or place remained to me, nothing but the woman's white face framed in black hair, her wide, black, staring eyes, her parted lips showing her clenched teeth. And I know she'd seen me, too."

Thorndyke puffed at his cigar, took it out of his mouth, looked at the end thoughtfully a moment, and then added:

"Yes, we know each other."

"But that's not all?" exclaimed Washburne excitedly. "Didn't you ever do anything?"

"Of course. But we never discovered anything. It has stopped there, like a picture out of hell. And I haven't seen her again—yet."

"And what would happen if you should run across her some day—say at an afternoon tea?"

"I think"— At this instant the telephone bell rang and Washburne started up with a slightly confused expression. "It—I believe that's for me," he said. "See you later Thorndyke, old man."

MASTERS AND PILOTS.

Executive Board of Association Meets at Detroit.

Detroit, March 12.—About twenty delegates to the executive board of the Masters and Pilots' association having jurisdiction over the ports along the Great Lakes, met here yesterday to organize the board according to the decision of the Grand Harbor at its recent meeting at Washington, D. C. At that meeting it was decided to divide the country into four divisions with an executive board to pass upon matters pertaining to each division. Conforming with that decision, delegates from the harbors at Duluth, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, Port Huron, St. Clair, Marine City, Toledo, Cleveland and Buffalo, met today and selected Capt. E. Doville, of Toledo, chairman, and Capt. M. J. Malleron, of Buffalo, secretary and treasurer. A discussion of rules and plans for a permanent organization took up the time of the entire session.

SIX MILLION EGGS

Received In New York City In One Day.

New York, March 12.—More than 6,000,000eggs were received in New York Tuesday, mostly from the West, and the price dropped to 17 cents. They sold two weeks ago at 37 cents. There is such a demand at present, however, that the dealers say they do not expect any further decline.

High prices for eggs were the result of the severe weather and the using up of the surplus stock held in cold storage. When the weather began to moderate the hen resumed business and large shipments of eggs were made from the far West and Southwest.

There was absolutely no objection to an amendment putting the taxation of vessel property back where the old laws had it. When it came to treating the grain feature there was more opposition, and these amendments did not carry. When the vessel amendments went through the friends of the bill hoped to get Duluth's support by conceding something. When the grain amendments came up the Duluth delegation was regarded as hostile to the bill in any form, and this had something to do with defeating the grain amendments.

The friends of the bill conceded liberally in the hope of saving it. It was generally felt that the fortunes of the Republican state administration hung in the balance, and desperate but unavailing efforts were made to save the bill. It was doomed to defeat, however. Had it gone to the senate it would surely have been slaughtered there, but the house killed it by a small vote. Four or five more votes for the bill would have saved it.

The senate's work was cut out for it, however, though it never had a chance at the tax code. In the moment of triumph following the defeat of the tax code, the opponents of the bill conceded to J. F. Jacobson, of Lac Qui Parle, the right to introduce a bill by unanimous consent. Quick to see his advantage, he put in the Jacobson tax bill, and had it made a special order for two days later. The bill included the franchise tax features of the proposed code, the tax commission, and a new provision for a tonnage tax of 5 cents a ton on iron mones. This bill was driven through the house as though fired from a catapult. When the special order was reached Jacobson began what proved to be one of the most remarkable pieces of legislative engineering ever seen in a Minnesota legislature. He started out his speech in favor of his tax bill by tearing wide asunder the bonds of friendship between he and State Auditor Dunn, because the latter had presumed to oppose the tonnage tax feature. Then he whipped the members of the house into line by telling them that if they voted against his bill they were corrupted by corporate influence. He made little or no argument on the merits of his bill, and in spite of the efforts of the Duluth delegation, who opposed the tonnage tax in particular and the rest of the bill in general, when the vote was taken three hours and a half after the bill was taken up it carried by a vote of 84 to 37.

Then the senate tax committee reported the bill for indefinite postponement, and after some argument the senate adopted that report, and the Jacobson tax bill junior dropped out of sight.

Other attempts to resurrect parts of the proposed code had a better fate. W. B. Anderson, of Winona, made himself the hero of he session by getting through the only tax bills. One of these included the real estate features of the tax code so far as the collection of taxes is concerned, and the other provided for an inheritance tax. These bills, somewhat amended, passed both houses.

One of the things the legislature was committed to was the submission of amendments to the constitution permitting more modern tax legislation than the present constitution allows. The house had a lively fight between the wide-open policy and the restricted policy, the former winning out. The senates' original amendments did not open the doors to any extent, but in the fight to agree upon a set of amendments the house had the greater weight and the amendments finally adopted, while not expressly wide open, in effect leave the way open for a good deal of experimenting in tax legislation.

The wide-open policy would have had more advocates if it had not been for the fear that the legislature could not be trusted under such a free and easy constitution. This fear arose very largely from the manner in which the house passed so important a measure as the Jacobson bill without due consideration, though the senate's action in refusing to receive the bill did much to reinstate the legislature in public confidence.

Among the appropriation bills that go through were the following: Appropriating $25,000 for the anti-merger fight; appropriating $50,000 for a Minnesota exhibit at the St. Louis World's fair; appropriating $54,500 for the expenses of the session; appropriating $11,500 for the public examiner's office.

Sherman Smiths' constitutional convention bill passed the house but did not reach the senate. The bill to make railroad commissioners appointive again instead of elective had votes enough to pass both houses, but it was not pushed because the Republican leaders did not think it was policy to push it.

The only local bill affecting Duluth that was passed was the one taking the independent school district of Duluth out of the operation of the primary election law.

Another amendment to the primary election law that got through was the Schaller bill exempting municipal and school elections in cities under $10,000 from the law.

* * *

The Duluth delegation took a prominent part in the attempt to get the educational institutions of the state out of he hands of the board of control, but the attempt failed. Then the Minneapolis delegation put in a bill taking out the university alone, and this was passed by the senate. In the house the Duluth delegation, particularly Mr. Laybourn, made a fight against it, on the ground that if the university were taken out it would never be possible to get out the normal schools. The defeat of the bill in the house was due largely to Duluth members, and there opposition was due simply to the fact that to take outt he university would leave the normal schools to work by themselves. The Winona delegation was the only one from a normal school community that voted against the Alford bill to take the educational institutions out of the hands of the board of control.

The attempt to pass a law reducing iron ore freight rates came in too late to be passed, though it would have gone through had it been received in time. The Miller resolution, calling on the attorney general to investigate the alleged merger of the two iron range roads passed the senate, but it did not reach the house.

The feeling in St. Paul and elsewhere throughout the state is that the special session, coming as it did on the eve of the campaign, cannot fail to be a leading factor in the state campaign. Republicans are generally down-hearted, for they feel that the special session has been a hard blow to Republicanism in the state. Just what effect it will have the events of the next few months will show. It is accepted pretty generally that Governor Van Sant will have an awful time to be renominated, and that State Auditor Dunn will be out soon as a candidate for governor.

* * *

Duluth got everything it went after this session, and for this reason some of the members of the legislature, who were almost afraid to go home, have been looking with envy upon the Duluth members. The Duluth delegation has been united on everything that was for the interests of the county in general, though it has divided several times where it was a question whether the interests attacked were those of St. Louis county as a whole, or those of certain concerns that give employment to a large number of the inhabitants of the county. George R. Laybourn is looked upon in the house as the leader of the house delegation, and because of his frequent tilts with Jacobson, is regarded as the leader of the opposition to the statesman from Lac Qui Parle. Being a candidate for the senate in the Fifty-third district, Mr. Laybourn will not be in the house next year, and somebody else will have to bear the brunt of Jacobson's attacks. Senator Baldwin, the only Democrat in the St. Louis county bunch, has always been a strong man in the legislature, but because of his stand on the franchise corporation tax and the bill cutting iron ore freights, he has placed himself in a position to be a senate leader, even though he is a Democrat in a strongly Republican body.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

FRUITLESS

Conference of House Republicans on Reciprocity Avails Nothing.

Washington, March 12.—The fourth conference of the house Republicans in the reciprocity question was fruitless, like those that preceded it, the conference adjourning until next Tuesday. The victory was with the advocates of the reciprocity as the motion to adjourn was carried, 72 to 54, after a motion to amend the motion to make it a sine die adjournment, offered by Mr. Littlefield, of Maine, one of the leaders of the opposition, had been voted down, 61 to 79. The motion to adjourn was made by Speaker Henderson, and the opponents of reciprocity claimed after the adjournment that some of their friends did not care to offend the speaker by declining to heed his appeal for a further conference.

Earlier in the evening the opponents of reciprocity had insisted on a vote last night upon the main proposition. The session was a stormy one. Mr. Sibley, of Pennsylvania, offered a compromise proposition for the reciprocity arrangement to last until December 1, 1903, which he claimed had the approval and endorsement of President Roosevelt. He also said he had assurances that if the house granted a 20 per cent concession the senate would not increase it.

About 130 members were present. Speaker Henderson and the leaders on both sides of the controversy were in attendance. Representative Cannon, of Illinois, presided, and an arrangement was made for a division of the time between the advocates and opponents of reciprocity. Representative Long, of Kansas, a member of the ways and means committee, opened with an exhaustive argument in favor of the 20 per cent concessions advocated by the colleagues of the ways and means committee.

He argued that the maintenance of a protective tariff was not involved in the proposition of the ways and means committee, but that the policy of reciprocity was. "The defeat of his bill,' said he, "means that the Republican party has refused to follow the leadership of Blaine, or McKinley and of Roosevelt, and it would mean that reciprocity was no longer a part of the Republican party."

He opposed reciprocity with Cuba, he said, not only because it would be helpful to Cuba, but because he believed we would get an adequate return.

When Mr. Long finished speaking, Mr. Taylor, of Ohio, presented a protest against the plan of the ways and means committee. The report was drafted with the conference which the Republicans opposed to reciprocity held Monday night. It was in the nature of a manifesto, setting out the grounds on which their opposition was based, being largely an amplification of the contention that a reduction of the duty on Cuban reciprocity involved a relaxation of the protective principle. Congressmen Smith, of Michigan, and Dick, of Ohio, also opposed reciprocity.

Mr. Jenkins, of Wisconsin, advanced the novel theory that Cuba was now and had been since the treaty of Paris under the sovereignty of the United States. His contention was that Cuba was United States territory; that the people of Cuba might be permitted to erect a government, but not one of sovereignty.

Lazy, Sluggish Liver and Kidneys.

ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR PRETTY NEARLY ALL THE DISEASES KNOWN TO MEDICAL SCIENCE.

KEEP THESE ORGANS IN GOOD WORKING ORDER BY THE USE OF SMITH'S GREEN MOUNTAIN RENOVATOR.

Most everything that can possibly be the matter with a person is due to bad blood conditions, and these are in turn due to bad liver and kidneys.

If your blood is pure, rich and plentiful, disease simply can't get into your system. The trouble is, though, that people neglect a lazy liver and diseased kidneys, and the moment they fail to do their work properly the impurities which they are intended to get rid of pass into the blood; then the trouble commences.

Women with thin, poisoned blood suffer from all sorts of diseases peculiar to the sex, and men have rheumatism, scrofula and other diseases, as well as getting into a condition so weak and enfeebled that they are scarcely able to attend to their usual business.

All this can be avoided by keeping the blood pure and rich by the use of SMITH'S GREEN MOUNTAIN RENOVATOR. This medicine doesn't waste a moment's time, but goes right to the spot where the trouble is, and, as its name indicates, renovates and cleanses until everything is working in perfect order, and you are on the high road to health and strength again.

This medicine is made just as it has been made for many years from the roots and herbs of the Vermont Mountains. Nature intended these roots and herbs for just the purpose we put them to in this medicine, and when you follow Nature's leading, you can't go wrong.

This medicine has always been highly popular in its own home, although it was not advertised. Now everybody can get it. Its present owners are distributing it all over the country, and we are the sole agents here.

Take it in the spring as a matter of precaution, because everybody needs its cleansing powers then.

Take it all the year 'round when you don't feel right, and it will do you good.

If you find that it doesn't, you are always welcome to your money back.

MAYOR'S MESSAGE

the experimental stage, and a more advantageous and convenient site is warranted. The report is merely statistical, but I am informed that the work of the bureau is much appreciated by the working men and does much good.

The need now, as stated to me, is for a removal of the office to some more convenient locality, and if such can be secured at a reasonable rental, in a satisfactory place, not tributary to a saloon, it may be well to allow the board to move their quarters if they desire, but I would prefer to have it remain where it is rather than have a branch of the city's business run in some of the localities suggested.

I do not believe the city wants to attempt to help those who cannot be helped while in the vicinity of a saloon, and if they will not take the trouble to seek our help because it is in another locality perhaps it is as well to let them do likewise. I do not believe the city is called on to do more than place freely at the disposal of those needing employment our help and assistance, and a deserving person will not object to a walk of an extra block or so.

CHARTER COMMISSION.

Several propositions were presented to the commission for consideration by you. Amendments to the charter were prepared by them and submitted to the voters at the election of Feb. 4, 1902, but all were rejected. In my opinion these amendments should be resubmitted at the fall or a special election, when they can be printed on, and form a separate ballot.

I do not believe all these amendments were rejected because of objections to them, but because of those who did not care enough, or understand them sufficiently to vote either way, but who voted against by reason of not voting at all. Also because too many amendments were submitted at one time, and they were at the foot of the ballot. By the time the voter had expressed his preference for many and alderman, his civic interest had passed away.

It is going to be extremely difficult to secure the public approval of even the most meretorious and necesary amendments to the charter unless some persons are interested enough in their passage to spend time or money sufficient to thoroughly explain the meaning and import of them, and demonstrate that it is for their interest to vote in the affirmative.

SALARY OF FIRE COMMISSIONERS.

One matter which I desire to call to your attention will properly come before this commission, (although having connection with the fire department), and it is here mentioned on that account.

Section 477 of the Duluth city charter prescribes that the "board of fire commissioners" shall each receive $300, as annual salary, while section 478, says that members of the "board of fire commissioners" shall receive no compensation for their services, "but shall be paid all actual and necessary expenses incurred in performing their official duties," classing them with all the other boards and commissions, except the board of public works, whose duties require their constant attention.

While we are certainly indebted to the gentlemen who constitute the board of fire commissioners for faithful services rendered in the public interest, the same remarks apply to all those composing all the boards, whose labors are as onerous as those of the fire commissioners, and there is no provision for paying salaries to them.

I am informed by members of the original charter commission, that they had no intention to provide for the fire commissioners any more than the others, any salary, but in order to avoid making enemies for the whole charter they inserted the above mentioned clause in section 477, without altering that referring to the fire commissioners in section 478, that standing as originally drafted.

The board of fire commissioners have a secretary and an expert chief, they meet once a month regularly, and oftener if required, their duties conforming closely to that of the other boards. Under these conditions of uncertainty as to whether or not any salary should be paid to the fire commissioners, none being paid to the other boards, and the manner in which the addition to section 477, was secured, I desire to recommend to you the consideration of an amendment to the charter whereby this question of salary may be definitely stated. As this cannot be acted on for some time, I have secured from the new appointee as a member of the board, a stipulation that he will not receive any remuneration for his services.

HEALTH AND SANITATION.

The health of the city, as shown by the report of the health department is first-class, and excelled by none. We seem to have the spread of infectious diseases well in hand, thanks to the preventive measures taken, and the sanitary regulations enforced.

During the past year a health board has been organized and the business experience of the gentlemen composing it has been of great assistance to the health commissioner.

Of the amount spent on account of infectious diseases $760.6 has been received back from St. Louis county, the state of Minnesota, the United States government and private individuals, and it is expected that all or a reasonably proportion of the extraordinary expenditures will eventually find their way back to the city treasury.

From the recent experience with infectious diseases there are some lessons to be learned, and while there is no desire to pose as one skilled in the handling of such matters, it is suggested for your consideration that unsanitary conditions are expensive luxuries, we cannot afford them; that it is better to have good sanitary conditions in a municipality thereby defying epidemics, than the most elaborate system of fighting them after they have obtained a foot-hold. That while it may be desirable to point out with pride to our visitors our buildings and public possessions, it is equally as desirable that we have no dirty streets or alleys or unhealthy living conditions that we are inclined to hide from the public notice; that every taxpayer is individually interested in these improved sanitary conditions, not only on account of its influence on his tax receipt, but because of the claims of charity on him, be it a state, city, improvement or individual, leading to pauperism, vice and misery, and the general bad record of the city in which he resides.

It is therefore suggested that each citizen of Duluth should show his appreciation of his citizenship by doing his share of the general spring clean up, and assisting the proper authorities in the discharge of their duties, and then continue his efforts until the next spring, spasmodic cleanliness is of little value.

I particularly call your attention to the practical suggestions made by the health commissioner to your honorable body in his annual report, in reference to the removal of garbage, etc., and the difficulties encountered from want of proper authority in the cleaning up process, and the placing of the city in a sanitary condition. These matters should be dealt with in a firm manner and the department given every reasonable facility for enforcing its demands. I call your attention to the need of a detention hospital in a moderate cost in which infectious or contagious diseases might be treated without endangering the general health of the community. This seems to be the opinion of those familiar with the needs in such cases and it is well to take advice some time, especially when the public health is concerned.

PLUMBING INSPECTION.

Numerous requests have been made for the establishment of a plumbing inspection system, coming from householders as well as the working men, the reason given being that the health of the household may be seriously and permanently impaired through the neglect of known precautions, and to the unlitated the discovery of these neglects is problematical, the first knowledge coming with the doctor's bill.

The charter places the control of the inspection with the board of health (although it should be with the building inspector) and I recommend the appointment of such an inspector of plumbing, and the adoption of a fee which will make the office self-supporting.

All such positions should be paid for by those taking advantage of the services offered by the city, and not made a burden on the general taxpayer. If appointed a separate account should be kept of the receipts and disbursements.

WATER AND LIGHT BOARD.

The report of the water and light department must be gratifying to all friends of municipal ownership, when it can be said that but two other cities have the advantage over Duluth in the low cost of the operating expenses of its pumping plant per million gallons raised one foot high; that there is a decrease in rates and an increase in profits, showing machinery adapted to its work, and careful manipulation.

The increased consumption of gas will soon solve the problem in cheap lighting and every encouragement should be given to the building up of this branch of the city's possessions, for with increased consumption comes reduced rates, and every citizen should be interested in the plant, in which he is a stockholder to the extent, at least, of patronizing his own goods.

The extension of the water and gas systems to the normal school, thence to Woodland, will give relief to that suburb, and will simplify the problem of furnishing the citizens all along the side hill above the reservoir, with light and water. Highland still remains sadly in need of water, and every effort should be made to furnish it to that suburb, as soon as practicable.

The policy of the city government being in favor of eight hours as the length of a working day, the question of its adoption by the water and light board was brought to their attention and I am pleased to say that arrangements have been made whereby on May 1 all the departments under this board will have the benefit of this reduction in hours.

BUILDING INSPECTOR.

The work of the building inspector's office has not only been self-supporting, but has netted the city $541.72, and to this department should be added the electrical inspection.

At present the electrical inspection, while satisfactory from a workmanship point of view, does not seem to be looked on with the favor it would if under the building inspector's department where it belongs naturally, rather than under the fire commissioners where it is at present as a matter of convenience.

For the electrical inspection a fee should be charged sufficient to make this branch self-supporting, and I find quite a general desire on the part of builders and owners of property to secure the services of such an inspection, if it was available.

I would not, however, recommend going into this matter without a thorough examination of the whole question and a satisfactory knowledge that the city would not be called on to make up any deficiency, and that it would be self-supporting; separate accounts of the receipts and disbursements of each branch of the building inspector's department should be kept.

BUILDING PERMITS.

I desire to call your attention again to the injustice done to adjoining property owners in granting permits by the council to erect sheds and outhouses of studding covered with corrugated iron.

This, if strictly adhered to, is a menace, but a greater menace than a structure is erected it is soon after "improved" or "repaired" by ceiling up inside with wood when it becomes the most dangerous kind of a structure, and there is nothing which tends to raise insurance rates more readily, and I am of the opinion that within the fire limits such permits should not be granted, or some restrictions with a heavy penalty, such as compulsory removal, if such a structure is afterwards changed in the method of construction.

If we have a raise of insurance rates in Duluth, the average rate of which is high, it will be an important cause for it. That such permits have been granted in the past should not be any reason for continuing the mistake, but one you can as well stop now as at any time. The sooner the better for the city.

HOUSE MOVING.

I also desire to call your attention to the practice of persons desiring to move houses or sheds, holding off till the last moment, then petition the council for permission to change locations, and urging the hasty passage of the resolution in the hope, many times, that insufficient investigation will be made; frequently no notice is given to the property owners before action is passed or approved and the structure is in the street before any person knows anything about it, the parties claiming the aldermen said it was all right.

I think it would be well to defer the moving until the permit is issued, and have the proper officials, not the aldermen, give the word.

PARKS.

With Fairmount park, secured in April, 1901, West Duluth is now supplied with the grounds for a handsome addition to the park system, and all parts of the city are well supplied, further expenditure for some time should be confined to the improvement of those spots now owned by the city, and the securing of the beach drive on Park Point, which, in connection with the new ship canal bridge will be most desirable.

ASSESSMENT FOR PARK PURPOSES.

As locations are specially benefited by the location of parks and drives, the right of the park board to raise money to pay for these public improvements by assessments should be exercised in a moderate degree, now the main park system is secured.

TREE PLANTING.

Except for the purchase of Fairmount park the expenditures have been mainly for maintenance with a small amount spent for trees, and in this connection it may be well to remind the citizens of Duluth who desire to beautify their surroundings that the board is prepared to furnish trees on very reasonable terms, and that on petition presented to the board, property owners may have trees set on such streets as they are willing to assess themselves for, the cost being comparatively small, while the improved appearance of a street so beautified is most satisfactory.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS.

In connection with the work on the parks proper, I unhesitatingly recommend the establishment of play grounds. Our outdoor season is none too long and places throughout the city (even in lots not now owned by the city) could at a little expense be made available for such purposes.

There are few people owning vacant property who would not be willing to allow it to be used for such purposes, under reasonable restrictions. In this way children can be kept off the streets an enjoy rational exercise and amusement. Let our civic improvement association or Y. M. C. A. provide apparatus and instructors, if necessary, and thus do more towards solving the hoodlum problem than a thousand homilys.

In this, as in all similar cases, there is little use in telling people to "don't" unless you provide something better for them to do. The experience of cities where such playgrounds have been instituted has been most satisfactory.

SMALL PARKS.

While as proud of our park system as any other citizen, I would call to your attention the necessity for little parkettes, if you please, scattered throughout the city, which can be enjoyed without paying tribute to the street car company, and this remark applies to the play grounds. They should be handy.

In the improvement of the main park system preference should be given to those sections patronized by most, and in proportion to the use made by the public of such park privileges.

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT.

I can but refer to my remarks of a year ago concerning the necessity for active co-operation of the citizens in all matters looking towards the cleaning and beautifying of the city. Last spring an appeal was made to the citizens in this connection and nobly responded to, and we can imagine that with such a hearty response where there was no organization how much more effective would the work be if by concentrated action, properly directed, the citizens generally would respond.

The entrance of the Women's association into the arena to combat against dirt, slovenliness, unsanitary conditions, and inartistic effects gives promise of results that cannot fail to be beneficial to the city at large. Properly directed it will possess the confidence of the people generally, and as there is little danger of the present contention and association degenerating into "common scolds," they will have the co-operation of the public officials.

Under other headings some matters have been brought to your attention which might properly be repeated here, but in addition to them, I desire to call your attention to some others which will also be in the nature of civic improvements.

STREET SPRINKLING HYDRANTS.

The installation of special hydrants for filling street sprinklers is needed; the experience of the past is against the use of fire hydrants for such purposes. When so used the pressure is on the hydrant all the time, and when needed for fire purposes it frequently happens that for some reasonable scheme of neighborhood improvement. The presence of these lots mar the whole of the otherwise fair page.

Only the influence of the pressure of public opinon will accomplish anything in that direction, and some less cumbersome and more speedy method of dealing with accumulations of snow and ice must be evolved if we wish to have clear and safe sidewalks.

Other matters which come under this head are the breaking of the concrete walks by the impact of the heavy weights thrown from the seat of a vehicle to hold the horse. The damage on this account along Superior street is very noticeable.

The throwing of paper on the streets and avanues; the sweeping of store dirt out on to the street; sweeping dirty water on to the sidewalk; exposing goods for sale on the street, outside the store, and many other nuisances can be reversed by public sentiment.

BILL BOARDS.

To prevent the increase of the unsightly and dangerous bill boards which are scattered over the most prominent portions of the city, I should recommend that the privilege for erecting such be rented, and so that the city may receive a revenue from them, and have something to say as to their construction and location.

WEST DULUTH WATER PLANT.

A very important question that must soon occupy your attention is the West Duluth water plant which is now being investigated by the city engineer.

It is very important that this system should be owned by the city, and purchased at a fair price. The long franchise under which they operate, and the high price charged for hydrant rental make it advisable that we should have control over it as a part of our general system. When we have secured it the rates charged at West Duluth can be reduced to a uniformity with those prevailing in the older portions of the city.

I urge that the council take this matter up in earnest. If a conference can be had with the representatives of the West Duluth plant, and a price agreed on that is reasonable all things considered, that should be done, and the delays of litigation avoided. If the water company or its receivers or bondholders refuse to make a fair and just proposal for the sale of the plant, I urge that condemnation proceedings be instituted, and vigorously carried on until the city is the owner of the plant.

STREET RAILWAY SYSTEM.

Our street railway system has been considerably improved during the past year by double truck cars being placed on the Interstate and Lakeside runs. There is, however, much dissatisfaction concerning the condition of the up-the-hill lines, principally the road-bed, although we are assured that these matters will, in due time, receive attention.

Strenuous efforts are being made by the citizens of West Duluth to secure better cars and better service, and to that end the plan of abandoning the bridge over the Northern Pacific right-of-way and going under the tracks is being investigated so that with safety the double truck cars may run and make better time.

This question of heavier cars brings up the question of bridges, because our wooden structures are about at the end of their sale natural life, and extensive repairs or new ones must be provided for.

The Seventh avenue Incline has been remodelled and an electric service established. It it was not for the mistake in having the car too small I believe, with the 15-minute service to Fourth street, this would be a very popular method of getting up the hill.

The courts have sustained the action to compel the street railway company to extend their system on West Third street, it is believed that the portion on the city tributary to that line will soon build up.

ROADS.

An important move was made when it was decided to open up a road to Fond du Lac. This will put us in closer communication with that beautiful portion of our city and benefit both them and us.

I would again urge the extension of roads which will facilitate the movements of the farmers who are anxious to get to Duluth. The enumber of them is increasing fast, and we cannot do better than encourage them by all means in our power.

DULUTH TELEPHONE COMPANY.

The case of the city against the Duluth Telephone company is being pushed in the supreme court of the highest jurisdiction it can be placed in, and the final decision may be looked for within a reasonable time. As soon as that decision is made known it will be time enough to discuss the next step to be taken to protect the best interests of the citizens of Duluth.

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES

Section 463, Duluth city charter, requires every person or corporation exercising any franchise in the city of Duluth to file an annual report on the first Monday in February of each year under penalty. This provision seems to have been overlooked, and I recommend that a compliance therewith be insisted on.

Section 464, gives the city power to regulate and control the maximum price to be charged for the service rendered to any person by any person or corporation exercising any franchise.

In my opinion it would be well to ascertain the rates charged in other cities for any of these services rendered under a city franchise, and what is a reasonable price, in order that information may be available on which to base knowledge as to whether or not our citizens are securing all the benefits possible from the permission given the person or corporation exercising such franchises to occupy public property, and to operate under a practically monopolistic freedom from competition.

I also desire to call your attention to the provisions of section 8 of the ordinance granting a franshise to R. H. Evans, under which the Zenith Telephone company is now operating its plant. This section requires the owner of the franchise to use at stated periods verified statements showing the expense of construction of the plant. It is very important that the city insist upon his provision of the franchise being fully complied with, as it will give the city full knowledge of the cost of the plant, when at the time fixed by section seven (7), of the franchise the city shall have a right to purchase the plant in the manner therein provided.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING.

A year ago there was before the common council the report of the light commission and the report of the expert electrical engineer, and since then a contract has been made with the Commercial Light and Power company to furnish the city with 327 arc lights of the series alternating system of inclosed lamps of practically 9½ amperes and 70 volts rating for $55 per lamp per year, all night and every night, and bunches of two incandescent lights sixteen candle power, located in Lakeside, Hunter's Park, Woodland, Duluth Heights and Park Point, at a rate of $18 per year for each bunch.

The light company furnishes free, one arc light on each improved park, and the lights used in the city hall for all purposes.

This settles very satisfactorily the city lighting for five years, by which time the city will be in better position to undertake its own lighting. In the meantime it secures its lighting for less sum than it could operate its own plant and furnish it, and the system of incandescent lighting allows us to provide a reasonably satisfactory lighting of the outlying portions of the city at cheap rates.

RAILROAD STREET.

The committee appointed by you to secure the extension of Railroad street has met, plans have been prepared and submitted to several of the property owners interested.

The question was not an easy one to solve; but two ways were practical, one to get up on to the Garfield avenue viaduct, crossing the elevated tracks of the Eastern Minnesota railway, and the other a surface grade crossing connecting with the Garfield avenue viaduct at the foot of the southerly approach.

To the first the property owners on Railroad street at the westerly end object, besides, it would be a useless camb for teams desiring to go southwards, because as soon as they got up to the top of the approach they would immediately go down again, and there would be an overhead grade crossing. The objection to the second proposition is the surface grade crossing over several busy tracks.

The plans will be submitted to the interested railroad companies as soon as possible.

CONCLUSION.

Having brought to your attention some of the more important subjects connected with the affairs of the city as briefly as possible under the circumstances, it must not be considered that the catalogue has been exhausted, even if your patience has. No person can appreciate the multitude of questions that force themselves to our attention, except by going over the list in detail and then allowing a large margin for contingencies which may arise in the future.

These matters must be approached in a broad businesslike manner if we would prove worthy of the trust reposed in us. We must appreciate the fact that this is a progressive age, and what were luxuries twenty years ago are necessities now. We demand more and better things from the city administration; the duties of the officials are ever widening; and our wants are continually increasing.

Still our paramount duty is to guard the interests of the taxpayers by not hastily plunging into fields not thoroughly explored, doing thoroughly, what is done, economizing in every direction, and endeavoring to make of our municipality a dear, beautiful city of homes.

There should be but one law for the rich and the poor, and public opinion after all is the great interpreter of that law. There should be no special privileges, and as far as I am able to prevent it there will be none, and any citizen who submits to anything that savors of blackmail, or chooses to use a bribe does so because he wishes to do so, because if known there is no office so high that it cannot be reached by due process of law, and the process will be set in motion upon the proper presentation of the facts, and prompt service is guaranteed.

There are some persons who are continually endeavoring to prostitute the public services; the person who wants something he ought not to have; the person who wants to do something he should not do, or the person who has something he should not have, or has done something he should not have done. The person who wants to have or to do what is right and proper in conformity with the law never should have any trouble in securing it, or of being called on to pay for it, except as the law requires, beyond that the administration owes him protection, and we will be glad to receive information concerning purchased immunity from punishment for wrong-doing, or purchased privileges.

I know of no privileges for sale, or immunity that can be purchased.

Much can be done by individuals to assist the officials in the discharge of their duties, and at all times proper suggestions will be received, and are invited; courteous consideration will always be given to courteously tendered information. In fact, the greatest public force is public opinion, but the trouble is that many of us think our opinion alone should be accepted as public opinion, and all others set aside as heterodox, therefore it becomes necessary to receive from the general public their opinion, and to do that the general public must let themselves be heard, also the frogs in the pond, with much croaking, will be considered as of greater weight than the valuable cattle in the meadow.

I cannot close this report without referring to the splendid services rendered by the gentlemen composing the several boards. Serving without pay they show their good citizenship and interest in the welfare of the city, and are entitled to the thanks of the entire community.

Nor can I too strongly commend the city officials. I do not believe any establishment, public or private, can claim a more earnest or faithful set of officers and employes.

To the gentlemen of the old council, I desire to express my sincere thanks for your courteous co-operation during the past two years, and assure you that the burdens of office have been considerably lightened by the knowledge that if any mistakes were made the council charitably understood the situation and was ready to assist in the correction.

To the gentlemen of the new council, I can but express the hope that our term of service will be marked by a degree of harmony and good nature which will smooth over any differences of opinion so that our entire strength may be available for the prosecution of the work for which we have been selected. I pledge you my hearty co-operation.

The city is fortunate in having as representatives of the "Fourth Estate," those who, while possessing the true news instinct, are gentlemen upon whom dependence can be placed, and it is a pleasure to be able to say that in no instance has confidence been abused, or advantage taken of any information prematurely given out.

DULUTH. MINN.

AT WEST DULUTH

At the Red Cross hospital, this morning, Dr. Robert Graham amputated the left leg of Allan Frasier, above the knee. Mr. Frasier, who is a county patient at the hospital, is an old woodsman, 73 years of age, and despite his years and the shock of amputation, he is believed to have excellent chances to recover.

His case has been rather out of the usual run, in many ways and the ambition that the old gentleman has shown under adverse circumstances and his endurance during periods of suffering are somewhat remarkable. His right foot was taken off some time ago above the right ankle. He is blind in one eye. Last spring he was an inmate of the county poor house, but he was determined to get out and earn his own living, though advised that he was not in a condition to withstand hard labor and was too far advanced in years to help himself much longer. He was ambitious to get a little money, however, so he finally secured a position taking care of the barn at one of the logging camps in the vicinity. Last winter, while attending to his duties he froze the great toe of his left foot and the toe had finally to be amputated. Gangrene set in and the foot was amputated. The gangrene continued and it was finally decided to take the leg off between the knee and the ankle. This was found to be diseased and the surgeons this morning took the member off close to the hip, where the leg was found in a healthy condition. Although he has reached an age when the healing of so large a wound is a very slow process, the surgeons look for an ultimate recovery.

Mr. Frasier is as cheerful in his last misfortune as the first and takes matters very philosophically. While in the poor house and unable to purchase an artificial foot, he set to work industriously and whittled out a wooden peg that he wore in place of the right foot when he went to work in the logging camp. He is just as sanguine now of being able to get out somehow and work again when his leg heals.

Yesterday M. M. Burke, of Oneota, had his left leg amputated above the knee. He is resting nicely today and his recovery is expected. Mr. Burke has been suffering from necrosis of the bone, the result of tuberculosis of some years' standing. He was operated on some time ago, having the bone scraped, but it did not arrest the disease. Dr. Huntoon performed the amputation. Mr. Burke is engineer at the St. Louis Lumber company's sawmill.

Three of the county patients at the Red Cross hospital were discharged as cured this morning. The county patients have been sent out in quite large number lately, sometimes as high as from four to six in a day.

TO LOCATE COLONISTS.

Ransom Metcalf and S. R. Metcalf expect to leave Monday for the Little Fork country to locate a party of colonists. The exact number of the party has not been determined, but there will be at least a dozen members in the party. The persons are being located by the Little Fork Colonization club, whose headquarters are located in Duluth.

The movement toward the Little Fork country is becoming very popular and the colonization club has thus far located about forty persons on some very fine farming lands in the Little Fork valley. Several of the people located have already settled on their claims and others are making arrangements to go on their property the coming season. Of the party that will leave for the Little Fork country Monday, some are going there to remain and others to locate and then return here for a time. The colonization club is meeting with much success in its work of establishing a colony and an effort is being made to get good railway connection with the country. The party will leave by train Monday for Tower, and then go by team about forty miles in a northwesterly direction from Tower. It was thought best to start now before the ice in the lakes goes out and the ground becomes thawed so as to make teaming impracticable.

MADE HER INDIGNANT.

Indian Maiden Resents the Charge of Drunkenness.

Bessie-Spikes-the-Breezes, a full-whiskyed Chippewa Indian maiden, is very indignant to think that rude police should convict her of drunkenness. She was sentenced to spend thirty days in the county jail. She says it was all a mistake.

Old 'Spike-the-Breezes, fair and gentle,
Victim of misguided policemen,
Victim of some cross-eyed copper,
Or some donkey with strabismus,
Libeled in mistaken measures,
Weep not, nor sit down in sorrow,
But arise and with your victims
Whom thou hast with gentle mummurs,
With thy soft, enchanting singing,
Lulled so oft to peaceful slumber,
Stand before the world and show it
All thy grace and all thy sweetness;
Let it gaze upon thy features
And be held in happy thraldom
By the richness of thy beauty,
By the splendor of thy raiment,
By the glory of thy visage—
By thy pleasing manner let it
Be enchained in blissful thraldom,
Be compelled to beg thy pardon.

As they were taking her up to the county jail she looked out on Lake Superior and murmured: "Water! water! everywhere, but not a thing to drink!"

Charles Spencer, standing near, saw the polite mashers, and springing between them, began distributing short swift jolts.

Two more men joined the mashers, and Spencer, who was the smallest, was politely requested to whip the four. He was willing, but Officer John Brennan thought he could do it more satisfactorily.

The two mashers were each sent to jail for ten days and Spencer had to pay $1 and costs for creating a disturbance.

It's Green

Omega Oil One peculiar thing about Omega Oil is its green color. Some people think it is colored green to make it look nice, but that is not so. Omega Oil is green because Nature makes it green. It contains a powerful green herb that gives it its color, and it is this same herb that stops pain in people's bodies. There are plenty of white, brown and yellow liniments, but there is only one Omega Oil, and it is green. There is nothing like Omega Oil for curing pain, just as there is nothing like the sun for making real daylight.

PLANS FOR THE CLUB

Articles of Incorporation of New Commercial Club Filed.

Annual Meeting April 9 and Officers Will Be Elected Then.

Three Hundred Members Necessary--Club Rooms Can Wait.

The articles of incorporation for the Duluth Commercial club were forwarded to St. Paul last night to be filed with the secretary of state. On the receipt of a charter from that officer, it is likely that a meeting of the subscribers to the membership of the club will be called by the committee, whose members constitute the first board of directors. It is expected that at this meeting bylaws will be adopted and the active life of the club in a formal sense, at least, provided for. Reports will also be received from the committees on membership and location.

Under the provisions of the articles of incorporation the annual meeting of the club will be held on April 9. At that time it is likely that all permanent officers of the organization, except possibly the secretary, will be chosen. There has been some mention of the names of several local men for this office, but those prominent thus far in the organization favor the postponement of the matter altogether until the probable income of the club can be more definitely determined, and the amount available for salary be arrived at more accurately. It is believed by many that the secretary of the club should be a very strong man, and that in his strength will lie to a considerable degree the strength of the club.

It is estimated that altogether fully 300 members have been secured. Temporary Secretary Lardner says that his list bears subscriptions for 238 memberships, and quite a number of other subscription papers are in circulation. The club cannot be organized under the terms of the subscription papers until at least 300 members have been obtained.

As far as club rooms are concerned, it is said that it would require two or three months to fit up any rooms that might be leased right away for cafe purposes as well as the general commercial purposes of the club. Consequently, it is believed that the organization can afford to wait a little longer and get much better quarers. Offices for the secretary will be provided as soon as possible.

"My child is worth millions to me," says Mrs. Mary Bird of Harrisburg, Pa., "yet I would have lost her by croup had I not purchased a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." One Minute Cough Cure is sure cure for throat and lung troubles. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Max Wirth.

HIT BY A CAR.

John Lind, a Woodsman, Gets a Bump.

A woodsman named John Lind was slightly injured by an interstate car at the Fifth avenue west this afternoon.

He was crossing Superior street, apparently unaware of the approaching westbound car.

The car struck him and he lay on the track, being but badly injured. He was quickly carried to a doctor's office, where the only injuries that could be found were slight and external. The examination also revealed the fact that the injured man was slightly intoxicated.

He was removed to St. Luke's hospital by the street car company and a more thorough examination will be made later in the day.

Preparing the Tracks.

The street railway company has begun to excavate at the south approach to the Garfield avenue for its tracks. The road has been completed at the north approach for some weeks past. It is considered possible that the interstate cars will begin running over the new viaduct about the first week of April. The work of planking the viaduct is nearly half finished, and as soon as this is accomplished the street railway company will lay its rails and begin to run over the viaduct before the paving is done. The board of public works expects that the viaduct will be paved and ready for team traffic by April 10. The iron center posts for the trolley wire are being hauled to the viaduct and placed.

RESTORATION

Of Freight Rates Ordered by Railroad Commission.

St. Paul, March 12.—(Special to the Herald.)—The railroad and warehouse commission has agreed upon the substance of a communication to be sent to the Northern Pacific and Great Northern relative to the re-establishment of distributing rates to Fargo, Grand Forks and Crookston. The communication will be handed to the railroads this afternoon. The commissioners decline to state the contents but it is understood that the commission will order the restoration of the rates. The compromise arranged between the railroads and the wholesale grocers, which was threshed over at the public hearings a few days ago is evidently unsatisfactory to the commission.

HEAD CUT OFF.

St. Paul, March 12.—A special to the Dispatch from Marquette, Mich., says: Louis Filter, a woodsman and trapper, has been killed by a train on the Northwestern road, near Watersmeet. His head was completely severed from his body and was found several hundred feet from the scene of the fatality. It is thought the man was drunk and laid down on the track. The men receive an increase of wages of 20 cents per day and will be granted the demands for shorter hours as soon as similar concessions are made in the other mills in the Wisconsin river valley.

MAN WAS MURDERED.

Contagious Blood Poison

A Disease More Deadly than the Serpent's Sting

The poison concealed in the fangs of the rattlesnake is not more terrible in its effect upon the human system than the virus of Contagious Blood Poison. The Rattler gives warning before he strikes, but Contagious Blood Poison does its deadly work so quietly that the victim remains in ignorance of its presence until a suspicious little sore upon the body shows where this treacherous enemy has broken through and poisoned every drop of blood in the veins. Soon the constitutional symptoms begin to manifest themselves; the glands of the groin enlarge and inflame, skin eruptions in the form of small red pimples and pustules, or copper colored blotches of various shapes and sizes appear. Sores and ulcers break out in the mouth and throat, and the tonsils swell and ulcerate, producing deep and ragged ulcers, often eating out the soft bones and destroying articulation of the voice for life. There is no conceivable injury to the human body that this vicious demon cannot inflict.

Contagious Blood Poison is too violent and dangerous to be trifled with. Many have been lulled into false security by the promise of a speedy cure, or assurances of the harmless nature of this disease, but experience must teach them, if nothing else will, that Contagious Blood Poison will never yield to mild or shallow treatment. The poison must be completely eradicated from the system, and the blood thoroughly purged and purified, and the life of this venomous serpent crushed out before a lasting cure is effected.

S. S. S. is the only antidote for Contagious Blood Poison. It destroys the virus, purifies the blood, and cures thoroughly and permanently every form and stage of this horrible disease. For fifty years it has been recognized as a specific for this loathsome form of blood poison, and no one should despair of a cure, however desperate their condition may be, for S. S. S. searches out and removes every vestige of the poison from the system, invigorates the general health, and you are never after humiliated or embarrassed by its presence.

Mercury and Potash are the basis of every other remedy prescribed in blood poison cases, and the effects of these drugs are as disastrous in the end as the disease itself. They may drive in the sores and skin eruptions, and the deluded sufferer believes the disease is gone forever, but the old symptoms reappearing show the cure is false, that the snake has been scotched, but not killed, while the Mercury has left you with aching and decaying bones, spongy gums, ruined digestion and Rheumatism. We offer $1,000 for proof that S. S. S. contains one particle of Mercury, Potash or other mineral. It is a strictly vegetable medicine, and a safe and reliable remedy for Contagious Blood Poison.

SSS

Write for our free book on Contagious Blood Poison, which contains much interesting information about the different stages, symptoms, etc., of this disease, and by following the instructions given in it, and keeping in correspondence with our Medical Department, you can cure yourself at home. We make no charge for medical advice.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

A DESPERATE CASE.

CHICAGO, March 27th, 1901.

I had Contagious Blood Poison in a most aggravated form, and I suffered the greatest torture and pain for many long months. Three of the best doctors in this city treated me, but their medicine failed to even drive away the sores from my body. I had grown almost desperate over my condition. My mouth and throat were in a bad fix; my face and other parts of my body were so full of unsightly ulcers and pimples that I was ashamed to be seen upon the streets. But all this is past. I have taken about one dozen bottles of S. S. S., and there is not a sore or blemish of any kind on my body. You would never think that I ever had the disease, as I am as stout and healthy looking as anybody. I will always recommend S. S. S. to those needing a blood purifier. BILLY GORDON.

IN MICHIGAN.

Escanaba—Because hunger got the better of a policeman, Harry B. George, wanted at Marquette on a charge of embezzling funds belonging to the Mutual Benefit association, has taken his departure for other climes with prospects of keeping out of the grasp of the law. The man had been located and the warrant was ready. There was mail at the postoffice for George, and as it was believed he would call for it, an officer took up his station. At supper time, however, the limb of the law yielded to his pangs of hunger and abandoned the watch. Half an hour later, when he returned, it was found that George had called and received his mail and departed from the city on the evening train.

Crystal Falls—The Finnish and Swedish Co-Operative association has failed after an existence of a little more than a year. It has been transacting a general grocery and meat business. The closing of the doors was the result of an attachment issued on behalf of local creditors, though the stock and accounts are in excess of the liabilities. There are eighty-one holders of stock in the concern and an attempt is being made to put the association on its feet again by means of an assessment.

Houghton—An important transfer of mineral lands has just been negotiated here, the Northern Lumber company, of Duluth, acquiring title to 400 acres of land adjoining the property of the Elm River Mining company. The purchase price is private, but it is stated a large sum was paid for the tract, which carries copper lodes.

St. Ignace—Because of the lowering of the lake level, extensive changes have been made necessary in the dock of Chamber Brothers. The floor of the wharf will be lowered eighteen inches along the entiref ront and extending back for forty feet. The change will greatly facilitate the handling of the cargoes.

A record-breaking log-hauling contract is being carried out in Mackinac county by R. M. Wood, of this city, in an effort to get a season's cut of timber banked before the snow disappears entirely. Twenty teams, working from midnight to noon, are employed. The haul is three miles and a half, and 2,000 feet are being taken at a load, three of which are drawn by each team daily. The cut comprises about 5,000,000 feet, and, should any be left in the woods, it would mean a serious loss.

Through a request that the city clerk make out her papers for this quarter, it has developed that the widow of a soldier who fought in the war of 1812 is residing here with a daughter. The aged lady is Mrs. Jennie Flint. She is in her 89th year, and draws a pension of $12 a month.

Calumet—Col. Coach, manager of the timber interests of the Calumet & Hecla copper mine, is now in the West arranging for the purchase of a tract of land in Oregon by a syndicate of copper country capitalists. The tract of land, which is in one of the most favored timber belts, consists of 10,000 acres on which it is estimated there are fully 500,000,000 feet of timber. The price will be about $400,000.

THOMPSON ARRAIGNED.

Port Huron, Mich., March 12.—Charles D. Thompson, ex-supreme finance keeper of the supreme tent of the Knights of the Maccabees, who some time ago confessed to a shortage of $57,000, was arrested today on a complaint sworn out by Sheriff Maines. He was arraigned, pleaded not guilty and released on $5000 bail.

WITHOUT CHANGE

After Ruling Weaker Wheat Market Stiffens Toward the Close.

Rains In Southwest Depressing Factor In Early Morning.

Flax Is Active and Makes a Good Advance.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 12.—The wheat market showed lower prices this morning, but nevertheless was fairly steady. Heavy rains in the winter wheat districts in the Southwest and lower cables were the bearish factors. Toward the close of the session the market stiffened considerably, largely on reports of good export business in the East, the seaboard reporting 25 loads or more taken for export.

The Liverpool market closed 1/4@3/4d lower. Berlin was 3/4c lower.

Primary receipts of wheat were 502,000 bus. last year, 628,000 bus. Shipments were 140,000 bus; last year, 261,000 bus. Clearances were 283,000 bus.

Corn and oats were stronger in the Chicago market, the former closing 3/4@1c up and the latter 3/4c up. Primary receipts of corn were 259,000 bus, last year, 717,000 bus. Shipments, 294,000 bus; last year, 388,000 bus. Clearances were 23,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 276 cars, and at Chicago, 25, a total of 301 cars, against 250 last week and 383 last year.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was light. The market was fairly steady, although somewhat lower than yesterday. It opened 3/4c off at 74 7/8c, sold at 74 3/4c at 9:22, at 75c at 9:40, at 74 3/4@3/4c at 10:10, at 74 5/8c at 10:35, at 74 3/4-5/8c, at 10:55, at 74 5/8c at 11:15 and at 11:25 a. m. sold at 74 5/8c. It sold at 74 5/8@75c at 11:20 and at 75 1/4c at 1:30, closing 75 1/4@3/4c, which was a shade lower than yesterday's price. The Chicago market closed unchanged.

Cash prices continued unchanged at 1 1/4c under May for No. 1 northern, 4c under for No. 2, and 6c under for No. 3. Sales were:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Rains Take Bullish Spirit Out of Speculators.

Chicago, March 12.—Drenching rains came to the relief of the suffering Southwestern fields and took the bullish spirit out of wheat speculators at the opening today. Cables also were lower all around and general selling set in. May started 1 1/4@3c to 1 1/2@2c lower at 70 1/4c to 70c, and at once dipped to 70 5/8c. There was some covering for profits which absorbed offerings and May reacted and hung around 70c and at once dipped to 70 5/8c. There was some covering for profits which absorbed offerings and May reacted and hung around 70c. Local receipts were 25 cars, none of contract grade. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 276 cars, making a total for the three points of 301 cars, against 250 last week and 383 a year ago.

The liberal sales for short accounts in the past two days since May wheat sold at 74 3/4c gave opportunity for good profits and covering late in the day was heavy. This brought a firm tone to the market and sent May up to yesterday's closing price. May closed steady, a shade lower, at 70 3/4c.

Corn suffered some loss at the opening as a result of sympathy with the wheat weakness. Cables also were slightly lower in face of our improvement yesterday. The heavy rains west and southwest, however, were used as a hull argument in that they must further retard movements to market. Receipts were still light and May which opened 1/4@3/8c lower, at 61 3/4@61 5/8c, reacted to 61 3/4@62c, and steadied around that figure. Receipts were 103 cars.

When the wheat weakness began to be dissipated the latent strength in corn developed. May was bought fairly and closed firm, 3/8@7/8c up at 62 3/8@4c.

Oats were fairly active and bullish at the opening. The fair show of strength in corn was some influence toward better prices, as was also the shipment of 48,736 bus of contract stocks—reducing the total stocks here one-third in the past three days. May opened unchanged at 44 3/4c, advanced to 45 1/2c on a fair demand and reacted later and steadied around 45c. Receipts, 64 cars.

Provisions started out with a firm tone on better prices at the yards for hogs. There was also a fair demand for pork and covering in that provision helped prices. May pork opened 2 1/2c to 5c up, at $15.37 1/2@15.40, and sold to $15.45; May lard, 2 1/2@5c higher, at $9.42 1/2@9.45 and eased to $9.40; May ribs unchanged at $8.40.

DECLINE IN COPPER

Affected the Whole Stock Market Which Closed Dull.

New York, March 12.—The movement in the prominent stocks at the opening was narrow and irregular, but many of the minor stocks although irregular moved widely. There were gains of a large fraction in the Chicago Terminal Transfer stocks, Mexican Central, Virginia-Carolina Chemical and Wisconsin Central. The opening sales of the last named were of 10,000 shares at 24 and 23 1/2, compared with 23 1/2, last night's closing. Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred dropped 1 3/8 and Sugar a point.

The market developed a steadier tone and then improved substantially in spots, despite a break of over 2 points in Amalgamated. Low-priced stocks were again foremost in the rise, but the upward movement also included Missouri Pacific and Sugar, the last named recovering its decline. Colorado & Southern first and second preferred, Wisconsin Central, Peoria & Eastern, Reading second preferred, Cotton Oil and Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred advanced between 1 and 2 points. Virginia-Carolina Chemical rose 2 1/2, Iowa Central lost a point. The liquidation in Amalgamated Copper sapped the strength of the market and there was a general relapse some stocks losing a point or more from the best. These included Sugar, American Cotton Oil, Colorado & Southern and second preferred and Missouri Pacific. Net losses of 1 to 2 points were made also by Anaconda, International Pump, Denver & Rio Grande, Minneapolis & St. Louis, Iowa Central preferred, United States Rubber, People's Gas and American Ice. The trans-continental stocks were supported at about last night's level and the market became very dull. Bonds were irregular.

The entire market responded to large buying of the Reading stocks, but many of the more important stocks moved rather narrowly. The Readings gained from 1 and 1 1/2 to 2 1/4 with the second pfd leading, and Delaware & Hudson, St. Paul, Chicago-Great Western A, International Power, Holding Valley and Republic Steel pfd advanced between 1 and 2 points. Peoria & Eastern was bought heavily and rose 4 points. Northwestern fell off 2 1/4 and rallied 1 1/4. Railroads generally ruled at the best prices of the day, but some of the specialties did not recover to their top figures.

There were a number of notable advances after 1 o'clock, but the market continued spotty. General Electric jumped 4 3/8. Consolidated Gas, 2 1/4 and there were gains of a point or more in New York Central, Chicago & Alton, Ontario & Western, Wheeling & Lake Erie second pfd, Kanawaha & Michigan, Evansville & Terre Haute, Cotton Oil pfd and Westinghouse Electric. A renewed decline in Amalgamated Copper to 3/8 under last night unsettled the market again.

Traders took their profits and caused a reaction. Consolidated Gas lost about 2 points and other large fractions. Amalgamated Copper added almost a point to its loss which reached 41 3/4. The closing was dull and steady.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, March 12.—Cotton opened steady with prices unchanged to 5 points lower on April options. On room covering for profits, May advanced to 8.74 and July to 8.76, after which the whole list drifted lower in the absence of substantial support. At the close of the first hour a light estimate for tomorrow's Houston receipts and a net advance of 6 points in the New Orleans market, prompted light buying and kept the market steady.

AGAINST IT.

Capt. Morcom Opposed to Special Election on Court House Matter.

Capt. E. Morcom, of Tower, who has been at the St. Louis for the past two days, says that all along the Iron Range road loggers are clearing up their banking places, and evidently preparing to close operations for the season.

Mr. Morcom is chairman of the county board and has taken much interest in Commissioner Kugler's proposition to call a special election for the purpose of voting on a proposition to bond the county for $300,000 for the building of a new court house.

"I shall not favor a special election for this purpose," said Capt. Morcom this morning. "I will vote to submit the question to the people at the general election next November, but believe that there is no reason why the county should expend $7000 for holding a special election.

"As far as the general proposition of building a new court house is concerned, I am inclined to think it won't hurt us to wait awhile longer before shouldering a big county debt. We might wait for five or six years before we begin paying a big interest sum every year for the privilege of providing luxurious offices for the county employes to work in.

"Another thing. I don't believe that $300,000 is enough to appropriate for a permanent court house for this county. I understand that the government building cost between $200,000 and $300,000 to build. We surely ought to have fully as good a building. My idea is that we should spend $500,000 on a building for this purpose.

"But I believe that the people of the county, as well as the county itself, should be allowed to get in better shape financially before we undertake such a heavy obligation as this."

To Recognize and Grasp Opportunities as They Are Offered Are Acts of Wisdom
THE MOORCROFT OIL CO.
Are Offering An Opportunity Which You Should Grasp Immediately.

We own and are drilling upon our 320 acres of land, which is located in the heart of the oil field north of Moorcroft, Creek Co., Wyoming. This is the district from which comes the CREAM OF PETROLEUM.

The oil is a natural lubricant, being used today in its crude state on cars and mining machinery. We have a Western market for every barrel of oil produced. Our drillers have cut through two stratums of oil already and are working in oil saturated shale now. We expect to penetrate the shale and sandstone formation in a short time. You cannot get the stock as cheap again. Our stock is going rapidly and is being taken up largely by men well versed in oils.

The treasury stock, which you can buy now at 15c per share, may be beyond reach in a short time or withdrawn altogether.

The following list of values of crude petroleum from the several different states is taken from the United States Geological Survey Reports for fiscal year ending July 1st, 1901:

State.	Av. Val. Per Bbl.	State.	Av. Val. Per Bbl.
Wyoming	$7.00	Texas	$1.043
Illinois	6.00	Colorado	1.019
Pennsylvania	1.364	Indiana	.963
West Virginia	1.353	California	.942
New York	1.35 1/4	Kansas	.925
Ohio	1.077	Kentucky	.79 1/2
		Indian Ter., Mich. and Maine	.747

You will see by this that Wyoming heads the list. It is the oil from the Northeastern and Eastern part of the state that has given Wyoming this high rating.

We court investigation of our officials and holdings. We understand the oil business from the drilling to the marketing. All statements made by us may be verified. You will have no cause to regret purchasing this stock. The time is the present.

Samples of the oil and asphaltum may be seen at 409 Torrey building.

Orders to be accompanied by draft or money order in full.

GETS SMALL VERDICT.

The Jury In the Liedel Case Awards $100.

The jury in the case of the estate of F. A. Lidel against the Northern Pacific Railroad company this morning found a verdict awarding the plaintiff $100 damages. The suit was for $5000 for damages alleged to have been sustained by reason of the raising of the tracks of the railroad down Minnesota Point. The tracks were raised for the benefit of the Marshall-Wells Hardware company, and the plaintiff claimed that it left a warehouse belonging to the plaintiff below the tracks. The court held that the road had a right to raise its tracks, and the matter of damages submitted to the jury was narrowed down to the damages to the roadway, which could have been about $400.

In Judge Cant's court the case of Calvin Bush against the city of Duluth was given to the jury at noon.

The case of William Scott against W. C. Sargent, in court room No. 2, before Judge Ensign, was still on trial at noon, and it was expected to go to the jury this afternoon.

ORATORICAL CONTEST.

Junior and Seniors to Meet Saturday Evening.

The supremacy of the two classes in the declamatory art will be settled, and a beautiful gold medal presented to the best speaker. There will be no admission charged. The school authorities are anxious to secure a large attendance of outsiders, and everyone interested in the event is cordially invited to attend.

"Threats Did Not Terrify.

Lilsa Koski Forsti is before the district court seeking release from a marriage that is technically still in existence, though practically it lasted only three months. She seeks a divorce from Matt Forsti on the grounds of drunkenness, cruelty and desertion. They were married in Superior Sept. 16, 1898. The plaintiff says she stood her husband's drunkenness and cruelty until Dec. 20, 1898, on which day, while he was drunk, she says, he threatened to take her life. Whereupon, she says, she told him to get out of the house. In spite of his threats he was obedient, for she says he went away and never came back, which lays the foundation for her charge of desertion. She lives in Hibbing and the defendant lives in Cloquet. D. M. Devore is her attorney.

PLEASED WITH DULUTH.

W. A. Paine Delighted With the Development Here.

W. C. Brown, local manager for Paine, Webber & Co., who reopened a stock commission business here several weeks ago, will move his family here from Marquette as soon as he can get accommodations for them. Mr. Brown has rented one of the houses to be built by T. F. Cole near Seventeenth avenue east.

W. A. Paine, of Boston, head of the firm of Paine, Webber & Co., who left last evening over the South Shore in the private car of General Manager J. T. McKeever, of the Mineral Range road, for his home, was especially pleased with his first visit to Duluth. He had not expected to find the city so substantially built nor so well developed. Mr. Paine was convinced that Duluth has a great future ahead of it. He said he believed that closer commercial relations should exist between this city and the copper country. He was glad to learn that already these relations have become much more intimate, but observing that the commercial interests of Duluth should not be content with the present condition of affairs, but should cultivate them more assiduously than ever.

RESIDENCE SOLD.

G. A. St. Clair Buys Sherwood House at East End.

The sale of the Sherwood residence property at 1125 East Superior street to George St. Clair was closed today. The consideration was $11,500. The property was owned by Amelia Sherwood, and up to a number of years ago was occupied as a home by W. C. Sherwood. It has been occupied for some time by Mr. St. Clair. The deal was made by Whitney Wall.

This is one of the most important residence property sales that have been made since the beginning of the year. It is considered also to be a very good price. The location is considered an especially good one, and the property makes an attractive home.

Nettie Is Dangerous.

Nettie Van, of the Bowery persuasion, was arrested today for robbing Edward S. Iland of $50.

The woodsman's pocketbook was found in her possession, but she succeeded in keeping the stolen money away from the officers.

Iland was given other money by a companion for safe keeping, but fortunately turned it over to a saloon proprietor before he was robbed.

Nettie Van is considered one of the most dangerous of Bowery grafters by the police and they expect to retire her from Bowery life for a few weeks at least.

A DEPOT BURNED.

Memphis, March 12.—The Illinois Central depot at Dyersburg, Tenn., was burned today, together with five cars loaded with merchandise on a side-track. The loss to the railroad company is about $50,000. The fire is supposed to have been started by a spark from a passing locomotive.

HEROIC

Motorman Saved Boy's Life at Risk of His Own.

New York, March 12.—George White, a motorman in the employ of the Union Railway company, saved the life of a boy at great personal risk in Beechwood.

White was running his car at high speed when he met a furniture van coming toward him. When the front platform of the car was abreast of the horses a boy ran from behind the van. He later proved to be Eugene Kelly, 9 years old. When the boy emerged from behind the van and started across the track it was absolutely impossible to stop the car and equally impossible that the boy could cross before the car would be on him. White did not even wait to shut off the power or to apply the brake. Instead he leaned quickly forward over the dashboard, and with one hand grabbed the boy by his cap and hair, and with the other seized a shoulder. In this manner White was able to lift the boy's feet clear of the ground, but holding him thus the motorman hung powerless. He dared not let go with his left hand to shut off the power, and owing to the boy's weight he could not lift the lad higher. The strain told on him, and his feet were lifted clear of the platform and he hung for some seconds balanced across the dashboard top. Those inside the car could not come to his aid, as the fastening latch was thrown on the outside. The conductor pulled down the trolley pole, but the momentum would have carried the car some distance. White saw it was impossible for him to hold on. He was slowly being dragged over the dashboard, in case of which happening both he and the boy would have been ground beneath the fenderless car. He adopted the only solution possible when he swung the boy sideways and hurled him to the sidewalk. The effort almost dragged the man over the rail, but he recovered and applied his brake and brought the car to a stop a few feet beyond.

Young Kelly's right arm was broken when he struck the sidewalk, and he was considerably bruised.

ONE INCH

From Ground Were Boy's Feet---Hanged Himself Accidentally.

Hamilton, Ohio, March 12.—Irven Bennett, the 10-year-old son of Allen F. Bennett, a tenant on the Miller farm at Jones' station, near this city, was found hanging from the rafters by a rope about his neck in a wagon shed.

He had started out yesterday morning to erect a swing for himself and some playmates, whom he desired to entertain later in the day. He climbed to the top of a heavy load of hay to suspend the rope from the rafters, with one end in the shape of a noose about his neck. The theory is that after he had made the rope fast to the timbers he lost his footing on the hay and fell a distance of about twenty feet to the ground. He strangled to death.

The boy's feet were within less than an inch of the ground. When his boy friends came to play with him they found young Bennett on a stretcher.

TERRIBLE FATALITY

An Entire Army Corps In Japan Frozen to Death.

Two Hundred and Ten Men Were Camped In Snow.

But One Corporal Is Left to Tell the Story.

Seattle, Wash., March 12.—Mail advices from Yokohama, via Victoria, B. C., gives details of news from Aomori to the effect that Col. Yamaguchi Shin and soldiers of the Second battalion of the Fifth regiment of infantry, numbering 210 in all, finding themselves checked in their march by a heavy snowfall, encamped in the Hakkoda mountain, on the way toward Tashiromura, on Jan. 23. It was ascertained four days later that all these soldiers were frozen to death with the single exception of a corporal. The whole of the Fifth regiment and a large number of the people in the neighborhood started for the place to institute a search.

An official telegram received by the authorities reads as follows:

"Two hundred and fifteen officers and soldiers of the Second battalion of the Fifth regiment of infantry, under the command of Col. Yamaguchi Shin, started on a march through the snow for Tashiromura, at the foot of the Hakkoda mountain on Jan. 23, expecting that they would return after passing one night there. But they failed to come back on the 24th, nor was any report obtained about them on the 25th. The Eighth army division was greatly alarmed and discovered that Capt. Kaminari Hunklchi and two non-commissioned officers were frozen to death in the deep snow at Tamoyplnomura. One of the non-commissioned officers was restored to life, and, according to his statements, the Second battalion stopped after marching about three ri from Tamogmomura and encamped there for two days. Provisions and fuel were already used up, and their encampment became no longer practicable. The whole battalion decided to disperse in all directions in order to save themselves."

Maj. Col. Tamura, of the general affairs bureau, and Military Surgeon Taketani, the chief of the sanitary section, were dispatched yesterday by rail from Uyeno at 6 p. m.

Subsequent news concerning the more than 200 soldiers reported as having been frozen to death in Aomori is to the effect that the Second batallon of the Fifth regiment of infantry encamped on Jan. 23 at a place two ri and one-half (about six and one-third miles) from either Tashiro or Tamagino, being confronted by a severe snowfall and being unable to march any further. On the night of the same day fire was kindled and cooking was done. The soldiers thus hardly warmed themselves. On Jan. 24 the snowstorm was still prevailing, they could not march and were obliged to stay there. Toward night the fuel was all gone and they warmed themselves by burning their knapsacks and their muskets, but many were frozen to death. On the morning of Jan. 25, they attempted to return to Tamagino, but Col. Yamaguchi, commander of the Second battalion, and numerous other soldiers were frozen to death, one after another, owing to the raging snow-storm. On this account they could not march out, and came back again to the place of their encampment. One hundred and thirty-nine soldiers were already dead by this time, and only 70 were still surviving. This remnant encamped the same night, and on Jan. 26, the corps was disbanded, allowing the soldiers to proceed in any direction they preferred. On Jan. 27, when a relief corps arrived, Corp. Goto was found still surviving and standing erect; Capt. Kaminari was already dead, as also another corporal. The relief corps greatly suffered also from the severe cold wind and snowstorm. Some soldiers of the relief corps suffered from frost bites, and they brought back Corp. Goto with some difficulty.

The Fifth regiment of infantry has been assiduously searching for the dead since Jan. 28, but has not come across any of them yet. The Thirty-first regiment of Infantry of Hiromaye, consisting of thirty-eight soldiers, on a march in the snow, which left Sanhongi on Jan. 26, encamped on the mountain on Feb. 27, reaching the summit on Jan. 28, and arrived safely at Aomori. The regiment was to return to Iromaye on Jan. 29. It is reported that this regiment found two dead soldiers belonging to the Fifth regiment, at the summit of the Hakkoda mountains. It appears, therefore, that the whole 210 soldiers were frozen to death, with the single exception of Corp. Goto Fusataro.

Maj. Col. Tamaguchi, two captains, Okitsu, Kuraishi; four lieutenants, Ito, Obashi Shimizu and Nakano; Surgeon Nagai, Maj. Susuk; three cadets, 23 sergeant majors on special duty, sergeants and corporals, and 127 soldiers are presumed to have perished in the snow, but their bodies have not been recovered. The searching party has already put up telegraph lines as far as Tamoginomura and built 40 huts since Jan. 28, in order to push onward in search for the dead, but has not yet met with any great success. Maj. Mikami, commander of the searching party, reported from the front:

"To our great regret we expect to find Maj. Tamaguchi and all under him buried in the snow in the neighborhood of the place where they camped on Jan. 26." The regiment here, in conjunction with 300 local people, is establishing 18 communication posts, each post being garrisoned with forty men. It expects to accomplish the object it has in view by Jan. 29.

The Jiji publishes several telegrams received on Wednesday from its correspondent, whom it has dispatched to the front. The gist of these telegrams is as follows:

"Up to 3:50 p. m. on Jan. 29, only four corpses of the members of the missing party were recovered, but the fate of the rest was not yet known to them. Nine hundred men of the engineering and infantry corps and 600 laborers are employed in the search work. On Jan. 25 the Aomori regiment sent out a sleigh party with a supply of provisions in the direction of Sachihata, but the party came back, being unable to proceed owing to the depth of the snow. On Jan. 27 the search party was for a third time sent forth, and they ascertained that the whole of the missing party must have perished in the snow."

Tashiromura is situated at the foot of Kakkoda mountain, and it is cold even in summer there, while in the winter the roads are all buried in snow. It has been ascertained that before reaching Tashiro—the objective point—the members of the now missing arpty began as early as Jan. 25 to fall dead, one after another, owing to the effect of the wind and snow, and by Jan 25, 209 officers and men had perished from the same cause. Of those found lying senseless in the snow Corp. Fusakichi Goto alone has since been brought back to life.

For Reed For President Is Started In Wall Street.

New York, March 12.—Tom Reed is a candidate for the presidential nomination of 1904 by his own inclination and the wish of Wall street. And when Roosevelt enters the jousting place he will find the brilliant ex-Speaker ready to give him battle.

The news that Reed has become a candidate will not surprise a few who, when he settled in New York, felt that his removal from Maine was due not so much to the salary attached to the new position as to his wish to become identified with a state whose place in a national campaign was both uncertain and of sufficient size to make a fight for its electoral vote worth while.

The fact that a Republican candidate hailed from Maine gave him no leverage in the considerations of the manipulators of national politics. Maine is accounted a sure Republican thing, and so why waste powder to defend it? This question had much to do with Reed's turn-down in St. Louis. Had he hailed then from New York another tale might have been told.

Reed himself is silent as to his candidacy. He is of too keen intellect to make such an intent public so early in the game; but that he is a bona fide candidate despite his silence there is most excellent authority for stating.

According to this authority Reed's chief support is Wall street. There has for some time been noticed a friendly inclination in his direction of the magnates of that mighty thoroughfare. But President Roosevelt's action regarding the merger and also his pronounced intention to see that the interstate commerce law was vigorously enforced have alarmed the street, which, despite its august power, is peopled by the most sensitive and timid men in the world.

The street's objection to Roosevelt is not that he is not honest and all that sort of thing. There is, of course, no kind of doubt as to that. But he is regarded as erratic. And erraticism on the part of the president of the United States is something which Wall street magnates strongly oppose. Their chief wish in a nation's magistrate is rock-bound stability. And in Tom Reed the street thinks it sees this element. At any rate there have been important discussions on the subject since the Roosevelt merger action. And hearty approval has met the mention of Reed's name, and a press agent has been engaged.

The authority upon which the foregoing is based declares that the gigantic influence of the Standard Oil people is not only at Reed's disposal, but is actively engaged in organizing the situation into cohesive shape for easy handling.

The fact that the Standard Oil interests are champions of Reed will not be promulgated by a brass band by the said interests, though it is not unlikely that the opposition may not only willingly but enthusiastically pay such expense. But the fact that the Standard does favor Reed will be proof enough for many other financial interests throughout the country that he is eminently a safe man for president.

And when his "safeness" is sufficiently implanted in the minds of the other financial interests to win their support, the support of the rest of the party will be sought in such fashion as the judgment of those in control of the Reed movement dictates.

MISS DENGEN

Will Be Appointed to the Postoffice at Virginia.

A Washington special to The Herald says that Representative Morris today recommended Miss Eva Dengen to be postmistress at Virgina.

This ends a fight which has been going on for some time past over the postoffice at Virginia. The present postmaster is Dr. Stuart Bates, and he was a candidate for reappointment. D. E. Cuppernull, editor of the Virginian, was also an aspirant for the office. There has been a lively fight between these two to secure the recommendation of Congressman Morris for the position, and probably the latter thought it would be a wise plan not to appoint either in view of the bitter feeling that had been aroused between their friends. Miss Dengen, who has been selected for postmistress, has been assistant in the office for several years past, and has been a very efficient official. She is very popular with the people of Virginia, and her appointment will please practically all the patrons of the office. The salary is about $1700 a year.

BODY FOUND.

Geo. Minck Was Knocked Into River In December.

Winona, March 12.—The body of George Minck, a Milwaukee brakeman of this city, who was knocked off a freight train while crossing the bridge at La Crosse late last fall and fell through a hole in the ice on the river, has just been recovered near Brownsville, Minn., by a farmer, who had been across attending some stock.

The father, P. Minck, a drayman of this city, was at once notified, and he has gone to secure the remains.

Minck was on the train when it left La Crosse on his last trip last fall and was missed when the train was over the river. A hat resembling his was found, but no further evidence of his death could be obtained, and it was merely surmised that he was killed in this manner. The head of the body discovered today was crushed, indicating that the first supposition was correct.

METHUEN RELEASED

Is In the Hands of British Medical Officer.

Government Asked to Release Kritzinger.

London, March 13.—The war secretary, Mr. Brodrick, announced in the house of commons today that he understood that Gen. Methuen, who was captured and severely wounded by Gen. Delarey March 10, had been released and was expected to arrive at Klerksdorp, Southwestern Transvaal, today. The general's condition was favorable.

Mr. Brodrick added that the exchange of Gen. Methuen for Commandant Kritzinger had not been contemplated. The trial of the commandant had been postponed because consideration of the evidence to be presented had not been completed.

Timothy M. Healy (Irish Nationalist), amid Nationalist cheers, invited the government to show equal magnanimity and release Commandant Kritzinger.

Mr. Brodrick said subsequently that the telegram received did not specifically say that Gen. Methuen had been released, but from the fact that he was in the hands of a British medical officer, it was presumed that the general had been released.

SPANISH CABINET OUT

All the Other Ministers Tender Their Resignations Because the Finance Minister Refused to Withdraw His Resignation.

Madrid, March 13.—When the premier, Senor Sagasta, informs the cabinet today that the resignation of Senor Urziz, the finance minister, is irrevocable, all the other minsters will resign. Senor Sagasta will notify the queen regent this afternoon of the action of the ministers.

The existing cabinet was constituted March 6, 1901, as follows: President of the council, Senor Sagasta; minister of foreign affairs, duke of Almodovar; minister of justice, Marquis Teverga; minister of finance, Senor Urziz; minister of interior, Senor Morel; minister of war, Gen. Weyler; minister of agriculture and commerce and of public works, Senor Villanueva; minister of education, Count Romanez.

A REFUNDING SCHEME

By Which Steel Trust Would Convert a Large Block of Preferred Stock Into Five Per Cent Bonds.

New York, March 13.—George W. Perkins, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel corporation, said today that several propositions to convert a large block of steel preferred into 5 per cent bonds are now under consideration, but none, he said, had taken definite form. Latest reports as to the refunding scheme are that $200,000,000 of the preferred stock, which pays 7 per cent interest, is to be retired by an issue of $250,000,000 bonds. The extra $50,000,000 of bonds to be issued for the purchase of other properties or for additional working capital. On this particular point Mr. Perkins said:

"This is one of the several propositions now under consideration. It is impossible to say if it will meet with greater favor than the others. We are giving the matter our serious consideration, and any measure we may adopt will be for the best interests of the stockholders."

FORGERY

Is Charged Against J. M. Gilmore of Lakeville.

Hastings, Minn., March 13.—J. M. Gilmore, of Lakeville, who was arrested by Sheriff J. J. Grisim at Osseo, charged with forgery, was arraigned before Justice Stephen Newell and committed to the county jail in default of $400 bail, until the 19th inst. He is alleged to have forged a promissory note of $100 Sept. 16, purporting to have been signed by Thomas O'Connell. The complainant was F. N. Welcome, president of the Exchange bank, of Farmington, to whom it had been delivered as collateral for a loan of $75.

PATRICK TRIAL.

New York, March 13.—Assistant District Attorney Osborne resumed the cross-examination of Dr. John H. Girdner today in the trial of A. T. Patrick, accused of the murder of W. M. Rice.

Dr. Alexander G. Leuff, of Philadelphia, an expert in diseases of the lungs, was then called.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE SNUFFED

Des Moines, March 13.—The woman's suffrage amendment was given its death blow by the legislature this morning, when the house, by a vote of 56 to 38, adopted the report of the committee recommending it for indefinite postponement. After it had passed the senate the suffragists believed the most serious obstacle had been overcome.

By a vote of 38 to 7 the senate today passed the Molsberry bill, which removes the limit of indebtedness that may be incurred by railways. This measure has been generally believed to have been fostered by the Northern Securities company with a view to making Iowa the future home of the railroad merger.

LIVED IN THREE CENTURIES

St. Paul, March 13.—A Chippewa Falls, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: Mrs. Julia Duplice is today celebrating her 103rd birthday. No special festivities will mark the event, she being at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Dumars, six miles in the country. Mrs. Duplice is hale and hearty and is surrounded by four generations. She has lived in three centuries.

IMMENSE SUM FOR HARVARD

Boston, March 13.—A draft of $250,000 from Mrs. Collis P. Huntington, announced today, more than completes the sum of $765,000 required to secure the sum offered by John D. Rockefeller, of New York, for the enlargement and endowment of the Harvard medical college. Mrs. Huntington's subscription is specifically for the erection of a building in memory of her late husband, to be called the Collis P. Huntington laboratory of pathology and bacteriology.

With Mr. Rockefeller's gift and the pledge made by J. P. Morgan last June, to give three buildings at a cost exceeding $1,000,000, a total aggregating $2,861,225 will be available for the use of the medical school.

M'CORNICK WILLING

To Accept Portfolio In the Cabinet, If Asked.

Replies to Query of Senators Kearns and Millard.

Is Selected to Fill Position of Secretary Hitchcock.

Los Angeles, March 13.—William S. McCornick, of Los Angeles, has telegraphed to Senator Kearns at Washington that he will accept the position of secretary of the interior in President Roosevelt's cabinet should a vacancy occur through the resignation of Secretary Hitchcock. McCornick was asked before he left Salt Lake March 1 if he would take the cabinet portfolio were it offered to him, but would not then make a positive reply.

At that time he telegraphed to Washington that his answer would be sent from California, whither he was then bound. Soon after reaching Los Angeles, Mr. McCornick received another request for an expression of his sentiments towards accepting the high government honor. After further deliberation he has replied that he will accept.

"All that has been done," said Mr. McCornick, "is that Senators Kearns and Millard have asked me whether I would accept the place, and I have replied that if the president would offer it I would accept."

Washington, March 13.—Senator Millard confirmed the report that he had asked W. S. McCornick if he would accept an appointment as secretary of the interior, but said that in doing so he had acted entirely upon his own responsibility, and that he had not assumed to represent the president or any one else. He added that he had heard many rumors that there was to be a vacancy at the head of the interior department, and Mr. McCornick being in his judgment, especially suited for the place, he had asked him if he would accept it if the place should be tendered him.

GRADING

Has Been Completed On Montana & Great Northern Road.

St. Paul, March 13.—Grading has been completed for fifty-one miles on the Montana & Great Northern, incorporated in Minnesota a year ago to construct a branch line connection between the Hill system and the Crows' Nest coal field on the international boundary, bringing the line to a point just south of the boundary. Steel will be laid as soon as it can be secured from the Eastern mills.

The branch will connect at the boundary with another line, under Canadian charter, which will cover the fifty-two miles to Fernie, B. C.

TALMAGE

Is Confined to Sleeping Car Berth By Severe Cold.

San Antonio, Texas, March 13.—T. De Witt Talmage, confined to his berth on account of illness, has passed through this city on his way to Washington. He was accompanied by Mrs. Talmage and his physician. Mr. Talmage is returning from Mexico, where he went several weeks ago. Upon his arrival in the Mexican capital, he contracted a cold, and later influenza developed. While in the City of Mexico he was under the care of Dr. Fields, of the American hospital.

Mr. Talmage will stop one day at New Orleans to rest. Mrs. Talmage expresses no fears over his condition.

New Orleans, March 13.—Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, who was brought here sick from Mexico in charge of Mrs. Talmage and a doctor, was reported at the St. Charles hotel today to be slightly better. He is scarcely able to speak above a whisper. Dr. Shields declined to furnish any information as to the condition of the patient, but Mrs. Talmage sent out word that unless Mr. Talmage improves very much during the day, no attempt will be made to start with him to Washington tonight, as was intended.

Later in the day Dr. Shields gave out the following: Dr. T. De Witt Talmage was attacked with influenza in Mexico City March 3, two days after his arrival. Owing to the altitude of that city it was deemed expedient to remove him to his home in Washington. His present condition is favorable, having steadily improved after leaving Mexico. He will be able to resume his work in about two weeks. He will depart for Washington this evening.

LAWYERS SENTENCED.

London, March 13.—A. Severance, a lawyer, charged with misappropriating £3000 of funds belonging to the countess of Orkney, formerly Connie Gilchrist, of the Gaiety theater, pleaded guilty at the Old Bailey today and was sentenced to five years' penal servitude.

BOOHER STILL ILL.

Savannah, Mo., March 13.—Charles F. Booher, who is conducting the prosecution in the trial of Stewart Fife, charged with the murder of Frank W. Richardson, was today still too ill to attend court, and the case was adjourned till tomorrow. Attorney Booher was attacked suddenly yesterday while examining a witness.

COUNT LYOF TOLSTOI AND SPECIMENS OF HIS MANUSCRIPT.

The great Russian novelist and social reformer was born in 1828 and served in the Crimean war. His best known books, which have made him world famous, are "War and Peace," "Anna Karenina," "Kreutzer Sonata," "The Cossacks," "Christ's Christianity," "My Religion," "The Kingdom of God Is Within Us," "Patriotism and Christianity" and "The Four Gospels Harmonized."

St. Petersburg, March 13.—A sudden change for the worse has taken place in the condition of Count Tolstoi, who has been ill for some time past at Yalta, Crimea. His weakness is more pronounced today and symptoms of pleurisy have developed. His pulse is most feeble and frequently stops. The patient cannot sleep and is in low spirits.

WAR IS SURE TO COME

Captain Smith Says Japanese Are Spoiling For a Chance to Fight Some One and Will Soon Engage With Russia.

Seattle, March 13.—Capt. F. H. Smith, a well known Englishman, who arrived here yesterday on the Tosa Maru from Japan, declares that war between that country and Russia is soon to come.

"Trouble over the Russian occupation of Manchuria is the cause of the trouble," said Capt. Smith "and the Japanese are spoiling for a chance to whip someone. When it does come, England will be forced to help the Mikado's army, and the war may involve all Europe. In the meantime the Russians are pushing work on the railroad across Manchuria, and to this the Janapanese have no objections. Russia, however, must defend the road against the attack of the natives. Some 16,000 coolies are now employed in the work."

BURIED BY A SNOW SLIDE

Spokane, Wash., March 13.—A Nelson, B. C., special to the Spokesman Review says: Fred Lowden was killed by a snow slide Saturday night. He and Chris Sherbert were asleep at the foot of the Kokanee range when the slide buried their cabin. After thirty-six hours of superhuman effort, Sherbert freed himself. He obtained aid at a neighboring mine, but Lowden was dead. His finger nails were torn off, showing that he had made a desperate effort to dig out. Sherbert's feet and hands were badly frozen, and his feet may have to be amputated. He was clad in a shirt only, during the thirty-five hours he was fighting for life.

MINOKA, ILL., BANK ROBBED

Joliet, Ill., March 13.—A band of six men early this morning broke into the Exchange bank, in Minoka, nine miles west of Joliet, wrecked the safe with dynamite and secured between $2000 and $3000 in cash. Theodore Krine, a citizen, who heard the explosions, rose from a sick bed and went to warn A. K. Knapp, president of the bank. The robbers discovered Krine on his return, assaulted him viciously and left him gagged. He was not found until nearly two hours later. The robbers took a handcar on the Rock Island road and went west.

STRIKING PAINTERS UGLY

Pittsburg, March 13.—The painters' strike is growing serious, on account of the importation of non-union men from other places. Over one hundred men came in yesterday. Several men were badly beaten before the crowd was scattered by the appearance of the police. President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, and General President Bahlborn, of the Brotherhod of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, are expected today to settle the trouble if possible.

ROBBED WHILE SAYING MASS

New York, March 13.—Monsigneur Robert Seton, formerly rector of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, Jersey City, who is now living permanently in Rome, has written a letter to one of his former parishioners, telling how he had been robbed of $325. While he was saying mass at a chapel a thief entered his room at the hotel De La Minerve, broke open a trunk and stole the money. It was in gold and was part of a purse of $500 presented to Mgr. Seton by his former parishioners.

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

For a Settlement of the Strike In Boston.

Secretary Easley Confers With the Leaders.

Boston, March 13.—The strike situation is more hopeful. The labor leaders are in conference with Secretary Easley of the Civic Federation, and there is a prospect of a general meeting of representatives of all the leading business interests, at which Mr. Easley shall be heard when he has learned the workmen's side of the case. Still 21,000 men were numbered among the forces of the strikers, and threats that hundreds of others would join the movement were as freely made as at any time this week.

Secretary Easley arrived here early, and his conference with the labor representatives was begun at 8 o'clock. Besides the committees of the freight handlers, team drivers and 'longshoremen's unions, James Duncan, vice president of the American Federation of Labor; John F. O'Sullivan, fourth vice president of the International Typographical union; Frank H. McCarthy, president of the Massachusetts branch, were present.

The sitting was behind closed doors, and it was announced that nothing would be given out until Mr. Easley was fully in touch with the situation.

While the general aspect of the strike was much the same as it has been on previous days, there were some slight changes. Until late yesterday, the Brine Transportation company, non-union, was doing nearly all the teaming of the city, all other teamsters have been tied up by the sympathetic strike. During yesterday, however, some concerns found that in order to save their contracts with large firms they must undertake to deliver goods. This led two of the union teamsters to start out with non-union drivers; and today several others followed this action. As those at work yesterday met with no trouble it lead to the hope that operations might be resumed in a liberal degree.

During the night several of the firms took advantage of the darkness to convey coal to large consumers.

ALL SIGNED BUT ONE

Of the 103 Bills Passed at the Special Session of the Legislature, 102 Get the Governor's Signature.

St. Paul, March 13.—Governor Van Sant vetoed only one act of the legislature, a bill amending the law authorizing bonds for the erection of county jails, which amends the present law, so that the bonds would have to be voted by the people. The act was so drawn that he feared it would interfere with jails in process of erection.

The rest of the 103 bills passed by the legislature had been signed by yesterday, except the Gunderson real estate tax bill, which is so long that it had not reached the governor. The bill will be compared when it reaches the governor today, and signed.

A ROCHESTER MAN KILLED

Rich Valley, Minn., March 13.—Oscar J. Hanson, of Rochester, Minn., while attempting to board a Great Western train at this place last night, was thrown under the wheels, his arms cut off and his head smashed to a jelly. He was instantly killed. The remains were taken to Hastings.

BRITONS LIKE THE CAYUSE

Sheridan, Mont., March 13.—British Agent J. A. Conway, who is purchasing horses for the use of the English cavalry against the Boers in South Africa, purchased a large drove of animals in this vicinity. These horses will be shipped to Utah, where they will be inspected by the British officers. Later they will be sent to New Orleans and thence to South Africa.

The British express great liking for the hardier mountain cayuse from Montana.

HOLD INTERIOR PROVINCES

New York, March 13.—The revolutionists now hold all interior provinces of the isthmus outside of Panama and Colon, cables the correspondent of the Herald.

The Ecuadorian government, the dispatch says, has sent special orders to the local authorities in Guayaquil to make the visit of the United States cruiser Philadelphia as pleasant as possible.

Formal protest has been made by the Columbian minister to Quito against the Ecuadorian expedition on the eastern frontier. The protest is based on the tri-partite signed in Lima, Peru, in 1894.

DULUTH TRAIN LEFT RAILS

Grand Forks, N. D., March 13.—Three coaches of the Duluth train, westbound Tuesday, left the track, near Shevlin. The parlor car, at the rear rolled over on its side, and the day coach ahead of it, which was filled with passengers, careened badly, but did not capsize, and the smoker rode the ties upright. The accident was caused by a broken rail and delayed the train two hours. No one was badly injured.

OUTLOOK

For the Western Baseball League Is Looking Bright.

Denver, March 13.—The Western league magnates re-assembled at the Brown Palace hotel this forenoon for further consultation, although all important matters requiring their attention at this time were acted upon yesterday evening. No representatives of the National lague or of the National association of minor baseball leagues having been present, this meeting of the Western league has proved to be less important than was prophecied. President James Whitfield speaks with confidence concerning the outlook for the season and predicts that Milwaukee and Peoria, the new members, will strengthen the league. Mr. Whitfield said today that Johnny King would probably be connected with one of the Western teams, either as manager or holder of an interest.

No objection has been raised to the action of President Whitfield in indorsing the playing rules accepted by the Buffalo conference. He informed the owners and representatives of the teams that the foul strike would be modified satisfactorily as it would be void of its confusion features, when it was finally approved by the rules committee.

The committee on schedule, of which President Whitfield is chairman ex-officio, has prepared a draft of a schedule, but it is still undergoing revision and will not be made public until late in March or early in April. It has been agreed to open the playing season on Thursday, April 24.

GALVESTON TO LONDON.

New Steamship Service About to Be Inaugurated.

Galveston, March 13.—The steamship Cayo Romano has been ordered here and will inaugurate the Galveston-London line, which has undertaken a contract to export 50,000,000 pounds of Texas flour to England. The vessels are to sail regularly after the inauguration of the service. The Cayo Romano is due today.

HARDER TO REACH

State Authorities Have Difficult Proposition In New Merger Suit.

Complication Said to Be Greater Than Northern Securities Case.

Must Rely on State Courts and How Get Service?

Governor Van Sant has started on a more hopeless mission in his crusade against the United States Steel corporation than in his fight against the Northern Securities company, according to the opinion of people in Duluth who are close to the big corporation's interests.

In brief, the position of the steel corporation, if attacked as it is claimed in dispatches from St. Paul it will be, is almost analagous to that of the Northern Securities company, when the governor sought to reach it through the United States supreme court. It will set up, if suit is brought in federal court that the court has no jurisdiction over the subsidiary railroad companies.

According to advices from St. Paul, however, Governor Van Sant intends to bring suit in the state courts. He cannot get service on the Steel corporation, it is claimed, for it has no office in the state, has no officers within the state and does no business whatever in Minnesota. As far as Duluth is concerned, there is not an officer or employe of the United States Steel company here, as far as can be learned. T. F. Cole, who as president of the Oliver Iron Mining company, is supposed to be the chief representative of the big corporation's interests in the Northwest, it is said to be not even an employe of the Steel corporation.

The governor could not reach the Northern Securities company through the federal court for the same reasons that are said to apply in the Northern Securities case. The United States Steel company is a New Jersey corporation. Its offices are in New Jersey and New York. Wherever its subsidiary companies' offices are located, the parent corporation has no office or representative.

It is said that the Steel corporation controls directly the Minnesota Iron company, which in turn controls the Duluth & Iron Range railroad. Both of these subsidiary corporations are incorporated under the laws of Minnesota. The Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway is incorporated under the laws of Minnesota. But the Lake Superior Consolidated Iron Mines company is incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, and it is said that the stock of this corporation as well as of the Missabe road is held by three trustees who are residents of New Jersey, and therefore cannot be reached by the proceedings proposed. Moreover, it is claimed, that it cannot be shown that these three men hold the stock for the Steel corporation interests.

Stress is laid on this part of the situation, because it is claimed that it is impossible to find any proof whatever of the legal merging of the two railroad interests, or of any combination either in corporate existence or results growing out of a combination.

With this state of facts, it is claimed to be plain that not only is presented a situation similar to that discovered in the Northern Securities merger case, but a far more complicated one. In addition to that, it is claimed that the merger has not had the effect to violate the spirit of the competing-lines statue. It is represented that the Iron Range and Missabe roads reach only three common points—Virginia, Eveleth and Biwabik—and that an independent competing line—the Eastern Minnesota—is an active factor in the traffic of Eveleth and Virginia, leaving only Biwabik as subject to the mercy of the combination.

It is also claimed that no change whatever has been made as a result of the combination, except to add to the commercial interests of the state and particularly Duluth. Freight rates have not been raised, it is asserted, and no tendency has been shown toward that end. As far as that is concerned it is claimed, the road have already begun a reduction of merchandise freight rates, which will be carried out further as soon as changes now under consideration are arrived at.

As far as the two railroads are concerned, the Steel corporation has been very careful to avoid ostensible evidence of combination. The officers of the two companies are separate and distinct individuals. The nearest approach to the same slate of officers is found in the case of J. B. Cotton, who is general solicitor for both roads. In one or two cases, the employes of one road are the employes in the same capacity of the other, but this appears only in two or three instances.

It has been a matter of comment on the street or in offices wherever the decision of Governor Van Sant to attack the Steel corporation has been discussed that it is rather a late day at which to begin, after the company has been in existence for over a year. There have been numerous intimations that the decision is a matter of politics rather than of official judgment.

Vital Statistics Show an Alarming Increase in an Already Prevailing Disease—Are Any Exempt?

At no time in the history of disease has there been such an alarming increase in the nubmer of cases of any particular malady as in that of kidney and bladder troubles now preying upon the people of this country.

Today we see a relative, a friend or an acquaintance apparently well, and in a few days we maybe grieved to learn of their serious illness or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble—Bright's disease.

Kidney trouble often becomes advanced into acute stages before the afflicted is aware of its presence; that is why we read of so many sudden deaths of prominent business and professional men, physicians and others. They have neglected to stop the leak in time.

While scientists are puzzling their brains to find out the cause, each individual can, by a little precaution, avoid the chances of contracting dreaded and dangerous kidney trouble, or eradicate it completely from their system if already afflicted. Many precious lives might have been, and many more can yet be saved, by paying attention to the kidneys.

It is the mission of The Herald to benefit its readers at every opportunity, and therefore we advise all who have any symptoms of kidney or bladder trouble to write today to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a free sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the celebrated specific which is having such a great demand and remarkable success in the cure of the most distressing kidney and bladder troubles. With the sample bottle of Swamp-Root will also be sent free a pamphlet and treatise of valuable information.

Commercial Club Gets One From George C. Howe.

Among the other locations that are under consideration by the committee appointed to find possible quarters for the Commercial club is a building that George C. Howe offers to build adjoining the Kitchi Gammi club building on First street, near Third avenue west. Mr. Howe owns property at this point 50 by 140 feet and he would build the full size of the two lots and three stories high. The building would be of brick and stone. His proposition involves the lease by the club of the entire building for a period of five years on a percentage basis on the investment. It is figured that the club could take the third floor and rent out the lower two stories. The net cost of the upper floor under such circumstances would be about $2100 a year, according to calculations made by members of the committee. The location is favored, but it appears that it would be impossible to have a light court and still let the club quarters occupy the needed space of 50 by 140. To omit the light shaft would make the rooms too dark for the club use.

Several other locations have been suggested, and the new steel corporation building is still under consideration. It is expected that a proposition will be obtained for the upper floor of the latter soon after A. B. Wolvin's return from the East.

It is estimated that the club will have a membership of 500 within six months and a list of 800 within a year.

BUTCHERS'

Convention Closes With Banquet---The Election of Officers.

The convention of the Lake Superior Retail Butchers' association was brought to a close last evening with the banquet at the McKay hotel, an event that was a decided success in the social line, and of which the visiting butchers carried away very pleasant memories. The tables were arranged in the form of a capital letter T. The service was excellent. Felix Herzoo acted as toastmaster and every one of the guests was called upon to respond. An orchestra played at intervals during the evening.

The closing business session was held at Kalamazoo hall yesterday afternoon. The principal matters to come up were the election of officers and the setting of a place of meeting next year. The next annual session will be held in Hurley, Mich.

J. C. Roehm, president of the Ashland Retail Butchers, association, was selected supreme president for the Lake Superior association. G. F. Wilson, of Duluth, was re-elected supreme vice president; M. H. Berg, of Ashland, supreme secretary, and B. J. Toben, of Duluth, supreme treasurer.

The following were elected directors of the association: G. S. Munsey, of Duluth; L. Wiszler, of Hurley; Samuel Reed, of Ironwood; William Waters, of Bessemer, and Nick Hanten, of Ashland.

REGULATE PLUMBING

An Ordinance Being Prepared Which Provides For Inspection.

Will Be Under Direction of the Health Commissioner.

Employment of Inspector Necessary---Some of the Provisions.

A new city ordinance is being prepared for the purpose of regulating the plumbing business.

An office of plumbing inspector will be created. It will be a fee office and a plum for some plumber.

The new office is to be connected with the health department despite the fact that some consider it a branch of the building inspection department.

However, the new city charter says that it shall be under the control of the health department. Those that try to reason out the why and wherefore of certain provisions of that charter may find themselves in the same predicament.

The schedule of fees for the new office has not as yet been determined, but the office is expected to furnish a permanent financial inducement to attract expert plumbers away from their regular trade. Rank outsiders are vulgar enough to insinuate that that would mean a great deal of money.

It is claimed that there is a great deal of plumbing in Duluth that is very poor and unsanitary. It is to prevent any more of that sort of work, and to remedy the present bad plumbing that the new office is to be created.

The ordinance as it now appears in the rough draft says that no person shall be appointed plumbing inspector who has not had at least five years' experience as a practical journeyman plumber.

Another provision is that no person shall construct, extend, alter, disconnect, or repair any plumbing works or house drainage for compensation, unless he shall first obtain a license as a plumber from the city council.

Another important provision is that every building shall be independently plumbed. That is, the plumbing shall be separate from that of adjoining buildings.

Suitable plans of all plumbing work proposed must be filed in the office of the plumbing inspector before the work begins. These plans must show clearly the location of all soil, waste and vent pipes, and fixtures and traps.

All plumbing work when finished must be left uncovered for inspection by the plumbing inspector, and this inspection must be made within one day from the time he is notified that the job is ready for inspection.

Sewer pipes in yards must be of the best quality of vitrified pipe and not nearer than two feet to any exterior wall or less than six and a half feet below the surface of the ground. In bad or made ground the sewer pipe must be of cast iron.

Refrigerator waste pipes must be connected with a sewer, and these pipes shall not be less than one and one-half inches in diameter and so arranged as to be properly flushed.

Where it is necessary to use cesspools on account of unsewered streets, no such pool shall be permitted within twenty feet of any dwelling or factory.

Persons found violating any of the forty-six sections of the ordinance are to be liable to a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $50.

GET NOTICE.

Twelve Dairymen Informed That Their Dairies Were Dirty.

Twelve Duluth milkmen have been notified by the board of health that their dairies constitute a public nuisance.

The notice also includes an order to put their dairies in proper condition without delay.

Several of those that received notices have already taken steps to clean up their stables and milk houses.

The dairies that received these notices were those that were graded No. 3 and No. 4 by the city milk inspector. Since this inspection was begun a short time ago there has been a noticeable improvement in the dairy conditions throughout the city and the health authorities expect to eliminate the third and fourth grades within a short time.

Yesterday afternoon the health board held a special meeting and discussed the glanders epidemic, which is now on in one of Duluth's largest livery stables.

Four more horses were ordered killed and State Surgeon Bramhall was telegraphed for to hold the post mortem examinations.

Eight other horses that show a reaction from the tests made are to be kept in the strictest quarantine and it is possible that some of them will have to be killed.

As a result of the glanders epidemic the health board will keep all public drinking fountains closed until May and possibly later.

Signs of Spring.

If further evidence is needed to show that spring is at hand, the pussy willows are ready to supply it. They are out in all their furry and velvety beauty, and the children have become aware of their appearance and are plucking them. This fact, together with the balmy touch that softens the chill of the frost still left in the air, and faint tinge of green peeping out from under last year's dead grass, create a gentle hint to winter to go away back and sit down.

This is not an extraordinarily early date for pussy willows, however, for their appearance is usually the first manifestation of spring, and they have been seen as early as Feb. 26 in Duluth.

MISTAKE.

Albert Fisher's Error Nearly Loses $500 For Him.

It looked this morning for a little while as though St. Louis county had gained $500 which was very easy money.

Tuesday Albert H. Fisher was arraigned on a charge of keeping a house of ill-fame on the range, and he deposited $500 cash bail. He was to appear this morning to plead, but when this morning came Fisher did not.

County Attorney McClintock reported it to the court, and Judge Dibell ordered Deputy Sheriff George E. Randall to call out the missing man's name. Mr. Randall called him three times in the court room and three times more from the front door of the court house, but Fisher did not answer.

Then Judge Dibell declared the bail forfeited, and the county was in $500. A little later, however, it developed that Fisher thought he was due tomorrow instead of today. When he left his bail money he told Under Sheriff Dash that he was coming back Friday, so it was evident that there was a misunderstanding. Judge Dibell stated that if Fisher appears tomorrow the order forfeiting the bail will be withdrawn.

Calvin Bush Gets Verdict Against City of Duluth.

Calvin Bush was awarded $200 for his injuries by a jury in district court yesterday afternoon, and the city will have to pay the amount of the verdict. He was hurt in West Duluth on a Grand avenue bridge, the ice wagon upon which he was taking a drive striking an obstruction and pitching him overboard. His hurts included two broken ribs, some miscellaneous bruises and the adherence of his pleura to the chest wall. He sued for $1635, of which sum $135 was claimed to be his actual damage in medical services and loss of time. The jury awarded him $200.

Another verdict came in this morning, and it was for the plaintiff, also. It was in the case of William Scott against William C. Sargent, as sheriff, in which the plaintiff sought to recover some goods seized by the sheriff for Moss Bros., a Twin City liquor firm. The jury gave Scott a verdict for his property, and fixed its value at $400, and it also awarded him $15 for the detention of the property. He claimed that the property was worth $457 and that his damages were $40.

This morning Judge Cant, in court room No. 2, took up the case of Austin J. Meagher against John J. O'Flaherty. A jury was drawn and the case was on trial at noon. Meagher alleges that he earned $201 cruising and exploring for O'Flaherty, but that the latter neglected to pay him. So he wants the court and the jury to help him collect it. O'Flaherty denies the services.

TUGMEN

Are Making Their Season Terms With Tug Trust.

Capt. Charles McCarll, of Chicago, the new president of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association, is in the city consulting with the local members of that association. The local body will hold a meeting tonight.

The local body has presented its requests for the season to the Union Towing and Wrecking company, and they have been forwarded to the Great Lakes Towing company, the parent corporation of the trust tug fleets all over the great lakes. No answer has yet been received, and it is understood that Capt. McCarll is here to assist the local tugmen with his advice.

The requests contain some new provisions as to wages and privileges, it is understood, though it is not anticipated that there will be any trouble over them.

The Licensed Tugmen's Protective association includes all of the tugmen, masters, engineers and firemen, and is intended to take the place of the separate organizations for each craft. Capt. McCarll was around the docks today with Capt. Michael Ryan, who was the first grand president of the association, and whom Capt. McCarll succeeds.

MR. WARDE'S PLANS.

He Will Probably Again Star Next Season.

Frederick Warde, the tragedian, arrived at the Spalding this morning. Various conflicting rumors have been going the rounds of the press regarding Mr. Warde's plans for starring next season. It has been said that he would again star jointly with Louis James, under the management of Wagenhalls & Kemper. The intimation is given out here, however, that Mr. Warde is likely to be again starred singly next season. His present company will be kept largely intact, and will be directed by the tragedian's son in the production of the Warde repertory. The company, it is expected, will then be headed by Charles D. Herrmann, the present leading man, and a well known legitimate actor. Wagenhalls & Kemper will probably provide Mr. Warde with a new classic play, possibly one by Henry Guy Carlton. He will close the present season with a two-weeks' engagement in Honolulu.

Among the other members of the company registered at the Spalding are Barry Johnstone, Miss May Warde and Miss Ashton.

At the St. Louis are Hamilton Coleman, John Harris, Robert Watson, Harry M. O'Connor and Jennie McLeod.

NO ORDERS RECEIVED

Nothing Heard Here of Abolition of Mileage Books.

Reported That Roads Have Agreed to Cut Them Out.

All Travelers Will Mourn Their Loss, If It Is True.

Local passenger agents have received no instructions regarding the reported action of the railroads in abolishing the interchangeable system of mileage books. It is reported from Chicago that the books have been done away with, except as to being good over subsidiary or allied parts of a system, or over such roads as the issuing road may have through car service.

The system of interchangeable mileage books, which has developed gradually during the past few years, has become a great convenience to travelers. For one thing, it removed the necessity for carrying so many different mileage books, and having so much money tied up in transportation. Before the interchangeable system came into use, if one wanted to travel on the Missabe road, it was necessary to have Missabe transportation, even though he might have in his grip mileage over every other road in the West. Under the new system the large roads, with the exception of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern, made interchangeable arrangements with all Western lines.

There were exceptions to this, when the road over which it was proposed to interchange had a part of its line that would compete with a part of the competing road. For instance, the Northern Pacific and Great Northern would not accept interchangeable mileage from the Omaha for the ride from Duluth to St. Paul. This theory was applied wherever analagous situations existed.

The effect of the interchangeable mileage plan has been to reduce very largely the cost of transportation to those that travel a great deal. A 2000-mile book is sold for $50, and when the covers are returned a rebate of $10 is made. This reduces the cost of travel from 3 cents a mile to 2 cents.

It is claimed that a great many people that are not commercial travelers have availed themselves of the privileges thus accorded. The original application of the interchangeable idea was with the purpose of accommodating commercial travelers, and not men engaged in other lines of business. The convenience has been so manifest, however, that almost anybody that has much traveling to do, or has a long journey to undertake where the mileage applies, will buy an interchangeable book. Consequently, it is claimed the original purpose of the privilege has been abused. That is one reason given in the discussion that has been going on for some time past why interchangeable mileage has been or will be abolished.

Commercial men have tried to get the roads to issue 5000-mile books at the same rate, but to make them good over all lines. The effect of this would be to make it necessary to carry only one book or one kind of books wherever the traveler might go. This would make unnecessary the investing of so much money in mileage, and also, it is claimed, would tend to keep out many of the smaller travelers, not regularly employed as such, because they would not care to put so much money into transportation. For a time, it was thought that the minimum would be raised to 3000 miles, and the books made universally interchangeable.

It appears now, however, that the protests of the small roads which have given the big lines the privilege of interchanging over their roads without getting a reciprocal advantage from interchanging mileage, have made such a protest that it has been effective. The smaller roads insisted, if the interchangeable system were to continue to be applied to their roads, that they be allowed to interchange their regular tickets over the big lines. They found that they were giving the patrons of the big roads transportation at the rate of 2 cents a mile, while if they sold their regular tickets over the big lines their customers had to pay 3 cents a mile. The blessings of the interchangeable system were too manifestly one-sided to suit the small roads.

RUSSIAN POLICE.

Have Most Extensive System In the World.

The Russian government has the most extensive and complete police system in the world, there being four separate and distinct departments. Each is independent of the others and has its own director, but all are under the supervision of the same head, Privy Councilor Sopliguine, minister of the interior. The first is the ordinary force of patrolmen, such as are found in every city, to maintain order and to prevent and punish crime. It is composed of veteran soldiers, who wear military uniforms and carry sabers instead of clubs, writes W. E. Curtis in the Chicago Record-Herald.

The second is that of the dvornicks, or doorkeepers of apartment houses in Russian cities. Everybody lives in an apartment house, which has but one entrance, in charge of a man appointed by the police, but aid by the owner. It is his business to keep the premises in proper condition, to represent the landlord in his relations with the tenant, to collect the rent, to oversee repairs, to prevent the abuse and unnecessary damage of the property, and at the same time to serve the tenants in various capacities so far as he may do so without neglecting his other duties. He receives all the mail and packages that come to the house and distributes them. It is his duty to see that each tenant has a proper passport, and if anything suspicious occurs he is required to report it promptly to the nearest police headquarters.

In short, he is a spy whose employers require him to know all about everybody who lives under the roof of the house of which he has charge. Often he is a blackmailer and extorts money from tenants who have something to conceal. Sometimes—more often ten years ago than now—he betrays innocent people into the hands of the police upon false charges for vengeance or because they refuse to pay for his protection.

The dvornik wears a uniform similar to that of the regular police, and his great overcoat with scarlet trimmings and his military cap are always hanging in the hallway when he is on duty. There are not less than 10,000 dvorniks in St. Petersburg, as many more in Moscow, and a corresponding number in other cities.

The third system is the gendearmie, a body of special police agents scattered all over the empire, one or two in every canton, who are superior to the regular police, and are authorized to call upon them at any time for assistance. They are easily known to the public, wear a distinguishing uniform and severe as general inspectors of public affairs to see that the officeholders perform their duties properly and that the edicts of the emperor are obeyed.

This system was organized by Emperor Nicholas I early in the last century. When it was reported to him that there was a large amount of corruption in the different branches of the government he called the procurator general and announced his determination to hang every man who had stolen so much as a piece of rope. "Then your majesty will not be able to fill the offices," replied the procurator general, but Nicholas said he would try, and selecting the most honest men he could find he sent them through the empire to inspect the accounts and the conduct of his officials. From that time the system dates, and it has always been maintained.

Then comes the hated and hateful third section, as it is called, the unknown spies, who exist in every branch of social, political and commercial Russia. They are everywhere and number hundreds of thousands, although at present their activity is not so great as it was during the Nihilistic prosecutions during the first part of the reign of Alexander III. Women in the highest society, nobles, lawyers, merchants, clerks in banks and mercantile houses, operatives in factories, waiters in hotels and cafes, drosky drivers, peddlers, courtesans, house servants, everybody—was suspected of belonging to the much feared third section, but no one would ever confess it. In all the capitals of Europe were representatives of the third section of the Russian police, and their intrigues have been a popular subject for sensational novels.

These spies are not usually paid regular salaries, but are rewarded for information furnished according to its value or services they are called upon to render. If they obtain information concerning the corruption of a public officer or suspicious conduct on the part of a citizen, they report it to the police official under whose authority they are acting, and are paid by him. If any particular person is under surveillance, or a plot is suspected in any quarter, those who would be most likely to secure information are notified and receive instructions.

These several systems of police all work in harmony, and with the passport regulations the office of the interior at St. Petersburg is supposed to know the whereabouts and the disposition of every person in the empire at all times. Every citizen of Russia is required to have a passport, and every traveler or visitor must report himself to police headquarters immediately after his arrival, and notify the police at least twenty-four hours preceding his departure. This is easily done. If he stops at a hotel it is only necessary for him to hand his passport to the porter and ask for a permit to remain ten days or as long as he likes; or if he stops with friends or at a private boarding house the dvornik will attend to the matter for him. When he decides upon the date for his departure he gives notice to the porter or the dvornik, who takes his passport to police headquarters and has it stamped with permission to leave the city by a certain route for a certain destination. When he purchases his ticket at the railway station he may be required to show this permit, and if he changes his plans without notifying the police he is likely to have trouble.

The police regulations are not enforced now nearly so strictly as they were thirteen years ago, and even then there was no trouble to comply with them, provided a person was willing to submit. Those who refused to do so, or neglected the requirements, very soon regretted it.

The olltical conditions in Russia today are such as to justify the relaxation of police supervision. Nihilism is practically extinct. The punishment of crime is also much less severe than formerly, and the treatment of prisoners is more humane. The prevailing crime is larceny. There are no such thieves as the Russians, except perhaps the Arabs. "There is only one honest official in my empire," said Nicholas I, "and that is myself." Corruption and bribery were formerly universal, but I understand there has been great improvement within the last few years. In every factory where goods are made that can be easily stolen, the employes are searched every day before they leave the building. In every town of any size there is what is called the Thieves' Market, to which burglars, pickpockets, sneak thieves and servants carry their plunder and sell or pawn it to the merchants, mostly of the Jewish persuasion.

The Thieves' Market in St. Petersburg is an enormous building, covering an entire block, with at least 250 different dealers, whose shops are filled with every conceivable variety of articles, some of them new, but most of them second hand. Every article under the roof is supposed to be stolen. This is not actually true, however, because many people pressed by necessity offer their own property for sale at the Thieves' Market, as they would at a pawnbroker's.

In Moscow the old Thieves' Market, which was a place of great interest, but recently been torn down and replaced by a large and beautiful building with triple arcades which are occupied by respectable tradesmen. In the meantime a large square adjoining one of the regular market houses has been given up for the use of dealers in stolen property, who drive their largest trade on Saturday nights and Sunday morning. People who visit the place, however, are always warned to leave their watches and pocketbooks at the hotel.

At these Thieves' Markets one sometimes finds valuable curios and old pieces of silver, which have been stolen from the palaces of the nobility by their servants. Knives, forks, spoons, opera glasses, jewelry of all kinds, clothing, hats, caps and shoes, bed linen, towels, cooking utensils—everything that is used or used by men and women—are there. A nurse girl may pawn the clothing of an infant; a lady's maid may steal a hair brush, or a towel or two, or a pair of gloves that her mistress has carelessly laid to one side. When people miss articles and have any reason to suspect that they have been stolen, they go to the Thieves' Market instead of police headquarters, because it is an easier and cheaper way of recovering their property. The police are slow and severe and the plaintiff in a criminal case generally suffers almost as badly as the defendant.

HOW TAFT MAKES LAWS.

Rev. William Nelson, of Raleigh, N. C., told the New York Tribune the following:

"Governor General Taft must be a big man in the Philippines. I have a relative, Dr. Stuntz, who is a missionary in the Philippines, and in securing the site for a ned Methodist church in Manila he discovered that no law existed by which non-Catholic bodies could hold real estate in the islands. Dr. Stuntz called on Governor Taft and told him his trouble. Without consulting a book, or so much as moving a chair, he touched a bell, summoned his secretary, dictated a law in three sections covering the whole case, and in fifteen minutes it was laid down before Governor Taft. He looked it over and then quietly folded it away, saying:

"'It will be enacted a law at the next session of the commission.'

"It went through, just as he said."

PORTER ON TRIAL

He Is Charged With Manslaughter In Second Degree.

Struck John Brown, and Blow Indirectly Caused Death.

An Intent to Kill Is Not Charged Against Him.

Nelson Porter was placed on trial in district court this afternoon on a charge of manslaughter in the second degree. He is charged with killing John Brown on Feb. 16 by striking him a blow that knocked him down and brought his head against the pavement with sufficient force to fracture his skull and bring about his death on the following day. There is no charge that he intended to kill Brown, an intent to kill not being an element of the charge under which Porter rests.

Porter is the colored "hot tamale" man who had an altercation with Brown on the night of Feb. 16 over the price of some of Porter's wares. Brown, who was a 'longshoreman, bought something from Porter and did not pay for it, according to the stories that were told by witnesses. They had a row, and Brown is said to have struck Porter. They were put out of the saloon in which the trouble occurred, and they had another meeting on the outside, where the blow mentioned in the indictment is said to have been given.

Porter is defended by Porter J. Neff, with C. O. Baldwin as counsel. County Attorney McClintock is prosecuting the case.

Early this morning the jury took the case against Tony Held, charged with grand larceny in the first degree. He is accused of stealing a watch, a pipe and $14.50 in money from George Rower, who was asleep in a saloon at the time. He is said to have cut Bowers' pocket to get at the booty. Held claimed that Bower gave him the pipe, and that he took care of his watch for him. He denied the robbery. He had the watch and pipe when he was arrested.

Thomas Maloney was acquitted of burglary yesterday afternoon, the jury taking five hours to come to this conclusion. Maloney was found in a saloon on the Bowery at the suspicious hour of 3 o'clock a. m., and he was seen there. He claimed, however, that the door was open when he got there, and he could not resist the temptation to go in and look about.

On cross-examination County Attorney McClinton sprung a record on Maloney, showing that he had been arrested for numerous petty offenses in Ashland, and that he had spent a term in Waupun penitentiary for larceny.

F. H. Lambert and C. W. Hoppeman, accused of practicing dentistry without licenses, furnished $100 bail each this morning and were released from custody.

Militia Boys Preparing Instructive Exhibit of Models.

Within a few days the members of Companies A and C will begin the erection of their miniature world's fair grounds in the Armory.

The raising of the buildings will require two weeks of hard work. As the time for the opening approaches the project promises most flattering success.

Among the many splendid military models to be exhibited one of the most interesting is of the old Alamo fort in Texas, where Americans made the most desperate defense in United States history. It was at Alamo that the famous David Crockett and the doughty Col. Bowie lost their lives, along with every American soldier engaged in this unparalleled battle. The model to be exhibited is a faithful reproduction of this historic spot, showing every gun in its proper place. The old dismantled church is a marvel of the modeler's art.

A truthful representation of Camp Lakeview, near Lake City, Minn., where the annual encampment of the Minnesota militia take place, will be very interesting to Duluth people, for it gives every parent an idea of the place where their soldier sons spend their summer vacation. Tents for an entire regiment are pitched. Mess houses, guard house, hospital and, in fact, everything is reproduced with photographic correctness.

A company encampment of the regular army in its round Sibley tents and still another in shelter of "dog" tents are both worthy of especial notice. An accurate regulation model United States rifle range is a fine specimen of workmanship and some one has suggested that, perhaps, some wealthy citizen of Duluth might build one for the soldier lads.

A section of the burning mountains of Hawaii reminds one of nothing so much as of Dante's description of regions not mentioned in polite society. A small Eskimo snow habitation will be much admired for its glistening beauty.

The convent of La Rabida, the place where Christopher Columbus received so much aid when he prepared for his voyages of discovery, cannot fail to attract attention. The visitor will also spend a moment of observation and reflection on one of the grand architectural monuments of ancient times, the hanging gardens of Babylan.

Then there are pyramids, Indian villages, old Fort Snelling, houses of various African tribes, South Sea island bungalows, cliff dwellers of Arizona, and many others, all showing the many strange dwellings or places of historic interest.

Thanks A. O. U. W. No. 10.

I hereby wish to express my sincere thanks to Duluth lodge, No. 10, A. O. U. W., for its kindness in connection with the death of my brother, Albert Soderblom, and the promptness in which the insurance was paid.

IMPROVED SERVICE.

Jobbers Already Notice Betterment In Freight Dispatch.

Jobbers report that they have been getting improved freight service to the West over the two Northern lines of late. The through car service that it is believed should be put in has not been added as yet, but improvements have been made in the service as it formerly existed, which expedite delivery of goods considerably. These improvements result largely from greater care on the part of train crews and junction point warehousemen, so that shipments are kept loaded in the cars in station order, and consequently are not carried past their junction or destination.

Jobbers are not satisfied with the service as it stands, however, and believe that the roads can afford to give them greater efficiency than is afforded at present.

Car Tied Up.

Through a spreading of the rails in the temporary track near the point of rocks, the West Duluth line was tied up completely for over an hour, commencing at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. One of the West Duluth cars was derailed and as there is a single track only at the place, where the contractors are blasting the rocks, the car service was tied up both ways.

BOLDLY ROBBED

Burglars Go Through the Room Where Two Woodsmen Sleep.

Ludwig Olson Roll of $125 Is Taken From Under His Pillow.

Two Others Hid Large Sums More Effectually and Escaped.

There was a bold burglary last night.

A thief or thieves entered a lodging house at 602 West Michigan street and stole $125 from Ludwig Olson.

They also searched through the clothing of two other men, but only got some small change and a few cigars.

Olson and his three companions came in from the woods and rented the same room. When Olson retired he folded his trousers and the $125 under his pillow and went to sleep.

One of his companions placed $107 under the mattress and the other left $55 in his trousers, which were thrown on the floor.

The thief or thieves entered the room without disturbing the slumbers of the three woodsmen and took Olson's trousers from under his head.

They went through the clothing of the man with the $107 hidden away, but did not touch the $55 in the trousers that were carelessly thrown on the floor.

As soon as the robbery was discovered this morning report was made at police headquarters. The entire absence of any tangible clue makes it impossible to do much with the case.

One of the men in the room said that he heard some person rap on the door about 1 o'clock in the morning, but as the party passed on down the hallway, he paid little attention to the disturbance.

The police are using extraordinary precautions to prevent the robbing of woodsmen, but find it a very difficult problem.

On two trains yesterday more than 500 woodsmen came in, and all the lodging houses and cheaper class of hotels are filled with them. They sleep five and six in a room, and the doors of the lodging houses are unlocked all the time, offering inducements to the thieves.

A PUZZLING CASE.

Frank C. Manske, Victim of Mysterious Assault.

Frank C. Manske, a harnessmaker, was taken into police headquarters late last night with several cuts in the back of his head. He was found at the corner of Second street and Third avenue east.

Manske was unable to explain how he received the wounds, and the police are much puzzled over the affair, though he is not seriously injured.

The young man was working until late in a house at 516 East Superior street, which he is preparing for the reception of his bride a month hence. He remembers nothing after leaving the house.

KILLED NEAR ADAMS.

Brakeman McNulty Loses Life On Missabe Road.

A brakeman named McNulty was killed on the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road near the Adams mine early this morning

Meager details received here at noon simply stated that he had fallen from a moving train and death was almost instantaneous. It is also claimed that he lived at Proctorknott. There are two brakemen by that name living there, and the Missabe road officials were unable to tell which had been killed.

VIADUCT REPAIR NEEDED.

Necessity For Sixth Avenue Structure Is Great.

With the opening of navigation so close at hand, those persons who will have business on the docks west of Sixth avenue west, are anxiously awaiting the time when they will see work begun on the repairs to the Sixth avenue west viaduct. This winter a big hole was punched in this by a railroad train and the railroad company has not yet got around to repair the break. It is probable that it has not yet been able to get the necessary iron, but if the viaduct is not repaired by the opening of navigation, it will result in great inconvenience. There is no part of the dock frontage that is used so much as that west of Sixth avenue west, and a very roundabout course is necessary to get to the different docks with the viaduct broke where it is.

Very Mature.

A particularly appropriate use of a word in contained in a mandate from the supreme court received here this morning announcing a decision in a case tried in the district court here Jan. 31, 1356. After "mature deliberation," mandate reads, the supreme court has decided to affirm the decision of the lower court. This was in the case of the International Trust company against the American Loan and Trust company. The International Trust company appealed from two orders of the district court, made seven years ago, and the mandate announcing the decision is dated March 11, 1902.

SILBERSTEIN & BONDY COMP'y

ONE BODY

Was Recovered From the Wrecked Steamer Providence.

Memphis, March 13.—A Vicksburg, Miss., special to the Scimitar, says: The tug Joe Seay with Capt. W. H. Morgan, owner of the wrecked steamer Providence and others on board, returned from the scene of the disaster at 10 o'clock this morning, with the body of Walter Burns, (colored) the only one they succeeded in recovering. They say the Providence is lying bottom up, with a slight list to starboard, and that the bodies of Capt. Cassidy, Engineer Roup, Dr. Lancaster and Mr. Scott are probably underneath the wreckage.

Capt. Morgan left a force of men on the scene and every effort will be made to recover the bodies. He does not think the bodies are under the vessel, but will be found in the lake. The launch Vivian left at noon for the wreck carrying dynamite to blow off the submerged cabin of the boat, and secure the bodies if there. It is still believed twenty persons were drowned, four white and sixteen negroes. Pilot Johnson stayed in the pilot house until the boat went over and had to break out under water. He was severely cut on the head, neck and hands. Clerk Kain also went down under the boat and had to fight his way to the surface. He was in the water with Capt. Cassidy who clutched at him and tore off some of his clothing. Kain climbed out on the upturned boat's bottom, where those who were saved gathered until they were taken off by rescuers.

SHRIEVALTY

Of Kings County, N. Y., Is Causing Lots of Trouble.

New York, March 13.—Five deputy sheriffs and clerks who formerly served under Sheriff Guden in Kings county and who accepted office under Norman S. Dike, whom Governor Odell appointed to the office, left Dike's service today and returned to Guden. One of these men was Claude Dady, brother of Mike J. Dady. When Guden entered the sheriff's office today he said he was ready for business and expected to have considerable of it to do.

Jere Wernberger, attorney for Guden, served an order today on Dike from Supreme Justice Gaynor requiring Dike to appear in court to show cause why an order should not be issued calling on Dike to surrender such authority as he has assumed on account of his appointment of sheriff together with such books and papers as he may have in his possession.

NEW PROTOCOLS

With South American Countries Ready For Signatures.

Washington, March 13.—The amendments to the original protocols between the United States on the one side and Nicaragua and Costa Rica on the other, outlining treaties to govern the construction of the Nicaraguan canal have been substantially agreed upon. The new protocols yet require the signature, but the fact that they have advanced to this point is probably the basis for Senator Morgan's statement to the effect that working arrangements had been completed between the countries. It cannot be learned from any official source as yet upon what points the new protocols differ from those presented to the senate during the last session of congress, but the general statement is that the only alterations are those absolutely necessary to meet the points of difference between the original Hay-Pauncefote treaties (which failed) under which they were drawn, and the treaty is finally ratified.

DOUBLE TRACK

To Be Built From Brookfield to Camp Douglas.

Milwaukee, March 13.—A party of Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad officials passed through the city today for a tour of inspection along the line between Brookfield and Camp Douglas. One of the most extensive improvements of the sytem to be made the coming summer will be begun in this territory as soon as the weather moderates. A double track is to be extended from Brookfield to Camp Douglas, a distance of about 120 miles. It is said that the cost of this work will be $500,000.

New York, March 13.—The directors of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad met here today and declared the regular semi-annual dividends of 3½ per cent on preferred and 3 per cent on common stock.

A DEMAND

Made on Secretary For Passports For the Thomases.

Chicago, March 13.—A second letter, in the shape of a formal demand has been sent to Secretary of State Hay, asking for passports for Dr. and Mrs. Hiram W. Thomas to visit the concentration camps of South Africa. Should Mr. Hay again refuse to act, it is stated that the matter will be taken to the president. Should Mr. Roosevelt uphold Mr. Hay, a final appeal will be made to Lord Pauncefote. The second letter to Secretary Hay is signed by John O. Knight, who was appointed by Governor Yates to arrange with the state department for Dr. Thomas' mission. Peter Van Vlissingen, of the Chicago Transvaal league, said today:

"If the British object to Dr. Thomas because of his well-known pro-Boer utterances, we will select someone else. We have $9000 in hand and in Philadelphia there is $3000 more awaiting, and all over the country it is the same. In Europe there are many who want to send similar relief."

STRIKERS

Come to St. Paul to See Northern Pacific Officials.

St. Paul, March 13.—A committee representing the strikers of the Northern Pacific in Montana, arrived here today to confer with representatives of the company. The company officials will likely not meet the committee until the subject has been referred by the assistant general superintendent to his superiors.

Last night a conference was held in Montana between Assistant General Superintendent Law and a committee from the strikers. The committee was informed that all men who have been hired since the strike on the Rocky Mountain division commenced would be retained as long as their services were satisfactory. As to filling the vacancies, the old men would be given preference, but each man re-employed will be taken back on the merits of his case. The fact that he went out on a strike will not operate against him unless there are other circumstances in connection with his going out which spoil his record. The committee today informed the company that the decision promulgated was not satisfactory to them.

DEATH LIST.

Philadelphia, March 13.—William L. Elkin, Jr., died today at his country home, "Menlo Lodge," near Elkins Station, Pa., a few miles from this city. He was a son of the millionaire traction magnate and was himself prominently identified with many business interests. He was about 38 years of age. Mr. Elkins has been ill since October and was constantly under the care of a doctor for a cerebro spinal trouble. At the time of his death Mr. Elkins was president of the Pennsylvania Iron Works company, the United Coke & Gas company, the Hygeia Hide & Cold Storage company, the McKeesport Gas Improvement company and the New England Gas & Coke company. He also was a director of the Allis-Chalmers company. Mr. Elkins was a well known club man, being a member of the Union League, Philadelphia Raquet, Philadelphia Gun and Hunting club. IN CONGRESS.

Washington, March 13.—The house today, after some routine business, resumed consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill. It was agreed that general debate on the bill should close in three hours. The annual discussion of the items for additional compensation for special mail facilities between Washington and New Orleans and Kansas City and Newton, Kas., was then inaugurated in a speech by Mr. Crumpacker (Ind.) in opposition to the special appropriations. The amount of these appropriations was reduced in the present bill from $198,000 to $167,000, because of the abandonment of the subsidy between New York and Washington. During the existence of the subsidy for that portion of the route ($28,000), he said, the cost of carrying the mails for that distance exclusive of the subsidy averaged $3400 per mile per annum against an average throughout the United States of only $186 per mile.

The Southern railway, which received the subsidy between Washington and New Orleans, he said, now received $669 per mile in regular mail pay, against $335 when the subsidy was inaugurated in 1893. He contended that the road could not afford to withdraw its fast train if the subsidy was withdrawn.

Mr. Underwood (Ala.) defended the subsidy to the Southern railway on the ground that it was absolutely necessary to give the South quick mail facilities. The whole South, he said, was benefited by the extra train run in return for this appropriation.

Mr. Smith (Ill.) discussed the subject of penny postage.

Mr. Jenkins (Wis.), who advanced the theory that Cuba was now domestic territory of the United States in the Republican conference on Tuesday, gave his reasons for his opinion. He quoted many decisions of the supreme court in support of his contention that "foreign territory" must be territory beyond the jurisdiction of the United States, whereas he maintained that Spain had relinquished sovereignty over Cuba to the United States and that such territory could be only relinquished or alienated by congressional enactment. Holding this view to our relations to Cuba, he argued that congress would waste its time talking of reciprocity with an island under the sovereignty of the United States.

Mr. Jenkins went even farther than this and raised the question as to whether duties collected on goods since the ratification of the treaty of Paris would not have to be refunded.

THE SENATE.

Washington, March 13.—At the opening of today's session of the senate, Mr. Wellington (Md.) presented the credentials of Arthur Pue Gorman, elected a senator from Maryland, for a term of six years beginning on March 4, 1903. They were read and filed.

Mr. Hale (Me.) presented the conference report upon the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. The report was agreed to without comment.

On reporting the Hepburn bill for the construction of an isthmian canal without amendment and with a recommendation that it pass, Mr. Morgan (Ala.) said the report of the committee would be given in a day or two.

Bills were passed appropriating $900 for relief of Jean Louis Legare, of the Dominion of Canada, for service rendered and money expended in securing the return to the United States of Sitting Bull and his band; for the promotion of First Lieut. Jos. M. Simons, revenue cutter service, to the grade of captain on waiting orders; for relief of persons who made their first payment on desert land under the act of March 3, 1877, but who were unable to perfect entry thereof; to divide Nebraska into two judicial districts; to authorize the sale of a part of the Fort Niobrara military reservation in Nebraska to the village of Valentine, authorizing the president to appoint Lieut. Robert Platt, U. S. N., to the rank of commander; extending for three years from this time the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi river at Burlington, Iowa.

At 2 p. m. the ship subsidy bill was taken up and Mr. Berry (Ark.) spoke in opposition to it. He denounced it as class legislation which he believed was contrary to the constitution.

Solway, Minn., March 13.—Maj. McLaughlin has just arrived from the Red Lake Indian agency with the announcement that a treaty has been signed whereby the Indians sell to the government eleven townships west of the agency for $1,000,000, one-quarter in cash, within thirty days after ratification, and the balance in annual $50,000 installments.

AT WEST DULUTH

Among the entertainments in the city Monday evening, celebrating St. Patrick's birthday, there will be few more pleasing than the one given by the St. James parishioners of West Duluth. The entertainment has always been a success in past years, and it is believed that a more attractive program has been arranged for March 17, this year. The program is as follows:

Solo, selected .. .. David Adams.
Quartet, "The Professor at Home." .. ..

THE WIRE NUISANCE

Chances Considered Excellent For Doing Away With It.

Commercial Light and Power Company Is Ready to Move.

Wants Other Companies Compelled to Do the Same.

Plans are under consideration for abolishing overhead wires, dangerous sign boards and sidewalk displays, through the central business portion of the city.

On the suggestion of Mayor Hugo, it is probable that a commission will be appointed to deal with the overhead wire problem. The work of this commission will be to devise ways and means for compelling the removal of all overhead wires and placing them in a municipal subway system.

As far as the Commercial Light and Power company is concerned it stands ready to take the initiative in this movement, agreeing to put all wires underground as soon as the city is ready on condition that the city will compel other concerns to do likewise.

The removal of the overhead wires means the taking down of all electric poles, except those supporting the trolley wires of the street car company. This would improve the appearance of the street a great deal as well as giving an additional two feet of space to the sidewalk.

While the primary object of doing away with overhead wires is to eliminate danger from fires and accident and to increase the efficiency of all electrical service, it is considered an exceptionally advanced step in beautifying the city's business district.

A crusade against overhanging sidewalk signs is also in prospect. People have been killed on the streets of Duluth as a result of these signs and for a time the council was very careful about granting permits for them.

During the past year, however, hundreds of these signs have been erected with the condition that they can be removed at any time the council sees fit.

Mayor Hugo says that signs of this nature are unsightly and spoil the effect of the architectural beauty of the buildings. In the high winds they are as great a source of danger as the overhead electric wires.

The crusade for better things is likely to wipe out sidewalk stands. A year or so ago this was attempted and was partially successful until sufficient pressure was brought to bear to have the police department desist in enforcing the ordinances.

It is claimed that stands and merchandise piles out in front of smaller stores is not only an eyesore to the citizens, but takes up from eighteen inches to three feet of sidewalk. It is probable that a more determined fight will be made on this than will be made on the overhead wires, despite the fact that it costs nothing to remove the stand nuisance, while it will cost thousands of dollars to remove the overhead wires.

Another thing against which complaint is made is that of allowing awnings to be so low as to strike the hats and even the heads of people who are passing. In most cities there are ordinances requiring awnings to be at least seven feet in the clear above the level of the sidewalk, that is not merely the framework must be that distance from the walk, but no part of the cloth must be nearer.

LAST YEAR'S OPENING.

Time When Navigation Began on the Lake.

In view of the queries being made regarding the date of the opening of navigation in Lake Superior last year, the records kept by Local Weather Forecaster Richardson may be taken as authentic information. Navigation in the Duluth-Superior harbor opened April 16, when the tugs began to move about the harbor and shipping at this end of Lake Superior began to show signs of activity. The first boat to arrive in the harbor here through the Soo was the tug E. G. Maxwell, of Pentwater, Mich. The steamer Osceola and tow were the first boats to arrive from the lower lakes. They arrived at Duluth May 2.

Killed at Superior.

Amos Guenard, a teamster employed by the Webster Manufacturing company at South Superior, was killed yesterday by the Northern Pacific train running between Duluth and Ashland. Guenard was driving over the crossing on Tower avenue, South Superior, when the accident occurred. The wagon was demolished and Guenard was hurled about forty feet. The horses escaped injury. When the accident took place the train was just getting under headway after leaving the South Superior station. It was stopped within 100 feet of the crossing.

"Saved My Life and Kept Me from Insane Asylum"

Mrs. Wilcox is Now in Perfect Health Through no Other Agency than

PAINE'S Celery Compound.

Earnest and Candid Statements Made By a California Lady.

The absolute need of an honest and genuine invigorator and health giver in the spring season is deeply impressed on the mind of every thinking and intelligent man and woman.

The happy cure of Mrs. J. E. Wilcox, of Winters, Cal., through the use of Paine's Celery Compound, created widespread astonishment and joy amongst her friends and neighbors who were exceedingly anxious regarding her condition.

The best medical treatment failed even to give Mrs. Wilcox a few days of relief from her sufferings of mind and body. At last, Paine's Celery Compound saved her from a terrible end and planted her feet firmly on the rock of health.

Read Mrs. Wilcox's letter of testimony, dear reader, and if you remain obdurate and unbelieving after such an earnest and convincing confession of cure, nothing but a direct act of Providence can snatch you from the dangers and perils of your position. Mrs. Wilcox says:

"I feel it my duty to tell you what Paine's Celery Compound did for me. Some years ago my head troubled me so that it seemed I should be crazy. It was caused by overstudy. I asked the advice of two doctors who gave me medicine to no effect, and I did not know what I would do. I did not want to see any one, everything seemed so strange. I had a tired, lagging feeling, my bowels were out of order, my kidneys troubled me, and I felt badly, but before I had taken half of one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound I felt like a new person. Four bottles cured me and I would recommend it to all who feel the way I did. I can't praise it half enough, for I know it saved my life and kept me from imprisonment in an insane asylum, which is as bad as death."

AMUSEMENTS.

FREDERICK WARDE.

Tonight Frederick Warde will appear at the Lyceum in "The Mountebank," a romantic comedy in which he has won great success this year and which is the main feature of his repertoire. He gives it a very fine scenic production and his company is a very fine one including Charles D. Herman and Barry Johnstone, both very well known here; Antoinette Ashton, formerly leading lady for James O'Neill, Virginia Drew Trescott, Miss May Warde and Miss Aileen Bertelle.

Tomorrow evening Mr. Warde will present "Julius Caesar," appearing in the role of Marc Antony with Mr. Herman as Brutus and Mr. Johnstone as Cassius.

SOUSA'S GREAT BAND.

Monday evening John Philip Sousa's great band will be the attraction at the Lyceum. Sousa is always given a great welcome and this year will undoubtedly prove no exception to the rule. Since his last appearance in this city Mr. Sousa has earned the right to place two new and imposing titles after his name, to-wit: "M. V. O." (Member Victorian Order), by the grace of King Edward VII, and "Officer d'Academie Francaise," by the appointment of the French government. These distinctions were accorded the American musician because of his eminence in his profession and the success he has achieved in the European world of music.

No More Wars.

Many prominent people of this country and England profess to see the realization of their hopes for universal peace in an Anglo-American alliance. Their plan is to settle all future difficulties by international arbitration. This news will be joyfully received by everybody, but especially by the soldier who is at present engaged on some foreign battlefield. The news that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will positively cure stomach, liver and bowel complaints will also be gladly received by every sufferer from sick headache, dizziness, flatulency, indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation or biliousness. Do not suffer any longer, but try the Bitters at once. It is backed by a record of fifty years of cures. Beware of counterfeits when buying. Our private stamp is over the neck of the bottle.

ICE ON THE LAKES.

Norman B. Conger's Report Issued This Week.

The ice report for the great lakes issued by Norman B. Conger, inspector and marine agent, who makes his headquarters at Detroit, Mich., has the following in the bulletin of March 11:

The reports from the regular and display stations of the weather bureau on the great lakes indicate that the condition of ice has changed but very little on Superior, there being very little ice reported except in the harbors. The reports from St. Mary's river indicate that the ice is softening.

The ice is softening up in Green bay and wasting rapidly at the southern end; in Lake Michigan there is very little ice reported on the west shore, and the fields on the east shore from South Haven north to Grand Haven have broken up and moved westward from the shore; at the straits the ice is wasting steadily and conditions are favorable for an early breaking up of the ice. In Lake Huron there is but little ice reported on the west shore, and no ice fields are reported from any station. The ice is running out of Lake St. Clair this morning steadily and is well broken up. In Lake Erie the ice is breaking up and moving out from the islands, and there is much less ice reported over the western end; over the eastern portion the fields are still intact but softening. The warm weather of the past few days has wasted the ice a great deal.

In Lake Ontario the ice is confined to the eastern end, no ice being reported over the western portion.

In comparison with the same period last year, there is much less ice this season, and the majority of the ice is reported in Lake Erie, but with more favorable conditions than last season. The reports continue favorable for an early disappearance of the ice, and the warm weather with rain this morning will do much to hasten the breaking up of the ice.

RATES TO THE RANGE

Traffic Officials at Work On a General Revision.

Nothing Definite Ready For Announcement For the Present.

General Policy of Steel Corporation Will Be Conciliatory.

The iron range roads still have under consideration the question connected with proposed changes in their commodity tariffs. At the time the Northern lines placed new tariffs in effect reducing rates between Duluth and the Twin Cities to Northwestern points, the Eastern Minnesota reduced some class rates to the Mesaba range. These reductions were not general, and it was found did not afford the relief that had been discussed for some time before.

The two strictly range roads thereupon took up the matter of a complete revision of their tariffs. They were already at work upon this task when the state railroad commission took the matter up with them. The commission found that the roads had already decided to make changes that would afford great relief to shippers, and consequently withdrew from the situation pending the action of the traffic men.

Since then several meetings have been held to discuss questions connected with the reductions it is proposed to make. Up to this time nothing definite has been arrived at. It is believed, however, that an agreement on the alterations to be made will shortly be arrived at, and it is said that these revisions will do much toward equalizing tariffs, both as to rates and distances.

It is said to be the policy of the leading local officials of the steel corporation to adjust a great many grievances that the public has had, and to employ a conciliatory policy where hitherto lines have been drawn with technical rigidity. It is intimated that this policy will be shown in the gradual revision of railroad freight rates on the ranges.

WIFE'S INGENUITY

Saves Her Husband.

The author of the "Degeneration of Dorothy," Mr. Franklin Kinsella, 226 West Twenty-fifth street, New York city, was the victim of a little by-play—but he can best tell the story himself. "I must confess that I have been the victim of an innocent deception which turned out all for the best, however.

"I had been resting under the belief, for some years, that coffee served as a lubricant to my cerebral convolutions; in other words, 'made the wheels go round,' and I had an idea that I could not work without it as a stimulant.

"I soon paid the penalty in nervousness, loss of flesh, insomnia and restlessness, none of which troubles would yield to any or all medicines. I finally got in rather a bad way, and my wife took a hand in the affair, all unknown to me. She purchased a package of Postum Coffee and first gave me one-half Postum and one-half coffee. In a little time she had me down to clear Postum, and I was none the wiser.

"I noticed that I was getting better, my nerves were steadier, and I began to gain flesh and sleep nights. My work was performed far better than in my old condition.

"Commenting upon my greatly improved health one morning, I was told the truth. 'Tis to laugh,' so I submitted gracefully and joined the Postum ranks.

"Experience teaches that boiling is one-half the game. When the directions are carried out the result will be as fine a cup of rich, fragrant coffee as ever delighted the senses without ruining the nerves."

STRICTER POLICY

Special Agents Instructed to Investigate Homestead Entries.

Department Convinced That Law Is Not Lived Up To.

Entrymen Spend But a Few Days Each Year On Land.

In view of the abuses claimed to have been prevalent in Minnesota, as well as other states, in regard to the taking of homestead claims, the special agents of the general land office have received specific instructions to examine with extreme care into the matter of homestead entries on public lands in this state and it is quite probable that during the coming year persons that have not lived up to the requirements of the law will be taken to task by the general land department of the United States.

It is said that the impression has been general that if a man files an application for a homestead, goes on the land, builds a shack of boughs and branches, puts in a few hills of potatoes and visits the land about ten or fifteen days out of a year, or makes a short outing trip to his claim a few weeks every summer, that he is entitled to a patent. This, the department claims, is erroneous.

The law requires that to obtain a homestead, application must be made in good faith. It provides that after the inceptive right is vested in the settler by his preliminary filings, he must within six months after such entry establish actual residence in a house on the land. Then he must also cultivate the land continuously in accordance with the law, for a period of five years. The department has ruled time and again that occasional visits to the land every six months or oftener do not constitute residence. If a man has a family he is expected to move them to his claim. If he votes in any other place it will invalidate his title.

If there be merchantable or valuable timber on the land, the settler is not permitted to cut it, except such portion as is absolutely necessary for his own use or for clearing the land. The settler cannot sell the timber, waste or destroy it in any way. The government holds that non-compliance with these conditions and requirements invalidates title to the land and leaves the claim subject to cancellation.

If a person make a sworn statement that he has fulfilled all the requirements of the law, when he has not done so, he may not only lose his claim, but he is liable to prosecution for perjury as well as liable to a criminal prosecution for trespass.

The matter has been called to the attention of the general land office during the past year that there have been numerous infractions of the government's requirements in the obtaining of homestead claims and the department is taking steps this year to be especially active in the prosecution of all violations of the homestead law. It is said that the agents have already a large number of cases under investigation in the northern counties of Minnesota.

IS GROWING.

Pearson Boat Construction Company Showing Great Development.

With a prosperous business career covering a period of two years, followed a few weeks ago by a disastrous fire, the Pearson Boat Construction company is about to begin its third season as a Duluth industry, with its capacity increased six-fold. Ever since the fire, the construction work on the company's new building on Park Point has been pushed toward completion, and it is expected that within the next two weeks the new plant will be operating. The already good-sized force of workmen will be increased in number to meet the requirements of the enlarged facilities, and the company is starting in on a season that its officers believe will be the most prosperous yet experienced. It is the aim of the boat construction company to keep on improving its plant until there will be no other plant of similar nature in the country that will excel it.

The new building fronts on Lake avenue and faces the lake. In the front end, on the first floor, are located the office and draughting room. On the second floor front is the paint room and another large room that will be available for draughting the larger boats, for all boats are draughted in the size they will be when completed.

The main workshop is 200 feet long and 80 feet wide, and is two stories high. The storage building is two and a half stories high, and its dimensions are 100 by 80 feet. The interior of the workshop will be finished in white to get all the light possible. One of the features of the new building will be the large varnish room on the second floor, near the front of the building. This will be heated by steam, as will the office and draughting rooms. The rest of the building will be heated by the blower system.

The workshop will be equipped with all the modern appliances for boat building, for the company manufactures every kind of boat, from a canoe to a steam tug, gasoline launches being one of the specialties.

The Pearson model is becoming well known in every part of the country where pleasure boats and boats for harbor work are in demand. The company is manufacturing boats that have been ordered from the East, West and South.

It is claimed that the company at the present time has orders so far ahead for special boats that it will be almost impossible to turn out another boat before June 1. The work is being pushed now on a large number of special boats. All of the stock boats in the storage building, and it is full of them, have been sold before an engine was placed in them.

One of the largest boats under construction is a splendid solid oak, steel sheathed, forty-foot gasoline launch, being made for the Cleveland, Ohio, ship chandler firm. The boat is built to withstand contact with harbor ice during the early opening of navigation. It will have a 16-horse power engine. Two carloads of pleasure launches, 18 to 22 feet long, are being built to send to Lake Minnetonka. A 24-foot steam launch is being built for Mr. Torinus, of the St. Croix Lumber company, at Winton, Minn., and a 30-foot steam tug to be used by the lumber company to tow logs. Twenty-seven-foot fish boats are being built for Duluth parties and for some Isle Royale fishermen. H. M. Bradley is having a 27-foot pleasure and fish boat made to be taken to Deerwood. Several Duluthians are having the steam engines in their yachts replaced by gasoline engines.

The company will have ample room at its plant for all the boats. There is about 45,000 feet of floor space in the buildings and the dock space covers over three forty-foot lots. There will be 200 feet of dockage.

HAS ANOTHER.

Box Factory Olso Operating at New Duluth.

Duluth has two box factories instead of one institution of that nature, as was stated in The Herald several days ago. The second factory is located at New Duluth and has been established for the past five years. It is known as the New Duluth Box factory, and its proprietor is Fred Herman, who went to New Duluth eleven years ago and established a sash, door and interior finish factory, afterward adding the box machinery. A year ago the plant burned out but Mr. Herman immediately rebuilt. Mr. Herman carried no insurance on his former plant, but was plucky and started again on a smaller scale, confining his attention entirely to box manufacture.

The patronage of the New Duluth factory, like that of the West Duluth industry, has been steadily increasing, and the plant has been undergoing enlargement to meet the requirements of the trade. It is expected that other improvements will be made to the factory the coming year, as its capacity is taxed at the present time to fill the orders. The New Duluth factory does an excellent business with the local trade, and during the past three months fourteen carloads of boxes have been shipped in to Duluth consumers, besides numerous smaller orders sent by local freight.

SHEEP ON STAGE.

And the Whole Flock Had Stage Fright.

Baltimore, Md., March 13.—In the interests of realism Manager Fawcett of Chase's theater has introduced live sheep in "As You Like It," which the local stock company is producing this week. At a special rehearsal Miss Atkinson, as Phoebe, equipped with a shepherd's crook, started out to practice with her "peaceful flock." However, it could not be said that "everywhere that Mary went the lamb was sure to go," for no sooner had the animals reached the open stage than they became frightened and, bleating and ba-aing with terror, jammed first one exit and then another. Several of them jumped into the orchestra on to the heads of the disconcerted musicians. Attaches, actors and musicians finally corralled the frightened sheep in one of the boxes. Manager Fawcett is now looking for a "bell wether" as the sheep leader.

SECOND MARRIAGE

Had Been Hidden For Thirty-Four Years.

New York, March 13.—The filing of the will of the late John Daniell, dry goods merchant at Ninth street and Broadway, brings to light the fact that his wife, Arelaide Storm Daniell, diverced him in 1868.

In 1867 he married the woman who now appears as his widow, Mrs. Anna M. Daniell, of Montclair, N. J., but up to last summer the fact that Mr. Daniell had married again was not known even to his children.

The only man to whom the old merchant told the secret was his friend and counselor, Edwin Baldwin, a lawyer of 31 Nassau street, who has known the whole story for twenty-five years.

Mr. Daniell was married the first time in 1847. This union resulted in four children. After the divorce, in 1868, the first Mrs. Daniell went to live in Tarrytown with one of her sons. She was supported by Mr. Daniell during her life, and he was at her bedside when she died, on July 8, 1895. It is not known whether or not the first Mrs. Daniell ever knew that her husband had married again. The second marriage of Mr. Daniell was quietly accomplished about a year after the divorce. He then went to live at Montclair, N. J.

That arrangement continued for twenty-four years, or until last summer, when Mr. Daniell became seriously ill.

Mrs. Daniell came from Montclair to nurse her husband. She found his sons and daughters taking care of him. Then, at the bedside of their father, the children learned that there was a second Mrs. Daniell.

THE WEATHER.

United States Agricultural Department, Weather Bureau, Duluth. Synopsis of weather conditions for the twenty-four hours ending at 7 a. m. (Central time), March 13.—The dominating features of the weather map this morning are low pressure areas over North Atlantic states and Assiniboia, the former having moved from Eastern Missouri and the latter from Alberta during the past twenty-four hours. Rains and brisk to high winds have occurred in most districts east of the Mississippi. The Assiniboia "low" has caused higher temperatures, brisk to high winds and an increase in cloudiness throughout the Northwest, with rain or snow over Oregon, Washington, Western Montana and Alberta. The barometer is high over Southern states. It is cooler in the lake region, Mississippi and Ohio valleys.

Rush of Settlers to the Northwest.

Thousands of people are coming into Minnesota at the present time—some to settle in the counties where homesteads are to be had; others to go on to the Dakotas and to other states to try a new life, where ceaseless toil will in time provide them with a home of their own. This rush of homeseekers will continue for several weeks and it is expected that the total number of new arrivals in the Northwest will be double that of last year, which was until now far in excess of that of any previous year. The movement this year is divided into two classes of people—settlers and homesteaders. Probably one-third are actual settlers, and will take possession of lands purchased months ago. The other class of colonists is the homesteaders. These have not bought land in advance, or have made their purchases in the many land offices of the Northwest. The majority of this class will take up lands on the homestead plan in Minnesota, North Dakota or Montana, and some still farther West. This class predominates. The homesteaders comprise two-thirds of the entire movement. There is still another class of emigrants—artisans, workmen and tradesmen—who are taking advantage of the low rates. In addition to the big movement into the Northwest from other portions of the United States, the influx from abroad will be unprecedented this year. Early arrivals from European countries have been passing through the Twin Cities during the past fortnight. They say that hundreds of foreigners will come into the Northwestern states in the early spring. This great movement for homes means much to this section of the country. It means the building up of the sparsely settled territory with a class of worthy people whose presence is a benefit to any locality and who will make excellent citizens. Credit is due primarily to the railroads for this influx, for without their special offers comparatively few would come. The railroads are the great feeders of the country and their good work cannot be over-estimated.

Securing Employers Against Damages.

The many suits which are brought by employes to secure damages from an employer for injuries received while in his employ have given rise to considerable study on the part of those interested to find some means by which the annoyance could be mitigated and the workman at the same time be well protected. Andrew Bruce in the March Forum advocates a plan of compulsory insurance in which every employer as a prerequisite for employment, is to compel the employe to insure himself against death and accident for a certain amount, say $2000, either with a company in which the employer is interested or with one which is independent; the employer, if necessary, paying part of the premiums. In such instances the policy is to contain a provision that in case an attempt is made to recover damages of the employer under his common-law liability for negligence, no recovery can be had on the insurance policy in question. This method gives the employe a choice of remedies, but takes away neither. It secures to the injured man compensation for his injuries in the form of insurance money, in cases where his employer would not be liable under the common law and where, therefore, no recovery from the liability therefore, no recovery could be had against him as in cases of contributory negligence. It does not, however, release the employer from the liability to which he is legally subject under the common law. It is of paramount importance to the community, as well as to the injured man himself, that such a person should have some means of support Every cripple who is unable to recover damages from his employer becomes of necessity a burden on the community. Accordingly, the corporations or trusts that would institute such a system and provide for that support would become agencies of great public good. The plan is not a new one, although it has never been successfully adopted. It seems to have merit and without doubt a thorough trial would prove it to be satisfactory.

PLAYING THE OLD GAME.

If grandstand political plays will keep a man in a public office, Governor Van Sant should have no trouble in getting a renomination and re-election. He has become an expert in the grandstand playing business, and is working the game to the limit. It is true that he has not met with much success thus far, but he is evidently convinced that he has no show by pursuing other methods, and possibly may finally win out if he can make a strong enough play. His attack on the so-called "merger" of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific has turned out a flat failure. He was knocked out of court in the first round. It was a complete knockout. Not only is he barred from the federal courts by the decision of the supreme court, but he can do nothing in the state courts, because the Northern Securities company is a foreign corporation and not amenable to the state courts. Even if it were within the jurisdiction of the state courts, it could not be successfully attacked, because it is not a railroad company, but only a security-holding company, and also because it does not control a majority of the stock of the Great Northern company.

Finding that he can do nothing further in regard to the Hill "merger," and deciding that he must do something to create more political capital, the governor has now started after the United States Steel corporation, and has instructed the attorney general to begin proceedings against the alleged "merger" of the Duluth & Iron Range and the Duluth, Missabe & Northern roads. It is hardly likely that he will meet with any more success in this case than in the other. The United States Steel corporation is also a New Jersey company, and the supreme court's decision seems to apply to it.

But why has the governor waited so long before starting this action? The Steel corporation has been in existence for a full year, and if there has been any violation of the state law it has extended throughout that time. Why this sudden zeal ? Is it due to the fact that the governor sees the handwriting on the wall and knows that he can expect no help from St. Louis county for a renomination or re-election? Is he convinced that he can make more politically by fighting than by attempting to conciliate the party leaders here? Does he believe that he can gain strength in some other part of the state by creating the impression that he is engaged in a great struggle with the powerful "steel trust," in which the authority of the state is at stake? It looks as if that is the game he is playing . It may work, but The Herald does not believe it. It gives the people of Minnesota credit for greater intelligence than does the governor. They are not so easily deceived by political bunko steerers.

TAX REFORM.

Apologists for the special session of the legislature are waxing eloquent upon the benefits the state will derive from it in an educational way. In the absence of more practical results there is undoubtedly a necessity for enlarging upon this point, and there can be no question that there have been results in that line.

The principal educational gain is the knowledge that under the present constitution just and modern tax legislation is impossible. Yet this is not peculiarly the fruit of the special session, for the legislature at its regular session must have had an inkling of this. In the law creating the tax commission the legislature empowered that body to prepare amendments to the constitution putting its tax code into effect if it was necessary. If the legislature had not had an idea that the constitution was inadequate it would hardly have thought of this point.

The prime mistake of the whole matter was the action of the tax commission in disregarding the injunctions of this law and preparing a tax code based upon the present constitution. The amendments it submitted were designed to repair the constitution so that at some other time a new code could be prepared.

One very practical result of the session was the discovery that a "wide-open" constitution on tax matters is unsafe. Before the session, and even during its progress, a wide-open constitutional amendment such as that prepared by the tax commission found much favor. But the spectacle of the passage of the so-called Jacobson bill, which was pounded through the house without one-tenth of the consideration that was given to the repeal of the dog tax law, opened the eyes of many to the dangers of giving a legislature free scope on tax matters.

This one thing is undoubtedly responsible for the failure of the legislature to pass a wide-open set of amendments. The wide-open amendments would require equality in taxation between subjects in the same class of property, but would not require it between different classes. If legislatures were to be absolutely trusted, and the people were confident that no freak legislation would result from the opening of the door, the wide-open constitution would be the ideal measure.

The amendments that resulted from the compromise will permit a variety of experiments, ranging from a registry tax on mortgages to an income tax in lieu of all personal property taxes, with various modifications of the income tax idea between those extremes. It was a compromise in which the advocates of the wide-open system in the house had a decided advantage. Advocates of such ideal systems as the land tax are greatly disappointed, however. They had hoped to see legislation confined only to equity between subjects in the same class, which would have permitted the land tax, and they would have liked very much to see county option adopted, as this would have permitted the system to be tried in one or more counties of the state.

The great danger of the wide-open policy would be to the cities and to St. Louis county. The disposition would be, with such a constitution and with the farming communities in control of the legislature, to make the cities and the iron mines pay most of the state tax.

As to how to accomplish tax reform when the constitution is properly free, the gain from the special session is almost nothing. All that was learned was that the present system was bad, though not so bad that an immediate change is necessary, and that the system proposed by the tax commission is worse. When the legislature gets down to working directly upon tax reform it will be found that there is nothing in the work and results of the special session of 1902 that will serve as a guide.

Now that the subject has been opened up, and the impression created that there is imperative need of tax reform in this state, tax matters may be looked for to assume a much more prominent position in future sessions of the legislature than they have in the past. There will be all kinds of theories brought forth and foisted upon the legislature, and in order that the best results may be obtained in this most important branch of political economy, and that no wild-eyed schemes be pitch-forked upon the statute books, the utmost care in the selection of legislators will be necessary.

If the object of the special session was to educate the present members of the legislature, it will be largely defeated, not only because the educational results are not large, but because it is very doubtful if a very large percentage of the members will be returned. The feeling among the members themselves was that the session was a farce, and that the people would rebuke it by sending a new set of law-makers down to the capital next winter.

METHUEN AND DELAREY.

The capture of Gen. Methuen by Gen. Delarney a few days ago calls to mind the characteristics of the two men who met so honorably on the field of battle. Commandant Delarey, next to De Wet, is one of the best of the Boer fighters. He is against surrender to the last. His operations have extended over a wide field and have been uniformly daring and important. Delarey issued a proclamation last fall, following close on the heels of one issued by Lord Kitchener, in which the latter called on all Boers to surrender by Sept. 15. Delarey's pronunciamento was brief. He called on the Boers to disregard Kitchener's threats and fight to the end.

Delarey is one of the most unique personalities among the many rugged characters developed by the Boer war. He is known as the "silent man," being unusually uncommunicative. For eleven years he was a member of the Volksraad, and rarely spoke there unless upon some important subject. He is one of the few who opposed the issuance of the ultimatum at the secret meeting of the raad. Gen. Delarey is not, and never has been, entirely in accord with ex-President Kruger. He refuses to take men who have taken the oath of neutrality, and is always much more lenient in his treatment of prisoners than many of his fellow-commanders. He has a magnificent physique, tall, straight as an arrow, with broad shoulders, surmounted by a massive head. He is dignified and courteous in his bearing, and Lord Roberts has commented favorably of the general's actions in his reports.

Lieut. Gen. Paul, Lord Methuen, won distinction in the early part of the war in South Africa, but lost it later, and from that time has been in hard luck. At Magersfontein Methuen, following his usual fatal system of frontal attacks, sent the famous Highland brigade practically to destruction, and after hard but ineffectual fighting, was compelled to retire to Modder river. On account of this action Gen. Methuen was ordered to make no further move, and after Lord Roberts had taken over the command of his division, the discredited general was put in command of a small body of district troops, with which he did some good work, capturing at one time the force under the French general, Villebois de Mareuil. Methuen is the only one of the British generals who saw the beginning of the war who has been in service in South Africa continuously since then. On the death of his father, in 1891, "Handsome Paul Methuen" became a peer with a rent roll of $50,000 a year.

The difference between these two generals is most marked. Gen. Methuen is a fighter by profession, trained in the arts of war, but far from successful. Gen. Delarey fights from a sense of duty and for his country. Shrewder naturally than his adversary, although lacking in training, he has accomplished results that are most creditable to the struggling Boers.

THE FILIPINO PROBLEM.

How to get a corect idea of the real conditions as they exist in the Philippines is a question which is puzzling the conservative element of the country, who desire to do the right thing by the natives. Governor Taft is undoubtedly a man of ability and character, but his optimism must impress everyone who is at al acquainted with the facts as almost amusing. He tells the senate committee one day that the jury system would not work in the Philippines, and the next day he tells the committee that the Filipinos are well adapted for local government, which should soon be granted them. In the same way, you will find in Taft's testimony a great deal else that is in effect contradictory. His estimate of the Philippine people is as erroneous in one direction as that of the soldiers in the other. When he has visited the different provinces, the people were expecting him and came out with their bands of music, and parades, and flowers, and banquets; when the soldier has got into the heart of the Philippine provinces he has been unexpected; he has overtaken the Filipinos without giving them an opportunity to make preparation. The Filipinos profit greatly by this process; they want to 'stand in' with the civil government, which they think means the force of the United States, and they are great flatterers.

A congressman who visited the islands, and who made a careful study of conditions, says: "The Filipino is at heart in a state of rebellion against the United States authority, and he always will be. You never hear of any disturbances in Northern Luzon, and the secret of its pacification is, in my opinion, the secret of the pacification of the archipelago. They never rebel in Northern Luzon because there isn't anybody there to rebel. That country was marched over and cleaned out in a most resolute manner. The good Lord in heaven only knows the number of Filipinos that were put under ground; our soldiers took no prisoners; they kept no records; they simply swept the country, and wherever or however they could get hold of a Filipino they killed him. The women and children were spared and may now be noticed in disproportionate numbers in that part of the island. The Spaniards, differently constituted, would go out after a band of insurgents for a day's journey, and then get back to their barracks, while our soldiers have pursued them persistently, and for that reason our conquest of the archipelago is very much more effective than that of Spain ever was. I look for no real peace short of such measures as those pursued in Northern Luzon."

If the moral sense of the American people wil stand foir a policy of extermination the solution of the problem will be easily found. If not, then what is to be done? The question must be answered in the not distant future.

Prince Henry left a most favorable impression with the people with whom he came in contact during his visit to the United States. He fully lived up to the reputation he bears of having a wonderful faculty of making friends. Everywhere he went he created the same impression, that of being a whole-souled manly fellow devoid of all the objectionable traits and mannerisms common to many royal personages and which are so offensive to democratic Americans. There is now reason to believe that the prince's visit to this country was not hastily decided upon, but that some such move was in contemplation for a long time. He has proven a splendid emissary for Emperor William, and by the unaffected charm of his manner, honesty, friendliness and simplicity has worked a great revolution in Washington sentiment toward Germany.

Lord Avebury is still a believer—or says he is—in the prosperous future of British commerce. He said recently at a large meeting of mercantile men that in forty years the value of British exports and imports had grown from £378,000,000 ($1,890,000,000) to £877,000,000 ($4,385,000,000), while if weight instead of value be taken as a test it appears that British foreign trade has practically doubled in twenty years.

The press dispatches give quotations on seats for King Edward's coronation exercises as follows: Windows, $210; seats in the Strand, $25; a few choice seats, $295. Mr. Grau's Prince Henry seats only cost $20 for the best. But of course a prince is only in the 1, 2, 3 class with a king.

A Kansas farmer who mistook a lawyer for a lightning rod agent and endeavored to escape him by running away, should not be censured too harshly. There are times when it requires a specialist to determine wherein the difference lies.

Do not forget that we have not yet finished paying for the Philippines. The president has just appointed a commission to negotiate for the purchase of the church lands. That may solve the surplus problem.

It is worthy of special note that the Boers not only whipped Methuen's army, but they chased the survivors four miles. Where was the boasted courage of British troops?

The Boston Globe says that when John Hay, secretary of state, holds out a single hope for the "reconcentrated" Boers, we may expect to see larks fall from the sky.

The Hepburn isthmian canal bill is favored by the senate committee. That means the Nicaraguan project. But it has not got through the senate yet.

The Massachusetts legislature has been asked to save the clam from utter annihilation. And yet the advice is frequently given, "Don't be a clam."

Perhaps those who contributed towards Miss Stone's ransom will get complimentary tickets to her lectures.

Did Prince Henry invite any members of the reception committee to pay him a return visit?

Governor Van Sant is still a great grandstand player.

MIRTHFUL REFLECTIONS.

Philadelphia Press: "Do you think that wireless telegraphy will save time?"

Baltimore American: "Will you stay all night?" asks the New York hotel clerk.

"Yes," answers the guest, "but let me have enough paper and ink to write my will and some notes of farewell to my family and friends."

Chicago Post: "I have refused four marriage proposals in the last week," said the girl in blue, with some pride.

"Dear me!" returned the girl in gray sweetly, "your 'steady' is a most persistent and accommodating fellow, isn't he?"

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: Wicks—There should be a law to restrain the theaters from printing those mossy jokes in their programs.

Hicks—You don't have to read them.

Wicks—No, but you usually have to listen to some idiot behind you reading and explaining them.

Philadelphia Press: They were gossiping about the engagement.

"Why do they call her the Queen of Hearts?" asked one.

"I suppose,' replied the other, "because she has just enough value to take the knave."

Chicago Post: "Why do men flock after the widows?"

'Because," explained the sweet young thing, not without a touch of bitterness, "the average man lacks confidence in his own judgment, and in the case of a widow he feels that he is merely backing the judgment of another man."

A Dream of Spring.

Like weary sentries, grim and gray,
The stately houses stretch away,
In long, unbroken line;
Their beetling brows in anger frown
Upon a cottage old and brown—
Thy home, oh heart of mine!

Yet there the velvet grasses grow,
And there the pale wild cowslips blow—
The first wild bluebird sings.
In dreams he sees the tiny nest,
Where downy fledglings sway to rest
Beneath his mate's soft wings.

And there a giant maple stands,
Outspreading his protecting hands,
Like pious friar of old.
O'er sunken roof and moss-grown wall
Where white catalpa blossoms fall—
Snow arrows, dipped with gold!

Caressed by bee and butterfly
On either side the long walk lie
Low beds of tangled flowers;
And up and down the quiet street
The sunbeams dance with trippling feet,
Through all the fleeting hours.

But, oh, the cottage lies so still!
No more its list'ning echoes thrill
With childish laugh and song—
The tireless mother-hands have rest,
Clasped close upon the paleless breast—
And, oh, the years are long!

Yet ever when the faint perfume
From Nodding purple lilac bloom
Steals through the spring sunshine
In dreams that old-time home I see,
Which never more may shelter thee,
Oh, lonely heart of mine!

We Are Making Progress.

Brooklyn Eagle: It is gratifying to our self-complacency to discover our discovery by the European press. Nothing since the Spanish war has so surprised Europe as our behavior to the German prince, who has dropped over here to launch a yacht. The German papers devote whole columns to the parades, decorations, dinners and ceremonies, and appear to have been thrown into a state of astonishment at it all. What was expected of us? Did our friends across the sea have a notion that we were going to seize the brother of the Kaiser on his arrival and execute a war dance about him, going through the motions of burning him at the stake and paring off his scalp? Did they suppose that there was a popular sentiment here respecting Germany that could find no other expression than in placing its representative in a reclining position and dancing on his form? Well, it is as pleasant to know that we are absolved from any such intention and that it has been solemnly conceded that we are making progress in civilization.

Philadelphia Record: The ruling of the postoffice department that the subscription to a newspaper entitled to second class rates made and paid for by one person to be sent to another person with the latter's consent is not a legitimate subscription, entitled to pound rates, but must be stamped in a separate package and prepaid as third class matter at the rate of 1 cent for each four ounces, is obviously a strained interpretation of the law. The subscriber to the paper may have it sent to his agent or his wife or his mother-in-law for purposes strictly personal. It is a matter of business into which neither the publisher nor the carrier can rightfully inquire. The attempted twist given to the law by the department is far-fetched, meddlesome and mischievous.

The Angel of The Prince

By William Richard Hereford.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

The prince had disappeared. It was most awkward. In vain the mayor endeavored to conceal his perturbation. Gold braided diplomats and admirals, scintillant with decorations, despatched secret emissaries with whispered instructions, while icy perspiration stood in crystal drops upon their brows.

The audience was becoming impatient and prima donas already piqued at being even for a moment secondary attractions, were refusing to sing until his royal highness arrived.

All eyes were turned to the royal box, but the distinguished occupant came not. No one had seen him depart. No one knew whither he had gone. The royal suite endeavored with ill success to effect composure and with words that trembled in spite of all effort, sought to reassure those near them.

Fifteen minutes—a tragedy in each one—passed; then thirty; then forty-five. The mutiny upon the stage grew apparent. The gala performance was in eminent danger of disaster.

Watches often consulted marked an hour of awful absence when the door of the royal box opened and, unattended, the prince entered.

Instantly the house was on its feet. The tall young man bowed seriously to the long pent-up applause that now found a thunderous vent. He smiled faintly as he resumed his seat and turned his eyes upon the stage. The very calmness of his procedure betrayed a latent excitement.

All in the royal box waited for the entr'acts. None could question his royal highness, but all felt sure that an explanation would be made. He toyed absently with a strange ring upon his forefinger. At last the curtain was rung down. There was silence.

"Gentlemen," said the prince, looking directly at a young attache, but really addressing all. "Let me tell you a story. I have been thinking of this ring." He held up the finger upon which the broad circlet rested.

"When I was with our forces in China I was once saved from a tragic death by a woman as beautiful as she was mysterious. I had ridden from my headquarters alone at sunrise, but I was still within our lines when this woman appeared, apparently from nowhere and, without explanation, bade me return at once. So imperious was she that I obeyed, but just before I left she warned me that a deadly subtle poison had been placed upon the mouthpiece of the cigarette in my case."

The prince paused and no one dared to speak.

"It was as she had said," he continued, slowly. "A chemist easily discovered the poison and later my soldiers learned that on the mornig I rode from headquarters a plot had been formed to attack me near the spot where the woman had warned me."

The prince turned slowly, looked at every one in the box, then fastened his eyes on the pale face of the young attache.

"She was very beautiful, with hair like burnished brass." He said it so slowly that he seemed in a reverie. "Like burnished brass," he repeated, half to himself.

"One night," he went on, "this woman came to me again, as mysteriously as before. I had just quitted my carriage for the opera when she appeared at my side and catching my sleeve beckoned me to follow.

"We entered another carriage that was waiting, and drove in silence to a deserted house in a part of the city strange to me. When I sought an explanation she refused to speak and when, angered by her disobedience, I sought to leave the place I found that I was a prisoner.

"Gentlemen, you can imagine my feelings. I was indebted to this woman for my life, and yet, vouchsafing no explanation, she held me there against my will, while the audience waited—did I say the audience waited?" he went on quickly, "I forgot to state that my intention to visit the opera that night had been previously announced."

There were significant glances exchanged among the occupants of the box, and one old admiral rose and moved his chair closer to the prince.

"What I could not gain by command I won by entreaty," pursued his highness. "The woman with tears at last sobbed an explanation.

"There had been a plot—I say there had been," he continued slowly, emphasizing the past tense, "a plot as desperate as it was mean. Five men were to rush upon me as I entered the box. They were to use danggers to avoid a noise and to escape, if possible, immediately afterward. All were to leave the opera house within ten minutes after my arrival was announced. If the plot miscarried the assassins were to leave nevertheless and meet at an appointed rendezvous. The woman had held me a prisoner long enough for the plot to fail and the plotters escape.'

The prince leaned back in his chair as one who had finished his story. The silence was still intense.

"Oh," he drawled, "the ring. I had almost forgotten.

"It seems, according to the woman's story, that a young man of noble family, whom I had befriended, one of my own suite, had through some madness joined the plotters. He was to be in the box with me that night and had agreed to finish the desperate deed if all the others failed.

"This ring," he held it up before all, so that the light shone upon it, "was to be a talisman, a token that not only should save me, but should win the misguided youth back to loyalty, to his sovereign.

"Unhappy youth! The traitors who would have attacked me in China suffered the penalty of their rashness. The assassin who placed poison on my cigarettes was discovered and is dead. The desperate five, who sought my life, were, I believe, caught and the misguided youth—it were far better for him if he had never been born."

There was a commotion in the royal box as the prince finished his tale. The attache had fainted and would have fallen had not the old admiral caught him in his arms and led him from the box.

The overture for the new act was beginning. The prince smiled wearily as he turned again upon the stage.

The admiral returned and whispered in the ear of the ambassador.

"He did not wear that ring when he left the carriage—that I can swear," said the admiral gruffly.

"No," assented the ambassador, "and look closely. On his sleeve is a woman's hair, a lock like burnished brass."

Souvenir Fiends at Work.

New York Sun: We humbly apologize to the German emperor for the piracy practiced on his yacht Hohenzollern by visitors thereto while it was lying in New York harbor. For some years past the great national emblem has been the souvenir spoon. Hohenzollern's spoons being under lock and key, the souvenir fiends are reduced to the extremity of carving away slices of the curtains or the upholstery. So fierce is the souvenir hunting mania that when we reflect calmly upon it our mortification for the emperor's filched hangings is drowned in our feeling of congratulation to him that he keeps his yacht.

Officious Detectives Called Down.

Baltimore American: A New York magistrate lately severely rebuked two detectives for entering a private house on suspicion, without a warrant, and violating the principle of law that every man's house is his castle. Those dressed in a little brief authority do not always include the law in their reading matter, but much of this official illegal way of treating citizens comes from the fact that the latter are too ignorant of their own rights to demand them, and that this ignorance largely deserves the treatment it receives.

One Quality of Greatness.

Atlanta Journal: We can say this much for Prince Henry: He has fully sustained the reputation his countrymen have always held for keeping above the table on any and all occasions.

Pernicious Activity of the Mule.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Lord Kitchener telegraphs that when a British convoy was wiped out last week the mules "romping all over the country, gave the alarm to re-enforcements, but too late." Nevertheless, the Missouri animal did its level best and was the first to be heard from under the circumstances.

Chatter of The Street

A street railway conductor was an object of much amusement to passengers on an East End car a couple of days ago. Each passenger noticed that the conductor when he approached him for the collection of his fare held out to him the back of his hand and then deliberately turned it over so that the palm was upward to receive the coin.

This was sufficiently unusual to attract attention and naturally he was watched. He went down the entire line and to every passenger he did the same thing, presented his hand back upward and then turned it over.

The idea that possessed him was not grasped for a short time, but it suddenly dawned on one or two and the word was quickly passed down the line. The conductor was wearing a ring with a big red stone and he intended that no one should escape a view of his piece of jewelry. It mattered not that the back of his hand was grimy, the ring was there and he wanted everyone to see it.

The titter that went up and down the line moved him not and he continued the performance until the last fare was collected.

When in New York John Panton dined with Prince Henry. He was one of the guests at the big feast given the distinguished visitor by the New York Staats-Zeitung at the Waldorf-Astoria. It was a tremendous spread with about 100 guests. Mr. Panton was seated at one of the prominent tables and had an excellent opportunity to observe the royal visitor. In spite of his Scotch parentage and his naturally leaning toward things English, Mr. Panton has none of the English jealousy of Germany and he was quite captivated with Prince Henry, whom he met after the dinner for a moment. His impression was that he is a man of common sense, affable and devoid of pomposity.

MRS. ASTOR ON GENTLEMEN

Chicago Chronicle: The seriousness with which Mrs. Astor's dictum that "no man can be a gentleman without a college education" has been taken in some quarters would hardly have been possible if her critics had stopped to reflect a little. If they had realized that Mrs. Astor's idea of a gentleman is very different from the general idea of that character they would have been less ready to enter the list of argument against her.

From her point of view Mrs. Astor is indoubtedly correct. No man who has not attended one of the large Eastern universities can be a gentleman of the type with which alone Mrs. Astor is familiar. Nowhere else can he acquire that habit of bastard English speech which is now exclusively heard in the salons of society. Nowhere else can he learn by observation the affectations of gait, bearing and manner for which the scions of the Four Hundred are so distinguished. Nowhere else can he be initiated into the mysteries of the masculine toilet as it is practiced in these days of fastidious luxury. Nowhere else, above all, can he learn to take the mental attitude toward life that is characteristic of some of New York's young millionaires at the opening of the twentieth century—the attitude from which one looks with contempt upon purely intellectual endeavor and achievement, upon physical labor, upon the outworn principles laid down in the Declaration of Independence, upon the fatuous inaptitude of the golden rule, upon everything, in short, but wealth, New York society, and the European aristocracy.

This being the case, why should general indignation be hurled at Mrs. Astor? She is a nice old woman who reasons according to her lights. It is not her fault that they are dim and misleading. If she were a person of intelligence and education who had deliberately set up for a snob, the attacks of her critics would be justifiable. But she knows no more what a gentleman is than she comprehends the mighty world forces in the midst of which she is whirled insignificant, useless, and absurd.

Be charitable to Mrs. Astor. She knows no better. And do not blame the universities because, as she truly says, they turn out gentlemen according to her specifications every year. Those products are not numerous in comparison with the whole body of graduates, who are still for the most part manly and healthy-minded young Americans. An undergraduate must be a New Yorker and the heir to millions to become a gentleman after Mrs. Astor's prescription.

Disappearing Forests.

Boston Transcript: The great forests of Michigan have been skinned so close that the railroads of the state have to bring their ties from Kentucky. Now there is a movement to obtain legislation for reforestation. If the people attend strictly to business a hundred years may accomplish it.

CATHOLIC PRIEST

Has Written a Play For Miss Crosman.

New York, March 13.—Henrietta Crosman is to produce an historical drama written by the Rev. John Talbot Smith, a Catholic Clergyman of this city. It is a five-act, five-scene play, entitled "A Baltimore Marriage," dealing with the troubled history of Elizabeth Patterson, the Baltimore girl who became the wife of Jerome Bonaparte, brother of Napoleon I., in 1803, and whose marriage was annulled by Napoleon two years later.

The scene is laid in France and brings on the stage Napoleon, the pope, Cardinal Consalvi, his brother, the famous Fouche, minister of police and Mme. Patterson-Bonaparte. Beside the fact that its author is a Catholic priest, another unusual thing about the play is the introduction of the pope as one of the leading characters. This is the first time the pope has appeared in the English drama, it is said.

CABLEGRAMS

Which Passed Between Emperor William and the President.

Washington, March 13.—The following cablegrams were made public yesterday:

"Wilhelmshaven, March 12, 1902.—President of the United States of America, Washington: Now that my brother has left the hospitable shore of the United States, homeward bound, I feel it a pleasing duty to express to you how deeply grateful the whole of the German people are for the splendor of the hospitality and the cordiality of the reception which was accorded to Prince Henry by all classes of the American people.

"My outstretched hand has been met by you with a firm and manly solid grip. May heaven bless our relations with peace and good will between the two great nations. My best compliments and wishes to Miss Alice. WILLIAM I. R."

"Washington, March 12, 1902.—Emperor William, Wilhelmshaven: Your brother's visit to this country has accomplished much in showing the depth of kindly feeling which exists between the two nations. It has been most fortunate in every way and I trust you will permit me to congratulate you on the admirable manner in which he has borne himself. He has won the genuine and hearty sympathy and regard of all with whom he has been brought in contact. We have welcomed him for his own sake and we have welcomed him still more heartily as the representative of yourself and of the mighty German people. I thank you and in the name of the American people for what you have done, and I thank you personally in addition for the gracious form which your courtesy took.

BAD GANG

Has Been Luring Men to Their Death at Beaumont.

Beaumont, Tex., March 13.—Mattie Bennett has confessed to Sheriff Lindley that she was at the head of a gang of negro women and white men who had for months been luring men into her house, drugging them, beating them and robbing them. If they died the victims were dragged to the river and thrown in.

If they were only stunned, they were taken out of the house to a remote street and left for pedestrians or policemen to find.

A fear is felt that more than twelve men, among those who have come to Beaumont and were afterward reported as missing, have been murdered and ...at their bodies are now at the bottom of the river. In the last three months at least fifty inquiries for missing men have been received and while no one supposes that the gang has murdered as many as fifty, there is a fear that some of the disappearances are due to their work.

Five bodies have been found in the river since the first of the year. The Beaumont woman was arrested Sunday on suspicion of being connected with the murder of Benjamin Pearson, one of the five known victims. She denies being guilty of this crime, but admits that one of the gang of which she is a member, discussed the commission of the deed. On the strength of her confession a white man, "Punch" Prim and a negro woman, "Mary Jane," have been arrested. All of them have been "sweated," and Sheriff Lindley states that he expects a full confession, not only of the murder of Pearson, but of others, within a short while. Sheriff Lindley is looking for two more negro women and six or eight white men, some of whom are wanted as witnesses.

HANDICAPPED.

The man who started to run a race in chains and fetters would be visibly handicapped. No one would expect him to succeed. The man who runs the race of life when his digestive and nutritive organs are diseased is equally handicapped. In the one case his strength is overweighted, in the other it is undermined. Success demands above all else a sound stomach.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. When this is done food is perfectly digested and assimilated and the body receives strength in the only way in which strength can be given—by the nutrition derived from digested and assimilated food.

"The praise I would like to give your 'Golden Medical Discovery' I cannot utter in words or describe with pen," writes James B. Ambrose, Esq., of 1205½ Mifflin Street, Huntingdon, Pa. "I was taken with what our physicians here said was indigestion. I doctored with the best around here and found no relief. I wrote to you and you sent me a question blank to fill out, and I did so, and you then advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took three bottles and I felt so good that I stopped, being cured. I have no symptoms of gastric trouble or indigestion now."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good."

THE IRON MARKETS

Excitement of Few Weeks Ago Not Now In Evidence.

The Heavy Buying Put Some Producers Out of Market.

Bulk of Iron Is Now Sold on Rising Prices.

Cleveland, March 13.—The Iron Trade Review, in its current issue says: The excitement that showed in the pig iron market two and three weeks ago is not in evidence now. The heavy buying at that time put some producers out of the market. Others are doling out with a sparing hand what iron they have for shipment this year. It would appear that on foundry iron the product is more fully sold for 1902 than some recent figures indicated, but buyers are not stampeding the market to cover their wants. The conditions are not altogether easy to diagnose, and the two views of producers are still exemplified in selling policies—on the one hand a conservatively maintained price side by side with it the policy of asking advances as the urgency of inquiry suggests. It is a fact, however, that the bulk of the iron now being sold is on a rising scale of prices. How far consumption would outrun productive capacity if transportation troubles could be ended is the problem whose solution is most difficult. So far as the Pittsburg district is concerned—and its influence on the situation is almost commanding—the prospects for early betterment in the freight movement are not encouraging. Meantime prices are being affected, and the holding down process is not fully successful. Among recent pig iron business in the Central West, are purchasers of basic iron by the United States Steel corporation for third quarter delivey, at $16 at furnace, the price paid recently for Bessemer iron for this quarter. Both lots have cut loose from this basis, however, on sales outside of the associated furnaces, as high as $17 and $17.25 at furnace being paid for Bessemer iron, while for basic some furnaces are holding for higher figures later in the year. The matter of coke contracts for the second half of the year is upward some at furnaces, and $2.25 has been paid for non-Connellsville coke as against $1.90 and $2 for the first half and it is expected that the basis for Connellsville will be $2.50 as against $2.25. Ore buying is going on at a steady price after the quiet interval that followed the first rush of contracting. Foreign steel is a small factor in the business of the week. But some German sheet bars have been sold for delivery in the Pittsburg district at $33.

AFTER CLARK.

Objections Are Made to His Discharge From Bankruptcy.

St. Paul, March 13.—A special to the Dispatch from Fergus Falls, Minn., says: A bill of specifications setting forth the objections to the granting of a discharge in bankruptcy in the N. P. Clark case was filed in the federal court here yesterday. They allege among other things that Clark is the real owner of a half interest in lands which are scattered all over the northern part of the state, and that he has given deeds to these lands to his sister, Clara C. McClure, who is holding them in trust for him.

It is further alleged that he is the real owner of the famous "Meadow Lawn" and "Clyde Mains" farms, and the high grade stock which is being raised upon them; that he has pretended to be the manager of these farms for several years, but has kept no books or accounts which indicate stewardship. The lands which he is alleged to own are said to be worth about $700,000. The creditors also allege that he owns mining stocks to the value of $100,000. They also charge him with making false oaths in regard to his liabilities, specifying that he states in one instance that he owes Clara C. McClure $29,196.88, and that he owes one John Zapp, of St. Cloud, various sums, aggregating about $35,000 in all, when, as a matter of fact, he does not owe them anything.

On the strength of the allegations, Judge Lochren ordered a general hearing which is likely to occupy several weeks.

IN THE AIR.

The Germs of La Grippe are Conveyed Through the Atmosphere.

No one can escape the La Grippe germ because when an epidemic of the disease is prevailing the air is laden with it.

The reason that everyone does not have the disease at the same time is because the persons who are enjoying perfect health are able to successfully resist and throw off the infection, while those who, for any reason, are not in the best of health, fall ready victims.

The first symptoms are those of acute catarrh resembling a hard cold and if prompt treatment is applied at this time, it can easily be broken up; one of the best remedies at this stage is Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, sold by druggists everywhere and if taken freely, say one tablet every hour or two for two or three days, the danger of pneumonia and serious complications will be averted.

The Rev. L. E. Palmer, Baptist clergyman of Ceresco, Mich., makes a statement of interest to all catarrh and grip sufferers. He says: "Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have certainly been a blessing to me. I have used them freely this fall and winter and have found them a safeguard against La Grippe and catarrhal troubles from which I have suffered for years. I feel that I can freely and conscientiously recommend them."

Persons who suffer from catarrh of the head and throat are very susceptible to La Grippe and such will find a pleasant, convenient and safe remedy in this new catarrh cure.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are composed entirely of harmless antiseptics and may be used as freely as necessary, as they contain no cocaine, opiate or poisonous drug of any kind.

IN MICHIGAN.

Negaunee Minister Made a Vigorous Campaign Against Mob.

Negaunee—Rev. S. N. Gilchriese, whose life was threatened by a mob here Saturday night, had five alleged leaders arrested. The charge preferred was violation of the city ordinance which forbids congregating in crowds for malicious intent. A warrant was also sworn out for the leader of the mob who kicked Gilchriese and attempted in other ways to provoke a riot, but he canot be found. The five arrested were found guilty and all paid fines and were released. The minister swore out warrants for the arrest of Humphrey Lucas, Samuel Hooper and John Parala, saloonmen, whose places Gilchriese found open Saturday night after 11 o'clock.

Norway—The coming city election will be one of the hottest in the history of the municipality. There are two or more candidates for almost every position on the ticket, and others are announcing themselves almost daily.

Ishpeming—A novel method of raising money for the McKinley memorial fund has been started here. It is the chain letter system. Some fifty persons have agreed to send three letters each to friends, asking a donation of 10 cents, with the request that the sending of the letters be continued as commenced. Many of these letters have already been sent to other cities in the peninsula.

Ontonagon—On the complaint of Deputy Game Warden Jones, James Urey has been arrested on the charge of killing deer out of season. He has been bound over. There has been much illegal hunting in this section, and the authorities are determined to stop the practice.

Sault Ste. Marie—The draymen of this city have been seized with the trust idea and have perfected the organization of an association. Maintenance of rates and mutual protection are the objects.

Crystal Falls—John Seaton, a trapper with headquarters on the Brule river, has just been paid the bounty on five more wildcats shot by him. It was one of several trips he has paid to the court house on the same errand this winter.

STORIES CONFLICT.

Was Father Kelly Expecting Miss Smythe's Arrival?

Sioux City, Iowa, March 13.—A telegram from Los Angeles, Cal., says that Father B. J. Kelly, pastor of the Catholic church at Elk Point, S. D., with whom Miss Josephine Smythe, daughter of Judge F. W. Smythe, stayed in California, was expecting the arrival of Miss Smythe at Lancaster Cliff. Father Kelly declared, on the other hand, upon returning here, that the visit of the girl was entirely unexpected.

It is stated that when Father Kelly went to Lancaster and rented the house he told several persons, among them the storekeeper, he was expecting the arrival of his niece, Miss Smythe, and said further she had taken care of his home in the East three or four years.

Father Kelly is said to have met Miss Smythe at the train in Los Angeles and may see them together on their arrival at Lancaster. Miss Smythe always referred to Father Kelly, this telegram says, as her uncle. No one had the slightest intimation they expected to leave, it is said, till they were warned that the story was out.

One bed in the house had not been made when examined after their disappearance. The owner did not know they had gone, the rent money had been left with the fellow who drove them hurriedly to the train.

A message from Elk Point says it is understood Miss Smythe is now in Chicago, where she is visiting friends. Bishop O'Gorman, of South Dakota, has formally announced that Father Kelly is free to return to his Elk Point church, which he will do.

MAJ. EDWARDS

May Become First Assistant Postmaster General.

Washington, March 13.—The entire North Dakota congressional delegation, reinforced by National Committeeman Alex McKenzie, called at the White House yesterday with Maj. Edwards, of the Fargo Forum, in the interest of Maj. Edwards' long standing candidacy for some desirable federal appointment. The delegation has filed on the post of first assistant postmaster general, soon to be vacant. Mr. Roosevelt received them pleasantly and cordially and later in the week the delegation will see Postmaster General Payne. It is believed the president will appoint Maj. Edwards should Mr. Payne be favorable and have no candidate of his own. Mr. Roosevelt told the delegation that he would be very glad to do anything he could for Maj. Edwards on the major's own account and to please the political forces of the state which are backing him solidly.

COAL IN ILLINOIS

Is Second In the List of Coal-Producing States.

Coal Near Surface and Frequently Mined By Stripping.

Most of the Western Coals Run High In Gas.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, March 13.—(Special to Herald.)—Illinois ranks, next to Pennsylvania, second in the list of coal-producing states of the country; and it contains more than three-fourths of the entire area of the Eastern interior coal field. This coal field, as we are told by George H. Ashley, in part 3 of the twenty-second annual report of the United States geological survey, now in press, occupies eighty counties, 35,000 square miles, in Illinois, and twenty counties, 6500 square miles in Southwestern Indiana, and eleven in Kentucky. The structure of this field is that of an elongated basin, whose lowets portion is in Southeastern Illinois. In Indiana, the cannel coal of Cannelburg, the "Indiana Block coal" and the semi-block coals, lying in small basins, cover central Fountain and Parke counties, nealy all of Clay, Western Greene, practically all of Daviess, Dubois and Spencer, the eastern portions of Pike and Warren, and Western Perry. Very thin between the basins, the coals attain a thickness of from 3 to 55 feet in the center of the basin. What is commonly called the bituminous field in Indiana, covers that portion of Indiana lying west of the block coal field. It is found in Vermillion, Wabash, Vigo, Sullivan, Knox, Parke, Clay, Greene, Warrick, Gibson, Vanderburg and Posey counties, in beds averaging probably six feet in thickness.

The workable coals of Illinois underlie vast areas in beds of from less than three to about ten feet in thickness, and so near the surface that in very many instances the coal is mined by stripping. Beginning with the Danville field, Vermillion county, on the northeast, these fields are north in Will county, thence west to Rock Island county, on the Mississippi river, and thence southward, embracing practically all the rest of the western, central and southern parts of the state, from Kankakee county to White, Vermillion county excepted, in which the workable coal, if, as is likely, such exists, lies probably from 300 to 500 feet deep.

In Kentucky the coal of this field, in beds averaging probably five feet, occupies the whole or parts of seven or eight counties lying in or near the angle of the Ohio and the Tennessee rivers; Hopkins, Webster, McLean, Muhlenberg, Hancock, Henderson, Union. These beds lie comparatively near the surface. As compared with the averages of Indiana and Illinois coal, it would appear that the Kentucky coal was richer in fixed carbon, but poorer in gas, and with a greater quantitity of ash and sulphur.

Most of the Western coals run high in gas, which puts them to a disadvantage in actual present practice, as compared with coals of the Appalachian field, having about the same total amount of combustible matter. As to their coking value, a study of the statistics of coke production in Indiana and Illinois shows that those states are not succeeding as coke producers. On the other hand, the production in Kentcuky has risen from 2223 tons in 1884 to 72,975 tons in 1900, of which 33,864 tons were produced in the Western field. The difficulty in Indiana and Illinois seems to be that those states' coals are of the splint or non-coking variety, and that the coking coals run too high in sulphur. By way of summary, the coals of the Eastern interior field have not proved to be satisfactory for the manufacture of gas, except where they have great advantages in freights over Pennsylvania coals; the same is true of coke in Indiana and Illinois. The coke from Western Kentucky coal is of excellent quality, and is finding an ever-increasing market. For steam production the coals of this field do not fall far behind the best Eastern coals, and they are probably as good or better than most of the coals from fields farther west.

The history of coal in this region takes us back to the picturesque, not to say romancing, figure of Father Hennepin, near Fort Creve Coeud, on the Illinois river, in 1698. His is also the first mention of coal found in America. In 1763 coal was noticed on the Wabash river by Col. Croghan. In 1811 coal was dug at Fulton, Pery county, Indiana, and taken aboard the steamboat Orleans by Robert Fulton, on his first trip down the Ohio river. 1840-1850 considerable coal was shipped down the Ohio from Kentucky, and from points along the Wabash, White and Ohio rivers, in Indiana. 1850-1860, extensive coal mining in Illinois. 1879, Illinois third, Indiana fifth, Kentucky ninth in rank as coal producers in the United States. In 1900 Illinois was second, Indiana sixth, Kentucky seventh in rank. In all three states the room and pilar method of mining predominates, and in all three also machines are largely used in mining the coal. In Illinois and Indiana the large majority of miners are white, the colored miners having in the main been brought in to take the place of strikers. In Kentucky a large proportion of miners are negroes. Of the white miners in Indiana and Kentucky, the figures indicate that about one-half are foreigners, and that this proportion is on the increase.

The Eastern interior field supplies entirely or in part the fuel market for all of Indiana west and south of the Indiana gas field, all of Illinois, Western Kentucky, Western Tennessee, Northwestern Alabama, Mississippi, points in Louisiana and Arkansas, on the Mississippi river and its tributaries, Eastern Missouri, Eastern Iowa, and portions of Eastern Nebraska, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Wisconsin. Its coal comes in competition over the whole of this area with both anthracite and bituminous coal from the Appalachian field, both by rail and by water.

The production of this field in 1900 was, in round numbers, 35,300,000 short tons, valued at $36,200,000, of which Illinois produced 25,750,000 tons, Indiana 6,500,000 tons, and Kentucky 3,000,000 tons, and of this product over 31 per cent was consumed as railroad fuel, 1.5 per cent as steamboat fuel, about 34 per cent as manufacturing fuel; over 32 per cent as domestic fuel, and less than one-half of 1 per cent in making coke. Only one mine seems to be exporting coal; the Wheateraft mine, Webster Co., Ky., is shipping in Mexico, via New Orleans. Nearly the whole product of this field is shipped by rail. In Illinois thirty-three roads transport the coal product, of which fifteen carry over 500,000 tons each; in Indiana ten railroads, and in Kentucky three roads carry most of the coal.

In 1900 sixty-seven counties had 799 commercial mines, which actually produced over 35,000,000 short tons, and whose estimated productive capacity is over 75,000,000 tons. Over 60 per cent of these mines report prospective increase in production. From these reports it is evident that the prospects for enlargement all over the field are excellent.

LEAVES THE STAGE.

Edith Yerrington Quits Owing to Ill-Health.

Winona, Minn., March 13.—Edith Yerrington, of this city, who for the past two years has been playing the part of Willie von Astorbilt in "The Burgomaster," has been obliged to leave the company temporarily and come to her home in this city on account of poor health. She fainted several times on the stage and then her physician told her it was imperative she take a rest. Her last public appearance was at New Orleans the last week in February. The father of her husband died in London last month and left a goodly estate to be divided between her, her husband and their little son.

A Good Deal

Has been said and written recently about the new fad known as the "no-breakfast habit," some people claiming that by omitting the morning meal the health will be improved and life lengthened. This may be all right for idle people who arise at noon, but for the average business man or woman a good breakfast is an absolute necessity as a stimulant for the day's labor. When traveling the appetite is sharpened, and experienced travelers say that breakfast is the most enjoyable meal "en route." The officials of the Milwaukee road have so arrange their dining car service on the Pioneer Limited that passengers are enabled to obtain 'most anything they want in the way of a morning meal. A model dining car is attached to the train at Milwaukee and until Chicago is reached breakfast is served "a la carte," that is, the passenger may order and have served anything that may suit his palate and pay for what he gets. It is not necessary to order a $1 meal when simply a light breakfast is desired. In addition to the "a la carte" plan, sixteen individual club breakfasts are served at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1. This is a decided departure in dining car service, and is appreciated by the Milwaukee's many patrons.

STOCKMEN

Urged to Use Influence On Certain Bills Before Congress.

Denver, March 13.—Secretary Charles F. Martin, of the National Live Stock association, has issued a bulletin, calling the attention of stockmen to the quesent status of certain bills of interest to the live sock industry now before congress.

The bills are H. R. 6665 by Congressman Grosvenor, of Ohio, to precent the sale of shoddy goods as pure wool; S 2,688, by Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, to provide for the improvement in-breeding horses for general purpose use; H. R. 10,308 providing for a permanent census bureau and an annual classified census of live stock; others asking for federal aid in the reclaimation of the arid and semi-arid lands of the West by irrigation, that the interstate commerce act be amended so as to give the commission judiciary power, for the admission of the territories, of New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma to statehood, and the Henry oleomargarine bill.

After stating the exact position in legislative progress that has been reached by each bill, the bulletin says:

"Every man engaged in the industry should immediately send a strong letter to the chairmen of the committees named and to the senators and congressmen from their state, urging upon them to earnestly work for the passage of the Grosvenor shoddy bill, for the passage of Senator Penrose house bill, for the passage of the irrigation bill and for the defeat of the Henry oleomargarine bill. This will take but five minutes time and 5 cents in cash, while millions annually are involved and depend upon prompt and energetic compliance with this request."

ROLL IS MISSING

Edward Lambert Thought to Have Been Murdered at Louisville.

Cocaine Found In His Stomach Leads to This Belief.

Roll of Money Which He Carried Cannot Be Discovered.

Louisville, Ky., March 13.—To be murdered for his money on the very day of his home-coming after having escaped the dangers of two campaigns against his country's foes, was the sad fate of Edward Lambert, a young man of 24 years, whose widowed mother lives at Eighth and Market streets. When the war against Spain was declared Lambert and a friend by the name of Enoch Gore enlisted in the United States army and went to Cuba with the First regulars, both serving in Company H. Gore was attacked by fever and had to be sent back home, but Lambert, a strong fellow, of fine physique, withstood the climate and the hardships of life in the field, and when the campaign in Cuba ended, was sent to the Philippines with his regiment.

Jan. 2 he was musthered out at Manila and sent to the United States, having in his pocket $2113.18 paid to him on the day of his discharge. On the afternoon of Feb. 25 he reached home, and great was the joy of his mother and relatives to see him back sound and well. One of the first men he called on was Enoch Gore, and in company with him he started out that night to have some fun.

Gore, who had fallen in bad company since his return from Cuba, steered him to the house of Jennie Ashcraft, on Green street, near Second, and there he met Annie Harris, a young woman from Cincinnati, whose right name is Annie Cogan; Belle Wilson, a girl whose home is in Newport, but who had lived with Annie Harris at 416 Plum street, and later at the house of Lizzie Young; Lulie Palmer and Minnie Simms. Lambert took a fancy to the Harris girl, who is 22 years old, and treated her and her companions liberally. In the course of the evening he showed the women his pocketbook, bulging with greenbacks, and the sight of so much money caused Jennie Ashcraft and her friends to plot his death.

He did not return home that night, and the next morning his family was notified that he had suddenly died. The coroner called, held an inquest and rendered a verdict of heart failure.

The body of the dead man was taken home and arrangements for the funeral made. Lambert's brother and mother became suspicious when it turned out that the young man's papers and money had disappeared, but they did not take any steps in the matter until they were told on the day of the funeral by one George Gnau, who lived with Minnie Simms, that on the night of Lamberts' death his girl had suffered from poison, and that he believed that the young soldier, too, had been poisoned and robbed. The funeral was stopped, an autopsy held and the stomach taken out and delivered to Dr. S. E. Cartin for analysis.

Dr. Cartin made his report, in which he stated that he had found traces of cocaine, and death might have been caused by that poison. The detectives at once put all the inmates of the house under arrest and put them through a sweating process, taking several hours. All declared themselves innocent, but Annie Harris at last broke down and confessed that she had seen Jennie Ashcraft put morphine or cocaine, which Lulie Palmer, who is addicted to the use of these drugs, had given her, in Lambert's whisky, and that the young man had died from the effects. She implicated Enoch Gore and the Palmer woman, and said that Jennie Asheraft had confessed the deed to her in the hearing of Minnie Simms, who was concealed behind a curtain at the time. The Palmer woman vigorously denied Annie Harris' statements and declared that while she lay in bed the night of the murder Annie Harris had come to her room, where Lambert also was, and groping in the dark had felt all over her as if looking for money. On this statement Gore, Ashcraft, Palmer and Harris were all arrested on a charge of murder, while Belle Wilson and Minnie Simms, who were in the house at the time, were held as witnesses. Another arrest may follow. What became of the money is yet a mystery, but it is believed that Gore and Jennie Ashcraft got the larger part of it. The detectives are still investigating. All the parties bear bad reputations. Lambert, the murdered man, was arrested some years ago on a charge of murdering a man named Vogel in midriver while on a fishing tour, but was acquitted for lack of evidence.

PORTRAIT

Of Mrs. Roosevelt Is Now Near Completion.

Washington, March 13.—M. Chartran's portrait of Mrs. Roosevelt is nearing completion. Mrs. Roosevelt giving her last sittings and the artist his last touches to the canvas. The picture of Miss Roosevelt was completed before her departure for Cuba, and, with that of Mrs. Roosevelt, will be framed at once. M. Cambon, the French ambassador, will give a large tea on Friday afternoon, when the pictures of Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Roosevelt will be on exhibition to his guests in the ballroom of the embassy.

This will give society generally the first and only glimpse they will have of the portraits until they become a part of the White House property.

Dally a number of the close friends of Mrs. Roosevelt accompany her to the studio in the Corcoran gallery to criticise the picture in progress. M. Chartran finds Mrs. Roosevelt one of the easiest models he has ever had, susceptible to the slightest suggestion and willing and happy to assist him in every way. Mrs. Roosevelt has had some objection to the background of her portrait, which shows the White House in the distance, touched in with the true artist's conception of distance and atmosphere, but this has been overcome, and both she and the president are greatly pleased with the portrait.

M. Chartran is not new to Washington society, having painted portraits of Mrs. Munn, Mrs. Townsend and a number of other persons of Washington. His famous picture of the pope, which was on exhibition at the Corcoran gallery and elicited most favorable comment, is now in Baltimore, where the artist has as subjects several society women.

PLANTATION SERMONS.

Some Queer Exhortations For Negro Field Hand.

Every Southern plantation of any size has its negro preacher. He can readily be singled out among the hands hoeing in the field by the high silk hat which he wears. The hat may be battered and rusty, but it still imparts an impression of dignity unmistakable in contrast with the dilapidated caps and crownless straw hats of his fellows. In every assemblage of the hands the preacher can be recognized from his high-flown speech and pretentious manner, says the New York Sun.

Although seldom educated, he has felt the call, and by dint of much conning of the spelling book and careful treasuring of the words and expressions picked up from more advanced divines, he is able to read a very impressive chapter from the Bible, the ambiguity of text not being noticed by the congregation, or if noticed, being ascribed to superior insight and erudition.

A certain preacher whose fervid eloquence always takes strong hold of his hearers lately discoursed on the "Prophets and the Ship of Zion." Among other statements he made were these:

"Moses take de Son of Man out of de bullrush and set him on a tall brass pole; and while he was gwine up de pole a scorpion bite him, but dat scorpion sting never do him nothin' 'cause he was pure in heart. De pure in heart shall seeno evil, bless God!

"God told Pharaoh to let de chil'un of Egypt go and he wouldn't. Den God sen' down frog and toad and ant-eater, and they git in Pharaoh mouth and in he bread tray and 'sturb (disturb) him terrible. Den Moses git dere when Pharaoh wasn't lookin' and tole off de chil'un of Egypt wid manna same like de farm hands tole off a turn of shoats wid corn-nubbins.

"It take de chil'un t'ree whole long days to git to de promised lan'. Den furst t'ing dey want water and git hungry. Den de Lord, he ride out on de heaven and holler to Moses to smote de stone, just a ordinary stone. And arter de stone been smote dey all run to look and God holler to Moses to smote her agin harder and all dem chil'un of Egypt step over de creek dry shoddy. Arter dat God tell Moses who war he head servant, to strike the plum tree and 'nough plums came down for 40,000 chil'un to eat and git 'nough.

Previous to a protracted meeting on the Bethune place in Middle Georgia the leaders sent an old ngro named Zeb Bloodman, who usually raised the tunes, down to Augusta to catch some new songs with which to fire the enthusiasm. Zeb listened attentively to the revival hymns in Augusta, and on his return, when the Middle Georgia meeting was in full blast, introduced a hymn with the following refrain to a taking air:

Good news! Good news!
The Injuns brought the tigers down,
Good news, my Lord!

The new song was ingrafted into the local list of favorites, and some time passed before it transpired that the original words Zeb heard were:

Good news! Good news!
The angels brought the tidings down,
Good news, my Lord!

On another occasion at this church while Uncle Ike Garnet, one of the local preachers, was making up a big revival, a white preacher, thinking to be neighborly, offered to help Ike, and in a private conversation asked him the prevailing sins of his congregation. "Infidelity to the marital vows, thieving, drunkenness, or what is the main sin here?" he inquired; "I want to touch them up on it a bit."

"Look a here, now, Marse Pearman," the local preacher objected, "don't talk on that sort of t'ing at all. I was just a gitten dem people het up and now you wants to throw cole water on de meetin'. No, sir. Just lambaste 'em on playin' of the fiddle and de bones and lack of Christian spirit, and all sich like, den we can git a powerful rousement. But dem subjects you talk about is too pussonal, sir, too pussional."

A devout preacher once in the wild enthusiasm of a revival session fixed his eyes upon the ceiling of the plain little church and entreated the Lord to appear before the stubborn sinners who would not yield to argument and come forward to the anxious bench.

"Come down, Lord, come down!" shrieked the preacher in an agony of entreaty. "We's a 'pending on you to come right now and convict those stony hearts. Come right down through the roof. We'll pay for every plunk you bust off."

Crotchpen church on Turkey Hill creek was one a bush arbor, the congregation having worshipped under a canopy of often-renewed boughs until money could be got for a building. Gradually, as the people became more prosperous, the small frame church has been painted white, and a few months ago an abbreviated steeple was added. A special meeting was held about this time during which old Dennis Wanemaker, bush arbor preacher, exhorted after this fashion:

"We is jist enjoyin' dis evening, by brethren and sisterin, de deep saterfaction of the new garret fur our bell, but she need paintin' powerful. De fact is to a pusson ridin' by she hab de lookment of a clean collar on a dirty shirt and dis day and hour we proposes to lift a collection to paint de church. So drop your change in a little brederin' and Brudder Hawkins will lead us in prayer and blind your eyes to de wants of this world which am a villain of tear."

The local preacher, described familarly by his flock as the "locus" preacher is distinct from his regularly ordained colleague of the conference who is appointed to preach only two or three times a month, administers communion, takes up collections and performs such exalted services as shall please him. Upon the "locus" preacher devolve the more active duties of the pastorate, the reconciling of conjugal disputes, the spiritual comforting of the sick, the conducting of prayer meetings and week day celebrations. It is his province to turn transgressors out of the church when their offenses have become too flagrant, and to kindle the flame which shall bring about their penitence and subsequent re-entry into spiritual affairs.

He marries the pair who are without the money for a fee and agrees to wait till cotton picking time for payment. Often he not only performs the burial service over a deceased member, but makes the simple coffin which is required and again agrees to wait for reward. He is clever with carpenter's tools, a trade picked up in a desultory way as his preaching had been, and, while shaping the rough boards and staining them with lamp black, he delivers many sound maxims and sage bits of advice to the men who are helping him.

"It's a solemn business, dis here dyin', boys, an' de sinner ought to keep a-watchin-in' out and not be nappin' like de owl in de swamp. There's nebet no knowin' when de Savior will repair," he observes impressively to the young negro who holds in place the black calico with which the home-made casket is being lined. "De Scripter say knowledge it shall blow 'way same like dat chaff," he remarks later as he saws in half a piece of new board. "But charity is de t'ing that gwine hold on till kingdom come."

The evolution of the plantation preacher begins where he is a mere youth sitting in the congregation among his mates. Impressive and deep-drawn sighs and energetic vociferations of "Do Lord," "Dat's so," "Amen" blurted out from a full heart at meeting are the first evidences of election by the spirit. After this there are many revivals when he goes through the experience of a "Seeker," sometimes after prolonged shouting rushing out of the church in the rigor of his emotions and falling prone upon the pine straw of the nearby grove there to lie half unconscious until the change known as "coming through" descends upon him.

After having come through several spells of religious ecstacy he is aware that his associates look for the revelations of the visions he has seen, and soon he improvises thrilling experiences and fits them to tunes sung half staccato harmonies during rapt moments, to an awe-struck audience. The hand of God is said to be upon him at this time.

And later when he organizes a prayer room in some vacant cabin or roomy corn house, neighbors flock to his meetings. He seemingly possesses a never-failing source of inspiration from which to draw tumultuous and affecting discources. His friends render him all sorts of assistance in his field work and every day affairs in order that he may have leisure to cultivate the spirit, read in the Testament and consult with others of the elect. A convert of this sort preached a novel sermon.

"De Bible is a very old book, my believers. It never was fixed in de old times no such fashion as it is now. It was print on roll what could be mash up in a mighty little size. Saint Barnabe he love de Gospel mightily and think that much of de Scripter that he swallow one of de rolls whole. And so de Apostles swear to it dat de word of God was in him.

"Once der was a big supper party in Galilee and a uncommon lot of people was invite to be present. When dey got there the Misses she find out dat de cook was trifiin' and hadn't made no supper and dere was great combussation 'count of it, de people wonderin' how dey was to feed. Den Him of Nazareene who was one of de crowd tell de Missis not to bother, but to fetch Him couple of plates out de pantry. And once He cast He eye on dem two plates dere was enough victuals on 'em to fill the whole multitude. All de fine bread and fried fishes dey could eat. And my brederin dem supper people eat and eat of dat powerful feedin' till de mericle was dat dey didn't bus'. That supper party one of de chief mericles what set down in de Testament."

Some of the local preachers are foxy and take advantage of their position, getting much more work out of their flock than the latter can well afford to give. But many are sincere and content with only meager returns for their services. A certain African Methodist church stands near a cross-roads junction at tolerably close quarters with a Baptist meeting house, the two denominations being rivals for the favor of the surrounding tenantry. One Roeback is the Baptist preacher.

A meeting was appointed to be held at the Baptist church on a certain evening, and on the same evening the Methodists also held forth. Roeback, being possessed of great lung power and tremendous energy, preached so lustily that the Methodists folks left their own meeting and went over to hear him. The Methodist preacher and the deacons of that church thereupon sued Roebuck for interfering with their meeting. They went in a body to the trial justice at the nearest town and demanded that the neighbor preacher be "persecuted" to the full extent of the law.

The scene in the lawyer's office, with the solemn-faced deacons and their leader in Sunday clothes and ancient Roeback tremulous with indignation and spouting pedantic protest, is described as inimitably comic. The Methodists lost their case, the verdict being that every man has a right to worship after his own impulse, that those sheep who strayed to the Baptist flock were free agents and Roeback in no way blameworthy because of his strong preaching.

Mueller will return to the "U" next fall to complete his studies, but as the conference has not seen fit to reinstate him he will not play on the 'varsity team.

FRAUD IS STOPPED

Sure Way to Open Cash Register Without a Key.

Advice Furnished By Clever Swindler For Two Dollars.

Anxious Inquirers Were Told to Buy an Ax.

Washington, March 13.—The assistant attorney general for the postoffice department had his attention called recently to an advertisement which has been appearing in various newspapers offering for "the small sum of $2" to teach by a quick, safe, sure and easily learned method" how to open a cash register without the aid of a key.

The attorney general investigated the case, and now believes that whatever the character of the promoter of the scheme may be, his sense of humor is abnormally developed.

The circular sent to those who remitted $2 instructed the pupil to secure an ax, weighing, "in order to secure best results," in the neighborhood of ten pounds. The circular then tells the pupil to take a position before the register, advance the left foot, stand firmly, "swing the ax with both hands around the head three times, and smite the cash register with might and main—location of blow immaterial. Repeat until result is obtained."

The circular closes with the remark that for the successful operation of the "quick, safe, sure and unfailing" method it is essential to be alone with the cash register. The case was settled without the necessity of a fraud order.

This case is a near approach to the ancient "potato bug exterminator," which gained a boom for $1 as a method of eradicating the potato vine pest, and sent two little blocks of wood, numbered 1 and 2, and a printed circular. The circular read as follows:

"Catch the festive bug, place him carefully on block No. 1 and smite with block No. 2. Wipe and proceed as before."

The postmaster general today issued an order denying the use of the mails against the Central Agency Pawnbrokers, Baltimore building, Quincy street, Chicago, Ill., the operators of an ingenious scheme. People all over the United States have been receiving letters reading:

"My Friend of Long Ago: My ring deserves a better fate than that to which it seems to be doomed, and, rather than have those horrid Jews keep it, I send the ticket to you. So get it out, if you care to, and keep it as a lasting memory of dear old times and of A GRATEFUL FRIEND."

Inclosed in the letter was what appeared to be a pawn ticket showing that $22.50 had been loaned on a diamond ring deposited with the Central Agency Pawnbrokers. Those who sent for rings received a "flash" diamond worth about $1 a gross, wholesale.

MUST CEASE.

Discrimination By Roads Between Live Stock and Dressed Beef.

Chicago, March 12.—Traffic officials of Western railroads are much disturbed by an order just received from the interstate commerce commission to immediately discontinue their discrimination in rates against live stock shipments from Missouri river and intermediate points to ——cago, says the Inter-Ocean.

The Chicago live stock exchange recently filed a complaint with the interstate commerce commission that the Western railroads were making lower rates on fresh meats and packing house products shipped here from Missouri river and intermediate points than the rates on live stock.

The traffic officials of Western lines have now received notice from the commission to change their rates so as to avoid discrimination. The commission reminded the railway officials that last October it made a ruling that the railways must not charge higher rates for hauling live hogs than for hog products from packing houses. The commission declares that the order made in October applies to the shipment of fresh meats at lower rates than live stock, and wants the practice discontinued at once.

HARRIMAN

Interests Have Secured St. Joseph & Grand Island Railroad.

St. Joseph, Mo., March 13.—The St. Joseph & Grand Island railroad, the connecting link between this city and the Union Pacific overland route, has been absorbed by the latter road. There has been marked activity in the St. Joseph & Grand Island stocks in New York for the past month and at a late hour last night it was learned that a majority of the stock of the road had passed into the hands of the Harriman interests. The road was formerly a part of the Union Pacific, but upon the reorganization of the latter road the Grand Island became an independent system and has since remained so. The absorption of the Grand Island by the Harriman interests will give the Union Pacific a direct entrance into St. Joseph over its own tracks, thereby giving this city another direct route to the Pacific coast.

Up to within a short time ago it was thought that the Burlington had acquired possession of the road.

Resumption of Sale of Homeseekers' Tickets.

The Northern Pacific will, on Feb. 18th, resume the sale of round trip Homeseekers' tickets to all points on its line, and will continue the sale of same on first and third Tuesdays during months March, April and May. For tickets and full information, call at City office, 332 W. Superior street, or Union depot.

SPORT AT SEA.

Adventures of Those Who Hunt the Whale.

Seafaring life, although often jeopardizing in the extreme, is entrancing, and seldom does one find a man who has not at some time been possessed of the idea that he would like to spend a period on the deep, says the Pittsburg Post. Whale fishing is not the least hazardous of the varieties of maritime life; nor is it the least pleasant, for with all its excitement and peril the cruise of a whale schooner brings the crew into numerous and varied ports during the time at sea. Wonderful tales are spun by old sailors, and into the woof are woven threads of all shades of color, from the blood-curdling experiences, with a fighting monster, to the calms of a tropical bayou. Be the time never so brief in the cruise, the one who has taken it has become a sailor, and the memory-picture remains unfaded until the end of life.

In this city there is one man at least whose experience in a 3-year sperm-whaling cruise were exciting and pleasant, and whose story of the time aboard the bark has delighted many a man and made him a friend—apparently, a natural feeling of the average man for the sailor who has given a glimpse into the inner life of a seaman. This man is Roswell D. Tompkins, who thus tells of the exciting sport:

"What is the most exciting experience in the life of a sperm whale fisher? Well, that is undoubtedly the catching of the whale himself. With the bark ballasted by a good store of oil in the casks far down in the hold, there is little danger from storms, and no heed is taken of them beyond taking in the main sail. Unless a bark should happen directly upon a whale, or a school of them, the monster's presence in the vicinity is announced by the lookouts stationed in the crow's-nest, high above all the yards. The forward spouting of the sperm whale can be seen for a distance of twelve miles, and from that moment until the blubber is all aboard the vessel and the carcass is discarded to wind and wave there is an air of excitement among the men. The whole task requires from eight hours to two days, and not a moment's rest can be taken by any member of the crew until all is done.

"With the announcement of the sighting of the whale the call comes. 'All hands on deck!' and, though one may just have crawled into his bunk for his four-hour sleep, he must hasten aboard, and that without stopping to dress himself. The boats are lowered, and the six men for each of the boats gets aboard them and row toward the whale. This is usually a merry race, the first one to throw the harpoon being allowed the choice of the ivory teeth; preference is allowed the first mate, who is generally one of the crews after the whale. A successful attack on the whale must be made fore and aft; to approach on either side means the loss of the fellow, for he is frightened and darts down and may not rise again for ten or twelve miles. Even when approached from in from or behind the whale may discover the presence of enemies and dart into the deep. The sailors determine the direction in which he is going by the last flourish of his hukes, and they set a steady row of about 10 knots in the direction of an intermediate point. If he is merely sounding he will rise at the end of forty or forty-five minutes, and will show his presence by spouting.

By steady and silent approach the first harpooner to come near him throws the spear into his body, and immediately follows with his second harpoon, which is attached to the rope about twenty-five feet from the first. Then begins the reality of excitement, but the men must all be ready for action. The harpooner stands by the receding coil, which is wound up in the bottom of the boat, and is ready with his hatchet to cut the rope in case it suddenly knots or tangles; to leave such a thing go would mean death to all six men. At the first opportunity a bomb is shot into the whale's body, the endeavor being, of course, to reach his vitals. As soon as he begins to spout blood, the crew is practically sure of the whale. His eyes are lanced at the earliest moment; this is no easy task, for the eyes are small as a hen's egg.

"Once the whale is overcome, a spear bearing a flag is cast into the upper side of his body to signal the bark to approach. Then begins the hard work. A staging, resembling the gang plank of the river boats, is lowered to the side of the vessel and extends out fifteen feet over the side. It is impossible to tow the whale to the bark, and this necessitates bringing the boat directly beside the monster. A loose noose is placed around his body, just in front of the flukes, and another is placed about the head, just back of the jaws. Three men are given long spades, which have a razor edge, and the hook being lowered and fastened to the first blanket or strip of blubber, the remainder is cut in a spiral form, the big body revolving in the nooses. Three men stand on the outside of the staging and take the blubber onto the bark. At each side of the staging stands one man with another spade, to strike off sharks. In case a shark is wounded his fellow sharks hasten up and tear him to pieces before the men can interfere.

"The spermacetis, for finer oil of the whale is bailed out of the immense head, and, until recently, takes the form of snow-white and snow-light crystals. It is valuable in use for candles, ointments, cosmetics and machinery oils. The lower jaw is secured for the teeth. No teeth are found in the upper jaw of the sperm whale, but there are sockets into which the lower teeth fit; other species have no teeth at all. The teeth are then chopped out and are cleansed by allowing them to soak in salt water.

"Then men are allowed to rest after the blubber has been taken on board the bark. After sufficient rest has been secured the process of rendering the blubber into oil is begun. Large chunks are thrown into a kettle fitted into a brick oven for the purpose of rendering, and a hickory fire is lighted. When one kettleful has been rendered the oil is bailed out into an adjoining tank to cool, and is afterward run into a large tank in the hold of the bark. The 'cracklin',' or remains of the blubber, after the oil has been extracted, are used for firing the next kettleful. During this process, of course, continual watch is kept for whales, either in schools or singly, and no opportunity is allowed to pass without an effort to secure a whale.

"There are many dangers attached to the life of a sperm-whale fisher. One of the most liable dangers is that of being attacked by the whale. One must be wary of both his immense jaws and his flukes. To attack by his mouth he turns on his side or back and comes at one in an ugly way. He propels himself entirely with his flukes, just the opposite of a fish, and steers by means of his fin on either side. One of our men was struck by a whale's fluke, and besides being knocked from the boat, had both his legs and an arm broken. He was rescued, and after some time recovered. There is danger of the whale flourishing himself under the boat and capsizing it. Little danger attaches to storms affecting the small boats, for the oars can be locked in such a manner as to keep the boat right-side-up in the highest waves, or white caps, as sperm-whale fishers call the breakers. The boats are provided with air-tight provision boxes, which are lashed to the boat and cannot be lost. The men do not wear life preservers; they go to their work as a fireman springs to his engine in case of a fire call. The life is one of hardships, and many long exposures must be endured without a whimper. One goes into the service for a certain period and he cannot be released, except on account of sickness, until his term expires.

"But aside from its hardships and bitter experiences the life is entrancing, and in a crew of picked men the experiences become bearable and even pleasant. In the crew are included the five look-outs, who can sight a vessel at twenty-five miles, and land at eighty miles; a blacksmith, a carpenter, a cooper, a steward and a cook. The food consists of salt pork and beef, potatoes, hard tack, coffee and tea; in port, fresh meats and vegetables are secured. The porpoise is the sailor's fresh meat while at sea. These are a species of smaller whale, which frolic about the bow of a boat, darting across it in their sport. They are from six to ten feet long, and the porpoise jaw I have is from one that we captured. In Africa the women use the sides of these jaws for combs; well adapted, but grewsome.

"After almost three years we again came to an American shore, the coast of Greenland. In a short time we came into home port, with the full requirements of oil; and, although all were happy to be in the United States again, almost every one would have gladly gone to sea a second time, had not affairs at home demanded recognition. With all its hard knocks and exposures we liked the life, and just now I would enjoy being on a bark again with the boys, rushing on deck for a fight with a fine, active whale."

CHINESE RESTAURANTS.

There are now in this city some 250 restaurants conducted by Chinamen. Of this number about seventy-five are in Chinatown. The Tenderloin district also has a large number, says the New York Sun.

Probably the best equipped are found in Chinatown. One of them on Pell street is beautifully furnished and contains forty ebony tables inlaid with pearl, each table being valued at $140. A large partition of stained glass with Chinese figures divides the main dining parlor from the smaller one. Oriental bric-a-brac of all descriptions adorns the walls.

The proprietor, Fong, they call him, is a man of education and speaks good English. He has been in the country thirty years.

"There has been a great change in the restaurant trade," he said. "It is really astonishing what strides have been made when one considers the little progress the Chinese have made in other lines of business in this country.

"Twenty years ago I started a restaurant in Boston. There was little or no patronage then except from Chinamen. Now we depend principally on Americans.

"This change has been wrought simply because people now have a correct idea of what Chinese food and cooking are. Cleanliness and good service have also done a lot toward this change.

"The food is eaten principally for the novelty of the thing and many people come here just to say that they have dined in a Chinese restaurant, but we also have our regular customers from uptown. Sometimes a party that has never been in a Chinese restaurant will hire one of the guides and he does the ordering and explains to them what the different dishes are made up of.

"Now, another thing that has attained quite a vogue in the last few years is the after-theater party. In many cases a party of friends who have been to the theater instead of going to one of the fashionable restaurants uptown will pay a visit to a Chinese place here or a place in the Tenderloin.

"Only last week a cab stopped at my door and a gentleman, stylishly dressed, came in and made arrangements for an imported dinner for the following night. The party consisted of eight, a Chinese orchestra played during the meal.

"We have so many kinds of dishes that it's almost impossible to give a complete list. Of all these chop suey is the most in demand. Chop suey is composed of pork, celery, onions, noodles and black beans—sometimes—when mushrooms. All these are chopped up together and fried. The gravy, blood juice of black beans.

"Quo Mein is simply noodle soup with pork in it. Birds' nests, shark fins and the other imported foods we have are very expensive and it is imperative that the orders for them be given at least a day ahead. Shark fins, for instance, cost $2.

"Another dish we have, and this is the most expensive of all, is ——art ye, the Chinese name for a rare bird. This costs $4.

"Plain rice and rice with maple syrup are also liked very much. Several kinds of tea are always kept in a first-class Chinese restaurant. Chinese cakes and candies are very luscious. Crystalized ginger is much in demand, as are the lychee nuts and preserved fruits.

"It's funny to watch the antics of some of the people who come in here and persist in showing what they don't know about eating properly. One of a party in order to show his smartness will ask for chop-sticks. "He will arrange his paper napkin, take hold of the chop sticks and proceed to tackle a bowl of rice. Then the fun begins. Before he has finished he has made himself the laughing-stock of the place. Many and many a time have I seen a dress suit ruined in this way."

NOVELTIES THAT ARE ENTICING

A Well Defined Fashion In Crisp Silks---The New Ribbon Silk---Pompadour Colors In Active Demand.

New York, March 8.—It would really require a woman of ingenuity, possessing also a distinct gift for the inartistic, to buy just at this juncture a truly ugly gown. All the important fabrics from wools to lawns are in active competition for purchasers, and not one piece yet seen but suggests blouses, skirts, or complete suits of unusual charm. There has begun already a well-defined fashion in crisp silks. This does not interfere with the demand for foulards, but merely augments the growth of silky manufactures. Very light taffetas, thin grosgrains and what is called ribbon silk are among the enticing novelties. The majority of these rustling fabrics are finely figured in pin stripes, tiny dots or rings, and at least three well-contrasted colors are reflected from their sheeny surfaces. Numbers of the pretty strangers come with ribbon borders that suggest their own decoration, and while in some cases these light silks are not so expensive as foulards, they are just as full dress and durable as the softer weave.

As to the foulards themselves, those in pompadour colors and pompadour figures are in the most active demand. This term pompadour implies a silk of some rich Sevres shade, ultramarine blue, poinsetta red, Swiss green, etc., broken at intervals in circles or ovals to display a wreath or bouquet of flowers in pure pompadour combination. Sometimes the floral effect takes the shape of a double line of descending garlands, in close woven tiny pink buds during the past winter. They promise to become universally popular this spring. The pretty ready made silk waists that are on sale at the shops are, with few exceptions, only elbow long, and the sleeve ends in a full bag at this joint or fits smoothly down the arm and ends at the elbow in a deep lace frill. Dozens upon dozens of charming wash silk and embroidered muslin waists are now on sale, and these, though given the studied shirt waist finish, tucks, collar, etc., end their sleeve just below the curve of one's cruzybone. Even the gingham and percale and chambray shirts are leaning toward the elbow length, for you can buy them in what are called hot weather shapes.

Last year the millionaires and the mill hands "took to" the lisle gloves, so to speak, just as this winter we have all thankfully worn white wash wool ones, and next summer, say these cotton and silk glove manufacturers, a trade is expected that will fully warrant the packing away of the kid glove stock until autumn.

THE BUSINESS SUIT MIXTURE.

Where will the whims of sovereign American femininity turn next At this moment the truly fashionable woman buys or orders the material for her smart morning suit from her husband's or her brother's tailor. The fabrics woven for men have been suddenly pronounced of greater artistic and intrinsic value than those offered to women, and the ladies' tailors who have ordered bolts of spring materials are uselessly tearing their already thin, gray hair and protesting in loud but futile terms. If you see a truly captivating black cloth suit on the street just now you may shrewdly guess that it is absolutely off the same piece from which the wearer's husband's new evening suit was cut. An enchanting gray short skirt costume is sure to match some downtown business suit, and there really is nothing that the fashionable woman likes better than to boast that her new shopping and traveling dress is made of a business suit mixture and a striped trouser goods.

Until deep into the spring and until hot weather renders the habit impossible, we shall wear a great deal of flannel in shirt waists and in other garments. It is irresistible to touch and exclaim over the charming heaps of soft stuff at the flannel counter, from the imported wash flannel to the very exquisitely embroidered robes that are folded in boxes and suggested for negligees. The finest and lightest French flannel is used for some of these and the most costly hand work is lavished on their decoration; their cost is naturally in proportion with their high order of artistic merit.

Hardly less attractive are the domestic and machine embroidered robes that can be had at one-third the price of the imported article and which make up delightfully as lounging gowns. To wear with tailor-made skirts and coats, the shirt makers have brought out handsome white flannel blouses, enriched with white silk embroidery caughe here and there with shepherdess hats or baskets filled with variegated poseys.

The proper makeup for these demands ribbon worked up, with frilled imitation antique Valenciennes in big, gay rosettes with dangling streamers. Ribbons continue to usurp an ever-increasing importance in dress decoration. Many of the smart light wool and veiling gowns are garnished wholly with beautiful embroidered or less expensive silk damasked ribbons.

A very clear impression of one of the important missions of ribbons is gained from a model of a mignonette green etamine. The skirt of this suit is dropped upon a torquoise blue underslip and the annexation flounce is trimmed with five bands of ribbon. Three of the ribbon lines are green, two are turquoise blue, and they are all brilliantly figured in white, green, black and a warm du Barry rose. The same ribbon effect forms the yoke for the waist, the color on the sleeves and outlines the bottom of the waist.

Among the most interesting ribbon novelties are those of black and white ribbon, on which minute rosebuds or forget-me-not blossoms are stamped. Ribbons with lace edges are to be recommended for use with muslins, and nearly all the hat ribbons show their bow ends deeply fringed.

Elbow sleeves have been no uncommon feature of all but street gowns

Married Women

Every woman covets a shapely, pretty figure, and many of them deplore the loss of their girlish forms after marriage. The bearing of children is often destructive to the mother's shapeliness. All of this can be avoided, however, by the use of Mother's Friend before baby comes, as this great liniment always prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend overcomes all the danger of child-birth, and carries the expectant mother safely through this critical period without pain. down the bosom, in heart shaped yoke effect or in three broad bands. For the warmer season very thin white flannel, picked out in pink, blue or black silk dots, and worn with dotted stocks and ties of the same, will be considered the top of the mode.

A Paris letter tells of some of the exquisite lace frocks, the latest triumphs of the modistes' art, worn by Parisian actresses. In the new play at the vaudeville theater Mlle. Marcelle Lender—one of the most beautiful women on the Paris stage—wore a lace gown, which was remarkable for the intricacy of its confection. There were no less than three different kinds of lace used on this gown. The dress material was Venetian point, the flounces, which formed more than half of the skirt, were of Mechlin point, and the incrustations on the corsage, which formed the entire yoke and more than half the sleeves, were of black Chantilly.

The three laces were most extraordinarily interwoven, and it would require a minute inspection of the gown to describe exactly how they were incrusted and appliqued one into the other. As far as one could judge, the tablier and upper part of the skirt were of the thicker Venetian point, while the three high Mechlin flounces which reached nearly up to the waist behind were separated by flat bands of the same Venetian lace. The high yoke of Chantilly was outlined by a wide band of Venetian lace, which merged into bretelles on the front of the corsage, while the wide sleeves, which narrowed at the shoulder, were formed of bands of Venetian point alternating with large motifs of the Chantilly. Round the waist was a sash formed of two widths of ribbon velvet—one black and the other white—which fell into long streamers down the train of the gown, being knotted together at various intervals. In the front of the corsage was a small chemisette of cerise chiffon.

At the Renaissance theater the beautiful Mlle. Megard triumphs in two or three most simple gowns. One is of accordion plaited white lisse, the skirt being free from all adornment and the corsage having for sole trimming an enormous cape collar of supple Venetian point lace falling into shawl points behind the front, and revealing the plaited corsage in the front where the points fall aside. There is a high band of lace at the waist forming a sash, and the cuffs, which confine the full sleeves at the wrist, are of the same lace. The effect is adorably simple and dainty.

At the Palais Royal there is no such simplicity, for each succeeding gown seems to wish to outrival the preceding one. Mlle. Lavergne wears, perhaps, the most complicated of all. It is formed of medallions of minutely plaited mousseline de soie in a faint pink shade alternating in a most intricate design with medallions of roses in yolowed Valenciennes, connected together by cordons of narrow Valenciennes in sertions. Here and there are small knots of black velvet ribbon appearing on the waist and on the corsage.

PEAU DE CYGNE WAIST.

DECISION

On Illinois Anti-Trust Laws Not Very Significant.

Springfield, Ill., March 12.—According to the opinion of Attorney General Hamlin and other officials, the decision handed down by the United States supreme court declaring the anti-trust law of this state unconstitutional is not nearly so significant as some persons believe. The law passed upon by that tribunal is not, as commonly supposed, the only one providing for an annual report by the corporations of the state to the secretary of state, with an accompanying affidavit to the effect that the corporation has not entered into any sort of a trust. The law passed upon is one making the act of entering into any such combination a misdemeanor and providing a penalty for such action.

GASCOYNE'S CRIME.

Lost His Temper and Crushed Boy's Skull.

Corydon, Iowa, March 12.—George Gascoyne, who killed Toby McCann here last January, has been sentenced to serve eight years because he lost his temper.

Small boys were on a hill coasting, when George Gascoyne, with another boy, drove to the hill in a sleigh. The boys piled on the sleigh and some one of the crowd grabbed Gascoyne's hat and started down the hill with it. Gascoyne jumped out of the sleigh, whip in hand, and began to slash the boys around the legs.

McCann, aged 17, approached the boy with the whip in a threatening manner, when Gascoyne said "I'll fix you," and, turning the whip and using the butt end, crushed his skull, the boy dying in twenty-five minutes.

New York, March 12.—Jose Diaz Alvarez, a young planter, has pleaded guilty of stealing the $300 gold watch of former Governor Hogg of Texas, on Oct. 21, in the Waldorf-Astoria. MISS EVA SMITH,

Secretary of the Philomathion Society of Kansas City.

Miss Eva Smith

YOUNG women generally enter so heartily into every pleasure and duty, it is a great pity their lives are so beset by the pitfalls of sickness and danger. Just as they are entering the state of conscious womanhood they begin to realize the dangers ahead of them. Disordered menstruation threatens the bloom of health in their cheeks, just as they are learning to cherish their beauty as a blessing. Strong healthy girls, who have romped at play with their brothers become sickly helpless women if their menstrual habits are not correctly established at the start. Mothers should watch their daughters as they are entering womanhood and see that they are well equipped for the new life. Girls who enter womanhood with impaired health are doomed to life-long suffering. But every mother can secure good health for her girls by giving them Wine of Cardui. The result is invariably a natural and healthy starting of menstruation, so vital to a young woman's health and happiness. After womanhood has come the danger is not over. A cold may make no end of trouble for the woman at the monthly period. Wine of Cardui is a medicine to use with benefit at any time of life.

Miss Eva Smith is a very popular young lady of Kansas City, Kansas. Her address is No. 603½ North Seventh street. Miss Smith is the secretary of the Philomathion society, a name which means "lovers of learning". Coming from Miss Smith the letter which follows should have great weight with suffering women who are longing for the relief which Wine of Cardui gives.

"Last winter I caught a severe cold to which I paid but little attention until I found that it was going from bad to worse and had settled all over my entire system, causing serious inflammation and bearing down pains. I suffered at the same time with fever and headache and although I used the physician's prescription faithfully I found no relief. I was advised to try four bottles of Wine of Cardui. I did so and my health was restored, and since then I have perfect confidence in the merit of your medicine."

Perhaps you are irregular because you are not doing anything for yourself? If this is so, you could not get better advice than that Miss Smith gives you in her letter. She waited so long and got so bad that inflammation appeared and bearing-down pains made her life miserable. That was because she did not know what to take. Irregular menses affect the entire system by poisoning the blood, weakening the nerves and starting headaches, backaches and general languor. You can tell a woman suffering from menstrual irregularities. She looks pale and sickly and a cold or any little variation in diet or rest goes hard with her. Do not get in such a condition that you have no more interest in life. You can be strong, healthy and attractive. Wine of Cardui is the pure vegetable wine that regulates the menstrual flow, stopping the terrible pains and suffering female weakness causes. It is within your power to secure health and strength today as Miss Smith did if you will only take Wine of Cardui as she did. If you want to be well go to your druggist now and buy a dollar bottle of Wine of Cardui and begin taking it today. You will begin to feel the good effect. Four bottles cured Miss Smith. For advice and literature address, giving symptoms, The Ladies' Advisory Department, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

WINE OF CARDUI Women who have suffered and are now cured know how great a remedy this is.

DOCTOR ARRESTED.

Is Held on Two Penitentiary Charges.

Clinton, Iowa, March 12.—Charles P. Warner, known in the professional world as Dr. Rochelle, is a prisoner at the county jail. He has been here about a year and resided with a woman whom he acknowledged as his wife. A few weeks ago he went to Cedar Rapids. On his return here, yesterday, he was arrested on the charge of seduction on complaint of Mrs. Alice Brown.

Immediately after he was arrested on another warant, charging him with adultery, the complaining witness being Alice Buckles, who comes here from Cedar Rapids. Pending investigation, the hearing has been continued in both cases.

Mrs. Brown says she has meen living with Warner about a year. She says the Buckles woman has been following Warner for years, trying to induce him to live with her. It came out in court that only a marriage contract existed between Warner and the Buckles woman, which was signed at St. Louis seven years ago. Warner and the Buckles woman were the parents of two children, both of whom are dead.

It appears as though each woman was determined to live with Warner and clashes between them were common. However, each became tired of Warner's promises and the arrests resulted.

INDIANS GET GAY.

Storekeeper Driven Off and His Goods Plundered.

Victoria, B. C., March 12.—Up at Fort George, which lies about a hundred miles northeast of Quesnelle, at the confluence of the Fraser river and the Nechaco rivers, the Indians have risen, and E. L. Kepner, the Hudson Bay company's storekeeper, whose life was threatened, has been forced to flee. He has arrived at Quesnelle, leaving the store and its contents in possession of the Indians.

He telegraphed to the office of the Hudson Bay company in Victoria telling of his plight. The Indians have taken the company's store, and whether they wrecked it after plundering it, when the storekeeper was forced to flee to save himself, leaving but a Chinese cook in charge, will not be known until further particulars are received from the far-away fort, whither special constables have been dispatched by the attorney general's department to put down the uprising.

The cause of the trouble is unknown. Kepner reported on his arrival at Quesnelle that the Indians came to the fort and forced their way into the store and one swung an ax at him, while others threatened to shoot him. He had but a Chinese cook in the store with him, so he fled and started for Quesnelle. There the attorney general was communicated with and special constables were also dispatched to the scene.

The Indians at Fort George are known to be a bad lot, who have been giving trouble occasionally, and the storekeeper who has been driven from his post is a well-known servant of the company, a courageous and reliable man, who would only have left his post under desperate circumstances.

The special constables who have been dispatched to the scene are armed with warrants for the arrest of belligerent tribesmen.

VEXED

Because Argentine Vessels Did Not Return His Salute.

New York, March 12.—Much comment is taking place here over an incident in the recent maneuvers off Mar del Plata, says a Buenos Ayres dispatch to the Herald. The cruiser Atlanta saluted President Roca of Argentine, but the Argentine vessels did not return the salute, because, according to international etiquette, the chief executive of the state does not reply directly by salvos, but sends an officer to express his thanks to the commander of the foreign vessel. No officer could approach the United States cruiser, which was continually moving round. The Argentine officials waited a short time to fulfill the duty of returning the courtesy, but the Atlanta, without stopping, sailed northward. It is believed that the commander of the Atlanta was vexed, because the Argentina vessels did not return the salute.

A SLUMP IN WHEAT

Market Depressed Under Fine Weather Conditions In Southwest.

Cash Wheat Advances Half Cent In Duluth Market.

Flax Is Quiet and Steady ---Cash Flax Moves Up.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 13.—The wheat market was weak and lower this morning and there was very little business transacted. The cables were barely firm and the weather was fine, while Northwest receipts showed an increase, the conditions were favorable for the growing winter wheat and it was claimed only one-third of the Kansas wheat has been marketed. The market held fairly well up to 11:30, but after that fell off rapidly.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ¼d higher, Antwerp was unchanged and Paris ¼c lower.

Primary receipts were 447,000 bus, last year 461,000 bus. Shipments 119,000 bus, last year 284,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 504,000 bus. The seaboard reported 25 loads of wheat taken for export.

Corn was weaker in the Chicago market, declining ½@¾c. Oats made an advance of ½c. Primary receipts of corn were 241,000 bus, last year 504,000 bus. Shipments 241,000 bus, last year 332,000 bus. Clearances were 32,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 382 cars, and at Chicago, 40, a total of 422 cars, against 265 last week and 294 last year.

Trading on the Duluth board was fairly active. The opening was ½@¾c off at 75c and the market sold up to 75¾c at 9:37. It continued steady selling at 75¾c at 11:25. From that point it fell to 74¾c at 11:53, rallied to 74¾c at 12:25, sold at 74½c at 12:32 at 74¾c at 1:00 and closed at 74½c, a decline of 5@5½c. Chicago declined ⅝@1c and Minneapolis ⅜@¾c.

There was an advance of ½c in cash wheat today, due to the nearer approach of May and the consequent lessening of the carrying charge. No. 1 northern, sold 1c under May; No. 2 at ⅜@½c under, and No. 3 at ¾c under. Sales were 45,000 bus.

Flax trading was light and all trades were at $1.75½, an advance of ½c. The close was unchanged at $1.75. Cash flax advanced from 2½c under May to 2c under. It closed ½c up. Rye was ½c off.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Favorable Conditions Cause Wheat to Open Lower.

Chicago, March 13.—May wheat opened ¼c to ⅛c lower at 76¼c to 76⅝c on barely firm cables and seasonable weather. The Northwest was getting better receipts, statisticians reported conditions favorable for the growing wheat and a claim was made that only one-third of the Kansas wheat had been marketed. Commission houses had orders for both sides of the market. The early local selling soon eased and a few professional bulls entered the pit. May regained its early loss and sold at 76½c. Later it eased again to 76⅝c. Local receipts were 40 cars, 1 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 382 cars, making a total for the three points of 422 cars, against 265 last week and 294 a year ago.

Heavy selling for the Southwest, especially for St. Louis, set in shortly after wheat begins to show resigns of recuperating. Bears took advantage of the weakness and sold short and May prices slid off to 75½c. The close was weak, May ⅞@1c lower at 75½@75¾c.

Corn felt the bearish influence of wheat early. Cables also were not responsive to yesterday's bullish action. A fair feeding demand was reported west and the interior movement was light. Receipts were still small and not much stuff was offered. Although trade was only local the few bullish influences strengthened prices and May opened ¼c lower at 62¼@⅝c to 62¾c, sold up to 62⅝c, easing later to 62¼c. Receipts were 112 cars.

Corn felt the effect of the slump in wheat and in sympathy declined to a weak close ½@⅝c lower for May at 61¾c.

Oats were nervous at the opening. Seeding was reported going on favorably with prospects of a large acreage. May opened steady, but other options were slightly lower in sympathy with other grains. The demand was small but the tension in the market was such that price advanced with each cash purchase. May started unchanged at 43¾c, sold to 45⅞c and eased again to 45⅝c. Receipts were 88 cars.

Provisions opened with a firm tone on better hog prices at the yards and advanced with the slight show of strength in grains. May started 2½c to 5c up at $15.47½ to $15.50, eased to $15.45 and again advanced to $15.47½. May lard started 2½c higher at $8.45, and May ribs unchanged at $8.42½ and gained 2½c.

Close: Wheat, March, 73⅞c; May, 75¼@75¾c; July, 76c; September, 75½@75¾c. Corn, March, 60½c; May, 61¾c; July, 61½c; September, 59¾c; December, 50c. Oats, March, 44⅝c; May, 45½c; July, 35½@35¾c; September, 30⅝c. Pork, March, $15.25; May, $15.40; July, $15.55. Lard, March, $8.30; May, $8.42½; July, $8.52½@8.55; September, $8.60. Ribs, March, $8.35; May, $8.40@8.42½; July, $8.52½; September, $8.66. Flax, cash Northwestern, $1.72; Southwestern, $1.68; May, $1.73. Rye, March, 56c; May, 56¾c; July, 57c. Barley, cash, 60@65c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Topeka Kan.: State grain inspector Northrup is quoted as follows: "Only one-third of Kansas' last year's crop has been marketed. Of the remainder, I believe that the farmers have fed some to stock and they are holding the balance for better prices. This month will tell the story as to next year's crop prospects. If the new crop prospects are favorable, next month's wheat movement will be large."

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: The market early was steady on strength in corn, but later it turned weak. Fine weather all over the West and Southwest following the recent rains has produced at the moment a most favorable condition, which the price does not seem able to withstand. Of this, the market is being subjected to an increasing selling pressure. There was good export business yesterday, but it seemed to come on retiring orders. Business so far reported today is small. Exports, 38 loads. The Price Current says that wheat is maintaining fairly good promise and moisture is sufficient for the present. While the primary movement is small, feeling is that with favorable crop prospects it will increase.

* * *

The weather map this morning shows clear in Kansas, Texas and in Oklahoma, except .01 inch at Oklahoma City. There are rains shown in Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Iowa and Tennessee. It is partly cloudy in the Northwest, clear in Nebraska. The temperatures are mild.

* * *

A. H. Farnum's Chicago Morning Gossip.—Liverpool, ¼d higher. It is not a very good response to the strength shown here yesterday. The demand for cash wheat in the Northwest is active, the flour market firm. Price Current says wheat "maintaining fairly good promise, with sufficient moisture for present. Our market has withstood heavy selling for three days very well. Don't look for much action today.

Corn speculation here is not very active. Seven fairly large lines of Hay corn were held in strong hands. Any shipping demand that began to reduce the stock of corn here in Chicago will advance the market quickly.

Oats—The contract oats here in public houses are being loaded out and shipped out. People who own them now evidently intend to dispose of them to the consumer. The position does not look very comfortable for a short.

* * *

The Michigan crop report says that wheat is in good condition; better than when the winter began and if there is no change this month there will be a fair chop.

* * *

Cincinnati Price Current.—Conditions thus far are favorable for March to wheat. It is maintaining fairly good promise. There is sufficient moisture and it is seeded favorably. A large acreage is likely. The interior grain movement is light. Corn is in good demand by fodders.

* * *

N. H. Perrin, of Chicago.—There is nothing of interest in the early news. Cables are steady and uninteresting. The weather seems to be all that could be desired; all accounts go to show they have had rains where most needed. No signs of sold wave. On bulges I would sell wheat and corn.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, March 13.—The wheat market during the early part of the session was inclined to rule steady purely in sympathy with the strength in coarse grains, but later in the day the absence of outside support prices gave way and towards the end of the session longs liquidated freely and caused a cent break, the market closing weak at the lowest point of the day. Foreign markets were very discouraging factors. Liverpool closing ¼d lower for the day. Continental markets were lower. Weather and crop prospects abroad were reported to be favorable and in this country were all that could be desired. Cash demand here was rather quiet and the demand in the Northwest was not so urgent. Seaboard, however, reported a fair business done there for export on the break but chiefly in Manitoba wheats. Trade was large all day and while a great deal of long wheat has been sold out we expect to see still further liquidation and lower prices. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 20 cars.

The corn market during the greater part of the day ruled strong on liberal covering by shorts owing to very light country offerings, but later in the day prices eased off in sympathy with the weakness in wheat. Close was quiet but with a fairly firm undertone, ½c lower than last night. Foreign markets were steady. Liverpool closed unchanged for the day. Cash demand was fairly good. There is absolutely no change whatever in the general situation which is as strong as ever, and as soon as wheat strikes a resting place which we think it will within a few days we look for corn to advance materially and we advise our friends to take the opportunity to buy on all weak spots. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 90 cars.

Oats ruled firm all day with a fairly large trade. After advancing early later eased off in sympathy with the weakness in wheat. Close, however, was steady. Country offerings were practically nothing. The cash demand very much better. The general situation is strong and we look for higher prices. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 40 cars.

Provisions opened strong on lighter receipts of hogs and for a time ruled active and higher, but offerings from packers and from several mysterious sources became too much for the market, which was very weak at losses for the day. May pork has been bulled industriously and it has been easy to advance it because holders have large loses and will not sell on advances, but it is significant that anything else can be bought readily in lots to suit. We think we have had advance enough and that the market will decline. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 23,000 hogs.

MIDWAY HORSE MARKET.

Minesota Transfer, St. Paul.—Barrett & Zimmerman report that the auction today was the most successful one of the season. Buyers were plentiful and the bidding was very active. Manitoba dealers were the heaviest buyers, North Dakota was also well represented by dealers from various parts of the state. Local trade showed a great improvement which was much restricted to heavy team horses for city use. Values:

REFLECTS ON CLAYTON.

Mealy's Case Presented to the State Department.

Washington, March 13.—Mr. Thrall, local counsel for Mr. Mealy, the American citizen who is held under an order of court in Mexico for contempt, has submitted to the state department through United States Senator Nelson, a long statement of the case from Mealy's standpoint, which reflects on United States Minister Clayton. It is alleged that the minister has misrepresented the facts in the case to the depuartment and that he is interested in a rival company, which has affected his attitude toward Mealy and his legal fight with the development company, which forms the basis of the present action against him.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Market Was One of Specialties, General List Being Sluggish.

Amalgamated Copper Had a Spurt But Lost Nearly All.

Reactions Near the Close Which Was Dull and Heavy.

New York, March 13.—There were running sales of 9000 shares of Amalgamated Copper in the opening dealings at 63½ to 64¼, compared with 64⅛ last night. Large blocks continued to change hands at prices below 64. Anaconda was affected in sympathy. Otherwise the price changes were mixed. A number of soft coulers and industrials showed sharp fractional gains.

The local traction group took the lead in a spotty upward movement, which developed quite strongly after the opening. Manhattan rose 2¼ to 131½ and Metropolitan, Brooklyn Transit, General Electric, Hocking Valley stocks, National Biscuit preferred, North American, Republic Steel preferred, St. Louis Southwestern preferred, Virginia-Carolina Chemical, the Wheeling & Lake Erie stocks, the Cotton Oil stocks, International Silver and American Snuff gained from 1 to over 2 points. There was some heaviness in recent strong features, Chicago Terminal preferred, St. Joe & Grand Island, Fort Worth & Denver City Stamped, Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred, Wisconsin Central, American Grass Twine and Wheeling & Lake Erie losing ground. Amalgamated Copper received support around 63⅝ and rallied over a point. Many prominent stocks hung below last night's level.

Selling of Sugar lowered it over a point, and there was some further selling of Amalgamated causing other stocks to fall away in sympathy. The tractions, however, held firm and a demand Southern railroad preferred lifted it 1½. Colorado Southern became active at an advance to 28⅝. North American extended its gain to 3¾. International Silver to 3 and St. Louis Southern preferred to 2⅝. Profit-taking caused a reaction of over a point or more in Virginia-Carolina Chemical, Cotton Oil and Wisconsin Central preferred. Tennessee Coal showed some heaviness and Colorado Fuel was a trifle higher.

Bonds were irregular.

The market was one of specialties, the general list remaining dull and sluggish. There were gains of 1 to 1½ in Standard Rope, International Silver preferred, Continental Tobacco preferred, Chicago & Eastern Illinois and Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie preferred. Brooklyn Transit reacted sharply below last night, but rallied to ½ above. Hocking Valley, North American and St. Louis Southwestern preferred reacted 1¼ to 1½. Later Sugar fell weakly to 123⅜ and the market became nearly stagnant. United States Steel was taken hold of and lifted a point and some other high priced specialties improved. Tennessee Coal sold a point above yesterday's close, after selling as much below, and Sugar rallied 2⅛. Manhattan rose above 132. The coulers were firmer and Pennsylvania recovered a part of a point decline. Railroad stocks were sluggish, but the trans-continentals recovered to last night.

Amalgamated Copper was lifted 1¼ over last night and gains of 1 to 1½ were made by Colorado Fuel, American Car, Pressed Steel Car, American Linseed and Great Northern preferred. North American rose an extreme 6¼ by half point changes between transactions. The unchanged dividend on St. Paul was the ostensible cause of some selling. Reactions reached a point in local tractions and Amalgamated Copper. Rubber preferred last 3⅜, Chicago Terminal preferred 2⅜ and Chicago Terminal, St. Joe & Grand Island second preferred and United States Reduction 1 to 1½. The closing was dull and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Signs may be misleading, but as read last night by the brightest speculators on the stock exchange they continue in favor of the bulls. The latest test of the market position, the drop in Amalgamated Copper, is accepted as one of the proofs of its inherent strength, another illustration of the futility of selling short while the bulk of the floating supply of stocks is in the hands of the big financiers and the treasuries of the railroads.

Neither merger suits nor gold exports, it is pointed out, lessen the significance of this technical condition. On what are now regarded as the most important speculative shares in the non-dividend list, namely, the Readings, sentiment is increasing bullish and it is stated tonight that sudden knowledge of the improbability of a strike by the miners led banking interests to start these shares up. It is predicted that Pennsylvania shares will go above 160 when the money outlook clears up. There is no question but that the monetary situation is holding important deals and operations, while bankers declare there will be no squeeze, the wiping out of the surplus reserve makes speculators hesitate. The talk is that the banks will mark up their loans to 5 per cent, with the object of stopping of gold shipments.

Town Topics—The position of the bears is unsatisfactory from every standpoint and their efforts to depress prices will only result in heavy issues. The ship subsidy bill will come up in congress and there is a strong contingent in favor of granting a subsidy to all American built vessels. The sugar question will shortly be decided and the indications favor a material reduction in the tariff duties on sugar from Cuba. The local traction stocks should advance on the plan for the establishment for a loop which will be beneficial in every way. We look for a better market today and for better prices for St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific and Mexican Central. The latter will move up sharply and it is a good purchase. Take on some Denver & Rio Grande preferred and Western Union and you will realize handsome profits. Buy Steel preferred on any decline. Southern Pacific will have a 10-point rise within thirty days and this stock can safely be bought on its merits and the probabilities which go with it. Do not be afraid to buy Reading second preferred, as there is big money in this stock. London for Americans was dull but firm with Baltimore & Ohio the special feature at an advance of a full point.

* * *

S. B. Dickenson to W. H. Laidley & Co.: "Reading com. will sell at 65 with anything like a bull movement," said George Parker, president of the First National bank to a friend last evening. The Morgan following is again active in Southern Railway. The pool in Colorado Southern unloaded a little of their stocks yesterday above 27. Gates and his following were picking up the shares and are going to put the stock higher. Buy Virginia Car Chemical Company, as per by instructions yesterday, the stock is good for 75. People's Gas is a purchase on every setback.

* * *

Dow-Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Secretary Scott authorizes the announcement that the dividend on American Ice pfd has not been passed, as was published in the morning newspapers Wednesday. The meeting to consider the dividend on common stock will be held the latter part of this month and that on preferred, during April. Until then no announcement concerning the dividends will be made.

* * *

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The strength of Manhattan is on the rumor that the dividend will be at the rate of 5 per cent. Waggner says they can't keep Manhattan down; it is worth 150 this minute. The bulls have no Manhattan to sell. They regard it as being worth 200. Everybody has buying orders today and no amount of the stock is in sight.

* * *

Ridgeley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The standard railroad shares refuse absolutely to go down on the bad news. A friend of mine, dining two nights ago at Atchison's mess, tells me that Berwind has never held more Atchison com. than he holds at the present time some of it at above 80. I am of the opinion that the very bearish markets will carry any of the following stocks if bought on recessions, St. Paul, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, People's Gas, Pacific Mail, Pennsylvania, Illinois Central, Atchison, Erie, Baltimore & Ohio and the general list.

* * *

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.—The market is slightly irregular but without material change. Amalgamated still keeps everybody guessing. Steels are strong on a higher. Money is ready at 3½ to 4 per cent. The market is still without selling pressure on the list generally and stocks are on the whole well held. The tendency of crop reports is bullish and in the main earnings of properties extremely favorable. We see nothing to do but to keep long of stocks.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Lawson, Arnold & Co., have issued a market letter in which the offer to pay $55 a share or $8,000,000 for the stock of the Osceola Copper company and $250 a share or $35,000,000 for the stock of the Tamarack Copper company for the purpose of proving their confidence in the value of these securities.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—The coppers are being depressed by the heaviness of Osceola and Tamarack, due to the manipulation of Amalgamated. For a few days to come it is difficult to guess which way the market will eventually go. Action on the Amalgamated dividend has been postponed for a month. Bear traders believe that they will be able to hold the market down until after the annual meeting of the Tamarack is held. There was good buying of Copper this afternoon, liquidation apparently having had its run. If prices run off a little more a good opportunity to pick up bargains will be here.

RAISED A RUMPUS

Much Dissatisfaction Over Imperial Boycott of Ireland.

Action of the Cabinet Is Unprecedented In England.

It Is Interpreted as a Display of Petty Spite.

London, March 13.—The official announcement yesterday of the abandonment of the proposed visit of King Edward and Queen Alexandra to Ireland, whereby the ministers assume the responsibility for an imperial boycott, is quite unprecedented in form and causes keen dissatisfaction, the general tone of which is distinctly adverse to the action of the cabinet, which is interpreted as displaying petty spite and spleen. The suggestion sought to be conveyed both by the announcement itself and the comment of the ministerial organs that the decision arrived at, was directly due to the outburst of some of

THE DAKOTAS.

Entire Sisseton Family Asphyxiated By Deadly Coal Gas.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sisseton—The entire family of L. P. Scone, a farmer living near Sisseton, is dead or dying as the result of escaping coal gas. The family consists of a wife, three children, one boy and two girls. They were last seen Saturday night. Sunday playmates called, but were unable to gain admission. It was supposed the family was away. Monday night a neighbor called and discovered the entire family in bed unconscious. A doctor was called, but the girls were dead, and, although the son and wife revived, they are not expected to live.

Aberdeen—Henry Elsing, the 10-year-old son of Henry Elsing, of New Hope township, near Aberdeen, was found hanging dead in his father's barn, death having been accidental. The lad had been at play alone in the barn, and was putting up a swing. The position of the body and other circumstances indicate that the boy became tangled in the rope and was unable to extricate himself.

Huron—While working with a kraut cutting machine, operated by water power, Clarence Joy, a lad about 14 years of age, was caught in the shafting and badly injured. His left arm was broken between the shoulder and elbow, and he was otherwise hurt.

News has been received of the death of Mrs. Daley, wife of Rev. Charles M. Daley, late chaplain of the First South Dakota Infantry, and a resident of this city. Mrs. Daley, with her youngest daughter, Dorathea, left last November for Grand Junction, Col., hoping that a change of climate would be helpful to their failing health. Since leaving here both continued to fail gradually. Mr. Daley and daughter will reach here with the remains in a few days.

Pierre—Charles Dietz died at the Benedictine hospital Monday night of liver trouble. He had for twenty years been foreman of the carpenter force of the Dakota division of the Northwestern road and was well known all along the lines of that road. He leaves a wife, who resides in Huron, but was with him at the time of his death.

The State Register, of this city, has been furnished with a copy of an article on the work of the Second Nebraska cavalry, which operated in this section against the Indians in 1863, which may throw some light on the grave recently found hills north of this city, which is marked with a limestone slab bearing the name of Atkins and giving the date of his death in 1863. Henry M. Atkins was regimental quartermaster of the expedition, and the grave may be his. If not, some of that company yet living in the Northwest may be able to indicate whose grave it is.

Aberdeen—Mrs. Laurence Head died Wednesday morning at 9:30, after an illness which had been considered very serious for ten days. She suffered from acute kidney disease. She was a woman of many virtues and won the love and esteem of all who knew her. The remains will be taken to Clarence, Mo., her former home, for burial.

Deadwood—John McLaughlin, 75 years old, was run over by a work train on the Elkhorn railroad at Gayville, receiving injuries from which he died in a few hours. His home was with his daughters at Lead, and he had been at the county poor farm, visiting an acquaintance. While on his way back he was struck by the train, his left leg being cut off and other injuries inflicted.

Terry—Richard Conway, one of the early settlers of the Bald Mountain region, died of consumption. He was a member of the Terry Peak Miners' union and was in the employ of the Golden Reward Mining company for years. The Black Hills has been his home for twenty years.

Yankton—An expert sent by a rich Missouri syndicate is here securing samples of the chalk rock along the bluffs. These samples will be taken to the Missouri state university for analysis for aluminum and if the expectations of the expert are realized a large plant will be put in here at once to convert the clay and caalk into the new white metal. The same company also has in view the erection of a cement mill.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bismarck—Louis Brown was found dead near Baldwin, this county. He left home two weeks ago to go for his mail, and is supposed to have been caught in a severe storm prevailing at that time. He was 28 years of age and unmarried.

Another big deal in Missouri slope lands has been about consummated in the purchase of the Kendrick & Barnes ranch by the Hackney Boynton Land company. The ranch comprises 2000 acres of rich bottom and pasture lands and several hundred head of cattle and horses. The price paid is understood to be about $85,000. This is the second large ranch purchased in this vicinity by the Hackney Boynton people this spring.

Jamestown—An effort is being made to reopen the Presbyterian college here. Rev. Mr. Taylor of the Presbyterian church is taking a great deal of interest in the matter and it is not unlikely his efforts will be crowned with success. It is believed there will be large attendance if the college is reopened.

Mrs. Bertha Buttz, of this city, has received notice that $10,000 has been left her by a relative who died recently.

Grand Forks—Sheriff Collins Tuesday seized a large consignment of silks and other fine dress goods, said to be worth $10,000, which were at the Great Northern depot addressed to "The Outlook" and "The Enterprise," Grand Forks. The seizure was made on a writ of attachment secured by attorneys acting on behalf of the assignee of Launter & Cohen, dry goods merchants of New York, who are said to have failed recently for a large amount.

Lisbon—Rev. Henry B. Ensworth, rector of Holy Trinity Episcopal church, died of pneumonia after a brief illness. He was in his seventy-first year and had been pastor here for two years.

The Catholic church has started a subscription list for a bell to cost about $200.

Fargo—The recent fine weather has started the farmers to active spring work. In the northern part of the county some fields have been harrowed, preparatory to seeding, and the farmers are planning work in all fields where the soil is not all high and light. It will be some time before the land near the Red river will be ready for cultivation.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Arthur Pancott, former financial secretary of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial association, has pleaded guilty at Buffalo to an indictment charging him with grand larceny, in stealing funds of the association. It was alleged he was about $1000 short in his accounts. A bond from a security company covers the loss as far as the association is concerned.

P. S. Adams, cashier of the Commercial bank of Fulton, which failed two months ago after he absconded with part of the bank's funds, has been located in Honolulu, Hawaii. The receiver of the bank announced Wednesday that depositors will be paid 50 cents on the dollar immediately, and that another payment will be forthcoming shortly.

The 5-story building at 23 and 25 Randolph street, Chicago, occupied by Sydney Shepard & Co., dealers in tin plate and metals was destroyed by fire Wednesday evening. The loss will aggregate $80,000.

There is no foundation for the story that Capt. Powell Clayton, United States Ambassador Clayton, and until recently military attache of the embassy, fought while at Mexico City to fight a duel. The tale is branded as absolutely false both in military and club circles. Capt. Clayton was very popular and on the evening of his departure a banquet was given in his honor.

A son of Indian Jim, a full-blooded Sioux living a few miles from Winslow, Ariz., rode into town Wednesday and reported that his father had killed his mother and two little sisters, beating them to death with a club. A posse left for the scene of the crime at once and found the three bodies. Indian Jim had fled to the border country.

The 6-round bout between Austin Rice, of New London, Conn., and Joe Bernstein, of New York, at the Penn Athletic club, at Philadelphia, was very tame and what little honor there was belonged to Bernstein.

Edward Singleton, son of Millionaire John Singleton, one of the owners of Yellow Aster mine at Randsburg, committed suicide at Los Angeles by shooting himself through the head.

Heinrich Herrle, of Bavaria, was arrested at Cincinati Wednesday afternoon by United States Marshal Fagin on a warrant sworn out by the German consul, charging him with obtaining 100,000 marks on a forged check. The allegation is that he raised a 10-mark certified check to 100,000 and drew the money from the Vorschuss bank at Lanstuhl.

DEBENTURES TO BE ISSUED.

Philadelphia, March 13.—At the semi-monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Pennsylvania railroad yesterday, the board authorized the issue of $50,000 worth of convertible ten-year 3 per cent debentures to pay for additional equipment and the construction of the tunnel under the north and east rivers, New York.

PROSECUTION ASKED.

St. Paul, March 13.—Insurance Commissioner Dearth has asked Attorney General Douglas to prosecute Burt Bean, an insurance agent of Albert Lea, for writing "wild cat" insurance in this state. The maximum penalty is $500 and one years' imprisonment. N. D. Davis, of Albert Lea, made the complaint.

INHUMAN FATHER

Who Desired to Sell His Daughter to a Suitor.

Driven From Home Because She Would Not Yield.

Prosperous Baker Offered Parent $500 For Her Hand.

Cincinnati, March 13.—A peculiar case of alleged attempted coercion, inspired by greed for money, has been brought to the attention of Mayor Barth of Elmwood place. The complainant is Josephine Dressler, the pretty 17-year-old daughter of Henry Dressler, who for a couple of weeks past has conducted a saloon at Township avenue and Chestnut street, in that village.

When the girl called on the mayor her mouth was bleeding, the result, she asserted, of having been struck by her father.

To Mayor Barth Miss Dressler stated that she had incured her father's displeasure because she refused to marry according to his dictates and against her own wishes.

For some time a most ardent admirer of Miss Josephine has been Paul Fraenekels, a thrifty young baker, who is employed by Henry Clausing, of Linden and Spring Grove avenue, Elmwood. But it appears that the young lady did not reciprocate Paul's tender passion. In fact, she had no regard for him whatever.

But not discouraged the smitten young baker hit upon a plan to enlist the persuasive powers of the fair Josephine's father. So far did he go in this, so it is asserted, that he offered Dressler pere the sum of $500 if he would bring about his (Fraenckel's) marriage to Josephine.

Dressler seems to have taken kindly to the proposition, according to the statement, not only of the girl, but of Fraenckels, and subsequent events show that he exerted his influence with his daughter in a manner that admitted of no misunderstanding by her of what he desired.

According to the girl, her father frankly told her of Fraenckel's offer, and demanded that she marry the young baker. This she would not hear to. Then, according to the statement of Miss Josephine, she was given the alternative of complying with her father's demand or quitting his house, he declaring that he would not even, in the latter event, give her peace while she was within reach of his hand.

Determined not to sacrifice herself on the altar of her father's greed, the plucky girl chose to go her own way, so, packing her belongings, she left the paternal roof.

At the very outset she found means of supporting herself by obtaining employment in an estimable family on Railroad avenue, Elmwood.

This, it appears, was not to her father's liking, for thither he traced her a couple of nights ago, and on her coming to the door, in response to her mistress' summons, he repeated his demand that she make it possible for him to acquire the coveted $500 by marrying Fraenckels.

This the girl again refused to do. Then, Miss Josephine asserts, after her father had expressed his displeasure most forcibly, he struck her on the mouth.

After Dressler had departed, the girl, on the advice of her employer, who had witnessed the assault, repaired to the office of Mayor Barth, to which official she told of the threats and actions of her father, whom she said she did not want arrested, but desired protection from. Under the circumstances the mayor could do nothing but place the case in the hands of Marshal Sprong, with instructions to see that the young lady was not again molested or abused by her father.

SUMMONS

Served at the Altar But the Minister Proceeded.

New York, March 13.—Franklin Marcellus Olds and Miss Agnese Aprile stood in front of a flower-decked altar, under a bower of palms, in Lyric hall, Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, of the Union Theological seminary, was pronouncing the words to join them in wedlock.

"If any one knows cause why these two should not be united," began the minister, when a young man interrupted him exclaiming:

"I do."

Every person turned to look at the unwelcome guest, who walked forward until he reached the bridegroom's side and said in a clear tone:

"This man was engaged to another young lady and he has failed to keep his promise to marry her. She is now suing him."

Mr. Olds' face flushed crimson, while Miss Aprile looked astounded, and seemed ready to collapse. The intruder was Isaac N. Jacobson, who had been sent from the law office of Howe & Hummel to serve on the bridegroom a summons in a suit for $50,000 damages for breach of promise, brought by Miss Olga Landsdorff, a very pretty girl with aristocratic connections.

While Mr. Olds glanced over the summons Mr. Jacobson walked quietly down the aisle, passed through the door and left the building. The friends who had gathered to witness the ceremony stared about with surprise and seemed unable to realize the situation. The minister remained silent until Mr. Olds stuffed the paper into his pocket and in a low tone told him that he could proceed, as there was no valid objection. Dr. Hall continued the ceremony to the end.

Explanations had to be made hurriedly while congratulations were being extended, and Mr. Olds was in a most uncomfortable position for a time, with the relatives of the bride crowded around him. Harmony was restored, there was a reception, dancing to the music of a Masslanello band in the gay Neapolitan costumes and an excellent wedding supper.

Mr. Olds, who is about 50 years old, is a lawyer and wealthy. He has retired from active practice.

Miss Landsdorff is the niece of the Baronne de Neuville. She claims Mr. Olds had failed to keep his promise to marry her and to make a substantial marriage settlement. He had been a very ardent wooer, and had covered reams of paper with tender effusions.

PROTECTION

From Brazilian Government Is Asked By Property Holders.

New York, March 12.—Strong protests are being made at the German foreign office by the Disconto Gesellschaft bank and other institutions interested in railroad property in the South American republics, says a Berlin dispatch to the Herald.

The Disconto bank is now asking protection against the Brazilian government, which is understood to be on the point of confiscating a railway, which already is in the hands of a receiver favorable to the government. Brazil claims that the German investors did not fulfill the stipulations of the concession, and this is sufficient cause to repeal the franchise.

A naval demonstration and aggressive action is planned as the only way to bring Brazil to terms. According to leading German financiers the situation is most critical.

HEARTBROKEN

Was Eckenrode, Whose Head Was In Danger.

Fredericktown, Ohio, March 13.—A sensational scene was enacted at Joe Carr's jewelry store in this city when J. Eckenrode, on bended knees, passionately begged Mrs. Lillie Ebersole, a wealthy widow, to marry him. The widow promptly jilted him.

'You have broken my heart," said Eckenrode.

"I'll break your head if you don't get out of my store with your nonsense," said Carr.

Eckenrode left weeping piteously.

STEAMER CAPSIZED

The Providence Overturned and Sunk By Sudden Squall.

Sixteen of the Passengers and Crew Were Drowned.

Most of Them Were Alsleep In Their Berths.

Vicksburg, Miss., March 13.—The steamer Providence, plying between this port and Lake Palmyra, was overturned at 2 o'clock yesterday morning by a sudden squall, at Lone Landing, and sixteen of her passengers and crew were drowned. The known dead are:

CAPT. WILLIAM CASSIDY, of Vicksburg, master.
CHARLES ROUP, of Vicksburg, chief engineer.
CLYDE SCOTT, of Vicksburg, cotton seed buyer.
DR. N. A. LANCASTER, a prominent physician and planter, of Palmyra neighborhood.
GEORGE LAMB, cook.
HARRISON GELBER, cabin boy.
BETTIE HUNTER, chambermaid.
JOE NEAL.
MIKE LEWIS.
TOM SCOTT.
WHIT BURNS.
SIX UNKNOWN ROUSTABOUTS.
MINNIE TAYLOR.
JOE CHRISTIAN, passenger.
BEN RICHARDSON, passenger.
All the above named are colored.

Those rescued were:
J. B. Johnson, pilot; Walter Kain, clerk; J. M. Wilkinson, mate; eight negroes.

The survivors reached here yesterday afternoon, coming overland.

The ill-fated boat left here at noon Tuesday on her regular trip, carrying a large miscellaneous cargo of freight and a large number of passengers. At 2 o'clock yesterday morning, just as the steamer was entering Lake Palmyra, a sudden wind and rain storm of cyclonic proportions came out of the west, catching the Providence broadside on. The little vessel was lifted almost entirely out of the water, her upper works blown away, and the hull turned bottom up in forty feet of water. Most of the crew and passengers were asleep at the time, and were drowned like rats in a trap. Only nine of the boat's entire company were saved. The property loss will amount to several thousand dollars.

Messrs. Cassidy, Scott, Roup and Lancaster were all married men, and leave large families. A steamer, carrying caskets and divers, left for the scene immediately, and will attempt to recover all the bodies.

RANGE ROADS.

Governor Van Sant Orders Suit Against Their Alleged Merger.

St. Paul, March 13.—Governor Van Sant has instructed Attorney General Douglas to begin proceedings in the state court against the alleged merger of the iron range railroads.

The bill will be filed very soon, and the United States Steel Corporation, which is reputed to own the stock of the Duluth, Missabe Northern and Duluth & Iron Range roads, will be made a party defendant. The Steel corporation maintains offices at Duluth, and it is thought there will be no difficulty in reaching it through the state courts.

The railroads have not actually consolidated and maintain separate organizations, but are alleged to be under a common control. The same question involved in the state's complaint against the Northern Securities company is at issue in the present action, namely, "Is it a consolidation for one person or corporation to purchase a controlling interest in two parallel and competing roads?" It is hoped that it may be possible in this case to settle the question which the state has so far been unable to get before a court in the Northern Securities case.

It is not stated definitely when the suit will be brought, but Attorney General Douglas is understood to be at work upon the bill of complaint, and as soon as it is completed the action will be commenced.

INDIGNANT.

Women Discuss Their Troubles With Customs Officials.

Chicago, March 13.—One hundred representative Chicago women held an indignation meeting yesterday at Mrs. Potter Palmer's home and protested vigorously against what they characterized as the obnoxious attitude of the New York custom house inspectors in subjecting returning European travelers to ignominious treatment in overhauling their baggage.

The chief request is for the abolishment of a law which allows only $100 worth of new personal effects to enter the United States free of duty.

A set of resolutions directed to Secretary of the Treasury Shaw was adopted in which were embodied several complaints against present conditions.

The ladies resented what they said was the "discourteous attitude of the custom house inspectors which is humiliating in the extreme." They urged the selection of courteous officials, as well as that proper waiting rooms be provided upon the docks for the accommodation of travelers. They declared a change in the present law is necessary which requires the payment of full duty in such articles of wearing apparel as have been taken abroad to be remodeled.

Among those joining in the discussion were: Mesdames Carter H. Harrison, Arthur J. Eddy, Arthur J. Farwell, Charles Deering, Chauncey J. Blair, Emmons Blaine, Theodore Thomas, Marshal Field, Jr., R. R. Cable, C. Counselman, C. M. Henrotin.

GRAY HAIRED

Was the Bride and the Groom a Youth.

Wheeling, W. Va., March 13.—W. Francis McDonald, aged 23, and Mrs. A. Elizabeth Stillwell, aged 40, of Pittsburg, came here and were united in marriage at the parsonage of Rev. Dr. Earl Douglass Holtz. The couple are said to be representatives of Pittsburg's smart set, the groom being a handsome young fellow. The bride looks the 40 years, which age she gives, and is growing quite gray. When they entered the parsonage they forbade all intruders and requested that the blinds be closed and the doors locked, which wish was gratified. Later they left for the East.

BY A BEAR

West Virginia Farmer Was Attacked In His Barn.

Kingwood, W. Va., March 13.—M. F. Pell, a farmer living on Cheat river, about three miles from here, had a desperate encounter with a large black bear in his barn yard. Bruin had come down from the mountains in quest of something to eat and had wandered into the stock yard of Farmer Pell. The latter was husking corn in the barn when the bear poked his head in the door, uttering a menacing growl at the same time. Evidently he was nearly starved, as he advanced toward the farmer, who, grabbing a pitchfork, gave battle. He struck at the animal, catching him in the shoulder with the sharp prongs, and from that on it was a rough and tumble fight, in which both the bear and Pell were badly wounded. Bleeding from many wounds Pell finally escaped to his house, and the bear broke for the woods. He was tracked later by hunters to a cave, where it is supposed he has died from his wounds.

STILL NO AGREEMENT

Compromise on Cuban Reciprocity Expected.

Conference Between Factions In Progress.

Washington, March 14.—Members of the ways and means committee stated with positiveness today that the conference now in progress would result in a compromise agreement on the Cuban reciprocity issue, probably on lines of 20 per cent concession for one or two years.

On the other hand some of the other conferees, representing those opposed to the means and ways, stated that while an amicable adjustment undoubtedly would be reached, there would be no consent to any plan involving a reduction of tariff. Representative Fordney (Mich.), one of the conferees takes this view and has favored the conclusion of a plan by which there shall be a reduction of 20 per cent on United States goods going into Cuba, and in return the payment to Cuba out of the United States treasury of an amount equal to 20 per cent of the duties on Cuban goods coming here. Mr. Fordney holds that this will give the desired relief without involving a reduction of duty. The plan is somewhat similar to the rebate proposition, heretofore presented, except that this payment is to go direct to Cuba instead of the planters.

The conferees continued their discussion at 2 p. m. today.

HAS INCREASED POWERS

Public Examiner May Now Examine Books of Railroad, Telegraph, Telephone, Express and Sleeping Car Companies.

St. Paul, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Van Sant has signed the bill which gives Public Examiner Johnson new powers and increases his work and responsibility.

It gives him precisely the same powers to examine the books of railroad companies, telegraph, telephone, express and sleeping car companies that he has over banks and county officers.

For the first time, the state will be able to verify the statements of gross earnings made by these corporations. Heretofore there has been no option. The state had to take the word of the companies' officers. Under the new law, Mr. Johnson or any of his deputies will have the right to visit the offices of these companies at any time, without notice, and examine their books, accounts, bills or vouchers.

The power is given to issue subpoenas, administer oaths and enforce obedience in the same way as a court of law. It is made a felony to refuse information or obstruct the public examiner in his work, and swearing to a false statement is perjury.

Mr. Johnson will employ a deputy who is skilled in railroad accounting. This deputy will spend the greater part of his time in checking over these books.

It is the first time the state has been given any authority, except by court processs, to look into the records of any of these companies.

CURFEW RINGS EARLY

The Liberal Residents of the City of Colon Are Not Allowed Upon the Streets After Six O'Clock.

Colon, Colombia, March 14.—A decree issued at Cartagena March 6 permits the Liberals resident in that city and its suburbs to walk in the streets only from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily. If seen on the streets after 6 p. m. they are liable to be imprisoned until public order is restored.

The minister of war, Gen. Fernandez, has issued a circular letter to the civil and military chiefs of the departments, in which he declares:

That the recent engagements between the government troops and insurgents were altogether favorable to the government, reminds them of the value of individual good example, and says that morality and discipline in the army are the keynote of victory, while demoralization results in laxity and annihilation.

The minister also notifies the departmental officials that one final effort is necessary in order to end the revolution.

BOERS BREAK THE LINE

Heilbron, Orange River Colony (Tuesday), March 11.—Commandant Mentz, with the Heilbron commando of Boers, broke through the Heilbron-Wolve Hoek blockhouse line at Gottenburg last night. The Boers had been pursued for several days. So far as known only one Boer was killed. The British columns during the course of the pursuit of Commandant Mentz, picked up scattered parties of Boers, aggregating fifty men.

London, March 14.—Field Marshal Lord Wolseley will start for Capetown tomorrow. Although the officials deny that his trip is anything but a private visit, gossip connects it with the military situation. It is pointed out that Lord Wolseley's knowledge of South Africa, gained as a fighter and administrator, might be highly useful to Lord Kitchener, either at the base (Capetown) or at Pretoria.

Lord Wolseley himself says his trip is entirely private.

Col. Frank Rhodes and Arthur Rhodes, brothers of Cecil Rhodes, and Lady Methuen will be passengers on the steamer which will take Lord Wolseley to Capetown.

SENSATION AT EAU CLAIRE

St. Paul, March 14.—An Eau Claire, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: A sensation was caused in the county this morning by the following resolution, offered by Supervisor Jackson, of Clear Creek:

"That it is the opinion of this board that the action taken by some of the residents of the city of Eau Claire in regard to the location of the government building has been detrimental to the general interests not only of Eau Clair city, but to the whole of Eau Claire county, in placing obstructions in the way and deferring the building of said government building which Eau Claire has so long been in need of."

The resolution was laid on the table, only two members voting against the motion to table it.

VICTIM TO FURNISH BAIL

St. Paul, March 14.—A Fergus Falls, Minn., special to the Dispatch says: The preliminary hearing in the case against Johnny Gonan, who is charged with shooting Frank Taylor, occurred in justice court here this morning. Taylor had recovered sufficiently to attend examination, but was reluctant to testify. He said he was very drunk and had only a confused recollection of shooting. Other parties testified to seeing Gonan fire several shots. The boy is blind in one eye and the sight of the other is very defective. He was bound over to the district court in the sum of $400 and Taylor, his victim, is arranging to furnish him with cash bail.

DEAD IN HIS BED

Was Charles Peterson When His Roommate Was Awakened.

Arrived In St. Paul From Duluth on Monday Last.

Supposed to Have Been Working In Lumber Camp.

St. Paul, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Peterson, a stranger, was found dead in bed at his boarding house, 305 Kitson street, this morning. Death was due to heart trouble. Peterson was 35 years old. He came here from Duluth Monday. He had an outfit, indicating that he had been employed in a lumber camp.

Dennis Murphy, a young Irishman, occupied the room with Peterson, and the two slept in the same bed. Murphy awoke at 7 o'clock and found Peterson still breathing, so he says.

Deputy Coroner Haas says, however, rigor mortis was well developed when he viewed the body at 8 o'clock, indicating that Peterson must have been dead several hours. The body was taken to the morgue.

TWO DEAD

As Result of Fire at Village of North Pelham.

New York, March 14.—Fire that destroyed the postoffice building at North Pelham today caused the loss of two lives and the serious injury of a third person. The dead are:

EDWARD YOCUM, 13 years old, a newsboy.

MRS. THOMAS DUANE, wife of a motorman on the Union railway.

Mrs Yocum, the mother of the boy who was killed, jumped from a window and had her back badly wrenched and was otherwise injured.

The building was a 3-story frame structure, the upper floors being occupied as dwellings. The death of Mrs. Duane, who was one of the tenants, was due to sudden exposure to the cold morning air and the excitement attending the fire. She had been suffering from pneumonia and was in a very weak condition.

All the contents of the building were destroyed, including the registered letters in the postoffice and all other mail matter. The total loss is estimated at about $20,000.

NO CHANCES

Taken By Dowling In Filing of Candidate's Affidavit.

St. Paul, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—M. J. Dowling has filed his affidavit as a candidate for congress from the Seventh district. This is the second time the speaker has called on the secretary of state for that purpose. He filed and paid his fee Aug. 23. Later the point was raised that his filing was not valid, as the law did not take effect till Sept. 1. The secretary of state held it was. Yesterday, Mr. Dowling called on Attorney General Douglas for his advice in the matter. Unofficially the attorney general expressed the belief that the filing in August was valid, but thought it would do no harm to file again, to save a possible injunction suit.

The speaker is still first to file; in fact, the first candidate for congress within the state to file his affidavit this year.

NOT WATER ENOUGH

For the Philadelphia to Go to Guayaquil.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, March 14.—The United States cruiser Philadelphia will not come up to the port of Guayaquil. She draws twenty-three and a half feet and though at high water she might get over the bar, there is a chance that she might not celar it. Capt. W. W. Meade, her commander, and the officers of the warship, were the guests on Wednesday of the officials of the Guayaquil & Quito Railroad company at Chimbo, the present headquarters of the company. Today a large number of Americans and some few others will go down to the mouth of the river and visit the Philadelphia. Capt. Meade has during his stay here been the guest of United States Consul General Percy M. DeLeon.

STRONG WIND

All That Is Needed to Clear Straits.

Mackinaw City, Mich., March 14.—The first strong wind will clear the Straits of Mackinaw of ice and open navigation. The ice in the straits shows many open spots and is very soft. There is open water five miles this side of Cheboygan, on Lake Huron and Lake Michigan is open as far as Waugoschance light house. The only thing to stop the immediate opening of navigation will be a sudden turn to extreme cold weather.

IN HONOR OF ALTGELD.

Springfield, Ill., March 14.—The capitol and other state institutions were closed today during the hours of ex-Governor Altgeld's funeral in Chicago.

HON. WILLIAM H. MOODY.

THE NEW SECRETARY OF THE NAVY, WHO SUCCEEDS JOHN D. LONG.

BILLED AS POTATOES

Young Man Came Through From Kansas City to Chicago In a Freight Car and Nearly Lost His Life.

Chicago, March 14.—Billed as a choice sack of potatoes, a yonng man has arrived in Chicago from Kansas City tied up in a sack. For three days and a half he had been confined in the sack and during that time he had traveled close to 700 miles in a freight car. The sack which covered him was enclosed in an open fruit case.

The traveler, who is Martin J. Klansdigger, a machinist of Kansas City, was nearly famished when he was cut from his prison at the Chicago & Northwestern freight house by a friend who had been waiting for a day and a half in the city for him to arrive.

Klansdigger began his journey with only a quart of water and two pounds of crackers in the sack with him, this being a condition of the wager of $300 which caused him to make the perilous trip. When released Klansdigger was nearly blinded by the dust which had crept into the sack and his throat and mouth were so parched that he could hardly speak, his little cask of water having been spilled after he had been on his journey only a day.

For nearly three days he had been without water and he stated when he was able to talk that had it not rained Wednesday he would certainly have died of thirst. During most of the storm the car in which he was packed was sidetracked out in some small country town and the water came through a crack in the roof and fell on the sack. The burlap became quite wet and he was thus enabled to suck from the cloth a few drops which allayed his thirst.

LIMBURGER HAS MICROBES

Chicago, March 14.—Dr. M. K. Allen, health officer of Louisville, Ky., according to a Tribune special, opened war on the sale and manufacture of Limburger cheese in that city. He says persons who sell and make the cheese will be prosecuted and fined to the fullest extent of the law. He says he is satisfied it is unwholesome and that an examination under an ordinary magnifying glass will prove to a bind man that it contains many microbes.

A committee of German citizens called on Dr. Allen to protest against the enforcement of the order, but the health officer told them the rule must be obeyed.

ARE LOOKING FOR SMITH

Beaumont, Tex., March 14.—In connection with the recent murders and mysterious disappearances, the officers are on the lookout for a man named Smith, who is well known in this section, and who disappeared several months ago. Smith was formerly a saloonkeeper at Sabine, and later came to this city when he came into an inheritance of about $10,000. This was about two months ago. The last seen of him he had nearly $10,000 in cash on his person; for this reason, it is expected that something may have happened to him. He had a wife and relatives in Georgia. He was about 55 or 60 years old.

WANT A SLICE FOR CHARITY

San Francisco, March 14.—If any of the athletic clubs in this city secure the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight it will be required to contribute a substantial amount to some charitable institutions or public improvement. The police commission and board of supervisors has reported a resolution to the effect that the permit for the month of May be given to the club that gives the most money to a public charity or to some public improvement in a sum not less than $5000, to be paid before the permit is granted. Supervisor Curtis said the exhibition would draw at least $45,000 in gate receipts and it was only just that the club securing so valuable a privilege should contribute to the public good.

AN UNPRECEDENTED ACTION

Pekin, March 14.—Mrs. Conger, wife of the United States minister here, assisted by the ladies of the American legation, entertained at luncheon today eleven princesses and ladies of the court. This departure from the exclusiveness of the Chinese court is quite unprecedented. The dowager empress sent her greetings and expressed the hope that the kindly relations established would remain unbroken.

FRIGHTFUL JOURNEY

Of a Plumber Through Sewers of New York.

Carried Away By Swiftly Rushing Current.

New York, March 14.—Edward Boyle, a plumber's helper, is the hero of a trip through the sewers of New York, which rivals in interest and danger the wanderings of Victor Hugo's Jean Val Jean through the labyrinth by which the streets of Paris are drained.

For three-quarters of a mile he was swept helpless through the dark by a rush of water running like a mill race. Overhead the rattle and roar of the busy streets went on. At last he was thrown, dazed and bewildered, from the mouth of the sewer into the East river. Men on a scow moored near by hauled him out and brought him to land again.

For a time he could not speak, for the shock of his terrible experience had paralyzed his nerves. Then, while the little crowd that had gathered about him still were asking where he had come from, he found his tongue and asked for a "smoke." Half an hour later he had refused the assistance of the ambulance surgeon who had been summoned, and had started on his way home, seemingly none the worse for his strange adventure.

Boyle is employed by a plumber who has the contract for keeping in order the sewer which runs through East Fifty-third street and empties into the East river. There had been some trouble with the drains at 252 and Boyle was sent with two other men to remove the obstruction. Immediately opposite the house is a manhole of the main sewer, and the men decided to start their examination there. A ladder was lowered into the sewer and Boyle, with a guide rope dangling ready to his hand, went down first. He almost had reached the bottom when a rung broke and he lost his balance. He screamed as he grabbed at the rope, and his companions bent over in time to see him miss it and disappear with a splash.

Boyle said the water was rushing through the sewer at a terrific speed. It was three or four feet deep. He could feel the bottom, but could not keep on his feet. The Fifty-third street sewer runs into the main drain at Second avenue. There the volume of water and filth was greatly increased, and Boyle narrowly escaped drowning. He was hurled about but managed to keep his head above water, and after a few moments more, which, he says, seemed like hours, he saw the light at the end of the drain. He was hurled head foremost into the river and struck out for a scow which lay nearby.

THE BIG STRIKE ENDED

The Labor Troubles at Boston Satisfactorily Solved Through the Efforts of Governor Crane and Others.

Boston, March 14.—Through the united efforts of representatives of the great mercantile bodies of the city, seconded by the chief executives of city and state in conference with the recognized leaders of organized labor, the great strike of freight handlers and kindred trades represented in the allied freight transportation council, was brought to an end last night. Fully 20,000 men who have been idle for four days went to work this morning.

This result was attained at a conference last evening at the office of Governor Crane. The decision was at once reported to the allied freight transportation council at a special meeting last night and unanimously endorsed.

The settlement was the result of an expressed determination of Governor Crane and those representing the merchants of Boston to bring all possible pressure to bear upon the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company to adopt the rules in force upon the Boston & Maine railroad, forbidding freight handlers to unload teams except at their own option and risk.

All of the old men for whom places can be found will be taken back by the railroad companies tomorrow, but owing to the suddenness with which the strike was ended and the large number of men who have been installed it is likely that many of the old employes will tomorrow find on vacancies ready for them. Eventually, it is believed, they will regain their old positions.

Teamsters and longshoremen will find an unprecedented demand for their services and traffic of all descriptions, which has been virtually at a standstill for the past three or four days, will be resumed tomorrow with a rush.

The Brine Transportation company, the loading and unloading of whose non-union teams precipitated the strike on the New York, New Haven & Hartford freight handlers, does not appear as far as that company is concerned, the sentiment against it on the part of the labor unions is as bitter as ever. Under the new arrangement, however, union men will not be required to load or unload that company's teams.

The business section of the city presented a marked contrast this morning to that of the past four days, and there was an air of activity on all sides as if everybody desired to make up for time lost by the strike which ended last night. Teams were hurrying along loaded with goods, express wagons and even cabs were loaded to their capacity in the efforts to relieve the congestion of traffic resulting from nearly a week's accumulation. At the railroad terminals there was considerable confusion but the officials promised to have everything running smoothly by night. At the docks work started in with a rush and longshoremen and teamsters made rapid inroads on the freight which was piled to the roofs of the sheds.

THE CHEF HAD TO ASSIGN

New York, March 14.—Rupert Fritz, a chef who served the luncheon at Shooters island for the 2000 persons who witnessed the launching of Emperor William's yacht Meteor, has assigned. Fritz says he borrowed a large amount of silverware from friends for use at the luncheon. In the rush for souvenirs nearly all of the silverware disappeared before Fritz and his assistants were aware of the raid. Finding it impossible to make good his losses, Fritz decided upon an assignment.

FIRED GUDEN FROM ROOMS

New York, March 14.—Norman S. Dike, who was appointed sheriff of Kings county by Governor Odell when the governor removed Charles Guden, ejected Guden today from the rooms occupied by him in the sheriff's office. Guden made no resistance.

LAUGH AT THE MINNESOTANS

Chicago, March 14.—The news that people claiming to be Minnesota heirs would go after the estate of several million dollars left by the late Leonard Case is laughed at by the recognized legal heirs and beneficiaries in this city says a Cleveland, Ohio, special to the Chronicle. Leonard Case left the bulk of his fortune to Case School of applied sciences.

ANOTHER WOMAN POISONED

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 14.—Sheriff Chapman has received word from Toledo that a young woman named Brown at Miller City, Ohio, died under almost under the same circumstances as Mrs. Klump at Lowell. She was driving in Leipsic, Ohio, when what purported to be a sample of headache powder was thrown in the carriage. She took the powder a few days later and died with all symptoms of strychnine poisoning. The sheriff will send an officer to Savannah, N. Y., to make an investigation of the alleged product of the manufacturing chemist.

FORCING ROADS TO TERMS

St. Paul, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The attorney general's office has drawn up the necessary papers in the suit to be brought against the Great Northern to compel that company to construct a Y which the state railroad commission ordered built at Jasper, Minn. Connection is there made with Cedar Rapids route. The case will be heard on March 17.

Another case soon to be brought is that of the Twentieth avenue depot suit Duluth, aimed to compel the Northern Pacific to reopen that station. It is said the latter involves many nice legal points. Several other suits have been referred to the attorney general for action by the railroad commission.

AT THE HOTELS

"I have lived in the same part of Chicago as the late Governor Altgeld for some years," observed a traveling man from the Windy City at the Spalding last evening. "I know very well men who have been intimately acquainted with him for years. You needn't mention my name, but you can say that a finer man, personally, than Governor Altgeld never lived. He was a much better looking man than his pictures made him appear, and I imagine that a great many people got their unpleasant impressions of him from those newspaper pictures. He was a very bright looking man, and more thoughtful in aspect than his pictures would indicate. The governor had the reputation of being a good neighbor and of ranking very high in every personal requisite."

"I don't quite understand the psychology of sleep as applied to the hotel guests," remarked the philosophical night clerk, "but there's one thing I know, and it makes me believe that spring has come in earnest. A couple of weeks ago, it required half an hour's ringing and half an hour's subsequent battering on the door of the man that left a call for 6 o'clock. He was dead to the world as far as bells were concerned. Now, there is an immediate response to the first bell rung at 6 o'clock and it is hardly necessary now to ring a bell twice in order to get a response from the sleeper. You may insist on seeing robins and on knowing that the ice is out of the lake, but I tell you that when a man stopping at a hotel will get up at the first call for 6 o'clock it's proof to my mind that summer is very close at hand."

CAMPAIGN STARTED

Legislative Candidates Beginning to Make Themselves Manifest.

T. M. Pugh Announces His Desire to Be Senator.

Senator Hawkins Will Again Run---Laybourn Already Announced.

The campaign of 1902 is on early. The primary elections do not take place until Sept. 16, but already there are two senatorial candidates in the field, both Republicans. Yesterday afternoon T. M. Pugh, who has been a representative from the Fiftieth district for two terms, filed his certificate with the county auditor, and he is launched as a senatorial candidate, to stay in the fight to the finish. The place he seeks is that now filled by Senator Daugherty, who has moved into the Fifty-first district since his election, leaving the field clear in the Fiftieth district. Mr. Pugh's friends point with pride to his record in the house, and say he will make a strong senatorial candidate.

It is said that Mr. Pugh has intended for the past three years to be a candidate for senator the coming fall. His friends claimed four years ago that he had considerable strength for the nomination for senator, but that he decided to make the run for representative in order to make better feeling in his party, and to smooth the way for amicable action in the Republican convention. It is said that his action in filing notice of his intention to be a candidate for senator so soon is with the idea of giving early notice to all others who might be ambitious for the honors in the Fiftieth district that he would be in the field.

George R. Laybourn was in the field much earlier as a senatorial candidate from the Fifty-first district, now represented by Senator C. O. Baldwin, his certificate having been filed with the state auditor in January. His certificate was filed with the state auditor because there are two counties in his district outside of St. Louis county. The Fiftieth district is all in St. Louis county, so Mr. Pugh's certificate was filed with the county auditor.

These are the only formally announced candidates. It is stated that Senator F. B. Hawkins, of the Forty-ninth district, will be a candidate to succeed himself, and in that event he will probably receive the nomination without much opposition. Senator Daugherty has not announced his intentions, though it seems to be considered that he will be a candidate. Senator Baldwin has stated that he will not be a candidate, but a determined effort will be made to have him reconsider this determination. His record in the senate makes him much stronger even than he was four years ago, when he won out in a strongly Republican district.

The Republican state convention will be held in June, and the campaign will open very early. Already the governorship is receiving much consideration. The opponents of Governor Van Sant have been making most of the noise in St. Louis county, but he has many strong friends, and a strong effort will be made to capture the St. Louis county delegation in his behalf.

J. Adam Bede started his campaign for congress from the new Eighth district just as soon as he made up his mind to run, and he has been working ever since. He is a pronounced Van Sant man, and he is not only putting in a few licks for himself every day, but he is saying a good word for the governor.

AMUSEMENTS.

Frederick Warde opened his Duluth engagement last evening at the Lyceum with a play by D'Ennery, entitled "The Mountebank." The audience was not a large one, considerably smaller in fact than Mr. Warde was expected to draw.

The play is a romantic drama, not of the swash buckler order that is so much the rage, but more powerful and pathetic and dealing less in heroics. William Belphegger is a strolling mountebank, with a wife and two children dependent for support on the few francs he can pick up by giving street exhibitions, a very precarious source of revenue. In spite of their sad condition the husband and wife love each other deeply, their devotion being evident in all they do. It develops that the wife was the daughter of a descendant of a noble family, and when found, her restoration to her family is made conditional on her leaving her husband. She refuses indignantly, alluring as is the prospect of deliverance from a life that is odious to her. Finally, to save the life of a delicate child she consents and leaves her husband and son. The mountebank wanders from place to place searching for his wife, constantly persecuted by agents of the wife's family, who wish to force him to leave the country. He finally forces from the villain knowledge of her whereabouts, and there is an intense scene when ... impersonates another and confronts his wife in her new home. Of course all ends happily, but the emotions are deeply stirred before the final adjustment of the difficulties.

The role of Belphegger is one that calls for much versatility, and Mr. Warde plays it finely. The tenderness of the mountebank husband and father is made beautiful by his art, the grief and anguish of the deserted man are touching, and the power of the injured man, who meets the enemy who has wrought his undoing, is terrible to contemplate. In the final act of the play, when he stands in the presence of his wife, his true self, known only to her, there is a tremendous play of emotions. Throughout Mr. Warde is the consummate artist, playing with rare feeling, without rant and with admirable repression.

The support is excellent. One of the most striking successes is the Duke de Montdazon of Barry Johnstone, one of the best pieces of work in which this fine actor has been seen here. Charles Heermann does not find sufficient opportunity in the part of Lavercnnes, the villain, but plays it well. Miss Antoinette Ashton plays the wife with much delicacy and feeling, and sustains the emotional scenes with much ability. Miss Aileen Bertelle scored a distinct success in the part of Henry, son of the mountebank.

Tonight Mr. Ward will present "Julius Caesar," appearing as Marc Antony, with Mr. Hermann as Brutus and Mr. Johnstone as Cassius.

SOUSA'S BAND.

Monday evening Sousa's band will be heard at the Lyceum. Sousa is presenting several fine soloists this winter. Miss Maud Reese-Davies, the soprano, had her musical training under Trabodello in Paris and Shakespeare in London. Her voice is light but sweet and particularly pleasing in quality. Miss Dorothy Hoyle, the violiniste, returns to America after two years of her study under Sauret in London. Arthur Pryor, the "Paganini of the slide trombone," is perhaps the most popular band instrumentalist in the world, and he has composed several new solos for the present concert tour. Walter B. Rogers, the solo cornet, was formerly band master of the crack Seventh regiment of New York, and has no superior.

VALUE OF TESTIMONY

Greater Than Assertion.

There is none of us so hardened but that when we have been able to aid our fellow-creatures by conferring a benefit or bringing a little comfort into their lives we like to have appreciation shown. This generally affords more pleasure than the performance of the act itself, and in this connection the following letter from a Paris, Texas, lady is of more than usual interest: "Dear Friends: I address you as such, for you have been such to me. I suffered for three years off and on with piles. I was treated at the hospital, and the new and elegant hospital, of Memphis; they only gave me temporary relief. I came West, thinking the change of air and water would benefit me; five months ago the bleeding piles came back on me, and bled so much that I thought I would die. I have had four of the finest doctors in this section of Texas; all they did was to finally nearly let me go to my grave; all they wanted was a big sum of money from me and to operate on me. I said no, no surgeon's knife would enter me; if it was my time to die God knew it, and when I died I would die all together. I began hearing about your medicine. I had no faith in you, but I sent and got a box of your Pyramid Pile Cure; in two days the blood flow had slackened to one-half the amount, and in one week I felt so much better I walked four blocks and did a little housework. I was not bleeding then; in three weeks I was well. God bless you for putting such a wonderful medicine within the reach of suffering men and women. I shall never cease to recommend your medicine or be without it; also I used your Pyramid Pills. Sallie A. Herndon." Testimony like this should be more convincing than all claims and assertions, and should leave no doubt in the mind of the reader as to the merit of the remedy. Pyramid Pile Cure is sold by druggists for fifty cents a package, or will be mailed by the makers to any address upon receipt of price. Write Pyramid Drug company, Marshall, Mich., for their book on cause and cure of piles.

New Ribbons.

Have you informed yourself on the new beauties of the spring ribbons? New colors—delicate gradations of shade that make this year's pink a different hue from last year's, and so on. And then the new patterns! In most instances they are worked out in self colors—that is, the ribbons and designs run in mono-color effects. Exceptions, to be sure, notably Persians and novelties.

Our ribbons are all silk and full weight. Some stores have ribbons that comply with the letter, but evade the spirit of the statement, by being all-silk but light weight. Like buying thirteen ounces for a pound. These are new.

Neckwear Width—4 to 6 inches

Wide, double-faced satin ribbon, in pink, blue, red, white and black, with embroidered multicolo dot—exclusively here 95c a yard.

WIDE SATIN TAFFETA Ribbon, with colored dots in red, green, pink, blue, black and white.

POLKA DOT TAFFETA, in black, light blue, pink and navy.

CREPE DE CHINE RIBBONS, 5 inches wide, for ties, in red, pink, blue, white, cream, lavendar and black.

SATIN TAFFETA RIBBONS, in the new spring shades—green, blue, pink, lavendar, red, tan, cream, black.

NEW OTTOMAN RIBBON, for ties, in red, light blue, pink, cream, white, green and black, and white—45c per yard.

BLACK AND WHITE Fancy Stripe Ribbons, for neckwear, 6 inches wide—50c per yard.

ROMAN STRIPE RIBBONS, in newest shades, for collars and belts; extra heavy—95c per yard.

New Corsets.

Spring Models.

The corset—its fit, curves and individual style—decides much of the effect of the spring costume. New models for spring are ready. Straight front remains the leading feature; the other details are properly in accord with the newest ideas of the best makers, in developing the possibilities of the lines of the straight front.

Girdles are inclined to be very popular; we have them in all the different makes—of tape or satin ribbon—in:

"American Lady" straight-front corset, of India batiste; low back and moderately short over hips; white, only $1.00.

"American Lady" straight-front corset, made of linen batiste, trimmed with Valenciennes lace and ribbon. Gives perfect grace and symmetry to the form and free, easy movement of the body—$1, $1.25, $1.50 and $2.

The American Lady straight-front through the long, straight corset skirt, corset for full figure; low in bust, long over the hip. The abdomen is reduced and the flesh thrown to the hips, being securely confined by the long steels passing over the hips of the corset. Made of imported coutil, drab only—at $2.25.

R. & G. CORSETS, in all the new models; also a very handsome tape corset, daintily trimmed with lace and ribbon—at $2.

NEW W. B. CORSETS, in batistes and coutils, white, drab and black—$1, $1.50, $2.

As Shown In Millinery.

Even the spring hats have caught the charm of the DuBarry period. Not the shapes, but the soft tones and delicate color effects.

The styles are those that everyone is wearing today, worked out in the colors of a century and a half ago; dead blues and greens and reds, pale tans, beautiful dull violet and ashes of roses. Berries and wreaths of flowers, laces and chiffons and figured panne velvets are used on them for trimming.

Informal opening days gave you as early a chance to see them as your Eastern cousin, and you can buy now with perfect confidence—for what we are showing now some of the better millinery stores will show later.

Very pretty hats at $5, $6 and $7. Full of snap and style. Beautiful creations at $8, $10 and $12—and up as high as you care to pay.

REBUILD THE LINES

East and West Fourth and Woodland Lines to Be Renewed.

President Goodrich Says It Will Be Done This Year.

The West Third Extension Will Also Be Built.

President C. G. Goodrich of the Duluth-Superior Traction company came up from Minneapolis this morning and, after a trip of inspection over the company's lines here and in West Superior, he returned to Minneapolis this afternoon. When seen as he was going to the train this afternoon, President Goodrich said:

"The policy of the traction company in improving its street railway service at the head of the lakes will be carried out as actively the coming season as last, in fact, work on the improvements will begin just as soon as practicable, which will doubtless be within a few weeks. The improvements contemplated this year are about as large as those accomplished last year, and will include the extension of the West Third line to West Duluth, the rebuilding of the East and West Fourth street and the Woodland lines."

When asked the direct question whether the company contemplated adding any more double truck cars to its service at the head of the lakes this year, President Goodrich answered:

"I won't answer that."

When asked whether the company would begin the West Third extension to West Duluth on or before Nov. 1, the date set by the court, Mr. Goodrich said that he did not care to discuss that point, that the company has decided to extend the line and it will be done this year.

The announcement, coming officially as it does that the West Duluthians and residents of Oneota will get the street railway service that they have been longing for so long will be hailed with much pleasure.

No less will be the pleasure of the patrons of the street cars on the East and West Fourth street and the Woodland lines, for the tracks on these lines have been in bad condition for a long time past. When the street railway company purchased the Woodland line it was given out that it would improve the tracks, and now President Goodrich confirms this by saying that the line will be rebuilt. All the new trackage will be constructed of heavier rails than those now in use.

The improvements planned by the traction company include not only those to be made in this city, but a new track is to be laid between West Superior and South Superior, across the bay. The new line between West Superior and Old Superior was completed last winter and is giving excellent service.

As to the date that interstate cars will begin to run over the Garfield avenue viaduct, President Goodrich said that the local officials of the company are in a position to give more definite information than he is. It is understood that the company expects to have its rails down and ready for service about the first week in April.

Suit to Clear Title.

A suit to clear title to a half interest in 4000 acres of land said to be worth $150,000, has been begun in district court by George F. Perkins against Clara J. Gibbs, Alonzo J. Whiteman and others. The property is located in the following sections: 12 and 14, 55-15; 3, 5 and 15, 52-15; 15, 21, 23, 28, 29, 30 and 31, 53-16; 32, 53-16; 4, 6, 7, 8 and 9, 54-14; 31, 59-15; 2, 10, 11, 14, 15, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26 and 35, 59-16. Austin N. McGindley is the attorney, with S. D. Allen of counsel.

TRICKS OF SHOE STORE.

"That was an easy P. M.," said the shoe clerk, elation in voice and manner.

Meanwhile the customer, a woman, was tripping toward the door, her package in her hand. She stopped short just before she reached the door and pressed a gloved finger against one end of the package. Seeing her hesitation the clerk advanced and asked what she had forgotten, says the New York Sun.

Nothing at all. Only she would really like to know why one end was missing from that shoe box. Once before she had purchased shoes, and the same thing had happened. Couldn't she have a box with two ends to it?

Assuredly she could. The clerk made the change with lightning-like rapidity. Then he walked back to a Sun reporter, threw the end of a shoe box from his pocket, wrote his name upon the reverse side and sent it to the cashier.

"That's my P. M.," explained the clerk in answer to a question. "Don't know what a P. M. is? Well, in the shoe business it stands for everything that the customer doesn't want to buy and the prize mark. Now, I sold that last customer a P. M. I get the prize. She'll feel like the mark if she finds I have palmed off an ancient style of toe on her.

"The two letters are abbreviations for proprietor is anxious to sell.

"As it is, I'm 50 cents better off. She's got a good pair of shoes, and perhaps she will never find out about their being a little off on the style.

"In the shoe business the greatest loss comes from changing styles and broken sizes. The foreman finds that certain shoes are slow in selling. Perhaps there are only a few pairs left in a line. Others are shady on style. He finds more that are nearly out of season. All these he adds to the P. M. stock. Sell a pair and a half dollar is added to your pay at the end of the week.

"In order to sell P. M.'s you must combine observation with memory. Generally you can handle most people in this way. Size up the foot of the customer and then make a mental recount of the P. M. stock. Pay no attention whatever to what the customer says he wears because in nine cases out of ten he doesn't know. Find out what particular shoe the customer has a fancy for and then fit it small.

"By what I mean keep trying on shoes entirely too little until the foot gets tired of the squeezing process. By the expression of the countenance of your victim you can always tell when to let up. When that time comes, do your fine work.

"Simply turn to the shelves after remarking that there is just one shoe in all the wide world for that foot. Get the style you want to sell in the correct size, slip it on the foot as quickly as you can and nine times out of ten the customer will buy it.

"The foot has been thoroughly wearied by the tight shoes. That grateful feeling that comes from the correct fit makes the sale for you. Besides, there is the dramatic element.

"By one final diplomatic stroke you get the customer to wear the shoes out of the store. Then they cannot be changed and your P. M. is safe."

NEW GRAFT.

Big Mitt Men Try to Rob Woodsmen on Trains.

The big mitt men have abandoned their moth-eaten stunts and are now getting the money of woodsmen on trains.

Yesterday, just as an Eastern Minnesota passenger train was pulling out of the Union depot, one of the gang ran through a car of woodsmen asking for some person to give him a $20 bill or gold piece for four $5 bills.

He gave the impression that he needed the $20 very badly. One woodsman oered to accommodate, and stripped a $20 bill off a roll. The grafter reached for it, at the same time thanking the man and offering his handful of "fives."

Just as the exchange was made the woodsman noticed that he was parting with good money for a very poor imitation of bad money, and he grabbed the $20 again.

The grafter hustled out of the car, leaving his four doubly counterfeit bills in the hands of the woodsman.

It is reported that grafters worked two woodsmen on an Omaha train for $75 several days ago. The grafter asked the men if they had any large bills they would be willing to exchange for bills of a smaller denomination.

In making the exchange the big mitt man short-changed one of them $50 and the other $25. The deal was made while the train was crossing over to West Superior, and the two woodsmen discovered their loss just after the grafter had left the train in that city. They got off at Superior and tried to locate him, but failed.

The trainmen do what they can to watch the passengers and see that the grafting fraternity does not get in its work, but the crew is kept very busy just as the trains pull out of Duluth and the grafters do their work very quickly.

A singular robbery occurred last night. A woodsman named Joseph Tinner met a Frenchman on the Bowery and renewed an old acquaintance. The old friend insisted in Tinner's occupying his lodgings on Lake avenue last night. Before going to the lodging house the Frenchman borrowed $5 from the wife of a saloonkeeper.

When Tinner went to bed he had $80 in gold in his inside pocket, but not a dollar of currency.

When he woke up this morning he had $5 in currency in his pocket, but not a dollar in gold.

His room mate had disappeared and despite a thorough day's search no trace of him has been found.

The only robbery said to have taken place last night was the fleecing of Otto Hanson as he slept in the rear of a Bowery lodging house. He claims to have lost $40.

IS HEATED.

Innovation In Northern Pacific New Round House.

Heat was turned on yesterday in the new round house that the Northern Pacific is building on Rice's Point. The road has made an innovation in heating a round house in the new house it is building here. The temperature will be regulated by means of a hot air plant.

Twelve stalls of the new round house were completed this winter before cold weather compelled the suspension of building operations. It is expected that the work will be resumed any day now. The round house when completed is to have thirty-six stalls. Several tracks crossing Rice's Point will have to be removed in order to give sufficient space to complete the building.

It is said in this connection that the whole system of terminals on Rice's Point will be rebuilt. When this work is done there will have been an almost complete change in the former situation there. There is to be a car shop, a machine shop, a sand house, a great water tank, a plant where coal for the locomotives will be received from the vessels on one side and deposited from the other into the engine tenders, a dock for the general purposes of the terminals, and the most completely equipped terminal yard in every way that is to be found in the country.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC STRIKE.

St. Paul, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The striking trainmen on the Rocky Mountain division of the Northern Pacific still refuse to return to work unless the company takes them all back. The company declines to alter its decision made two days ago, to the effect that the men would be taken back whenever vacancy occurred and not before. An official of the company said today that with twelve exceptions all the places had been filled. All trains are now running on the Rocky Mountain division.

NOT EASY PROBLEM

Mayor Hugo Says Wire Commission Will Have Much to Do.

The Members Must Be Selected With Great Care.

Will Take Considerable Time to Arrange the Details.

Mayor Hugo says the electric commission to be appointed to solve the overhead wire problem should be chosen with great care.

He finds that few of the general run of citizens grasp the full meaning of suggestions made in his annual message regarding this commission.

The mayor says that he should think a commission of not less than three or more than five would be advisable, suggesting possibly the city attorney, city engineer and some other city officer, and empowering these to select an expert electrical engineer.

Th commission will probably be organized without delay, and while the work before it appears simple enough, the problem is very difficult. It is proposed to correspond with all other cities in the country that have tackled the overhead wire proposition, to discover if possible the best mode of legal procedure; the more desirable conduit system, and safest insulation for wires.

Several of the aldermen have expressed the opinion that a commission of five would be a good thing to take up this problem, suggesting the mayor, the city attorney, the city engineer, the chief of the fire department and an electrical expert.

When asked if the council should not be represented, one of the aldermen said he did not think it would be wise to refer the matter to an ordinary council committee, for the reason that the aldermen were constantly changing, and it might require more than a year to give the problem full consideration. Another reason advanced was that the commission should be of men that give their entire time to city affairs, for the reason that so much time would be required.

The fire and police departments are much interested in the movement overhead wires through the center of the city. During the last storm the fire and police alarm systems were paralyzed for hours on account of other wires falling across them.

Mayor Hugo, in discussing the situation, says: "Something will have to be done in regard to this danger immediately. The fact that we have not had a much more serious time with overhead wires is due to our good luck rather than to any good management on our part."

INTENSE SUFFERING

From Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles.

Instantly Relieved and Permanently Cured by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

A New Discovery, But Not a Patent Medicine.

Dr. Redwell relates an interesting account of what he relates as a remarkable case of acute stomach trouble and chronic dyspepsia by the use of the new discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

He says: "The patient was a man who had suffered, to my knowledge, for years with dyspepsia. Every thing he ate seemed to sour and create gases in the stomach. He had pains like rheumatism in the back, shoulder blades and limbs, fullness and distress after eating, poor appetite and loss of flesh; the heart became affected, causing palpitation and sleeplessness at night.

"I gave him powerful nerve tonics and blood remedies, but to no purpose. As an experiment I finally bought a 50-cent package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at a drug store and gave them to him. Almost immediate relief was given, and after he had used four boxes he was to all appearances fully cured.

"There was no more acidity or sour, watery risings, no bloating after meals, the appetite was vigorous and he has gained between ten and twelve pounds in weight of solid, healthy flesh.

"Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are advertised and sold in drug stores, yet I consider them a most valuable addition to any physician's line of remedies, as they are perfectly harmless and can be given to children or invalids or in any condition of the stomach with perfect safety, being harmless and containing nothing but fruit and vegetable essences, pure pepsin and Golden Seal.

"Without any question they are the safest, most effective cure for indigestion, biliousness, constipation and all derangements of the stomach, however slight or severe."

Gas on the Stomach

Is quickly relieved by Herba Cura, nature's best remedy for dyspepsia.

Not only this, but it has a dozen other virtues that entitle it to your consideration.

Packed in neat red boxes and sold for one dollar by the best druggists.

A SURPRISE.

Capt. Gibson Meets Soldier Whom He Thought Dead.

Capt. George Gibson, who last winter returned from a period of active service in the Philippines, to recover from his wound in the face, and who has since severed his connection with army life, was treated to a genuine surprise the other day when he met Lieut. Hanay, of the Twenty-second infantry, who has been in the city recruiting for the regular army. Capt. Gibson, until he met the lieutenant here, supposed him dead.

Lieut. Hanay was shot accidentally by one of his own men, while on a river boat in the Philippines, shortly after Capt. Gibson was wounded. The shooting was done with a revolver, the bullet striking the lieutenant close to the jaw, making a wound similar to that received by Capt. Gibson. The bullet nearly severed the tongue of Lieut. Hanay and when Capt. Gibson left Manila on his return home, the lieutenant was not expected to survive his injury.

Although the shooting was entirely accidental, the man that did the deed was so grieved over his act that he was with difficulty prevented from throwing himself in the river.

A NUISANCE.

Condition of Walk on Lower Side of Michigan Street.

It has been suggested by a number of the occupants of the Torrey building, whose offices overlook West Michigan street, that the attention of those people in the city who are interested in the matter of clean streets and premises should be called to the condition of the south side of Michigan street between Third and Fourth avenues west. It is a constant occurrence for people who are walking along the south side of the street to go out into the road while passing the vacant lots adjoining the street. They could not very well do otherwise considering the condition of the sidewalk. Along its entire length, the walk is covered with old steam boilers, old iron, telephone pole cross arms, pieces of brick, old kettles, tin cans, garbage barrels, mortar beds and refuse of all kinds. The present condition of the property is certainly a public nuisance and the refuse matter thrown on the sidewalk is fast rotting away the boards.

The street at that point is in even worse condition than were the railroad grounds on the lower side of the street between Fourth and Fifth avenues west, a year ago when the Northern Pacific company consented to clean up the property. Now that warm weather is coming on the collection of garbage is beginning to throw off a foul odor and it is claimed that unless some steps are taken to compel the owners of the property to abate the nuisance there will be serious danger of sickness in the neighborhood.

CLOSED DOWN TWO.

Nester Estate Cut Off a Couple of Camps.

The Nester estate, which is conducting extensive logging operations on the north shore along the Gooseberry river, has closed down two of its camps on account of the warm weather, which has put a stop to hauling, and the men are coming back to the city. Two camps are still operating, but these will be compelled to close within a few days. The Nester estate has about 50,000,000 feet of logs banked at the mouth of Gooseberry river, the supply being considered large enough to keep both of the company's mills running during the season. One mill is located at Ashland, Wis., and the other at Baraga, Mich. The logs will be towed across Lake Superior to the mills.

The big Nester tug Vigilant, Harry Ditzel master, which has been overhauled and repaired at Napoleon Grignon's shipyard this winter, will be one of the first boats to go into commission here this spring. The tug has been equipped with an electric lighting plant and will leave the Duluth harbor within a few days with a load of coal for the Nester logging railway. The Nester estate will conduct summer logging operations.

Sees a Fortune.

John Horgan, of West Superior, a teamster for the Standard Oil company, believes himself to be one of the heirs to a fortune in India amounting to $25,000,000 and has put his case in the hands of an attorney. The story leading up to the inheritance is very romantic. It is claimed that one of Horgan's ancestors, by the name of O'Keefe, went to India from Ireland, many years ago. He rescued an Indian princess from drowning, subsequently married her. After the princess died he ruled alone until his death about twenty-six years ago. O'Keefe is said to have left a fortune to his relatives in Ireland. Mr. Horgan's mother was a sister of O'Keefe.

A PROMISING DISTRICT.

Thunder Mountain Country In Idaho, Looks Well.

One of the mining districts to which the attention of investors is being directed is the Thunder Mountain district, in Idaho. The Thunder Mountain Investment and Development company, of Boise, Idaho, is sending out information respecting this country, showing it to be full of possibilities in the mineral line. The company owns five claims located near a prosperous company that is selling its stock rapidly at par. It also has tied up forty-one other claims, and has placed 500,000 shares of its capital stock in the treasury to be sold at par for development purposes.

The Thunder Mountain district covers a radius of twenty square miles, and development is in progress there at a rapid rate. Many sales of property have been made at large prices, and the outlook for the section is excellent. The company also acts as agent for properties, and conducts an information bureau through which information regarding Central Idaho is supplied.

INDIAN PINE.

Radical Amendment to Morris Bill By Mr. Brown.

Washington, March 14.—The house committee on Indian affairs yesterday considered the Morris bill, but postponed action until the next meeting in order that an amendment offered by Representative Brown might be printed and placed in the hands of the members.

The Brown amendment changes entirely the plan for the disposal of timber. It provides that timber shall be sold standing instead of on the bank scale, as proposed by Judge Morris and Secretary Hitchcock. Old estimates are to be utilized in determining whether the full value of the timber is offered by bidders. The amendment also provides that timber shall be sold by sections or parts of sections. Bids are to be sealed and the option of rejecting any or all bids is left with the secretary of the interior, who is also authorized to readvertise any tract or tracts not disposed of at the first bidding, or to sell any portion of timber at private sale.

The Brown proposition is also to advertise the first sale at least six months in advance of the opening of bids. Sales are to be widely advertised so that competition may be assured. The amendment further provides that each bid shall be accompanied by a certified check for 20 per cent of the amount of the bid. Payment is to be made in four equal annual installments at 4 per cent interest. The successful bidder is given the option of paying cash. No title is to pass until all payments are made and the purchaser cannot take possession until then.

There was considerable discussion of the amendment but no marked division of opinion to indicate the probable action on it. Mr. Brown said: "No, I do not know that the committee will adopt my amendment. I offered it because I think it will result in getting the most money for the Indians. It will, I think, secure competition and the timber will naturally bring a good price."

Mr. Curtis, of Kansas, offered an amendment for the sale of cedar and tamarack on the reservation, but it was not accepted. The committee also discussed the forestry provision in the bill and it received some hard knocks. It is predicted that when the bill is reported that part of it will be stricken out.

WOMAN CHLOROFORMED.

A Daring Burglary Was Perpetrated at Stillwater.

Stillwater, Minn., March 14.—While Mrs. Edward Welch was sleeping alone at her residence, South Fourth street, Wednesday night, burglars entered through a rear window, chloroformed the woman and ransacked her bedroom. The booty consisted of certified checks to the amount of $1000, cash $15, a gold watch and a mink coat.

Mrs. Welch did not recover from her stupor until late yesterday when she found the breeze blowing upon her from an open window. Her husband is in a logging camp and her married son, a grocer, lives in another house, not far away. No clew has been discovered of the perpetrators of the deed.

WANTS WIFE.

Jim Younger Disappointed Because He Cannot Marry.

St. Paul, March 14.—Jim Younger wants to get married.

He cannot because he is legally dead; hence he is unable to enter into any contract.

Younger submitted the question of whether or not he could wed to Governor Van Sant, who has looked into the matter with some surprising results.

In Minnesota a man who is a life prisoner is civilly dead. The only way he can make any binding contract, in the eyes of the law, is through the board which paroles him, in this case the state board of control, which board is empowered to enter into a contract for him.

It is not probable, however, that the three members of the board of control, separately or as a whole, will agree to enter into a marriage contract with any woman for the benefit of the paroled convict.

The only way for Jim Younger to become a married man in Minnesota is to get a pardon, which will restore to him the rights of a living citizen.

Another phase of the law is, that neither Jim Younger nor his brother Cole, if they establish any business of their own, as has been contemplated, can be held for any debts which they may incur.

In his application to the governor requesting information as to his rights to marry Younger said nothing regarding the proposed bride.

A LINE OF STEAMERS

Report That Big Four Will Run Boats to Duluth.

Duluth Vesselmen Look Upon the Report as a Joke.

Would Need More Business to Make It Paying Venture.

A dispatch from Benton Harbor, Mich., says that the Big Four road is about to put on a line of steamers between that port and Duluth and Milwaukee. The road has bought a large dock property there and will enlarge and improve it. This information is given in connection with the announcement of the road's intention to put on a lake line, bringing it in connection with the Northwest.

Package freight vesselmen in Duluth are inclined to look on the report as it reads as good deal of a joke. As a matter of fact, they believe the Big Four is simply arranging to renew its traffic relations with the Lake Michigan and Lake Superior line. The story of the Big Four putting on a lake line seems very logical on its face. Its Michigan division, terminating at Benton Harbor, is now purely a local road. It runs down through the natural gas and manufacturing region of Indiana to Louisville, and would seem to open up a good country for Northwestern products as well as one that would suit a great deal of its manufactured products into the Northwest.

According to the views of local vesselmen, however, this logical promise is largely illusion. Until the Duluth-Superior flouring mills closed down, the Lake Michigan line carried a good deal of export flour from Duluth to Benton Harbor in connection with the Big Four road. The Big Four turned it over to the Chesapeake & Ohio, which delivered it to ocean vessels at Newport News. But, it is said, the Lake Superior-Lake Michigan route is too long and the rail haul too great to give either party to the route a fair proportion per ton mile. The traffic relations between the Big Four and the Lake Michigan line have been continued, and the boats of the latter fleet have made it a practice to run across the lake to Benton Harbor and get whatever freight there was or deliver to the Big Four consignments from Duluth. The business, it is said, however, has been very small, and the lake line has kept up the connections more as an accommodation to its customers and the Big Four than for the money there has been in it. Consequently, it is believed that the Big Four would not make the investment required for such a line of steamers without more business in sight than it has been possible to develop as yet.

It is the opinion of local vessel line people that the acquisition of the Beatty line by the Northern Navigation company will result in the pulling off of the Collingwood boats from the Duluth route. It is now confirmed that the Collingwood people have bought up practically all the stock of the Beatty line. It is the understanding that the Sarnia boats—the Monarch, United Empire and the new steamer, Huronic—will be put on the Sarnia-Duluth and Port Arthur route, making connections at the Soo with the Collingwood boats. The latter craft, it is believed, will be kept in the trade in Georgian bay and between the Soo and bay points.

Herman Jaenke, for the past two seasons first mate on the steamer Kearsarge of the Canada Atlantic line, will sail the steamer Arthur Orr of the same line this season. Capt. Jaenke's friends rejoice over his promotion.

REFUSED.

No Injunction Will Be Issued Against Spirits Company.

Trenton, N. J., March 14.—J. G. Kirkpatrick in the United States court today rendered a decision refusing an injunction in the suit brought by Louis Windmuller for the dissolution of the Spirits Distribution company, one of the constituent concerns of the Distilling company of America. A resolution of the directors of the Spirits Distributing company in favor of dissolution was adopted some time ago and was referred to the stockholders for ratification. Mr. Windmuller in the suit decided today sought to restrain the Standard Distilling and Distributing company and the Distilling company of America from voting its stock in the Spirits Distributing company on the proposed dissolution. He claimed that the Standard company in 1898 entered into an agreement whereby, in return for the surrender of the preferred and common stocks of the Spirits company, it guaranteed 6 per cent dividend on the first preferred stock of the Spirits company and 2 per cent on the second preferred stock during the existence of the company. Judge Kirkpatrick in his decision held that the agreement to guarantee dividends on the preferred stock of the Spirits company was only to hold good during the existence of the company; that one stockholder has just as much right as another to vote on a proposition to dissolve the company.

TO SHIP EARLY.

Oliver Snyder Mine Near Hibbing to Be Pushed.

Capt. James Trezona of the Oliver Snyder mine returned to Hibbing this morning. Capt. Trezona has instructions to make this new property a shipper as soon as possible, and he has been exerting every means in his power to begin moving some ore soon after the opening of navigation. It is said that it is an exceptionally promising property, but Capt. Trezona has encountered some big obstacles in the development work he has been carrying on. A large volume of water was struck, with a rise so rapid that it has been difficult to keep it down sufficiently to continue work.

Shipping from the mines of the steel corporation will not begin until the vesselmen are ready to move their boats to the ore docks. No risk will be run of the ore freezing in the cars or spouts.

It is estimated that 85 per cent of the production of ore on the Mesaba range this season will be made by independent mine owners.

STILL HARD TO GET.

Northern Lines Have Trouble In Getting Cars.

The Northern lines are still finding it difficult to get enough foreign cars to take care of the freight traffic that is offered them. They have plenty of system cars for system business, but are still chary about letting their equipment getting far from their own roads without a good strong string attached to them.

The lumber movement eWst and Southwest by rail is quite large as compared with past shipments to this territory from here. Minneapolis & St. Louis cars are in brisk demand, and very few can be had. This road has become a very important factor in the Southwestern situation since it was bought by the Illinois Central and extended out through the western country.

ASKING ADVICE.

St. Paul, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Maj. R. L. Hoxie, superintendent of the United States engineering department for the district, has issued a circular letter to property owners along the St. Croix river and others interested, asking them to suggest changes in the present navigation regulations on that river. A new code of rules will be adopted for the season.

This is the time to use Rocky Mountain Tea. Keeps you well all the year. Great Blood life renewer. 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

NERO'S CRIMINAL CUNNING.

Do you remember the clever scheme by which Nero attempted to put an end to his mother's life? writes the Rome correspondent of the Chicago Times-Herald. He invited her to dine with him in a villa on the opposite side of the lake upon which she resided. He gave her a beautiful time and treated her with marked respect and affection, and at the end of the dinner sent her home in a gondola, which, he told her, had been built in her honor. When half way across the lake, where the water was the deepest, one of Nero's creatures touched a spring and the boat suddenly separated into a thousand fragments, leaving his mother in the water. The boatman swam ashore, in obedience to Nero's orders, and left her to drown, but fate directed otherwise. She was rescued and taken to her own villa, where, after a little reflection, she comprehended the conspiracy and sent a sarcastic message to her imperial son, thanking him for a pleasant evening and a novel and unexpected experience during her homeward journey. This so excited Nero that he sent assassins over immediately to kill her.

"My child is worth millions to me," says Mrs. Mary Bird of Harrisburg, Pa., "yet I would have lost her by croup had I not purchased a bottle of One Minute Cough Cure." One Minute Cough Cure is sure cure for throat and lung troubles. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Max Wirth.

MONGERS OF RUMORS

Are Busily Engaged In Discussing the Transvaal Situation.

Reports of Kitchener's Recall and Return of Lord Roberts.

Officials Treat the Stories With Ill-Concealed Contempt.

New York, March 14.—Rumor-mongers are profiting by the lack of detailed information respecting the military situation in the Transvaal, says the Tribune's London correspondent. They are repeating silly inventions about the recall of Kitchener, the return of Lord Roberts to South Africa and the promotion of French as commander in South Africa. These reports are dismissed with contempt by officials and military men as even more preposterous than the assumption that Delarey will re-establish the siege of Mafeking or make a dash for Johannesburg. Lord Salisbury has decisive influence in determining the selection of the commander of the forces in South Africa, and Lord Kitchener has been his favorite general from the outset. It was Lord Salisbury who suggested the appointment of Gen. Kitchener as Lord Roberts' chief-of-staff when Gen. Buller's campaign went wrong after Colenso, and there is no evidence that the prime minister is dissatisfied with the results of recent operations.

Information is required respecting the column which Lord Methuen expected to join when he set out from Vryburg, but otherwise there has been no apprehension on the part of military authorities of serious results from the recent defeat, which was mainly due to a panic among the unseasoned yeomanry. It seems probable, however, that the number of Boers under De Wet who succeeded in breaking through the British blockhouse lines was considerably larger than official reports indicated, and that a junction may have been effected with Delarey.

The newspapers are puzzled to account for the release of Gen. Methuen, but they generally give credit to Delarey for acting with great moderation, courtesy and tact. The Daily Mail expects to see either Gen. Cronje or Gen. Viljoen returned to the Boers in exchange for the British general.

BRILLIANT FUNCTION

Will Be the First Evening Court at London.

New York, March 14.—Tonight's court promises to be a most brilliant function, says the London correspondent of the Herald.

All fashionable London is on the tiptoe of expectation, as it is the first evening court for many years owing to the late queen's distaste for functions of this character.

The dresses will be of uncommon richness and beauty. Nearly all will be of the lightest tissue and most delicate tints, many of them coming from Paris dressmakers.

RHODES IS WEAKER.

Cape Town, March 14.—Cecil Rhodes is weaker today otherwise there is no change in his condition.

FUNERAL

Services Held Over the Body of the Former Governor.

Chicago, March 14.—Funeral services over the body of the late John P. Altgeld, former governor of Illinois, were held at the Altgeld home in Sheridan Park today. Judges of the Cook county bench of which he was once a member, attended in a body, all courts having adjourned at noon. Many flags were at half-mast throughout the city.

The Rev. Frank Crane, of the People's church, preached the funeral sermon and Clarence S. Darrow, the ex-governor's law partner, delivered an address. Both speakers eulogized the sincerity and courage of Mr. Altgeld. The services were brief and simple. Many people were unable to get into the house. Tomorrow morning the staff of Governor Yates will escort the body to the Public Library building where it will lie in state from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. A procession of civic and social organizations on Sunday will follow the body to Graceland cemetery.

STAY CONTINUED.

Further Arguments to Be Heard on Flour Mills.

New York, March 14.—Argument was continued before Vice Chancellor Pitney in chancery chambers, Jersey City, yesterday in the case of the United States Fuor Milling company. This is an action brought by Caroline T. Locke and others to restrain the Central Trust company from foreclosing a $7,500,000 mortgage on the properties of the milling company. Richard V. Lindabury appeared for the Central Trust company, Wheeler H. Peckham for the reorganization committee and former United States Attorney General Griggs for the complainants. Mr. Peckham spoke in opposition to the order of Vice Chancellor Pitney which set an upset price of $2,500,000 on the properties in question. Mr. Griggs favored the order and after considerable discussion the hearing was adjourned to March 24. The stay restraining the sale of the property was continued.

SECRETARY WAS WRONG.

Judge Coxe Overrules Decision of Treasury Department

New York, March 14.—Judge Coxe, of the United States circuit court, has handed down a decision overruling one given by the secretary of the treasury relative to the number of years an American citizen can live abroad without forefeiting his citizenship.

The plaintiffs in the case sued to recover duties at Poissy, France. The consul general in Paris refused to clear the paintings as works of an American artist, pointing out that the secretary of the treasury had decided that after an American citizen had lived abroad for five years it could not longer be termed a temporary residence.

Judge Coxe holds that the secretary of the treasury had no authority to make such an arbitrary ruling and decided in favor of the importers.

Years of suffering relieved in a night. Itching piles yield at once to the curative properties of Doan's Ointment. Never fails. At any drug store, 50 cents.

TERLINDEN SAILS.

Will Be Tried In Germany For Forgery.

New York, March 14.—Gerhard Terlinden, of Oberhausen, Germany, has sailed for Europe a prisoner, to be tried in his own land on a charge if issuing forged certificates for 300,000 marks in Prussia.

Terlinden was arrested in Milwaukee last uJly at the instance of Dr. Von Wever, the German consul general at Chicago, to which city he was taken. He fought against extradition, carrying his case to the United States supreme court, which declared that he must be surrendered. Terlinden was a wealthy manufacturer, and when he reached Chicago, after his flight from Berlin, he deposited a large sum in the banks of that city.

STAGE STRUCK

And Also Wanted Money Badly For Clothes.

Massillon, Ohio, aMrch 14.—Miss Maud E. Smith, who offered to sell her body after death to a Knoxville medical college, is a daughter of Councilman Peter Smith, of this city. Miss Smith mysteriously disappeared from her home last Saturday, and no trace of her has been found. She went from here to Canton, from which place she sent home a message that she intended leaving that day for Toledo. The mother of the young woman says she heard her say several months ago that to sell the body would be a good way to raise money. She had read somewhere of some person doing that.

"I thought she was just joking," said Mrs. Smith, "and paid no attention to what she said. Maud wanted money badly for clothes. Her father, as a punishment for running away from home several weeks ago, refused her clothing she wanted, though he gave her a home. He said he would buy her the clothes if she said she was sorry, but she wouldn't. She couldn't work much, for a couple of months ago she had her hand crushed at a laundry at Salem where she worked when she ran away from home the other time.

"Maud is stage struck. That's what has caused her to do these things. She used to be a good, sensible girl. But that time when she ran away she fell in with a show company that played 'Ten Nights in a Barroom' till it broke up. She was always looking at pictures of actresses and posing and doing things like they do on the stage."

Miss Smith is 19 years old and quite pretty.

LONG LIFE

Attributed to Use of Whisky and Tobacco.

Hagerstown, Md., March 14.—Robert McCarty, reputed to be 105 years old, is dead at Downsville, where he had resided nearly all his life. For many years McCarty did not know his age, proof of which was furnished him by a sister, said to be living in Baltimore.

He was employed on the Chesapeake and Ohio canal when it was being built, and served through the civil war in the Union army, participating in many of the great battles. He had been receiving a pension of $12 for some years. McCarty enjoyed the distinction of living in parts of three centuries, and always had remarkable health. Until recently he was hale and robust, but a severe cold laid the foundation for pneumonia. McCarty lived a simple life and ate plain food. His only pleasure was the use of tobacco and whisky, to which he attributed his long life.

ANGRY WOLVES

Attacked Man Who Was Sweeping Their Cage.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 14.—Henry Fleming, employed at Riverside Park, entered the cage where two large wolves are kept, with the intention of sweeping it out. As he started to open the door to withdraw both the animals sprang on him. Fleming screamed lustily for aid, using his heavy broom as best he could and battling bravely. Other employes rushed to his aid and he was finally dragged out. He was found bitten in several places, with a particularly bad wound in the hip, which may give him great trouble.

While the animals have always shown treacherous temper, it is the first time they ever attacked their keeper.

PAINTERS

Of St. Louis Will Strike For Higher Wages.

St. Louis, March 14.—According to an order by the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers, every member of the organization in St. Louis will strike this afternoon for higher wages. About 1400 men will be affected.

The purpose of the union is to inaugurate a new wage scale, calling for an increase of 60 cents a day for eight hours' work. The present scale is $3 a day.

At a meeting of the Master Painters' association it was decidde to ignore the demand for the proposed increase.

"Good wages are paid to the painters," said President Lewis, "and they are not required to furnish brushes or pots. We have advertised for men and have no fear that work will not go on."

James Carlisle, manager of the Eureka Painting company, whose firm is not a member of the association, said: "We will pay the increased scale. As a rule the men can only work about six full months in the year, and there is hardly a painter who will average more than $1.50 the year round."

THE DAKOTAS.

South Dakota Woman Has One Husband Too Many.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Huron—Sheriff Kerr, of this city, Thursday morning arrested at Hitchcock Stella McCarthy, wife of Eugene Hart, of Gettysburg, and also of Fred Kimball, of Wayne, Neb. The arrest was made by direction of the Nebraska officers. The woman is in jail awaiting the issuance of requisition papers. She declares she is the victim of spite on the part of Kimball, to whom she was never married.

Webster—Bert Kunl, a laborer on the artesian well, was struck by a falling derrick and killed. His home was at Aberdeen.

Belle Fourche—The foundation for the new jail is complete, and the contractors have begun work on the superstructure. The building is to be entirely of stone, which is being quarried on Hay creek, a few miles from Belle Fourche, in Wyoming. John Barker and Robert Evans, of Deadwood, have the contract, the consideration being $7000.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Portal—An instructive institute, in charge of a corps of Canadian professors from Winnipeg and experiment stations of the western provinces, was held at this place. T. M. Willing, the territorial inspector of noxious weeds, spoke briefly on that subject, followed by D. Drummond and Foster M. Ross on subjects of general interest to the farming classes. An interesting discourse on the subject of tree culture was a feature of the meeting. Later the speakers were entertained by hte citizens at the Union hotel.

Courtney—The congregational church is planning to build at this place. A site has been secured and a commodious church edifice will soon express the enterprise of this society under the leadership of Rev. William Steele.

Kensal—A bank is being established here by some Hankinson and Minneapolis men; another lumber yard is going in; also a hardware store and a printing office. The townsite has gone into the hands of some progressive men, who are planning street grading and other improvements. Kensal gives promise of trebling in size this season.

Grand Forks—An accident that proved serious, but which miraculously was not fatal, occurred in this city yesterday afternoon. Bob McLaughlin, son of Judge McLaughlin, and John Bok, about 12 years of age, are laid up, the first named with a broken leg and the other with a broken arm. The boys had been playing the game of "stump," and young McLaughlin scaled the walls of the Security block, a 5-story building, on the fire escape, followed closely by Bok. When they reached the roof McLaughlin walked around the edge of the building to the rear and started to slide to the ground, a distance of about seventy feet, on a telephone wire. When within about eighteen feet of the ground one of young McLaughlin's feet struck an insulator and became entangled in the wires. Bok, who was but a few feet above him and sliding down with great speed, struck McLaughlin and both boys fell to the ground, striking a pile of stones. Both were badly bruised in addition to the broken bones.

IN MICHIGAN.

A New Town Springs Up In Marquette County.

Marquette—A new town is being established thirty miles up the Lake Superior shore in Marquette county by the Big Bay Lumber company. Saw mills, hotels and dwellings are now being constructed and the town gives promise of becoming a very important one. The country now is a veritable wilderness, Marquette being the nearest community and is heavily timbered with pine and hardwood. The company already owns sufficient standing timber to keep the mills in steady operation for twenty years and has options on other large tracts. It is intended also to colonize the territory adjacent to the new town with farmers, the lands being highly suited to agriculture.

Negaunee—Kirkpatrick Bros., lumber operators, have closed a contract to supply the Mexican Central railroad with 100,000 railroad ties. Twenty Mexican Central cars arrived yesterday to be loaded with the first shipment.

Escanaba—Three-quarters of a million butter dishes are being turned out daily at the Escanaba Woodenware factory, operated by the trust. It is the largest plant of the kind in the world. Eighteen machines are making the dishes and two additional ones will be in operation before the week is out. More than 300 hands are employed at the factory and mill and 90,000 feet of hardwood timber are manufactured every day.

Negaunee—An effort is being made by the Republicans of this city to unite with the Democratic party in selecting a union candidate for mayor. It is doubtful if it will succeed, however, as the Democrats are not willing to make concessions in regard to the treasurer. Mayor Erdtz is the only possible candidate under a union ticket, and his election is almost certain even should he run only as a Democratic candidate.

Newberry—At the village election on April 7 the question of whether a new school building shall be erected will be decided. It will come up as a proposition to bond the school district in the sum of $25,000, the submission of which has been decided by the board of education.

Ontonagon—Four winches for use on the drive have been purchased by the Diamond Match company. The operation will be an innovation in lumbering in this section, but by their use log jams will easily be broken, saving much time and wages.

Barago—The Nester estate, with saw mills at this place, has been operating extensively this winter in the woods on the north shore in the vicinity of Two Harbors. Over 800 men have been employed, divided among five camps, and about 50,000,000 feet of pine has been banked on the Gooseberry river. The logs will run into the lake and towed to this village and Ashland for sawing. A railroad fourteen miles long has been used to bring the timber to the river, the cars being loaded by steam loaders, and by lumbering in this manner the Nesters are enabled to continue operations the entire year.

"I was troubled for seven years with my stomach," says E. Demick, Somerville, Ind. "I could get nothing to help me until I tried Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. I have taken a few bottles and am entirely well." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures all stomach troubles. Max Wirth.

Daring Explorers Who Visited Minnesota Years Ago.

Story of the Travels of Groseilliers and Radisson.

Duluth Public Library Has Rare Copy of Radisson's Narratives.

St. Paul, March 14.—Warren Upham, secretary of the Minnesota State Historical society, read a paper at the meeting last Monday evening on "The Second Expedition of Groseilliers and Radisson to Minnesota, 1659-60." The paper was in part as follows:

"Seventeen years ago there was published in Boston, by the Prince society, a book which gives a narrative of the earliest travels by white men to the upper Mississippi river and the area of Minnesota.

"They were two French fur traders, Grossilliers and Radisson, brothers-in-law. The narrative of their two expeditions to this far western region was written by Radisson, in somewhat grotesque English, in the years 1665-68, when these French explorers transferred their services to English merchants and capitalists, who in 1670 founded the Hudson Bay company.

"Radisson's manuscripts, written to gain favor and prestige in England, came into the possession of the Bodleian library, at Oxford university, and of the British museum. They remained unknown to historians more than 200 years; but at last their importance for early American history was recognized, and they were published in 1885.

"This volume of Radisson's narratives has much valuable information concerning New York state and the Iroquois Indians, and concerning the establishment of the Hudson bay fur trade; but to us their chief interest lies in the accounts of the explorations, Indian councils, and the beginning of the fur trade on the upper Mississippi and Lake Superior and within the limits of this state of Minnesota.

"Until the publication of this volume, the oldest definite records of white men in Minnesota were those of Du Luth in 1679 and of Hennepin in 1680. It is now known that the area of our state and this part of the Mississippi was reached by Groseilliers and Radisson in 1655, during the first western expedition.

"In a former paper, at this society's annual meeting, two months ago, it was shown that these explorers and traders came in the spring of 1655 to Prairie island, on the west side of the main channel of the Mississippi between Red Wing and Hastings, and spent more than a year there with refugee Huron Indians, raising much corn, with which, accompanied by many Indians, and carrying a rich freight of furs, they returned in 1656 to Lower Canada.

"At that early time the lakes and rivers of this vast western country had not received their present names, the lack of which in Radisson's narrative, as also generally the lack of notation of directions of their travel, as northward or southward, and his failure to record the dates of the years when these western expeditions were made, have led to much discussion and misunderstandings of his writings.

"But they very clearly record the grand geographical features, and give very detailed accounts of the travels and adventures of these explorers, their dealings with the Indians, and certain contemporaneous historical events, by which the exact years of these expeditions to Minnesota were determined.

"That the routes and localities of their explorations and councils to establish a fur trade in this state have not been earlier fully studied out and ascertained, is doubtless attributable to these deficiencies of Radisson's narratives; but also must in part be ascribed to the limitation of their publication, in an edition of only 250 volumes, of which only two copies are in Minnesota, one owned by this historical society and the other by the Duluth public library. Only three or four students of history in this state have made careful examination of this book; and these studies, with those of other historians in Wisconsin and elsewhere, have gradually brought us to the results stated at our recent annual meeting and in the present paper.

"Even within the past year a very essential clue for identification of the locality of greatest interest in the second of these expeditions has been supplied by J. V. Brower, who finds that Knife lake and river, in Kanabec county, were so named because there the Sioux of the Mille Lacs region first obtained iron and steel knives from white men, thence also receiving themselves the name of Isanti or Knife Sioux, by which they were known to Du Luth and Hennepin.

THE SECOND EXPEDITION.

"Three years after their return from Prairie Island, Groseilliers and Radisson started on their second expedition to the West, in August, 1659.

"Groseilliers was then 38 years old, and during the last twelve or thirteen years had been engaged in fur trading. Radisson was only about 23 years old.

"They each had much experience of life among the Indians, and they were both ambitious carried forward through the hardships and dangers of these expeditions by an over-mastering ambition to explore new regions, extend the fur trade, and thereby gain honor and wealth.

"It was their especial desire in this second expedition to cross from Lake Superior to Hudson bay; but, according to the present study of the narration, they appear to have gone no farther than to the northwest shore of Lake Superior in Minnesota.

"Although Radisson asserts that they went to Hudson bay, we find many and conclusive reasons for rejecting that part of his narration, thus shortening the expedition to a single year from August, 1659, to August, 1660.

"In this conclusion we agree with the 'Relations and Journal of the Jesuits,' which also contain considerable accounts of the same expedition, indicating for it a duration of only one year.

FIRST WHITE MEN ON SUPERIOR.

"These two explorers and traders starting from Three Rivers with a small party of Ojibway Indians, by the usual canoe route of the Ottawa and Mattawa rivers and Lake Nipissing, to Georgian bay and Lake Huron, and thence by the Sault Ste. Marie, came into Lake Superior.

"They were the first white men to coast in their canoes along the south shore of Lake Superior to Chequamegon bay, where they landed and constructed a little stockade, roofing it with boughs, near the site of Ashland. This rude hut, which Radisson called a fort, was the earliest habitation of white men in Wisconsin.

"Escorted by Huron Indians they went from Chequamegon bay southward four days through the woods, arriving at a large encampment of the Hurons on a lake some eight leagues in circuit, which is identified by the historians of Wisconsin as probably Lake Courtes Oreilles, in Sawyer county of that state, one of the resources of the Chippewa river.

"Within the three years since these traders were at Prairie Island, the Hurons had removed to the wholly wooded region of Northwestern Wisconsin, where they fared well in summer, but raised very little corn, and also were nearly destitute of any provisions stored up for their sustenance during the winter.

"Soon after the first snowfall, therefore, the Hurons separated into little parties of two or three for hunting, with an agreement to come together after two months and a half—that is, near the middle of the winter—at an appointed rendezvous.

"On account of the conferences with the Sioux at and near that rendezvous, by which Groseilliers and Radisson in the later part of the winter entered first into relations of trade with that powerful tribe or nation of our Minnesota Indians, it seems probable that this locality of reunion and of the later Sioux feasting and council was in the vicinity of Knife lake in Minnesota, about ninety miles west of Lake Courtes Oreilles.

"After coming to this rendezvous—here regarded as in the present Kanabec county—these Frenchmen and their large company of Hurons, with another company of Ottawas, which joined them, suffered a most terrible famine, in which, as Radisson says, more than 500 of the Indians perished.

FOUNDED THE FUR TRADE.

"Afterward, when the favorable condition of the deep snow again permitted hunting and killing deer and other game in abundance, a ceremonial feast and council with the Sioux and with their neighbors, an encampment of Crees, who were invited to the feast and to join with the Sioux in rivalry in feats of strength, agility and skill, gave to the Frenchmen opportunity to urge peaceful relations between these sometimes previously hostile tribes, that they might, when living in peace, supply furs to the French in barter for their firearms, knives, hatchets and many articles for domestic use or ornament. The purpose of the French traders was attained by thus laying, in diplomacy with the savages, the foundations of a profitable fur trade.

"When the feast and council were ended Groseilliers and Radisson went seven days' journey to visit the Prairie Sioux. They made this journey, with some of these Sioux returning to their homes from the council, and at that season, near the end of winter, before good conditions for canoeing, they probably went afoot.

"The route seems most likely to have been from the Knife and Snake rivers across southward to the Rum river, down that stream to the Mississippi, and thence past the site of Minneapolis and up the Minnesota river to some encampment of the Prairie Sioux, perhaps near the site of Shakopee, with its large prairie, or near Traverse des Sioux, having larger prairies, or even near New Ulm, on the broad, far-stretching prairies which continue thence uninterrupted for hundreds of miles to the west and south.

"As Radisson makes no mention of St. Anthony's falls it may be supposed that the Frenchman and their Indian companions, in passing the area of Minneapolis, took some footpath or trail through the west part of the city by Lakes Calhoun and Harriet to save distance in coming to the Minnesota river, so that they would not go within sight of the falls.

"Returning from the visit to the Prairie Sioux the Frenchmen accompanied a small party of Ojibways who had been buying furs in the Sioux country, doubtless according to the suggestions of these French traders. The route of the return, which was very surely by canoes, would be along the Minnesota river to the St. Croix, and up that river with portages from its head waters to reach Chequamegon bay.

"It is therefore quite within the limits of probability to picture in our minds these daring travelers and their Ojibway comrades encamping for a night among the willows of the river shore where the Union passenger station of St. Paul now stands, or else at the foot of Dayton's bluff, where 107 years later, at nearly the same time in spring, Capt. Jonathan Carver encamped with the Sioux from the Minnesota river.

"After the return to Chequamegon bay these Frenchmen crossed the west end of Lake Superior to its north shore, probably near the site of Two Harbors, there visiting the Crees on their own ground. In the Midsummer of 1660 they returned to Montreal and Three Rivers with a vast escort of Indians and great wealth of beaver furs."

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

The first hockey match between the Montreal team and the Winnipeg Victors, for the Stanley cup and the world's championship, was played at Winnipeg Thursday night. The Winnipeg team won after a hard-fought game, score of 1 to 0. The second match will be played on Saturday night.

The Colorado house of representatives has adopted resolutions deploring the death of John P. Altgeld, a "great commoner, whose life stands as a monument of civic courage, steadfastness and incorruptibility in the most trying circumstances and in the midst of calumnies and temptations to which many noble, but more yielding natures succumb."

Bertha Schneider, of St. Paul, received $400 at the hands of the jury which sat in the trial of her suit against John and Mary Mulhall, the verdict being opened in Judge Lewis' court at St. Paul Thursday morning. Mrs. Schneider was butted and knocked down by a "vicious ram" in the custody of the defendants, sustaining a fracture of her right thigh, which, at her advanced age, 83 years, the physicians say, will not knit together again.

The plans for the four new shops to be erected by the Great Northern at St. Paul the completed and will be sent to the building inspector tomorrow. The total cost of the new buildings including inside furnishings and tools, will amount to $700,000. The foundations are already laid.

FORTUNE

Found In Rabbit Hole By Farmer's Boy and Dog.

Paducah, Ky., March 14.—A little sawed-off cur of a farmer's dog chased a scared rabbit into a hole in a bluff in Crittenden county, five miles from Marion, and about sixty-five miles from Paducah, last summer. Out of that rabbit hole a dozen or so investors expect to take millions of dollars. They are already harvesting small fortunes.

The extent to which the mineral development of the county of Crittenden has grown and the extent to which it is expected to grow are not generally realized. So little has been said in print of the possibilities opened up lately around Marion that few people have any conception of what is being done in the present and will be done in the future among those rocky hills.

The story reads almost like magic, but it is all true, even to the dog and the rabbit part of it.

Rev. C. P. Montgomery, just returned from a visit to Marion, said:

"Last summer a farmer's boy with his dog chased a rabbit into a cleft of one of the cliffs near Crittenden Springs. In digging the rabbit out the boy found some peculiar-looking mineral specimens. He took them to town and turned them over to Blue & Nunn, a firm of young lawyers. These gentlemen discovered that the queer-looking rocks which the boy had found were lumps of 'turkey fat' zinc of the wonderful richness of almost 95 per cent purity.

"For $100 they purchased a considerable tract of land in the immediate vicinity and began operations on a small scale. After going down a few feet they discovered that a great strata of rich zinc lay almost on the surface of the earth. The beds are, apparently, inexhaustible. The 'turkey fat' zinc, which is used for medicinal purposes, lies nearest the surface. Under it are, apparently, endless deposits of 'black jack' zinc, which is utilized for manufacturing purposes.

"Messrs. Blue and Nunn are now engaged in digging the mineral out and transporting it in wagons five miles and shipping it to Michigan and Chicago. Even by such a laborious and costly mode they are realizing a clear profit of between $500 and $600 a car load on their investment.

"An expert named Roberts, who was in Marion a few days ago, after an examination, declared the beds were the richest and largest he had ever seen, and he did not believe their equal was to be found in the world. During the last few days prospectors and investors, representing Eastern capitalists, have begun to come into Marion in numbers, and it is reported that mining operations on a most extensive scale will be undertaken.

"It is reported that Eastern capitalists have offered Blue & Nunn $200,000 for their holdings. Six months ago they paid $1100 for the property.

MRS. SOFFEL

Indicted By the Grand Jury on Three Counts.

Pittsburg, March 14.—Indictments in three cases against Mrs. Catherine Soffel, wife of ex-Warden Peter K. Soffel, growing out of the escape of the Biddle brothers from jail on Jan. 30, were considered by the grand jury yesterday and true bills returned.

Should Mrs. Soffel be convicted upon the three charges the maximum aggregate sentence that could be imposed upon her would be sixteen years to prison and a fine of $2500. The first charge is for aiding criminals to escape. The other charges are separate indictments for felonious assault and battery upon Charles Reynolds and James McGary, jail guards. Reynolds was shot by one of the Biddles and McGary was thrown over or jumped over the railing from the cell tier and seriously hurt on the night of the escape.

It will probably be a month before Mrs. Soffel is brought to trial.

Prince Henry's Train.

If the railway officials who furnished the special train which conveyed H. R. H. Prince Henry of Prussia on his tour of the United States desired to provide the finest train which could be had in the country, they should have called for a part of the equipment of the Pioneer Limited trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road. No cars have ever been built or which cost as much, or are as luxurious and handsome as the sleeping, compartment and buffet cars of the Pioneer Limited.

CURED ECZEMA.

Crude Oil Effect a Permanent Cure.

Brenham, Tex., March 14.—J. A. Low, of this city, operates a large sawmill at Devers. Joe Harrington, an employe of the mill, has for years been annoyed nearly to death with eczema.

Some weeks ago something went wrong with the machinery in the engine room, and Mr. Low asked Mr. Harrington if he would go in and make the necessary examination and adjustment. Mr. Harrington merely remarked that he was much troubled with eczema, and if he went into that hot room it would drive him nearly to madness. Some one standing near by who heard the conversation advised Mr. Harrington to use Beaumont oil as an external application. He acted on the advice, sent over to Beaumont, got a gallon of oil and applied as advised. In a little while the vesicles disappeared from the face and body, the excessive redness gave way to a clear, healthy complexion, the itching sensation ceased altogether and Mr. Harrington says he is entirely and permanently cured, and has not now one symptom of a disease that has distressed him for years.

Boxes For Rural Mail Carriers.

The old complaint against the ruling of the postoffice department that persons who take advantage of the rural free delivery system shall buy and set up a box of a certain pattern, is again in evidence by reason of the frequent communications received at various points. The plea that any farmer who does not want to buy a box of a prescribed pattern, should be allowed to put up one that suits him is not tenable for the reason that the moment the patron affixes his stamp and drops his prepaid letter in the box, the government becomes responsible for the letter. The patron may post his letter at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and the carrier may not collect it till noon of the following day, but during that twenty hours it is constructively in possession of the government. If anybody were allowed to put up an old soap-box with a slit in it, it would obviously be unfair to hold the government responsible for the contents of the box. On the star routes, where carriers have arranged directly with certain residents to collect and deliver mail between one postoffice and another, boxes of a special pattern are not made compulsory; but in this case it is the patron who takes the risk, and not the government. Indeed, the risk is taken only under the sanction of a written and signed agreement. Without a written order, the postmaster at the forwarding office would have no authority to give a star route contractor a letter for any resident of the route. It has been suggested that on the rural free delivery routes a double system might be applied—anyone who wished government protection for his mail accepting a government box, and anyone who did not care to go to the expense of a box being permitted to put up one of his own choice, upon his signing a written release of the government from all responsibility for the contents of the box. It is not probable, however, that this will be done as there are many reasons why it would not prove satisfactory. An investigation into the box question is now being made and in all probably some satisfactory solution will be reached of the whole question.

Reforms By the Chinese Court.

While there is evidence that many of the alleged reforms in China appear in name only, there is an underlying spirit toward real improvement on the part of the court that is becoming felt. The empress dowager is a crafty, treacherous ruler, skilled in dissembling, and reckless in promises, the carrying out of which depends entirely upon the necessities of the case. Her power is rapidly waning and there is hope for the empire at her passing. She has, however, instituted one reform that is approved by the entire world, and that is the edict recently issued prohibiting the binding of feet. The ancient and cruel custom is not only altogether prohibited, but a heavy fine and long imprisonment are threatened for any violations of the royal edict. Since the return of the court to Pekin there has been every indication of the adoption of more liberal customs by the court. The edict forbidding the binding of feet of young girls will, it is said, be followed soon, or within a few years at the least by an order permitting the cutting off of the distinctive queues, without which at present no Chinese is permitted to return to his native country. Probably the most important edict recently issued is that dealing with the administrative powers of the ruling race. Under the provisions of the edict now being promulgated, it is ordered that hereafter the Manchus shall not be considered any better in rank or station than the representatives of any other race in China. This will open the administrative offices of the Chinese empire to the people of all the races now commonly grouped under the generic name Chinese. This is expected to work good for the present dynasty by arousing the patriotism of all classes, and more closely cementing the nation, as all Chinese will be given an equal chance in the race for honors. It is further stated in the most recent advices that the empress dowager is considering the abdication of her rights. Even the official papers indicate that she is about to retire, and will not take any further part in governmental affairs except to counsel. China is a great country and needs honest, progressive rulers and quickly may the time come when she will have them.

THE WAR ON CUBA.

The Republicans in congress are still trying to agree on the policy to be pursued respecting reciprocal trade relations with Cuba. There is now talk of a compromise, providing for a 20 per cent reduction of the Dingley tariff on Cuban products, but this reduction to last but a limited time. On the principle that "half a loaf is better than no bread," those who favor doing justice to Cuba and extending American trade in the "ever faithful island" (as Spain styled her once upon a time) will no doubt accept this compromise if they find that nothing better can be secured to give Cuba a decent opportunity to earn a livelihood. There is no question as to the attitude of President Roosevelt regarding the question of reciprocity with Cuba. Should he be induced to change on any pretext—that of retaining harmony within the party, for instance, or an appeal to stand fast by ultra-protection, without professing belief in which many remind him that he never would have been even considered as a candiate before the last Republican national convention—the president may meet with considerable trouble. He must undergo the mortification of retracting certain public utterances which he made with most peculiar earnestness. Mr. Roosevelt well declared in his message to congress in December last:

"In the case of Cuba, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interest why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application and I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need, of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States. Cuba has in her constitution affirmed what we desired, that she should stand in international matters in closer and more friendly relations with us than with any other power, and we are bound by every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of her material well being."

In the extended conferences which he has held with one and another leader, both in the senate and the house of representatives, the president has given to the spokesmen of various elements—including the influential and aggressive beet sugar interest—courteous and careful attention. If, however, the beet sugar element, or any other, imagines that it has captured Roosevelt, body and boots, for the ignoble cause of crushing down and crowding out the sugar producers of Cuba to the end that sugar growers in the United States may triumph through the protection and ruin of sugar growers in the island freed by our arms from Spanish control—it is likely to be speedily disillusionized, and that most effectively. The president has by no means hesitated to stand manfully, thus far, by his Cuban reciprocity guns. By calm and well sustained argument he has maintained the position he emphasized in his annual message. Personal interviews have been sought with not a few influential members of his party at the capital. As a matter of course, Mr. Roosevelt has heard more than one muttered intention on the part of certain Republican champions of ultra-protection to organize a bolt against his policy. And yet he simply favors the freeing of Cuba from the tariff bonds with which certain extremists would strangle her reviving interests under warrant from our starry banner, so often hailed as the banner of freedom.

Even in the event that a cabal of ultra-protectionists in the house should succeed in defeating Cuban reciprocity carried out along the line indicated in Mr. Roosevelt's message, the president will still have potent influences and strong resources to bring to bear upon the senate. And a host of American people hope and pray that the president will be strenuous enough and persistent enough to wage successfully a new battle in the interest of reciprocity and fair play for "Cuba libre."

The course of the Minnesota representatives on this question is almost unexplainable. They are arrayed against granting any favors to Cuba or to reduce the tariff in any way to benefit the producers of that island, although it is very clear that such reduction would result in widening the market there for American flour and manufactures of all kinds. Their attitude meets with the strong disapproval of the people of Minnesota. The Republican newspapers of the state, almost without exception, condemn their course. The Elk River Star-News, edited by A. N. Dare, a stalwart Republican and formerly speaker of the state house of representatives, says:

"We are surprised to learn by the daily papers that the Minnesota delegation in congress is aggressively opposed to any concessions being made to Cuba on sugar tariff schedules, and hardly prepared to accept it as absolute fact. If it is so it is quite evident the congressmen from this state do not get home often enough to know the sentiment of their constituency. The argument is made in behalf of their position that the beet sugar industry in this state needs encouragement, and if the tariff is removed or reduced it will injure this industry. The beet sugar industry in Minnesota is a very small infant, and it is doubtful if it ever amounts to much, even with the protective tariff, but that will do as an excuse, we doubt if it is the real motive that actuates the delegation in this matter. It is absurd to maintain the high tariff on sugar merely for the benefit of the sugar trust, which reaps most of the benefit from it, while the customer pays the tax, and our congressmen would do well to get their ears close to Minnesota ground before going too far along the lines credited to them."

The above represents very clearly the public sentiment in Minnesota on this question. That sentiment is not fairly represented by the attitude of the congressmen from this state.

SHIP SUBSIDES.

The debate on the ship subsidy bill drags along in the United States senate and will be continued for several days more. Strong speeches have been made in opposition to the vicious measure, and the Fryes, the Hanas and the Depews have lifted their voices in its favor, What the fate of the measure will be is unknown, but it would not be surprising to see a majority of the senators lined up in support of the bill. It will dip deeply into the treasury for the benefit of a few rich men interested in Atlantic steamships, and looting the treasury in this way meets with ready assistance from many members of congress. Sometimes the promise of a percentage of the "swag" redoubles interest in pushing a measure through.

During the debate on this bill, Mr. Frye complained mournfully that the shipping industry is the only one that has not received the benefits of protection. But what need of protection has an industry that is highly prosperous without it? All the shipyards in the country are crowded with work today, showing that no subsidy is needed to encourage American shipbuilding. It has been proven also that vessels can be built here cheaper than in Europe.

Instead of subsidies to encourage the building of ships, what should be done is to remodel the abominable and antiquated navigation laws, which do not even permit Mr. Morgan to register his newly-acquired line under the American flag. In New London, Conn., two of the largest freight ships in the world are being built, and both, it is understood, are to be sailed under foreign flags. In fact, Americans are being steadily driven away from their own flag by restrictions which Messrs. Frye, Hanna and the rest are not at all anxious to remove. Is it any wonder how little of our commerce is carried under the American flag? When there is nothing in the way of free commerce, and our carrying trade then declines it will be time enough to talk of tapping the United States treasury for nourishment of Mr. Frye's infant industry. The subsidy bill should be defeated.

Three times in their wicked warfare, says the Omaha World-Herald, the British have gone up in battle array against the Boers in company with the American mule. True to his native instinct three times the mule has turned from the scene in disgust and fled as fast as his legs could carry him. In the South African struggle even the dumb beasts have too much sense to side with Great Britain in its ruthless and unholy purposes. That has been left to American toadies.

Chairman G. W. Wattles, of Nebraska's world's fair commission, proposes a reproduction in miniature of the whole state of Nebraska in a space of ten acres, with all its topographical features, its railroads, water courses, towns, cities, prominent buildings, cultivated lands, with small railroad trains to carry passengers all over it, and give them an idea of every section of the state. It is a good idea, and the Minnesota commission might profitably follow it.

Charles Major, the author of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," in a recent interview in the Detroit Journal said: "When I see that esome man has denied the truth of an interview with him I at once arrive at the conclusion that the reporter was correct, but that the man interviewed didn't realize how what he said would look in print, and so he threw the blame on the poor reporter. Politicians, I believe, are prone to do this."

A WHITTIER ODE.

When John Greenleaf Whittier was 19 years old he wrote an ode to be sung at the dedication of the Haverhill academy, where he was a student for a year. A copy of this composition has been furnished to the New York Independent from a manuscript copy in the possession of S. T. Pickard, and the poem is given its first publication through that periodical. It was sung to the air "Pillar of Glory" and reads as follows:

Hail, Star of Science! Come forth in they splendor;
Illumine these walls—let them evermore be
A shrine where thy votaries their offerings may tender;
Hallowed by genius and sacred to thee.
Warmed by the genial glow,
Here let thy laurels grow
Greenly for those who rejoice at they name;
Here let they spirit rest,
Thrilling the ardent breast,
Rowing the soul with the promise of fame.

Companion of Freedom! the light of her story,
Wherever her voice at thine altar is known,
There shall no cloud of oppression come o'er thee,
No envious tyrant thy splendor disown.
Sons of the proud and free,
Joyous shall cherish thee
Long as their banners in triumph shall wave,
And from this peerless height
Ne'er shall thy orb of light
Sink, but to set on Liberty's grave.

Smile, then, upon us; on hearts that have never Bowed down 'neath oppression's unhallowed control.
Spirit of Science! O, crown our endeavor;
Here shed thy beams on the night of the soul;
Then shall thy sons entwine,
Here for thy sacred shrine,
Wreaths that shall flourish through ages to come;
Bright in thy temple seen,
Robed in immortal green,
Fadeless memorials of genius shall bloom.

There are many white men who would willingly swap skins with the eminent Alabama educator in order to do work at all comparable with his.

The Toast Triumphant

By Ada Patterson.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

It happened at a dinner given to the two college boys at home for their holiday vacation. Judge Garvin, the great man of the village, was their host. Rose Allen, the belle of the town and of the countryside far beyond, was one of the guests and sat between "our boys," as the judge lovingly called them.

Others of the girl guests might have enjoyed that unique post of honor more than she. This was, in part, because she was a shy little one at best, a wild rose whose instinct was to hide its bloom. But there was a more potent reason still. The young men had called on her severally as well as collectively, and both had talked to her with unusual earnestness. Jubilant Harry Grissom had been so sobered by it that he did not whistle once the remainder of the day, and George Milton, serious always, had seemed positively grim ever since. And Rose Allen had been in a poignant state of indecision. She had cried several times, but had not yet decided what to do. They were such fine boys and she had known them ever since she could remember.

She toyed nervously with the bunch of violets beside her plate and stole an observant look at the men on either side. How firm and strong George's features were! They reminded her of the rugged outlines of the granite quarry down by the river. She had heard men say that he was "of the stuff that wins." It is "hard" stuff that wins, she reflected, stealing another look at the strong outlines. She admitted to herself that she was a little afraid of him. It was different with Harry. She smiled at the idea of anyone being afraid of him. How beautiful, his brown hair curled and his profile was carved and soft, almost like a woman's. She certainly always felt more comfortable in Harry's society.

Just then Judge Garvin rose. He was looking at her in an odd way that frightened and held her. He was such a compelling old gentleman. She thought his steady gray eyes had something disapproving in them. Why?

He held his glass high and bowing to the ladies, said: "Shall we drink to two men I know—types whom we all know?

"Here's to the man who means well and does well,' and 'Here's to the poor wretch who means well and does ill.'"

All smiled in return and raised their glasses. All but Rose, who was slower than the rest because of a strange trembling in her. What did Judge Garvin mean? She flashed a challenge of inquiry at him. He answered it fearlessly. They sipped their wine and reflected, she and the judge. The others were talking of the next college term and what it held for the young men.

Rose lingered a little over her adieus to the judge. Her hand clung to his and the cloud-like white wrap fell back from her eager, child face.

"Did you mean by that toast?" she faltered.

"Yes, exactly what you thought I did," he said. "That toast was intended as a searchlight to you, my child. I have lived long and know the undertows of character that drag men down. I love both the boys, and I have done something inhospitable and almost unfriendly to one of them. But I love you better than either, and I would not have you make the wrong choice."

"But, Judge Garvin, with the help of a woman he loves"—

"The man who is not strong enough to weather any kind of storm without a woman's help is too weak to breast it under any circumstances. The great man who said, 'There is no destiny but character is right.'"

"Rose, dear, where are you?" her mother called from the door.

The gfirl, her head drooping in its fleecy wrap, hurried to join her mother, and her host's eyes followed her fondly.

"'Tis a wise head for such young shoulders," he said, "It is not hard to guess what she will do."

A week after George Milton was admitted to the bar he married Rose Allen.

It was fifteen years later that Judge Garvin gave a dinner to Senator and Mrs. Milton, on their return from the senator's first session at Washington. The old judge was not an effusive man, but there were something like tears in his eyes as he laid his arm on the shoulders of his young townsman, and afterward, when he pressed his lips to the forehead of Madame Rose Allen.

Somebody mentioned Harry Grisson's name in the course of the chat of the neighborhood. "Gone to South America," said the chatter. "Left his wife and children behind. Don't know whether it means a separation or that he went in such a hurry he couldn't take them. He went under a cloud, you know. His employer suspected."

The chatter died away with a new course. Judge Garvin glanced uneasily, but remotely, at Madame Rose. She smiled and turned the glance of a proud and happy matron upon the man of granite features. The features softened strangely when he smiled at his wife.

"Shall we have a toast at parting, and may I propose it?" said Mrs. Allen. "It is a favorite of mine."

All looked at her with admiring attention, as her cheeks, flushing with a little of her old-time shyness, she touched the judge's glass with her own.

"Here's to two men, types we all know," she said. "'Here's to the man who means well and does well, and here's to the poor wretch who means well and does ill.'"

Who?

"Who befriended Uncle Sam?"
"I," said John Bull,
"I used my pull.
I befriended Uncle Sam."

"Who helped him lick Spain?"
"I," said the kaiser.
"I stood right by, sir.
I helped him lick Spain."

"Who stood off the powers?"
"I," said the czar,
"I was right thar.
I stood off the powers."

"Who's his friend now?"
"I," said they all,
With unanimous bawl.
"I'm his real friend now!"

They Protest Too Much.

Portland Oregonian: Great Britain and Japan want peace, and for that purpose they have joined fleets and armies. Russia wants peace, and to that end, it announces its army and navy are always ready. Great Britain and Japan want the integrity of China and the independence of Korea. Russia also desires the independence of Korea and the integrity of China. Where all are so anxious for the same result it is a pity to maintain such costly armaments of offense.

The Danish West Indies.

New York Tribune: For thirty years American statesmen have appreciated the strategic value of these islands, all the more valuable now with the prospect of an isthmian canal, and have been anxious lest they should fall into other hands in a way that would be troublesome to us. Finally, under the skilful management of Secretary Hay, the farseeing design of Secretary Seward has been carried out. Their usefulness to us is beyond question. We should make it equally certain that the new relation is one of usefulness and blessing to them.

A SOCIAL TRIUMPH

Was That Scored By Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Recently.

Getting Prince Henry For Dinner Gives Her Great Prestige.

It Increases the Chasm Between the Family Factions.

New York, March 14.—Last Sunday the riven houses of the Vanderbilts shook with diverse emotion. In the house of Cornelius a prince of the royal blood of Hohenzollern was feasted. In the house of Alfred there was no dancing or frivolity or foreign prince or gathering of fashion.

And so it is that the R. T. Wilsons, the most wonderful social diplomats in the history of this city, have sailed along to the apothesis—a dinner to Prince Henry of Prussia.

Although this entertainment was sanctioned and was thoroughly enjoyed by young Cornelius Vanderbilt, the finesse, the beautiful thoroughness of the scheme, the complete manner in which it was carried to a finish, is peculiarly Wilsonian in its character.

Bitterly opposed at one time or another by many of their fellow-members of the so-called Four Hundred, the Wilsons have invariably won out, not so much by an exhibition of power as by a peculiar capacity for legitimate and praiseworthy diplomacy.

The appearance of Prince Henry at the house of Cornelius means no small social triumph for the Wilsons.

It is only one of a dozen such triumphs for them. eYars ago the elder Miss Wilson made the most brilliant match in years, by marrying Ogden Goelet, a many-time millionaire. Then came the marriage of Orme Wilson to Miss Carrie Astor, which arraigned the house of Astor irrevocably on the society side of the Wilsons.

Last but not least in importance came the marriage of Miss Grace Wilson to Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., the prospective heir to $50,000,000. The marriage took place in spite of the social power and prestige of the elder Cornelius Vanderbilt and in spite of all he could do or say to the contrary.

Then came the death of the elder Cornelius, the practical disinheritance of his son and the turning over of his colossal fortune to his youngest son, Alfred, thereby making him in the eyes of society the head of the house of the elder Cornelius.

All this biography is necessary to explain the social heartburnings which have occurred since then among the partisans of the divided houses of Vanderbilt.

The two young families never met in company except by chance, never invited each other to tea or anything else, so far as known, never showed any degree of enthusiasm when speaking of each other.

The Wilson branch of the Vanderbilts, which is the Cornelius branch, bided their time with the true patience of diplomacy. They recognized the fact that whatever disagreement might exist was as to the Vanderbilt crown, the title to the the headship of the house.

That means much indeed, both to Vanderbilts and Wilsons. With both young men married and settled down, society waited for developments. There were no overt acts of hostility, no acrimonious interviews in the rude newspapers, no fuss or vulgarity. There was nothing but a polished glacial epoch, which meant the eventual breaking away of large icebergs and a tremendous commotion in the sea of society.

On the eastern horizon somebody in society discovered a Hohenzollern. The discoverer may have been a Wilson. As like as not it was. At any rate, several others among the "Four Hundred" discovered the prince at the same time, although nobody could lay claim to first discovery.

Underground society wires began to respond to pulls and hauls in many directions. Matrons were in despair, men were sent on impossible missions relating to foreign ambassador in Washington.

But in the midst of the social struggle for precedence in the entertainment of the prince, Baron Von Holleben, the German ambassador at Washington, received a small white note from this city.

According to gossip it was from Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, formerly Miss Wilson, of the respected but very socially diplomatic R. T. Wilsons.

Likewise according to gossip, the note stated in concise, polite language the fact that Mrs. Goelet and one or two others among the Wilson family had the pleasure of the acquaintance of his majesty William of Germany.

Therefore the Wilson-Vanderbilts, as Emperor William had honored them in Germany, would be only too glad to return in a small measure that honor by giving a small dinner to Prince Henry at his convenience.

There came a cablegram across the sea from Emperor William which at once settled the matter. In short, it directed Prince Henry to accept the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Society fell back and gasped. "Outwitted by the Wilsons again!" was the general verdict. To the greater number of society people the choice of Prince Henry meant but little. To Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt it meant much.

It meant the holding of a scepter—temporarily it may be—as the absolute head of the house of the deceased Cornelius Vanderbilt. It meant a triumph over social rivals such as only the Wilsons have ever before enjoyed.

With this triumph there have arisen a great many rumors as to further social warfare. It is said that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., who sympathizes with Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, appealed to the committee on arrangements for the prince' entertainment in favor of her favorite daughter-in-law. But, regardless of committees and family feuds, the prince accepted the invitation to the entertainment and abode by it.

Years ago, before she was Mrs. Cornelius, Grace Wilson drew first card in the present situation without knowing it. It was on board the yacht of Mrs. Ogden Goelet, her older sister, where both Prince Henry and the kaiser were entertained.

Whn Mrs. Goelet's daughter Beatrice died recently the kaiser ordered Admiral Baudisin to express his sympathy and place a wreath on the grave.

In the natural order of things Mrs. Ogden Goelet would have been the favored American hostess of Prince Henry, she being the elder, but her period of mourning made that out of the question.

HISSED.

Councillors at Battersea Speak Slightingly of King Edward.

London, March 14.—During the discussion before the Battersea borough council of the proposal to make an appropriation for public entertainments in commemoration of the coronation of King Edward, two of the councillors, who strongly opposed a celebration of the coronation, said the king was merely a figurehead and that it did not matter to the people of Battersea what individual occupied the throne.

They ridiculed the idea that the name of the king should be mentioned with bated breath.

The remarks of the two councillors were hissed and the audience cheered the response of a conservative councillor who said: "Traitors to the king ought to be shot dead!"

The proposal for an appropriation was passed.

In the Southampton town council a motion to appropriate £1000 for the purpose of celebrating the king's coronation was declared to be preposterous and illegal and to be "forcing the people to pay for things they did not believe in." Surprise was expressed that teetotaler councillors should support such a motion, seeing the interest the king had recently taken in beer making and knowing that gambling and horse racing were the curse of the country.

The motion for an appropriation was carried by a large majority.

ROUGH ON FARR.

Judge Lochren's Decision In the Timber Cases.

Washington, March 14.—The outcome of the timber trespass cases before Judge Lochren in Minnesota and the discrediting of Special Agent Farr's report is a hard blow at the Indian office.

It establishes a precedent in several other cases pending. Farr is the special agent who created so much of a sensation last summer by claiming that some of the Minnesota lumbermen laid a trap for him.

Land Commissioner Hermann, who formerly administered the dead and down timber operations, smiled when he heard of the verdict. The dead and down matters were taken from Hermann's jurisdiction three years ago and turned over to Commissioner Jones of the Indian office.

Thomas H. Shevlin, who came up from Norfolk today, said that he had been advised that lumbermen had won out, but he did not desire to make a statement now.

FEMALE HORSE THIEF.

Birdie McCarty Arrested and Brought to Fort Scott.

Fort Scott, Kan., March 14.—The officers are now dealing with the first female horse thief since the palmy days of the reign of May Colvin, the notorious woman desperado, who invaded this section of the country about ten years ago. This time it is auburn-haired Birdie McCarthy, who is a member of the gang that has been operating in Kansas and Missouri towns for several months. She stole a horse and buggy from a livery man at Bright, in this county, a few days ago, it is alleged, and was captured at Baxter Springs and brought to this city for trial. She is a daring little woman about 22 years old, and has given the officers considerable trouble.

OIL AND RELIGION.

Churchmen Try to Stop Sunday Labor at Wells.

Findlay, Ohio, March 14.—The oil operators in Cass township, north of the city, are striking a snag in the opposition of many people again Sunday work on the wells. It is found necessary, in many cases, to pump the wells the entire time to keep the salt water out of them, and if compelled to shut down on Sunday, it would mean the loss of two or more days' work in pumping out the water in many wells.

Great revival meetings have been held in Cass township lately and many people have been converted. The barking of the gas engines very much disturbs the worship in several churches, and this is the chief cause of the hostility of the religious people. One woman, who owns a farm on which are situated many wells, says she will not receive a cent of royalty if the wells are pumped on Sunday, and another says she prays that all wells that are pumped on Sunday will go dry. Intense excitement and hostility between the producers and many of the lessee owners prevail. The matter of pumping on Sunday has been tested in the courts several times and been decided in favor of the producer where it is necessary to keep the salt water out.

WOMEN

We Can Tell You How to Overcome Paleness and Weakness.

The question is often asked why it is that women of this generation suffer as they do. Perhaps they are paying the penalty of indiscretions committed by their ancestors. Undoubtedly such is the case, for there has never been an age when so much care has been exercised by women in general in regard to Hygiene and the care of themselves.

There is one thing that we do know and that is most women need more strength and more rosy cheeks. They need to be built up, made physically strong, given a good appetite and especially see that their blood is made pure and red.

Nothing will do all this for women as well, or as quickly, as Vinol. It strengthens every organ of the body. It above all tones up the stomach and enables this important organ to obtain all the nourishment necessary for the replacing of waste tissue and for the revivifying of the blood.

Especially have we had opportunity to note the benefits done by Vinol during convalescence from disease nor do we know of anything more valuable to nursing mothers, it does so much towards enabling the mother to gain strength for herself and the little one, from the food she eats.

Here is a letter bearing on this subject, written by Mr. W. J. Hamilton of 1706 Times Street, Keokuk, Iowa.

"My wife was left in a very much weakened condition with a severe cough. She had no appetite and had gotten down physically to the very bottom rung of the ladder. I gave her Vinol and the cough disappeared, her appetite returned and now she is feeling first-class, is getting stronger and better and gaining in flesh every day."

Do not forget that we guarantee that Vinol will do all we claim for it and back our guarantee with our promise to refund to anyone the price of this medicine, who is not thoroughly satisfied with results.

WAGE SCALE

Arbitrarily Extended a Year By the Anthracite Operators.

Philadelphia, March 14.—The following notice was posted today at all the collieries throughout the anthracite coal region in Pennsylvania:

"Rates of wages now in effect will be continued until April 1, 1903, and thereafter subject to sixty days' notice. Local differences will be adjusted as heretofore."

The rate of wages now paid to mine workers in the anthracite region is the same as that granted to them as a result of the great strike in the fall of 1900. At that time the coal operators promised that the rate should remain until April 1, 1901. Prior to the latter date the mine workers, through the officers of their national organization, made several demands on the operators, among them the recognition of the union. This the mine owners refused, but instead continued the rate of wages granted in 1900 to April 1 this year. At the recent national convention of the United Mine Workers at Indianapolis, it was voted to again ask the operators to grant the men several concessions. Among these were the recognition of the union and an eight hour day. At the same time the national officers were instructed to seek a conference with the operators and accordingly letters were sent to the presidents of the several coal companies asking for such a meeting.

As far as is publicly known none of the presidents granted the request. Failing in this the members have called a convention to be held at Shamokin next Tuesday at which all the coal mines in the anthracite region will be represented and at which the vital question of whether or not to strike will either be finally decided of referred to the national officers with power to act.

How the convention will take the notice which is to be posted is, of course, not positively known at this time, but several of the district officers have been quoted as saying that if the companies grant only the continuance of the present wage scale, the rank and file of the men will not be satisfied.

Travel Like Princes.

Those who saw the special train in which H. R. H. Prince Henry of Prussia made his tour of the United States are comparing it with other trains in regular service, and it is admitted that none of the cars in the train compare favorably with the buffet, compartment and standard sleeping cars of the Pioneer Limited trains of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway in daily service between the Twin Cities and Chicago. The people of the Northwest will have the satisfaction of knowing that at any time they can not only travel like princes, but can do several better.

HENRY B. WILLIS DEAD.

Was State Oil Inspector Under Governor McGill.

St. Paul, March 14.—Henry B. Willis, a well known citizen is dead at the soldiers' home hospital. Mr. Willis had been ailing for a long time and his death was not unexpected. He was about 56 years of age.

For many years the deceased took an active part in local Republican politics and was appointed state oil inspector by Governor McGill.

By profession he was an expert accountant and considered one of the best in the Northwest. He was an accomplished whist player and spent much of his leisure time at the game.

For many years he was a bookkeeper at the office of the gas company, where he was employed at the time of his final sickness.

Mr. Willis was a brother-in-law of Crawford Livingstone. He leaves a wife but no children.

CABLE FLASHES.

The report of Herbert Booth, third son of Gen. Booth, who was in command of the Salvation Army in Australia, had withdrawn from the army, is confirmed at London. Ill health is the cause of Commander Booth's withdrawal.

It is now authoritatively reported that Mgr. Sbaretti, who recently sailed for New York, en route for Manila as apostolic delegate to the Philippines, will on his arrival in America, receive orders from the vatican not to proceed beyond Washington on his journey, at least for the time being.

Telegraphic communication between Jamaica and Colon was interrupted Wednesday at about the same time that the United States squadron of warships weighed anchor. It is thought probable that the anchor of one of the ships parted the submarine cable. The squadron was anchored outside the entrance of the harbor.

SCIENCE HALL

At Montana State University Destroyed By Fire.

Helena, Mont., March 14.—A special to the Independent from Missoula says that Science hall, at the State university, is practically destroyed by a fire which started about 1:30 o'clock this morning. The Missoula fire department went out to the fire but were handicapped owing to scarcity of water, and could do but little to check the flames. The hall is the second finest building on the campus, and is worth in the neighborhood of $100,000, although the equipment contained brings the total value up to a much larger figure. The building is fully insured. It has been in use less than three years. The origin of the fire is unknown.

St. Joseph, Mich., March 14.—Work is to begin at once on the Big Four railroad's receiving docks. The docks will be 800 feet long, 500 feet wide, with two large receiving warehouses.

Following the building of the dock, the Big Four will operate a line of freight steamers between Duluth, Milwaukee and this port.

Work on the extension of the government piers will be renewed. A 1090-foot extension will be added to the north pier, 1200 feet to the south pier, and the work, when completed, will make St. Joseph the deepest waterway on the east shore.

AT WEST DULUTH

A strike among some of the boys employed at the Duluth Match factory, in West Duluth, this morning, resulted in trouble, and warrants are out for the arrest of Phillip Bourasa and Bernard Benson, two of the larger boys and alleged ringleaders in the trouble. There are two warrants out for each boy, one charging trespassing on the property of the match company and the other charging assault on Carmini Izzo.

Some time ago the company hired small boys to perform a certain piece of light work, for which they were paid from $1 to $1.25 per day. Their places were afterward filled by two larger boys, who worked for the same wages. After a time they grew dissatisfied and demanded more pay, but this was refused. One of the boys then quit and the other left yesterday. Bourasa and Benson are said to have incited thirteen other boys, between the ages of 15 and 17, to strike this morning. The boys congregated in front of the building, and Bourasa and Benson are said to have entered the factory. They were ordered out by the foreman, but managed later to slip in without the knowledge of the foreman.

Carmini Izo, who returned to West Duluth recently after touring with the Banda Rossa, and who has joined Launer's concert band, began work at the factory this morning. He had his employment changed because of the strike among the boys, and was given the work that some of them had been performing. It is alleged that when Bourasa and Benson got in the factory they began tantalizing Izo, and when the latter at last told them to go away and leave him alone or they would get into trouble, they assaulted him with a club. It is expected that both Bourasa and Benson will be placed under arrest by noon today, as the officers were looking for them during the latter part of the forenoon.

IMPORTANT MEETING.

Commercial Club Will Hear Report of Committee.

Tonight the West Duluth Commercial club will hold a very important meeting in Stewart's hall, and it is essential that every member be in attendance. The committee that was appointed at the last meeting to thoroughly canvass West Duluth to see if the subscriptions could not be brought up to the amount required will make its report, and it is likely that the fate of the club as regards the gymnasium and athletic association will depend largely on the success that the committee met with in the canvass.

Yesterday afternoon members of the committee made a store to store canvass of West Duluth, and no man who is supposed to have any interest at all in West Duluth was allowed to escape. Should the scheme to have a gymnasium in connection with the club fail, the commercial club idea will be carried out just the same by the business men of this part of the city. The movement has now acquired too good a start to permit interest to die out, and the business men are determined that the club shall accomplish something along the line of good for West Duluth, even if the club cannot have a gymnasium or all the social advantages.

BABY IS KIDNAPED

Chicago Girl of 23 Disappears With Child She Loved.

Miss Jessie Campbell Is Missing With Friend's Infant.

Young Woman Was a Frequent Visitor at the House.

Chicago, March 14.—The mysterious disappearance of a 2-year-old child with a 23-year-old woman who had become much attached to it is thought by the police of the Twenty-second street station to be a kidnaping. hTe police are working on the case, but have no clew to the whereabouts of woman or child.

The child's mother, Mrs. Sarah Hayes, of 2918 Fifth avenue, is almost distracted.

The missing woman is Miss Jessie Campbell, whose mother keeps a boarding house at 464 Thirty-first street. On Monday afternoon Miss Campbell was visiting Mrs. Hayes. She took the child, saying she was going to the store. She did not return. On Tuesday morning the mother received a letter from Miss Campbell telling her not to worry; that her baby and Miss Campbell would return that evening. They did not appear. Then Mrs. Hayes reported to the police. Lieut. Cronin detailed two detectives on the case.

Mrs. Hayes says that at one time her husband boarded at the home of Mrs. Campbell. When he married his wife became acquainted with Miss Campbell. The two became fast friends. Miss Campbell was a frequent visitor at the Hayes home. During these visits she showed, Mrs. Hayes said, a marked love for the b. She often took it out walking and street car riding, and when with the child paid no attention to any one else. So when Miss Campbell started to take the baby to the store with her on Monday nothing was thought of it until she failed to return. The police were not told of the matter until the letter arrived.

Mrs. Hayes says that she believed the letter was only sent by Miss Campbell to gain time and delay the appearance of the police in the case. She says the absence of any address or clew in the letter as to where Miss Campbell is aroused her suspicions.

The father of the baby is employed in a commission house on South Water street. Mrs. Campbell is a widow. She is as much surprised as Mrs. Hayes at her daughter's disappearance, and is at a loss to account for it. The young woman always has been a dutiful daughter heretofore, her mother says.

ALL RAIL.

Northern Pacific Makes Big Contract For Hauling Logs.

Minneapolis, March 14.—The Northern Pacific has just closed contracts with a number of Minneapolis mills for the transportation all-rail of more than 100,000,000 feet of logs from points in Northern Minnesota along the line of the Minnesota and International and the former St. Paul & Duluth roads. These contracts follow upon the success which the railroad company had last year in discharging similar contracts with the same firms. The latter have proved all-rail transportation cheaper and more satisfactory than by the old water route, or steam driving and rafting in other words.

The first of the contracts will be entered upon immediately, and all will be carried out as speedily as possible.

St. Paul, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—River men expect an unusually early season and are already preparing to put their craft in commission. QUARANTINE RAISED.

People of Woodstock Are Free to Travel Again.

St. Paul, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state board of health has raised the quarantine imposed Sunday on the village of Woodstock, Pipestone county. The citizens of the village are allowed to resume railroad and mail communication with the outside world. The village authorities caused the board much trouble, as they neither reported cases of smallpox nor took any steps, the board says, to prevent the spread of the disease. Indeed, the village trustees elected no board of health until within the last few days. The quarantine of the village resulted in the state board's orders being obeyed, and no further difficulty is expected.

A Good Deal

Has been said and written recently about the new fad known as the "no-breakfast habit," some people claiming that by omitting the morning meal the health will be improved and life lengthened. This may be all right for idle people who arise at noon, but for the average business man or woman a good breakfast is an absolute necessity as a stimulant for the day's labor. When traveling the appetite is sharpened, and experienced travelers say that breakfast is the most enjoyable meal "en route." The officials of the Milwaukee road have so arrange their dining car service on the Pioneer Limited that passengers are enabled to obtain most anything they want in the way of a morning meal. A model dining car is attached to the train at Milwaukee and until Chicago is reached breakfast is served "a la carte," that is, the passenger may order and have served anything that may suit his palate and pay for what he gets. It is not necessary to order a $1 meal when simply a light breakfast is desired. In addition to the "a la carte" plan, sixteen individual club breakfasts are served at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1. This is a decided departure in dining car service, and is appreciated by the Milwaukee's many patrons.

PLAN TO JUMP

Over 142 Captains Meets With Strong Opposition.

Washington, March 14.—Officers of the infantry arm are greatly wrought up over the prospect of the transfer of Maj. Robert L. Bullard, now of the subsistence department, whose nomination as a major of infantry was sent to the senate some weeks ago, together with that of Maj. Frank F. Eastman, twenty-eighth infantry, to be a major in the subsistence department. The effect of these nominations is an interchange of commissions between Bullard and Eastman. Both officers have come to Washington in their own interests, while some of the twenty majors and 142 captains of infantry who will be adversely affected by a senatorial confirmation of the nominations have shown up here in opposition to the favorable action of the senate.

Bullard used to be an infantry captain and was transferred to the subsistence department on account of services in the Philippines. His reward was considered fitting and there was no special objection to the good fortune which attended him. That was in June, 1898. He applied for transfer back to the line to the position on the lineal list, held by Eastman, who was anxious to become a subsistence officer.

The result of this mutual transfer was that Bullard returned to his old arm, jumping 162 officers, of whom 142 are captains and twenty are majors. Secretary Root says in explanation to the senate military committee that there is no connection between Bullard's promotion to the subsistence department in June, 1898, and his present application for transfer to the line to Eastman's place, and that the nominations should be regarded without reference to previous conditions.

Infantry officers are determined to fight this innovation, however.

SIGNIFICANT STORY

Told By the President Regarding 1904 Campaign.

Warshington March 14.—President Roosevelt recently told a story at a dinner party, at which Senator Hanna was also one of the guests, which may have an important bearing on the presidential campaign of 1904. Already it is accepted as evidence that the president is looking sharply after his own political future and incidentally raises the question whether Senator Hanna will be one of his rivals. The story is that a short time ago Professor Booker T. Washington asked Judson W. Lyons, the register of the United States treasury, whether he favored the nomination of Roosevelt in 1904. Lyons, who is a colored man from Georgia, possessing great influence with men of his race throughout the United States, after asking Mr. Roosevelt whether he came to him in the interest of President Roosevelt, said he would be happy indeed to use his influence for President Roosevelt unless, he added, Senator Hanna should be a candidate.

"If Mr. Hanna desires the nomination," he continued, "I must and will support him whether I retain my present office or not."

The conversation was reported to the president, who promptly said: "All right. I admire a man who is loyal to his friends. I have nothing to fear from a man like that. Mr. Lyons' statement does not jar me a bit and he shall retain his office." This story has caused a great amount of gossip in Washington, as it has set the politicians and public men to talking about the chances of Roosevelt and Hanna and whether they will be rival presidential candidates. It seems to be the general opinion that the president has not injured his chances of nomination any by his manly treatment of Register Lyone, but there are also many public men who believe that Senator Hanna may be a candidate and a popular one at that.

Those who are closest to the Ohio senator, however, say that he has no idea of seeking the nomination in 1904 and that he will assist President Roosevelt in every way in his power. The president and Senator Hanna are warm friends and it is morally certain that if the senator should decide to become a candidate Mr. Roosevelt would be the first person to be made aware of his intention and that he would get the information from Mr. Hanna's own lips.

MARQUAND'S WILL.

Son Must Pay Debts Out of Inheritance.

New York, March 14.—The will of Henry G. Marquand, the banker, dated Dec. 1, 1900, was filed for probate in the office of the surrogate. After providing that the sum of $1000 be divided among his employes at the discretion of his executors, he divides his estate between his children and grandchildren. In a codicil, dated Dec. 12, 1901, Mr. Marquand directs his executors to deduct from the income of the trust fund that his will provides for his son Henry any money the testator may have paid or set apart for the benefit of the firm of Henry Marquand & Co. and to divide such money in four equal shares between the testator's son, Allan Marquand, and his daughter, Elizabeth M. Goodwin, and the testator's grandsons, Galbraith Ward and Marquand Ward. The codicil then states:

"It is my intention that my son Henry shall not at any time be permitted or have the power to anticipate, assign or charge the income of the one-sixth part of my estate left in trust for him and that no part of same be subject to any claim, debt, or demand of his creditors, or any judgment, decree, or order of the court upon such claims, debts or demands."

CARDINAL GIBBONS

Ready to Start For Rome If Pope Dies.

Baltimore, d., March 14.—Cardinal Gibbons has determined that there shall not be the slightest delay in his starting for Rome in the event of the death of Pope Leo. He is in almost rally receipt of information concerning the pontiff's condition. Immediately on the death of the pope the cardinals are summoned, and ten days' grace are allowed them to get together. At the death of the last pope, Pius IX, the conclave met and elected Leo to the papal chair before Cardinal McCloskey, of New York, could get to Rome. Cardinal Gibbons, however, has decided that it shall not occur at the next conclave through any delay on his part.

LAWYERS CLAIM

Jerome Usurps the Functions of Grand Jury.

New York, March 14.—Blumenthal, Moss & Feiner, lawyers at 35 Nassau street, have instituted proceedings which they say will result in checking alleged arbitrary and illegal acts on the part of District Attorney Jerome. They accuse the district attorney of usurping powers not conferred upon him by the constitution or the laws.

The members of the firm are attorneys for I. J. Pocher & Co., whose offices at 40 West Thirty-fourth street were raided by the Anti-Policy society and some county detectives. A desk used by A. J. Adams, the so-called "policy king," was broken open and alleged policy paraphernalia discovered therein was seized.

Blumenthal, Moss & Feiner addressed a long letter to the grand jury and will appear before that body in regard to the matter. In their letter the lawyers say:

"The district attorney's office falsely and wilfully issued subpoenas in the name of the grand jury of this county requiring persons to appear before that body, and upon their appearing in the ante-room of the grand jury room, has compelled the persons thus served to proceed to a secret chamber of the district attorney's office and submit to an examination in a criminal action. In other words, the prosecuting officer of this county, through his assistants, has usurped the power of the grand jury to issue subpoenas as a cloak for the illegal and unconstitutional purpose of putting citizens through the infamous proceeding known in police circles as 'the third degree.'"

LITERARY THEFTS.

Rare Books and Autographs Stolen and Sold.

New York, March 14.—Literary thefts of a peculiar character were exposed in the Yorkville court, when Edward Kearney, 20 years of age, was arraigned before Magistrate Mayo, charged with the larceny of rare books, autograph letters, and valuable manuscripts from the home of John D. Crimmins, 40 East Sixty-eighth street. Kearney had been employed for some years by Mr. Crimmins as second secretary, his especial duties being the care of the large and valuable library of Mr. Crimmins and the arrangement of autograph letters. Mr. Crimmins was not in court, and the case was adjourned, the prisoner being held in $1500 bail.

One book which Mr. Crimmins especially prized was Smith's "History of Virginia." This volume was dated 1627, and after it came into Mr. Crimmins' posession he had it handsomely rebound, with insertions of plates dated 1621. In this respect it was unique, there being no other copy like it. This was offered to a dealer for $200.

Mr. Crimmins had missed especially also three volumes of the first edition of Shelley, issued from the Kelmscott press, an early edition of Milton in two volumes, and some rare autograph letters. Among the latter was a letter of George Washington written at Valley Forge, autograph letters of Robert Burns, correspondence between Wilkie Collins and Charles Dickens, and some valuable letters of Thomas Moore.

STRIKE EXTENDS.

More American Woolen Company's Weavers Go Out.

Pascoag, R. I., March 14.—The strike of the weavers in the mills of the American Woolen company has extended to this village, and about 180 weavers of the Anchor mills, controlled by the same company, have left their looms today. The action is partly in sympathy with the effort of the Olneyville strikers to abolish the two-loom system and partly on account of the grievances which are said to exist in the local mills.

The strike affects both the Anchor mills in this place and the Anchor mills in Granteville, where goods are finished, and throws about 300 out of employment at the latter place.

SURPRISE IS SPRUNG

State Produces Witness Who Saw Brown-Porter Fight.

Eli Hart, Cashier of American Express Company, the Man.

Says Porter Knocked Brown Down and Kicked Him.

A new witness appeared in the case against Nelson Porter, charged with manslaughter in the second degree, in district court this morning. Eli L. Hunt, cashier of the American Express company, was an eyewitness of the trouble outside of Campbell & Doran's saloon during which John Brown met his death, and his evidence was important to the state.

He did not appear at the coroner's inquest or at the municipal court hearing, but his testimony was discovered later. He said that he had been to the theater on the night of the fight, and was walking east on Superior street just west of Second avenue west, when he saw Porter, the defendant, run up and strike Brown, knocking him down. Then Porter kicked Brown, according to the witness. He was about fifteen feet away when the blow was given. He did not see Brown strike Porter.

On cross-examination a determined effort was made to break down his testimony, but without effect. The defense went into the manner in which the state got his evidence on cross-examination, and the questions indicated a hope of discovering that the evidence had been cooked up after the trouble. On re-direct examination Mr. McClintock showed that the only times he had talked with the witness were when he had seen him in the express office, in the presence of others.

William Morris, the woodsman who was with Brown when he was hurt, told his story yesterday afternoon and this morning. He said they came to Duluth on the night of Feb. 15, looking around for a place to get something to eat, drank a good deal, and finally went into Campbell & Doran's saloon, where Brown asked the defendant if he had any chicken sandwiches. Porter said he had none, but he had some chicken tamales, which were just as good. He handed Brown some, and Brown said he did not want them. Porter refused to take them back and demanded his pay. They had some words, and Mr. Doran ordered them out of the saloon. They walked west on Superior street a few feet, when Porter came up and hit Brown, after again demanding his money.

P. Doran, one of the proprietors of the saloon, testified that he put the men out because they were making a row, but he said that Porter acted in a "perfectly gentlemanly manner" while he was in there.

George Barney testified that he was on Superior street walking west when the row occurred, and he saw Porter strike Brown. It was very dark, and he did not see much of the fight, so he was not very certain about some features of his evidence.

The questions asked the witness on cross-examination, indicate an intention on the part of the defense to show that Brown struck the first blow, though there has been no testimony to that effect as yet. In the evidence of all of the state's witnesses except that of William Morris there is nothing to show that Brown did not strike Porter first.

The case was still on trial at noon, and is likely to go to the jury late this afternoon or tomorrow morning.

Tony Held, accused of grand larceny in the first degree, was convicted yesterday afternoon of grand larceny in the second degree.

Albert H. Fisher, who was indicted for keeping a house of ill-fame, appeared this morning and pleaded not guilty. The order forfeiting his bail, which was made yesterday because he did not appear then, was withdrawn.

Andrew Margo pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault in the first degree.

Mrs. Cesare Belucci and Mrs. Emilio Brilo were brought down from the Mesaba range yesterday afternoon on bench warrants issued on indictments charging them with selling malt liquor without a license. They were arraigned this morning and will plead tomorrow. They are accused of selling beer without a license at the Fayal location, Jan. 29. According to the indictment, Mrs. Belucci sold Charles Curry two quarts of beer for 20 cents, and Mrs. Emilio Brilo sold the same man one quart of beer for 10 cents.

BERRIES.

Fine Lot Arrive on Michigan Street---Come From Florida.

The first straight shipment of strawberries of the season arrived on Michigan street this morning, and it vied with the weather bureau's announcement of a cold wave as an indication of spring. Strawberries have been on the market before, in small lots, but this bunch included 100 quarts straight from Florida, and they did not last long at 45 cents a quart. They were big, handsome, luscious fellows, every one of a uniform size, and that size nearly as big as an English walnut. The wholesale price of 15 cents a quart grew somewhat by the time the baskets reached the consumers, of course, but strawberries will keep coming from now on, and they will cheapen gradually until they get down where everybody can indulge in them.

Wax beans made their appearance on the market today also, and they were very tempting and very expensive. They brought $5 to $5.50 per box, and the boxes were not very big ones, either. They found a ready sale, however, like the strawberries, for there are plenty of tastes in Duluth now that demand such things and have the financial standing back of them that is necessary to keep pace with such appetites.

To get down to the common level, after treating of these aristocratic new arrivals on Michigan street, butter and eggs are cheaper. Eggs are down to 15 cents a dozen, and butter is 28 cents a pound. These are more hopeful signs, but—

On the other hand, potatoes have taken a brace and are now demanding 85 cents a bushel, a higher price than they have dared to ask for some time. Sweet potatoes have gone on a sympathetic strike for higher prices, and they are bringing $2.65 to $2.75 per bushel. The only excuse for the alliance between these staples is in the similarity of their names, for a Michigan street man, who ought to know, says they are no relatives at all, the potato belonging to the night shade tribe and the sweet potato being allied with the morning glory family.

Austin Meagher Tells of the Effect of Whisky.

The jury in the case of Austin J. Meagher against John J. O'Flaherty this morning returned a verdict awarding the plaintiff $150 for his services in cruising for the defendant.

The next case taken up in Judge Cant's court was between the same parties, but on a different deal. In this one Meagher charges O'Flaherty with cheating him out of a half interest in some property, and some of his allegations are rather sensational. Meagher claims that he took up some land in section 27, 60-24, in Itasca county, and that the defendant advanced him $1.25 per acre for the purpose of proving up, for which he was to get a half interest in the land. Later he was told to come to Duluth, as there was a deal on to sell the pine on the land. He says he came, and that the defendant and L. H. Corcoran, the attorney, gave him a couple of drinks of whisky, which affected him so that the figures on the deed they had danced up and down and he could not read it. He says they told him that the timber had been sold, and that if he would sign a deed to O'Flaherty he would get his money for the timber, and that O'Flaherty would deed a half interest back to him.

He signed the deed, but now he alleges that the representations of the defendant were false and designed to cheat him out of his property. He never got his deed, he says, and later O'Flaherty, after having converted the property to his own use, sold it, reserving the mineral hight. He sues for his half interest in the mineral rights and for $1600, his share of the proceeds of the property.

Yesterday afternoon L. H. Corcoran was called as a witness, and when he was reached he was not present. An attachment for contempt was issued for him, and he came into court this morning. He explained that he had misunderstood the time that he was called for, and the attachment was released when he paid the costs.

Judge Ensign and a jury this morning were trying the case of Katherine W. Upham against George A. Lounsberry to recover $900 damages for the falling of a retaining wall built by the defendant at a cost of $685 for the plaintiff.

A NOVELTY.

Electrical Dance Arranged For National Guardsmen's Exposition.

The National Guardsmen have arranged a new and novel attraction for the magnificent indoor exposition. It is an electrical dance to take place in the glittering snow cave of the Siberian theater.

This will not be the only theatrical attraction of merit, however, as the soldiers have decided to import Arabian and Japanese acrobats and an Hawaiian quartet, together with several very interesting vaudeville novelties.

Arrangements have been made by the central high school to have an exhibit in the educational department that will be very similar to that which received so many compliments from Pan American exposition visitors.

Arrangements have also been made for a number of very fine paintings and water colors to be exhibited in the Fine Arts building during the exposition.

THE SEASON'S SHOOTING.

Duluth Central Gun Club Will Make a Start.

The Duluth Central Gun club will start its season's shooting tomorrow afternoon, and from that time on the regular shoots will be held all summer, with the usual tournament along in the middle of the season.

There will be four events to be shot tomorrow, beginning with a practice event to get the hands of the marksmen in line after their winter of inaction. Then the handicap medal, the club buttons and the F. D. Day company trophy will be shot for.

This program is made with the proviso, of course, that any manifestations in the shape of a blizzard will serve to postpone it.

Congressmen Not Satisfied With the Census Bill.

Washington, March 14.—By a vote of five to four the house committee on census today directed that the bill drawn by Representative Hay, of Virginia, be reported amending section five of the recently passed permanent census act, by peremptorily placing all the employes of the census office who were on the rolls March 7, 1902, except unskilled laborers, in the classified service.

AN OMNIBUS BILL

Washington, March 14.—The house committee on territories today decided upon an "omnibus" territorial bill which will provide for statehood for Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma, instead of separate statehood bills for each territory. The bills have heretofore been separate, but today they were harmonized in their provisions, and Chairman Knox was authorized to incorporate them in one measure.

Found Near Nickerson.

Chief of Police George Lutton, of West Superior, this morning received a letter from Sheriff Hawley, of Pine county, Minnesota, stating that an unknown man was found dead Monday in the woods about a mile west of Nickerson. The man was about 30 years of age and would weigh 140 pounds. He was dressed as a laboring man and there was nothing in his pockets that would lead to discovery of his identity. It was evident that the man had been murdered as there was a bullet hole in his head. No information was given as to the probable length of time that the man had been dead. Sheriff Hawley wished inquiry set afoot whether there is anybody from the head of the lakes reported missing in the vicinity of Nickerson.

The Evening Herald is the Duluth business man's paper, because it prints the news while it is news—not stuff warmed over for readers next day—and because it reaches him at an hour when he has time to read it, advertisements and all. To advertisers who want to reach business men the moral is obvious.

COAL IN MICHIGAN

Only Coal Field In Drainage Basin of St. Lawrence.

Is All Bituminous, Leaning to the Gas-Coal Type.

Trade of Asiatic Russia and the Countries Tributary Thereto.

From The Herald
Washington Bureau.

Washington, March 14.—(Special to The Herald.—The northern interior or Michigan coal field is the only coal field field found in the drainage basin of the St. Lawrence river. It lies, as Dr. Alfred C. Lane tells us in part 3 of the twenty-second annual report of the United States geological survey now in press, between Lake Michigan and Lake Huron, in the center of the lower peninsula of Michigan, and extends from Jackson county on the south to Roscommon county on the north, and from Tuscola county on the east to Kent county on the west, embracing an area of about 7500 square miles. The coal basin is a low, flat country as compared with the surrounding rim of higher land, which rises from 400 to 1000 feet above lake level.

In the order of time the development of this field began with tre mines around Jackson, dating back to 1835; next the Cedar Grand field, an area twenty miles each way from Lansing, in Eaton and Ingham counties was developed. The Owosso district, including the mines near Owosso and Corunna, in Shiawassee county, and near Flushing and Elk, in Genesee county, was opened somewhat later, and last the Saginaw district, including Saginaw county and the Verne mine, and the field of Huron county.

Mr. Lane believes that new areas of coal will be found, but he gives the warning that reports of coal near Detroit, New Baltimore, Alperin and west toward Charlevoix, are usually due to black shales, and that this region may safely be assumed to be without commercial coal. It was formerly erroneously supposed that there was but one workable coal bed in Michigan. There are certainly seven, of which three are probably much more important than the others, but the irregularities of the basin prevent exact correlations. The coal does not, as a rule, lie deep. It is all bituminous, leaning to the gas-coal type. The Verne coals can be coked, but are high in sulphur. As a steam fuel the coal ranks with the Hocking valley and below the Pocahontas coals. It is interesting to note that the greatest impetus to the Saginaw coal mining dates from 1895, and was due to the threatened decadence of salt manufacture, dependent in turn on the decadent lumber industry, which has heretofore furnished the fuel, and to the necessity of finding some other source of cheap fuel. The pillar and chamber system of mining is practically the only one used. The workmen are from various districts; more than half of them are American born, and those not native have been on an average sixteen years in the United States.

The workmen of the mines around Bay City and Saginaw scatter through the city and make no distinct class by themselves. The miners and operators are not admitted into the Ohio convention, but meet in Saginaw to arrange their own scale. Mine-cutting machines are most extensively used in the Bay City field. For tramming, mules are used; not steam nor electricity as yet. The land, as a rule, is leased at about 8 cents per ton royalty, and has not generally been bought outright for mining, as it is valuable for agricultural purposes.

The production of coal in 1880 was 129,052 short tons; in 1890, it was 7,4977 tons, valued at over $1,259,000. Saginaw and Bay counties produced more than nine-tenths of the coal in 1900. The indications all point to both more mines and increased output of present mines in the immediate future. The local markets are the most important; but the coal is spreading into the wheat country of Wisconsin, Minnesota and the Dakotas, because of the very low rates given by railroads, which would otherwise haul empty cars westward. The Pere Marquette, the Michigan Central and the Grand Trunk are the chief coal-carrying roads, while Saginaw bay and Saginaw river bring lake transportation to the heart of the coal basin.

The growing interest of the United States in the trade of Asiatic Russia and the countries tributary thereto lends especial interest to a statement just received by the treasury bureau of statistics from a report of the Belgian commercial agent at Vladivostock, recently published in the Bulletin Commercial (Brussels. The statement is especially important in view of the fact that the commerce of Siberia has recently been brought under the general customs laws of Russia. The statement is summarized by the British board of trade as follows:

"The Vladivostock custom house, as is well known, commenced its functions on Jan. 1, 1901. This measure has had a characteristic effect on the trade of the port, the import duties affecting principally manufactured articles, and scarcely touching products of prime necessity (except flour and rice), which are not produced in the country.

"The following is a list of articles that can be imported into Vladivostock free of duty: Fruits, fresh and dried; pine-apple preserves, fresh oranges, kidney beans, green peas, potatoes, fresh and dried; rice not decorticated, bread, mushrooms, citron, salt, brick tea, chicory, beef and mutton, steel, steel and iron needles, steel, iron and tin-plate articles, iron and steel scales (except finely balanced kinds used by chemists), iron and steel machinery, iron and wire nails, iron and steel scythes; iron in bars, sheet iron, tinplate, cast-iron, rivets, tools, wheels, locks, tables, sewing machines, carpets and rugs, furniture, glass and glassware, alabaster, asphalt, bicycles, bottles, bricks, maps, books, straw-baskets for flowers, leather straps, driving belts, musical instruments and pieces of music.

"Upon the closing of Vladivostock as a free port, the traders in the place, who are few in number, and whose means are very limited, did not delay in turning this circumstance into account by increasing the price of articles which enter free in the same proportion as those upon which duty is paid. Towards the end of 1900 large quantities of goods were imported into Vladivostock in view of the approaching closure of the free port, and at the present time the place is still overstocked with various articles which will take some time to be disposed of.

"The greater part of the merchandise imported into Vladivostock in 1901 was sent by way of the Amour and Manchuria. Commercial relations between this latter province and Vladivostock are developing rapidly, for, at the present time it is Vladivostock which is supplying Manchuria, by way of the Rivers Amour and Sungari and by the trans-Siberian railway, which is already finished as far as Harbin. Goods destined for Manchuria pay import duties at Vladivostock, but the amount is refunded after the goods have crossed the frontier. This, it is evident, complicates the transit trade, and it would therefore seem to be of advantage in these circumstances to use Port Arthur for goods able to bear the expenses of transport. Heavy merchandise, however, such as iron, etc., will probably continue to be sent via Vladivostock, the expenses of transport to Northern and Central Manchuria being much less onerous than from Port Arthur.

"Owing to the great fluctuations in the rates for transport into the interior, exporters will do well to fix their prices c. i. f. Vladivostock or Port Arthur, so as to avoid the risk in transporting the goods by river or rail.

"The articles imported into Manchuria are the same as those usually exported to China, viz., manufactured articles, spirits, sugar, candles, window glass, arms for Europeans, etc. Manchuria exports raw materials, viz., oil-cakes, bristles, wool, etc."

SCREENINGS.

Treasury Special Agent Investigates Sale of Canadian Stuff.

Special Agent Crain, of the treasury department, was in the city from St. Paul a few days ago conducting an investigation of the complaint of John Crosby, of the Washburn-Crosby Milling company, of Minneapolis, relative to the sale of screenings from Canadian wheat in the elevators of this city, on which no duty was said to be assessed. Mr. Crain, after his investigation, returned to St. Paul and reported that the practice has nearly ceased.

The treasury agents are said to believe that a duty should be levied on unscreened wheat in bulk, and an order to that effect will probably be issued.

The requirements of the department are that all screenings manufactured in this country from Canadian wheat must be sent back to Canada for sale, unless a duty is paid on the same.

None of the Canadian wheat, in bond, is being ground at the head of the lakes, but the Washburn-Crosby company, of Minneapolis, expects very shortly to be grinding Canadian wheat in bond. This will be in the nature of an experiment with the Minenapolis mills, and one mill has been set aside to start up with the grinding as soon as permission is received from Washington before securing wheat from across the border and beginning operations.

The capacity of the mill that will grind the Manitoba wheat is 3000 barrels per day. The output will all have to be exported and will be used in a large degree to supply the foreign trade of the company. The experiment will be watched with interest by all of the other milling interests of Minneapolis and the Northwest, and should it prove a success it is likely that other manufacturers will follow suit.

STILL HAULING.

No Decrease In Iron Range Road's Log Traffic.

The Duluth & Iron Range road is still hauling large quantities of logs. Loggers are said to have devoted all their efforts since the last snow and cold snap to concentrating as many logs as possible alongside the spurs that have been built into the woods by the railroads. In many cases these spurs are built into the heart of the timber tracts that are being cut, so that long hauls are unnecessary. Every effort has been made also to continue hauling as long as the swamps would bear the horses, even though the roads were pretty bare.

The Duluth & Iron Range expects to be hauling logs on winter contracts until the end of the current month.

A DELIGHTFUL RECITAL.

Madame Scheffer Appears Before Matinee Musicale.

The piano recital by Madame Scheffer, of St. Paul, yesterday afternoon at Pilgrim Congregational church, was a delight to all members of the Matinee Musicale. They gave enthusiatsic expression of their approval and, with a discriminating audience such as it was, this was no light compliment. Madame Scheffer is a thorough artist and the program was such as to adequately display her powers. She is a charming artist, simple and pleasing in her pose at the instrument, graceful and dignified in her playing, and constantly giving evidence of her thorough musical temperament. She has ample force, great delicacy, a delightful touch and gives to her music that singing tone which makes her playing music and not a mere exhibition of technique.

Her numbers opened with a Beethoven sonata. Two Schumann numbers and a song by Paisiello-Lissak were among the prettiest of the afternoon. The Mendelssohn-Liszt "Wedding March and Dance of the Elves" from "Midsumer Night's Dream," was brilliantly played. There were several Chopin numbers, two preludes, a nocturne, scherzo and polonaise and a waltz by Chopin-Joseffy.

There was special interest in the Liszt numbers, Madame Scheffer having been a pupil of the great composer. She gave an etude, "Liebestraum" No. 3, and "Rhapsodie Hungroise" No. 12.

GASSER'S MARKET

The only grievance the retail market men have against us is the fact that we advertise prices, and for that reason they have notified the wholesale dealers not to sell to us, and a few of them have agreed to stand by the retail combine. We think those wholesale dealers are going daffy on the subject, and some day they will come too and feel ashamed of themselves. In the meantime we will continue to advertise and do business at the old stand.

PARK CASE.

No Ground For Arrest of J. D. Park---Others Being Tried.

The hearing of the Park brothers, charged with assault and disorderly conduct, occupied most of the session in police court today.

The charges were prefered against A. Tyndall Park, Edward Park and James D. Park, by Charles Brown, proprietor of a skating rink at West Duluth.

However, James D. Park was not within miles of the rink when the disturbance is said to have occurred and never saw Brown till he appeared against him in court this afternoon.

City Attorney Holmes, who is prosecuting the case, explained to the court that a mistake had been made in arresting James D. Park and moved that the case against him be dismissed. This was done without further comment.

Brown, the complaining witness, endeavored to excuse his mistake by saying that some person in the rink at the time said that one of the disturbers was James D. Park.

A. Tyndall Park, who is the county superintendent of schools, is charged with disorderly conduct and assault by Brown and his 17-year-old brother Edward Park is charged with disorderly conduct.

The testimony in the case was still being taken at 5 o'clock this afternoon and the indications were that the hearing would last till 5 o'clock.

BIDS OPENED.

Prices Received For Tar Macadam on Nineteenth Avenue East.

This morning the board of public works opened bids for improving Nineteenth avenue east from Fourth street to South street.

This improvement is calculated to make that avenue one of the finest residence thoroughfares in the city.

The improvement consists of grading, sewering, curbing and tar-macadamizing a 24-foot roadway. The city engineer's estimate on ordinary tar-macadam was $26,400.

Bids were received on ordinary tar-macadam and on Warren patent tar-macadam. Six contracting firms were out after the contract and their bidding was exceptionally close to the engineer's estimate.

P. McDonnell was the lowest bidder on ordinary tar-macadam and King & Steele bid lowest on Warren tar-macadam. At a late hour the board had not let the contract, but seemed to favor the McDonnell bid. The two sets of bids were as follows:

For ordinary tar-macadam: P. McDonnell, $24,274.85; Alex Sang, $26,922.15; Zimmerman & Thomas, $26,374.12; Fitzgerald & Norris, $25,944.31; Hugo & Tims, $27,227; King & Steele, $26,466.70.

The Warren tar-macadam: King & Steele, $27,966.70; Fitzgerald & Norris, $28,341.31; P. McDonnell, $28,354.85; Hugo & Tims, $30,593; Zimmerman & Thomas, $28,414.12; Alex Sang, $29,472.15.

DULUTH NOT HIT

Fire Insurance Increase Will Not Be Heavy Here.

Only a Few Classes of Risks Are Affected By It.

Notice of the Increase Has Been Sent to Agents.

Notification of the increase of 25 per cent in fire insurance rates, to become effective next Monday, March 17, has been sent to Duluth insurance agents.

The increase sounds like a large one, but it does not affect Duluth very much. Practically the only large interests it touches are lumber and sawmills not equipped with automatic sprinklers. The notice to agents is as follows:

"From and after March 17, 1902, rates shall be advanced 25 per cent on all merchandise stock in all buildings, except such as are occupied as dwellings above the grade floor, and on frame store hazards, to include cold storage risks, mill lumber yards and grain elevators which have been rated under union schedule within one year; and such rates to be maintained until risks shall be re-rated under union schedule.

"This action does not apply to risks equipped with improved standard sprinkler system.

"No pro rata cancellation will be approved between this date and March 17, 1902."

J. B. McLeran, manager of the Duluth inspection bureau, said today that the order is not sweeping in Duluth. "It does not affect dwellings," he said, "nor churches, school houses, public buildings, hospitals, elevators, coal docks and coal, nor any sprinkle business. It does not affect stores or the stocks therein, nor does it affect the stocks in frame buildings that have dwellings upstairs. This includes most of them, for a large proportion of the stores are in 2-story buildings with families living in the upper story. Schedules in Duluth are up much closer to date than they are in many places. The elevators have all been rated under union schedule more than a year, so they are not included in the raise."

It is said that the general raise in insurance rates which has just been ordered by the Western Insurance union will not strike Duluth premium-payers with such force as would have been the case had the advance came without much notice.

It is understood that a number of the large sawmill and lumber risks here, have been cancelled and reinsured for a year at the old rate. The same course is said to have been adopted by most of the heavy risks here in all lines. Even if the advance comes now, the re-written risks will not suffer from it for almost a year.

COLD WAVE.

Warning of Fall In the Temperature Is Given.

Warnings of a cold wave have been sent out over the head of the lake region today from the Duluth station, with high southerly to northerly winds. The cold wave is expected to extend over the northern portion of Wisconsin and Minnesota and the Dakotas. It is said to be caused by an increase in energy in the area of low pressure over Assinniboia, which has moved over Colorado, causing brisk to high winds and rain or snow throughout the Rockies and the Northwest.

BREAD DYSPEPSIA.

White Bread Makes Trouble With Some People.

Loading up with white bread and starchy cereals is quite sure to ultimately bring on some disorder of the bowels, and is frequently the cause of appendicitis.

The starches are not digested in the upper stomach, but are treated in the duodenum, and from there on down through the whole length of the bowels. Consequently, if too much starchy food is used, particularly white bread, trouble is likely to set up. White bread does not contain the diatatic principles which nature placed in the wheat berry to help digest starch, but the white flour miller leaves that part out.

Grape-Nuts Breakfast Food was perfected purposely to supply the starch of the cereals and the other parts intended by Nature for use, and presents them to the body in a form that will easily be digested. In fact they are predigested by a natural means during the process of manufacture, so that one can get all the energy and value from that sort of food without overloading the organs.

A man from Brantford, Ont., says: "For the first twenty years of my life I lived out of doors, then I took up my present employment, which is indoors, and requires the exercise of the brain rather than the body.

Gradually a languid feeling took possession of me, which developed into dyspepsia and later into constipation. These conditions continued for several years in spite of pills and laxatives without number. After a time I began to suffer from great lack of vitality and from time to time with cramps in the bowels, which usually laid me up for three or four days. Finally the physician discovered that I was on the point of appendicitis. After one of these severe attacks, about six months ago, a neighbor brought in part of a package of Grape-Nuts to try, and I noticed good results from the first, and have continued to use the Food in place of white bread and cereals I formerly used.

I have gained considerably in weight, feel much better than I have in years, my complexion has cleared up, digestion is good, and I have not had a cramp since starting; but more important than all else, I notice a distinct clearness of mind sustained by an energy and nerve force that I have not known before.

I have learned an exceedingly valuable lesson in living, and will not, hereafter, load myself down with food requiring too much bulk to supply a sufficient amount of nourishment as I used to. This lesson in moderation in diet, and knowing how to select proper food is worth everything to me." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

DULUTH. MINN.

AN ODDITY IN NATURE.

Thomas J. Holland, state superintendent of fish hatcheries, was prospecting for coal in Gunnison county the other day. He had been out all day, and in taking what he thought was a short cut to Game Warden James Bush's cabin he lost his way, writes the Denver correspondent of the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

It got dark, and while he was stumbling along over the rocks he fell into the shaft of an abandoned coal mine. His foot caught in a rung of a ladder that was partly rotten, and he had a narrow escape from plunging headlong down the shaft. By dint of hard effort he made his way to the top and marked the place so that he could find it the next day.

Coal mines in Gunnison county are not deep. The coal crops out of the ground, and this hole was only forty feet in depth. At the bottom of the shaft a vein of extra good coal had been struck, and there were tunnels running in many directions.

The next day after his fall into the mine Holland set out to see what he had found. He took a pine torch with him and a bountiful luncheon. It was almost noon before he had located the mine again. When with great difficulty he had made his way to the bottom he began the exploration of the mine. He had wandered perhaps fifty yards from the shaft when he was scared and nearly thrown down by some animal that jumped upon his shoulders.

With the instinct of a frontiersman he fired several shots from his revolver before doing anything else. When he recovered his self-possession he found that a large Newfoundland dog was gamboling about, tickled to death to see him.

So bewildered was he that it took him quite a while to figure out that the dog had fallen into the shaft and had been unable to get out. He petted the dog and determined to get him out of the hole if it was possible to do so.

With the dog frisking at his heels he began again his examination of the mine, wandering leisurely along and stopping here and there to chip off a chunk of coal. He had gone a considerable distance from the shaft when the dog ran ahead barking and acting as though he knew something was close by.

Presently with a loud bleat a sheep came running up to him. The sheep took no notice of the dog, who seemed to be on good terms of companionship with it. Holland began to think he would soon have animals enough to pay for his work in getting them out.

Later in the afternoon, when he had returned to the shaft and gone off in another direction, he noticed that the dog and the sheep that prior to that time had been close to his heels were lagging behind. Whenever he stopped to allow them to come to him they stopped, too, and seemed to be awaiting trouble.

Holland advanced cautiously, and when he had proceeded a little farther into the tunnel he heard a low growl. An instant later a bear was upon him.

The bear knocked the torch out of Holland's hands and it lay flaming on the floor of coal. Once Holland stepped so close to it that it burned his trousers and every once in a while the bear would get so close that it burned him.

During a lull in the struggle Holland managed to pick up the torch and made a test of the theory that fire will scare wild animals. He actually burned off the bear's whiskers with the torch, and it only made the cinnamon fight all the harder.

By the time Holland had got out his hunting knife he noticed the bear was losing strength. Bruin became so tired toward the last that he could be pushed over with a slight shove, and Holland quickly dispatched him.

When he came to examine his vanquished antagonist he did not feel so proud, for the bear was almost skin and bone. Bruin had been subsisting on camas roots alone in the mine, as it was not spry enough to catch the mountain rats from which the dog got a good living.

Why the bear was not able to catch the sheep is something that Holland does not know, but he believes that the dog, who seemed a good friend to the sheep, diverted the bear's pursuit whenever bruin went after mutton.

The dog and the sheep, too, seemed in ecstasy at the death of their enemy, the bear. The dog capered about the carcass, barking and tearing at the hide, while the sheep stood by looking on with solemn eyes.

Holland made his way to the surface of the ground. He left his coat behind as evidence to the dog that he would come back for him. The dog seemed to understand his action. He lay down upon it and looked up with a satisfied expression that Holland interpreted easily.

The man said afterward that it was as solemn a promise as he had ever made, and, although he did not keep it until the next day, he paid the game warden a day's wages to go with him to rescue the animals. They were hauled up with a rope, and their delight when they reached the top knew no bounds.

The sheep Holland gave to Warden Bush and the dog is the only one that is ever allowed in the marble halls of the state capitol, where Holland's office is.

A BULLY SHOW.

After a matinee performance, on his way to his hotel, Chauncey Olcott took a vacant seat in a Sixth avenue surface car alongside a bright little fellow about 10 years of age, says the New York Times. When the conductor asked the boy for his fare, a look of despair came into his face and he blubbered out:

"I've lost my 5 cents."

"Well you'll have to get off," said the conductor.

"Hold on," said Olcott. "Here's a nickel; let the little fellow remain. As the conductor moved away the boy, turning to Mr. Olcott, said: "Will you tell me your name, sir? I want to send you back the 5 cents, sir."

"Oh, you needn't bother about that," remarked Mr. Olcott.

"Oh, you must tell me, sir. I must pay you back."

Just then the car reached Twenty-third street, and Mr. Olcott, to humor the boy, and to see if he would return the money, gave him his card. The following Saturday, after the matinee, as Mr. Olcott came out of the stage door, a boy approached him. He recognized his street acquaintance.

"Hello! what about that 5 cents you were going to return to me?"

"I haven't had 5 cents since then, sir. I wrote 'Pass two over your name and they let me and Billy in on it. It was a bully show."

TOO MUCH CHAMPAGNE.

One or two Washington sensations, in which young and inexperienced girls have been deplorably prominent, have opened the eyes of a good many people to the fact that a great deal too much champagne is frequently consumed at some society functions there. One of these girls has gone to her home in the West as the result of her indiscretion, says the Chicago Chronicle. She was only a asort time out of school and was among the guests at an afternon reception given by the wife of a foreign diplomat. After all the other guests had departed a wrap belonging to the Western girl was found in a dressing room. As it was impossible to believe she had departed without the garment the hostess suspected that all was not right. She instituted search and found the girl in the billiard room on the top story. She was hopelessly intoxicated.

Madam at once communicated with her guest's relatives and the girl was carried to a sleeping room. On regaining consciousness she was overcome with shame. It was then learned that a dapper young foreign scoundrel had induced her to go with him to the billiard room, where she drank several glasses of wine, "just for a lark," as he put it. Just about the time the other guests began to leave she felt the first symptom of intoxication. The foreigner became alarmed and hurriedly departed, leaving her alone in the billiard room.

By all accounts it appears that the incident related above is but one of many, though few have resulted quite so disastrously. Girls of little or no experience come from their quiet homes and are suddenly thrown into contact with the dissipations and free-and-easy conditions of life at the capital. Foreign diplomats and their attaches in gorgeous uniforms dazzle such inexperienced persons. A waltz or two aggravated their excited condition, and often what begins a harmless flirtation leads to some madcap freak which brings them perilously close to disgrace. Certain of the more staid society leaders are considering the necessity of action looking to ... improvement of the present deplorable situation.

SAGGING MARKET

Wheat Steady at the Opening But Turns Weaker.

Duluth Market Not Far From an Export Basis.

The Flax Market Was Quiet and a Trifle Stronger.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 14.—The wheat market started out unchanged this morning, sold up slightly early and then fell back again. The condition of the weather in the Northwestern states was the dominating factor at the start, the prediction of zero weather foreshadowing a retarding of the movement of grain to terminal points. The strength of corn also had a bullish effect. The cables were fairly steady and the Northwest receipts light. Toward the latter part of the session the market weakened on general liquidation. The seaboard reported very little wheat worked for export. The Duluth market was within a small fraction of an export basis but was still about a quarter of a cent out of line at the close.

The Liverpool market closed ¾d lower. Paris was unchanged to ½c lower and Berlin ½c lower.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1280,000 bus, last year 328,000 bus. Shipments 163,000 bus, last year 209,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 157,089 bus. Bradstreet reported exports of wheat and flour for the week of 2,596,220 bus. Argentine shipments for the week were 416,000 bus, las. year 1,284,000 bus.

Corn was stronger in the Chicago market, closing at an advance of ⅝@⅝c. Oats declined ⅛c. Primary receipts of corn were 191,000 bus, last year 442,000 bus. Shipments 208,000 bus, last year 286,000 bus. Clearances were 15,107 bus. Exports for the week were 781,411 bus. Argentine shipments for the week were nothing as compared with 200,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 260 cars, and at Chicago, 35, a total of 295 cars, against 278 last week and 416 last year.

Trading in wheat was fairly active on the Duluth board. The market opened unchanged at 74⅞c, sold at 74⅝c at 9:31, at 74½c at 8:32, at 74⅝c at 9:43, at 74⅝c at 10:52, and then fell to 74c at 12:45 and closed at 73⅝c, a decline of ⅝c. Chicago declined ⅝@⅝c and Minneapolis ⅜@½c.

Cash wheat sold at 1c under May for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2 and 5½c under for No. 3. Sales were 50,000 bus.

Flax was quiet and a trifle stronger, selling ½c up at $1.70¾. The close was unchanged at $1.73. Cash and to arrive sold declined 1c. Corn and rye were off ½c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—Cash, 1 hard, 75¾c; 1 northern, 72¾c; 2 northern, 70¾c; 3 spring, 68¾c. To arrive—1 hard, 75¾c; 1 northern, 72¾c; May, 73¾c; July, 74¾c. Manitoba 1 northern, cash, 71¾c; May, 72¾c; 2 northern, 67¾c. Oats, 42c. Rye, 52½c. Flax, cash, $1.82½; to arrive, $1.72½; May, $1.75. Corn, 60¼c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 6; last year, 9; barley 1; flax, 5. Receipts—Wheat, 17,054 bus; oats, 10,825 bus; barley, 833 bus; flax, 2479 bus. Shipments—Flax, 13,065 bus.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

The Weather Map Again a Factor In Grains.

Chicago, March 14.—The weather map was again the opening factor in grains today. Below zero temperatures in the Northwest threatened to retard the movement and influenced higher prices through a fear of the increased needs for stock feeding. May wheat started a shade to ⅛@¼c higher at 75⅝c to 75¾c. The crowd in wheat was inclined to be much impressed with cold weather stories and allowed May to drop to 75¼c. Then corn strength developed upon the weather report buoyed wheat so that May rose to 75¾c. Cables were fairly steady, considering yesterday's drop and Northwestern receipts seemed to be falling short. Trade was not large on either side of the market. Local receipts were 35 cars, none of contract. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 260 cars, making a total for the three points of 295 against 278 last week and 418 a year ago. Argentine shipments were 428,000 bus compared with 1,136,000 bus last week.

The bullish effect of the cold weather corn strength was short lived in wheat. Selling set in statistical papers commented very favorably on the crop situation and May sold off to a weak close ⅝@⅞c lower at 74⅝c.

Fear of the Northwestern cold wave stimulated buying of corn and on the very light early offerings advanced prices. Cables were steady in spite of the local weakness yesterday. The West sold no corn and Kansas City was reported yesterday as bidding in Iowa 1c over Chicago prices. May opened unchanged to ¼c higher at 61⅝@62¼c and sold to 62¼c, easing a shade later on. Business was not heavy during the early part of the day. Receipts were 91 cars.

Corn sold up on its early strength to 62⅝@⅞c. The wheat break eased this pit for a time to last night's closing, but at the end May was firm ⅝@⅞c higher at 62¼@⅝c.

Oats were quiet and almost featureless early. The corn strength had little influence in this pit. Demand being light. May opened ⅛@¼c lower at 45⅝@45¾c. Later May regained its loss and sold at 45¾c. Receipts, 72 cars.

Provisions were slow at the opening. Lower prices for hogs eased the tone somewhat by the grain situation helped and incited a little upturn. May pork opened unchanged at $15.40 and sold to $15.42½ and $15.45; May lard lower at $9.40, and May ribs unchanged at $8.40.

Close, wheat, March, 73¾c; May, 74⅞c; July, 75¾@⅞c; September, 75¼c. Corn, March, 60⅝c; May, 62¼@⅜c; July, 61⅝@⅞c; September, 60c; December, 49⅞c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Modern Miller: Ideal weather conditions have favored the growing wheat crop the past week, pleasant spring warmth following heavy rains that were general in winter wheat belt, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and entire section of Southwest that has been suffering from drouth, have been especially favored. The prospects in general are considered excellent. There has been an increase in the offerings of wheat from farmers since crop prospects have improved.

* * *

Rycroft, of Chicago: St. Louis cash handlers report the biggest sales of cash corn since last December. Some are compelled to turn down orders as corn is hard to get, except at fancy prices.

New York: From very good source and people who should know, I hear dividend on Southern railway will be raised to 5 per cent.

* * *

Kansas City wires: "Reports of damage are coming from the largest winter wheat-growing counties. The buying on god reports and slight damage are from counties that grow little winter wheat. Some of these reports are received from reliable sources. The shippers say the demand for corn is immense. One firm has twenty telegrams asking offers for corn and oats. Last month they did not get twenty in a week. No acceptances on our cards, which were the same on oats as the night before and only one-quarter less on corn later from Peoria."

* * *

W. H. Bartlett, Chicago: I think corn and oats should be bought this morning. The Eastern demand is improving for both, while Western movement is at a standstill. Prospects are for more rain and colder weather through the corn belt next forty-eight hours.

Chicago—The Daily Trade Bulletin has received returns from the winter wheat sections giving condition between March 1 and 8. In most sections they are good, with the exception of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee makes a rather poor showing, but in the other states the returns are satisfactory.

* * *

The weather map this morning shows very cold in the extreme Northwest, 18 to 20 above. There are snow flurries in the extreme North, no precipitation anywhere else. Temperatures in Dakotas and Minnesota 14 to 44 above; in Nebraska and Iowa 42 to 48 above, and in Kansas, Missouri, Illinois and Ohio 42 to 48 above.

* * *

Broomhall cables: Present visible supply of wheat in the chief ports of Argentine today 2,248,000 bus, against 1,840,000 bus a week ago and 4,784,000 bus a year ago. The supply of corn today is 199,000 bus, against 200,000 bus a week ago and 52,000 bus a year ago. The tone of the wheat market in Argentine continues fair with a fair demand for exports. The corn markets are dull in tone with the demand for exports being light. Arrivals from the interior are nil.

* * *

The Illinois March report from Springfield, Ill., says: Reports from the principal wheat growing sections of the state indicate that this crop is in excellent seasonable condition, being 95 per cent of a full average for this time of the year. The plant is small, but of good color and strong root.

PHILIPPINE LANDS

Considered at Length By the Senate Committee.

Washington, March 14.—The senate committee on the Philippines spent an hour and a half going over the section of the Philippines bill which relates to disposal of public lands. The only change of importance made in the original draft of the bill reduces the term for the lease of public domain from ninety-nine years to five years. This change was made to conform with other provisions authorizing the actual final disposition of the lands. The committee passed over the provisions of the bill pertaining to timber lands until the sub-committee, which is investigating that branch of the question, can have an opportunity to report. The question of the disposition of the friars' lands was not taken up. It was announced that Gen. Otis would be the next witness before the committee on the subject of general conditions in the islands and that he would begin his statement next Monday.

HEAVY TRADING

In Manhattan With the Result That It Advanced.

Southern Railway Rose On Increase of Deferred's Dividend.

Market Hardened and Closing Was Dull and Steady.

New York, March 14.—The majority of important stocks showed very small changes at the opening, most of which were gains. There were very heavy dealings in Manhattan, which rose 2¼ ex-dividend. Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred advanced 1⅜ and Chicago & Eastern Illinois a point. Amalgamated Copper fell off slightly and then gained a large fraction and Sugar advanced a point. The strength of these leaders combined with a further rise in Manhattan to 123½ imparted a firm tone to the railroad list, and there was some improvement in St. Paul, Missouri Pacific and Southern Pacific. Canadian Pacific was active and rose a point and a similar rise occurred in Lake Erie & Western preferred, Pennsylvania, Rubber Goods, International Silver, American Linseed, Hocking Valley preferred and Virginia-Carolina Chemical. Stocks were a trifle easier at 11 o'clock and the market was becoming very dull. There was a drop of 1½ in New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred.

The trading was irregular, realizing making inroads at some points while a number of other stocks advanced. Missouri Pacific rose 1½ and there was demand for Wabash preferred which lifted it 1¼. The announcement of the transfer of currency to San Francisco through the sub-treasury induced some selling of Amalgamated, Pennsylvania, Sugar, Manhattan, St. Paul and Southern Pacific. Southern Railway fell ½ but recovered. There was a rise of 6½ in Westinghouse Electric and 1 to 1½ in American Linseed preferred, Northwestern, Hocking Valley, Great Northern preferred, American Snuff preferred and Lead. North American declined 1½ points. Bonds were irregular, with leading dealings in Wabash debenture "B's."

There was a renewal of active buying of Manhattan which carried it 3⅜ over last night and other local tractions rising in sympathy. National Lead gained 2½ and the preferred 4. St. Louis Southwestern stocks and Peoria & Eastern advanced a point or more. On the other hand Ice dipped 2⅜ and Colorado & Southern second preferred, St. Joe & G. I. and E. & T. H. lost a point or more. The general market was dull.

Interest in the transactions died out and they fell off slightly, but without much effect elsewhere. Westinghouse Electric moved sensationally with variations of 5 points between transactions. The stock advanced 16 points to 189½ and broke to 162. Soo gained 2⅜, Northwestern 2¼ and Silver preferred 1. Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred, St. Joe & Grand Island second preferred, Colorado & Southern first preferred and Chicago Great Western preferred declined 1 to 1¾.

Westinghouse Electric first preferred selling ex-dividend rose 17 points on three sales. There were advances of a point in New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio preferred and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo. A break of 4½ in Evansville & Terre Haute and of 2½ each in Colorado & Southern first and second preferred, unsettled the market and recessions reached a point in some cases. The Southern Railways stocks then rose on the increase of the dividend on the preferred and the market hardened. The closing was dull and steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

New York to Pine, Webber & Co.: The New York Herald says: "The decline in St. Joseph and Grand Island on unlimited transactions was attributed to the denials of the reported acquisition of the property by the Union Pacific railroad. The denials came from the officials of both roads, who attributed the recent activity solely to market manipulation. The reported acquisition of the first property has never been regarded seriously in railroad circles. The resumption of activity and advance in Consolidated Tobacco bonds, which was a feature of the bond list, was referrable to the satisfactory earnings reported by the American and Continetal Tobacco companies. The former showed earnings of $6,647,114, an increase of $343,616 for the year and the latter net earnings of $7,000,400, an increase of $3,119,882. The amount is equivalent to the full 4 per cent on the Consolidated bonds and a balance of $5,214,655.

* * *

Dominick to B. E. Baker: The people who put us on to the Colorado Southern tell us not to buy Hocking Valley common. I give this for what it is worth, but it is probably based on the retirement of the preferred stocks. Tips from this source have all been good.

* * *

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The public are not disposed to buy stocks at the present time. The big men seem to think conditions will better a little later on for a bull market and consequently distribution of stocks and are satisfied to meanwhile merely support prices where they are. Better let Sugar alone. There is nothing in sight to put Sugar up unless a short interest appears. You can buy the general list on recessions tomorow morning.

* * *

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co: Sentiment on both the hard and soft coal stocks and on some of the traction stocks is more optimistic than for some time past. The Morgan and First National bank people are said to have added very largely to their holdings of Reading stocks on the latter's decline. In Manhattan important holdings of Gould and Keene, which were sold above 140, are believed to have been bought. On any weakness caused by anticipations of a bad bank statement excellent judges of the market advise the purchase of these issues.

* * *

Town Topics: We look for a recession today on the prospects of an unfavorable bank statement tomorrow and the possibility of higher rates for money. The plan to retire United States Steel preferred by an issue of bonds will favorably affect that stock and the settlement of the Boston strike is a favorable factor. On any declines, stocks are a purchase, especially steel preferred, the Readings, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway preferred. London market for Americans, dull and without special feature.

* * *

Washington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: There is not much encouragement to buy, except for moderate profits and on sharp declines only, unless one keeps to the scale plan with a good sized margin to begin with. Manhattan and Brooklyn Rapid Transit sell on further rally above 132 and 66. Buy P. O. Gas on all little dips below par. Sell T. C. & I. above 70 for moderate profits.

* * *

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: There is no material change in the market, but the tone is steady and on the whole quite firm. The fact that interest rates keep strong, and that a bad bank statement is expected tomorrow causes some settling and the market is without selling pressure. Pool operations are still a feature and outside interest remains slow and offers the market but little support. It looks to us as if purchases and patience were recommended by the situation.

* * *

A. P. Miller to Paine, Webber & Co.: It is good arbitrage to buy this steel preferred and sell 65 bonds when issued against it. This will make 5 points on preferred holdings of steel. The bonds are now 97 bid and asked 100. Sales could be effected for the preferred at par.

THE COPPER STOCKS.

Boston, March 14.—Coppers were dull today and no important changes. A rally by shorts covering, caused a small advance in a few stocks, but it brought in very little outside buying and so the market relapsed into dullness.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.—The stockholders of Osceola held a stormy meeting today which ended in the appointment by the management of a committee to investigate the company's affairs. President Bigelow presided and the stockholders, among them Thomas Lawson, were represented by a score of eminent counsel. When President Bigelow attempted to rush through the acceptance of the annual report, trouble arose. The lawyers said that copper had been sold for 2 to 3 cents a pound less than by other companies and that a surplus of $57,000 had been turned into a deficit of $1,000,000. Counsel for Lawson said the company suffered a great loss on account of the action of the Amalgamated Copper company. The old directors were re-elected. W. A. P. Chrimes, of Boston, succeeding Leonard Lewishon, deceased. By a stock vote a motion to have an investigation was killed. After this President Bigelow announced that he would appoint an investigating committee of his own.

Dow-Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.—A special from Butte says, that Augustus Heinze will shortly make an effort to float the stock of a new copper company in the New York market. The Cora mine, it is said, will be the principal asset in this company.

* * *

Boston, to Paine, Webber & Co.—There was further scattered liquidation today, but stocks were well held by shorts covering. Toward the close Osceola was bid up on the shorts and the other coppers hardened in sympathy. For the time coppers will probably continue dull. Should there be another sudden break stocks should be bought for a turn. The present is a good time to get rid of coppers of questionable value and remember that good coppers are always a buy.

SPOOK

Mystery Is Cleared Up and Now People Breathe Easily.

Norfolk, Va., March 14.—The spook mystery which has puzzled and frightened residents of Pleasant Hill, and which has been responsible for numbers of armed searching parties and the deaths of domestic animals, has been solved.

Harrison Walker unexpectedly brought about the alleged apparition's undoing. Now people, especially those in Pleasant Hill, are breathing more easily.

About the middle of last month Pleasant Hill folk who worked in Suffolk began to "see things" while returning home nights. The thing that scared them was described as of hazy outline and weird proportions, its size, according to the different view-points, ranging from that of a calf to a horse. Its eyes were phosphorescent and emitted sparks when angered by the appearance of hunters.

Every night or so there would come new reports, and numbers of Suffolk people went out with guns and rifles. The spook was shot at several times and at close range, but without effect, and all investigators agreed that it would vanish when fired at, they knew not where. It was even reported that silver coin was melted into slugs and used for ammunition, but the result was always the same. The distinct legend that silver pellets were fatal to evil spirits and the like were refuted and the mystery grew deeper.

Several dogs mistaken for the ancient were killed and other small domestic animals were found dead, their bodies mutilated, presumably by the terror whose life was sought.

It was rumored by the more timid to be the spirit of a wealthy resident recently dead prowling in search of uncollected rentals, and residents got afraid to go home at night. Two young men saw the spook in Suffolk some time ago.

Recently Harrison Walker, a colored hunter, unexpectedly came upon the quarry near the Dismal Swamp. Hearing his dogs bay with unusual anger, Walker cautiously approached a bent juniper tree. In a fork about half way up he saw a peculiar animal. He fired several times, but vicious snarls were the only responses. Having only small rabbit shot, Walker realized the futility of wasting more, and cut down the tree.

Then came a fierce battle. The strange animal was bettering the three dogs, when Walker tried to use his gun stock. The beast sprang at Walker, but its fangs only grasped folds of his topcoat. It was fixing for a fresh hold when one of the dogs less injured than the rest caught its foe by the foot and began chewing.

This strategic move decided the battle. The enemy rolled on its side, and, being set upon by Walker and his hounds, was finally dispatched.

The dead animal, according to Walker, cannot be classified with anything indigenous to these parts. It may be a hybrid between a greyhound and wolf, being taller than either, but with a body not much larger than a man's arm. The long hair is coal black, except that on the head, which is lighter. Its head is abnormally long, the eyes sunken, the general appearance gaunt and half starved.

Walker was glad to escape with no more loss than the injury to his dogs. The carcass, being seemingly valueless, was left in the swamp. Walker didn't hunt any more after the strange thing was killed.

There was much gratification expressed that the thing has been settled. Some people's servants have been much terrified.

CARNEGIE

Announced He Had Endowed Nearly Forty Libraries Thursday.

New York, March 14.—Andrew Carnegie was the chief guest and principal speaker last evening at the seventh annual dinner of the New York Library club. Among other guests were 300 librarians of New York city and vicinity.

Mr. Carnegie, on the subject of libraries for rural communities, said: "I have been much gratified by the many applications of small communities in the West for libraries. And in this conection I will say as I knew I would have the pleasure of dining here tonight I felt I ought to do something to deserve that pleasure. I have dealt with about forty of these applications today and am glad to say that in all, except perhaps two cases, I have seen my way to grant them."

After the dinner Mr. Carnegie was asked for a list of the libraries he had endowed yesterday, but said he was not able to give it. He said, however, that the application for a library from Albany, N. Y., was one of them, and he thought the amount he had given was $175,000.

Rheumatism

The liniment bottle and flannel strip are familiar objects in nearly every household. They are the weapons that have been used for generations to fight old Rheumatism, and are about as effective in the battle with this giant disease as the blunderbuss of our forefathers would be in modern warfare.

Rheumatism is caused by an acid, sour condition of the blood. It is filled with acrid, irritating matter that settles in the joints, muscles and nerves, and liniments and oils nor nothing else applied externally can dislodge these gritty, corroding particles. They were deposited there by the blood and can be reached only through the blood. Rubbing with liniments sometimes relieve temporarily the aches and pains, but these are only symptoms which are liable to return with every change of the weather; the real disease lies deeper, the blood and system are infected. Rheumatism cannot be radically and permanently cured until the blood has been purified, and no remedy does this so thoroughly and promptly as S. S. S. It neutralizes the acids and sends a stream of rich, strong blood to the affected parts, which dissolves and washes out all foreign materials, and the sufferer obtains happy relief from the torturing pains.

SSS

S. S. S. contains no potash or other mineral, but is a perfect vegetable blood purifier and most exhilarating tonic. Our physicians will advise, without charge, all who write about their case, and we will send free our special book on Rheumatism and its treatment.

STUDIES IN THE BOOK OF ACTS

THE ETHIOPIAN CONVERTED

International Sunday School Lesson For March 16th, 1902.

Acts 8:26-40. "But an angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza: the same is desert. And he arose and went: and behold, a man of Ethiopia, a eunuch of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who was over all her treasure who had come to Jerusalem for to worship; and he was returning and sitting in his chariot, and was reading the prophet Isaiah. And the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip ran to him, and heard him reading Isaiah the prophet, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, How can I except some one shall guide me? And he besought Philip to come up and sit with him. Now the place of the scripture which he was reading was this, He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; And as a lamb before his shearer is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth: In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: His generation who shall declare? For his life is taken from the earth. And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other? And Philip opened his mouth, and beginning from this scripture, preached unto him Jesus And as they went on the way, they came unto a certain water; and the eunuch saith, Behold, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they came up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip; and the eunuch saw him no more, for he went on his way rejoicing. But Philip was found at Azotus; and passing through he preached the gospel to all the cities, till he came to Caesarea."

WIDENING CIRCLES.

The course of the early progress of the Christian faith is very interesting to contemplate. There were great natural channels which the evangelists followed to the ocean of human life that beyond Judaism. The religon of the Hebrews had been like an inland sea, separate from the spiritual life of the rest of the world. Now the apostles and evangelists began their work outside of Jerusalem, the outflow from this inland body of spiritual life went out to successive basins, in each of which it paused for a moment before emerging to baptize with its life the next favored spot. In Samaria the ministry of Philip and the apostles tarried long enough to lead to the baptism with both water and the Spirit of a large part of the population. Then the apostles went on an evangelizing tour through Samaria and thence back to Jerusalem. But Philip was led to extend his preaching down toward the cities of the great plain of Esdraelon.

From Jerusalem Philip went toward the southwest, striking the Mediterranean coast and working northwards. That region had been especially open to gentile and European influences. Through it passed the great coast highway from the north down into Egypt. Cities had been built along the shore for the commerce of the sea. Some of these cities, like Caesarea, were the creation of the Roman power, and were seats of gentile culture and influence. But there was among them a strong admixture of Jews. Jewish thought and ideas. It was accordingly the natural step for the infant faith to make to go from Samaria down to the Mediterranean plain. Beyond the sea lay the gentile world whose representatives could be reached with the new tidings right there within the confines of Palestine.

On the road from Jerusalem to Gaza Philip fell in with a traveler who had been to the Holy City to worship. This man had come all the way from the kingdom of Meroe, in Central Africa, where he was treasurer to the queen. He may have been a Jew whom the queen had set over the management of her finances, becuse she had discovered in him that genius for financiering that is such a noted characteristic of the Jews. Or, he may have been a proselyte to the religion of Israel, for we know that the religion of Israel had touched the lives of many in the pagan world. But if the word eunuch is to be taken literally, rather than interpreted to indicate his office, the man was unfitted to be accounted a full member of the Jewish congregation. (Deut. 23:1.)

It made no difference to the evangelist what the man's physical condition or ethnic antecedents were. He was a man who might receive the gospel of Christ, and that was enough. National and religious prejudices ought never to stand in the way of the faithful discharge of one's duties in imparting the gospel message. Yet the church has not, at the opening of the twentieth century, fully grasped the significance of Philip's example, for, even today, men are not able to lay aside their social and religious prejudices completely and enter thoroughly into the spirit of brotherhood in the house of God.

The gospel has been disseminated over all the world through the establishment of centers of influence, and the gradual widening of the Christian life from those centers. Jerusalem was the first center. Caesarea seems to have become another center, for Philip evidently made his home there and became the evangelist of that region. Today, in America, each church should be a center of spiritual life irradiating its vitality in every direction and bringing people hitherto untouched by the gospel message into the warmth of religious atmosphere. Too many churches are satisfied to account themselves little coteries of specially favored people who were created for the special purpose of revelling in the joys of religion. They consign to oblivion all consciousness of the sorrows and woes and sins of the world, and do not seem to care whether the world goes to the devil or not so long as they can indulge undisturbed in their verbose religiosity.

THE SPIRIT'S GUIDANCE.

Nowadays, we read with wonder the Bible statements about angel voices that spoke to men of old directing them to do things in obedience to the divine will. All such cases are not to be put down among the supernatural incidents of Bible times. Rather, it is to be very much doubted whether Luke, for instance, meant any more when he said, that an angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, than we would mean by saying that the Lord guided us to go somewhere or undertake some work. Allowance must often be made for Oriental picturesqueness of expression as we read the Bible. There are cases where the writers have clearly intended to indicate the visit of a supernatural being as a messenger of God, but in the case of Philip, the Spirit of God was his guide, acting upon the conscience and will and upon the mental power of choice to lead him into the field of work that had been divinely prepared for him at that specific time.

Philip saw the eunuch reading from the Scriptures, and as he drew near discovered that the man was reading from the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. It was customary among the Orientals to read aloud. This accounts for the fact that Philip knew the subject matter of the reading, and, perhaps, the tone or inflection of the man's voice indicated that the eunuch was not reading intelligently, and thus opened the way for Philip to offer his services as an interpreter. The way along which the two men were traveling was little inhabited; the eunuch was probably unaccompanied, except by his servants, and was occupying his time profitably according to an old rabbinical maxim which said: "One who is on a journey and without a companion, should employ his thoughts on the study of the law." Philip was received into the chariot as a welcome guest, and availed himself of the splendid opportunity thus given to preach the gospel. Alertness in utilizing each opening to speak the gospel message is an important lesson for each believer to learn from this incident in the life of the deacon Philip.

This use of the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah shows how the idea of a crucified Messiah was made credible to the first converts. It is a valuable illustration of the methods of the first evangelism of the church. Luke does not give the discourse that was spoken on this occasion; in fact, it was not a regular discourse, but a quiet, heart to heart conversation. Philip spoke upon the doctrine of the Suffering Servant of Jehovah as that idea is unfolded in the prophesies of Isaiah. He then showed how those beautiful words that had just been read pointed to Jesus, who had fulfilled their spirit in his own self-renunciation and in his rejection by his countrymen. Jesus, indeed, suffered more than a sheep led to the slaughter, for he felt the sting of sin; he was as penitent as a lamb before its shearers, for he knew how his own sufferings were going to work out untold blessings for those who would believe in him, through all the ages. The way of personal salvation was unfolded, along with the bearing of the sacrificial system of the temple upon the atonement of Jesus, by which atonement that system was displaced. Something of the teachings of Jesus upon personal duties in the religious life must also have been spoken. The conversation was probably a long one, and, being conducted in the solitude of a long journey upon an unfrequented highway, there was ample opportunity for reflection upon the truth and history presented by the announced faith of the eunuch. It was not a conversation manufactured merely to kill time, but the eunuch had been prepared by the action of the Spirit of God to heed and respond to the message which the same Spirit had directed Philip to speak.

The proposal of baptism was made by the eunuch rather than by Philip, although the latter had probably included the command of Jesus with reference to it in his practical instruction upon Christian duties. The man recognized it as the proper expression of his faith; and the act of baptism is treated by Luke as the culmination of the evangelist's work with him. The thirty-seventh verse is omitted by the revised version on the best manuscript authority, but the fact that those words ever crept into the text indicates the presence in the early church of the requirement of a confession of faith from candidates for baptism.

Philip was guided by the Spirit in quitting his ministry to the eunuch as truly as in beginning it. It sometimes takes a higher degree of wisdom to know when to quit one's efforts in personal work than it took to begin the work. The newly converted man went on his way with great joy in his heart. He had gone to Jerusalem to seek the comfort that comes in worshipping the most high God, but had left with a deep desire for better things than Judaism had to give to him. He supposed that on the highway he was away from the ministrations of any representative of religion, but God sent a messenger to supply his need, and there in the desert he found the best gift of Gd, which brought peace and joy to his soul. God be thanked for his gift of grace that knows no limitations of place, sanctuary, or vested ministry, but that yields its blessings to the heart that seeks, regardless of external conditions or circumstances.

IS OLD IN SERVICE

New Senator From Kentucky Prominent For Forty Years.

Shrewd Campaigner With Remarkable Tact For Enlisting Followers.

How He Sang at Revival and Captured Deputy Sheriff.

Louisville, Ky., March 14.—Kentucky's newly elected United States senator, Hon. James Bennett McCreary, has the distinction of having lived the fullness of his years in high public service, as he will have passed three score and ten when his term expires in March, 1909, having been born in July, 1838. His life has been one of almost continuous official service.

For forty years Mr. McCreary has been prominent in Kentucky history. In the '60s he served as lieutenant of a Confederate regiment, with which he surrendered at Appomattox. Three times he represented his native county in the Kentucky legislature, being speaker during the last two terms. In 1875 he was elected governor of Kentucky by a majority of 37,000. For twelve years he represented the Eighth district of Kentucky in congress.

In 1893 President Cleveland appointed him one of the commissioners in the international monetary conference.

Mr. McCreary is recognized as one of the best party organizers in the country, his principal tactics being to convince his followers that there is great danger of defeat. He possesses a remarkable tact for enlisting followers, even from the ranks of the opposition. A few amusing incidents in his life will verify this assertion.

During Governor McCreary's first race for congress, when Judge Milton J. Durham, afterwards comptroller of the treasury, and the Hon. Phil B. Thompson, Jr., now a prominent lawyer of New York city, were his opponents, he went to the country school house, where protracted religious services were being held. The minister announced a familiar hymn and invited everybody to take part in the singing. The governor accepted the invitation. The discord was shocking. The audience became restless and nervous. The preacher's face was ashen as he arose, and, looking over his spectacles in the direction of the discord, with faltering lips, exclaimed: "Those whose voices are not suitable need not sing." The governor ceased articulating and the meeting progressed, much to the end; after which Mr. McCreary convinced the crowd that he was not required to sing in congress, and they all supported him at the election.

It was in the same campaign that Mr. McCreary visited Lancaster, the county seat of Garrard in his district. He traced a relationship with the editor of the paper and thus enlisted it under his banner. He convinced prominent citizens that sacred ties existed between his family and their families and between his county and their county. A friend told him to lay his claims before Deputy Sheriff J. T. Palmer, a prominent young man, who was inclined to support Durham. He approached Palmer on the streets, tapped him on the shoulder, shook his hand and familiarly said: "Tom, you are an aspiring young man. You will likely run for sheriff of Garrard county, and if you do I will be found coming to Lancaster. Some friends will inquire, 'McCreary, where are you going?' and my answer will be, 'I am going down to Garrard to fight the battles for my friend Palmer.'" Instantly Mr. Palmer was converted, becoming one of Mr. McCreary's most enthusiastic supporters, and rendering valuable aid during the campaign.

His fine sense of propriety and his aversion to becoming the object of special attention were manifested by an amusing incident in a later convass. He made a speech in a mountain county where he met an old friend, Mr. Brown, who insisted that he should go and spend the night with him, and they arrived at his friend's home after the regular supper had been served. Mrs. Brown informed them that she would soon prepare a lunch, when Mr. McCreary kindly but earnestly declared that he would not eat at all if she went to that trouble, whereupon she remarked that she had cold ham and bread, and that she would go and heat the coffee. The governor insisted that he preferred cold coffee, so they ate heartily without further ceremony. On the following morning at the breakfast table Mrs. Brown informed the guest that she had saved some cold coffee for him, since he had said that he had preferred it. The governor smiled and thanked her for this act of kindness, at the same time sipping the cold drink as if he really relished it.

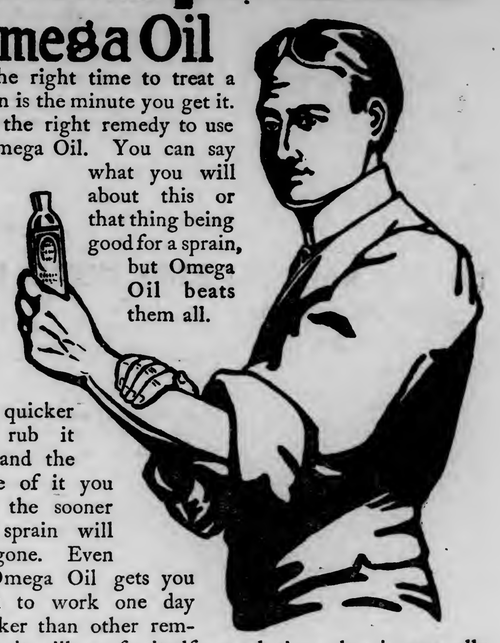
For Sprains

Omega Oil



The right time to treat a sprain is the minute you get it. And the right remedy to use is Omega Oil. You can say what you will about this or that thing being good for a sprain, but Omega Oil beats them all.

The quicker you rub it on, and the more of it you use, the sooner the sprain will be gone. Even if Omega Oil gets you back to work one day quicker than other remedies, it will pay for itself several times, but it generally cures a sprain, strain or bruise a week before anything else, and a week's wages amounts to a good deal to most people. If your druggist doesn't sell Omega Oil, ask him to get a supply of his wholesale dealer.

BABY WAS ALIVE.

Doctor Held For Throwing It In Garbage Can.

Washington, March 13.—Dr. Charles E. Hagner, for thirty years, a well known physician in this city, was today held for the action of the grand jury, as the result of an inquest over the body of a prematurely born baby, of Mrs. Peter Blair, found yesterday alive in a garbage can in the rear of the Blair house. At the inquest today a colored woman pointed to Dr. Hagner as the man whom she saw place the box in the can. The latter admitting he was the man, said he fully believed the child was dead at the time. The physician at the hospital, where the child was carried after being found, testified that the baby was alive when received.

OVER A WASHTUB

Was a Successful Novel Dreamed By Author.

When Charles Frohman presents "The Old House by the Sea" he should not neglect to announce that Sarah E. Phipps, the author, is a washerwoman, says the New York Journal.

The situation is unusual if not dramatic.

One may count on the fingers of one hand the authors who have had the common sense to combine a practical occupation with an impractical one.

We have endless biographies to show that while their books are journeying in search of a market they are starving in garrets.

A few instances of thrift survive.

There was Caedmon, for instance, the Anglo-Saxon shepherd, who dreamed his metrical paraphrases of the Bible while he earned his living tending sheep, and John Bunyan, who inherited the profession of tinkering, and Burns, who plowed to rhyme.

To the list add Mrs. Sarah E. Phipps, of Rochester, N. Y., Mr. Frohman's latest dramatist, who scrubs to write.

Immediately, of course, since we have made the acquaintance of Mme. Sans Gene, Napoleon's blanchisseuse de fin, we behold a charming creature built like Ellen Terry or Ada Rehan, with exquisite hands and coquettish gown, smiling over a cap that she presses daily into shape.

Bah! Sarah Phipps would laugh at your picture.

Its washing she did by the day, scrubbing, if you please, of the family sort at so much a dozen, or the family washing at so much a week.

She scrubbed to eat, to live, to keep the little cabin roof over her head and her mother's, just as Mr. Bunyan, of England, tinkered and Mr. Burns, of Scotland, drove his plow.

The picturesqueness of it does not strike the laborer when the sweat is on his brow. Sarah Phipps only realized that people didn't believe in her and that she couldn't convince them there was anything to believe in with her first book or her second.

So there was nothing for her to do, she says, but scrub.

A good day over the tubs earned her the right for a good night over her kitchen table and her manuscripts.

Thus was "The Old House By the Sea" written.

Charles Frohman, the Napoleon of American managers, is negotiating with Sarah E. Phipps, laundress, of Rochester, for its dramatization.

Last week she came to New York to see him. The result of that interview? Some day on the play bills, unless all signs fail, the theatergoing public will read that Charles Frohman presents the dramatization of one of the remarkable books of the year, etc., by Sarah E. Phipps.

If she would only insist upon adding laundress!

How the programs would flutter and rustle!

As Sarah E. Phipps is an uncommon laundress, so this is an uncommon book.

It was conceived in the stress of toil.

Sarah Phipps, bending over her tub, her sleeves rolled up high above her elbows, her hands covered with suds with some garment growing whiter and whiter on her washing board, suddenly remembered a walk she had once taken in a rare leisure moment. It had led to Mumford, a hamlet near Rochester. There she had seen a house which had been built about 1700, when that part of the country was a wilderness.

The suds beneath her hands began to hold strange forms. From them she saw arise the old deserted home. With her hands she seemed to model it.

It was built of gray stone, "an imposing structure of strange plan and architecture, with curious balconies, lofty turrets, hidden nooks and long, dim passages with no apparent object or use, but which evidently bore out the eccentric whim of its owner • • •

Inside the great house she found immense rooms, long, wide halls, with their magnificent staircases and railings, picture galleries, rich stained glass windows, marble and mosaic floors together with the remnants of costly tapestry and silken hangings, evidences of the wealth and taste of its one-time owner. Scattered through the rooms were articles of heavy rosewood furniture in a more or less dilapidated state."

Standing on the bare kitchen boards that she had scrubbed that morning on her knees, with part of a family bubbling on the stove, the rest before her in the tubs, the veins in her arms swelling from the efforts of her muscles, Sarah E. Phipps reconstructed, furnished and peopled "The Old House By the Sea."

Sarah Phipps, the Rochester laundress, belongs to a good old family. Her father was Thomas Blake, a younger son of one Lord Blake, of England, and great nephew of Sir William Blake, the eccentric poet and painter of Devonshire. Her father came to America to seek the fortune denied him in England as a younger son. Here his daughter was tenderly reared and carefully educated. Five years after her marriage to John R. Phipps, of Washington, she found herself a widow with an invalid mother to take care of.

She tried giving lessons in painting, she tried teaching, she studied telegraphy. She was often hungry.

She wrote. She had still less to eat.

Someone, seeing her straits, asked if she could scrub. She borrowed money for the proper implements and set to work.

She wrote only when she had earned the right with hands roughened by suds.

"For my first book," she says, "I never received a cent, though the publishers, I hear, made a fortune out of it."

It was called "Arc de Morenci."

The laundress struggled on, washing by day, writing by night.

"After my hard day's work," said Mrs. Phipps recently, "I would sit down at 7 or 8 o'clock and become so absorbed in my story that I would write far late in to the night sometimes till 2 o'clock in the morning. I wrote it in the rough in three months.

"Sometimes I got up early in the morning and wrote, hoping that this story was going to bring me good luck. Then when I finished it I found that it must be typewritten to have any hope of being read. I couldn't afford to have that done, so I bought a second-hand typewriter, paying $1 a week for it, and somehow or another, though I never had any teaching, I managed to typewrite the whole manuscript."

After Charles Frohman presents "The Old House by the Sea" Sarah Phipps expects to cross the ocean to press her claim on a fortune in England. The sum, something over $1,000,000, she says, was left by a bachelor uncle to her father. A copy of the will was sent to Mr. Blake when he was dying. His widow, somehow, mislaid the document.

Mrs. Phipps says lawyers have notified her that there is a record in England of the will, but so far poverty has prevented her from making a search for it.

It wouldn't be surprising if some day the programs that announce a play by Sarah Phipps should distinguish her as the "millionaire laundry dramatist."

WANTED PHOTOGRAPHS.

Cornell university has its fair quota of harum-scarum youths who, after pyrotechnic careers, suddenly disappear from the university's ken. A wasteful genius was recently haled before the faculty to answer charges of such violent fractures of discipline that even in his most optimistic moments he had not hoped to explain or disprove them satisfactorily. However, he faced the music, and even stood with a considerable degree of composure while proof after proof of misconduct was presented, says the New York Tribune. Finally, when the evidence was all in, and the hush fell on the assembly that precedes sentence, the prodigal raised his downcast eyes, and, in a voice full of emotion, said:

"I have only one last request to make."

"And what is that?" asked the presiding officer.

"That you will all give me your photographs to remember you by."

With this parting shot he dodged out of the door, which he had taken pains to stand near. The professors lay back in their chairs and laughed long and loud. Then they took the vote that severed the official connection between themselves and their tender young friend.

Your Rent is Going To Be Higher!

Why? Because the present rents paid does not cause any one to build to supply you with equal accommodations for the rent you are paying. The rent that caused the house to be built that you live in was considerably higher than you are paying now.

More people are coming to the city who will be willing to pay more than you are and the first thing you know you will be moving further from the center of the city than you are at present living.

Houses and lots are still being offered at less than it cost to build the house. It is not too late to buy at low figures.

We have about thirty houses and lots for sale which have been practically rebuilt in the last four years, taxes and assessments all paid, which we offer to sell for $100 to $150 down and the balance to be paid on terms that are as easy to pay as rent and you are in the way of getting a home. We refer you to those who have bought of us and are getting homes of their own. We have a list of over fifty at the office, at

TO REMOVE POWDERLY

President Dissatisfied With Commissioner.

He Will Be Succeeded By Frank P. Sargent.

Washington, March 15.—The position of commissioner general of immigration has been tendered by the president to Frank P. Sargent, chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, to succeed T. V. Powderly, the present incumbent. It is understood that the reason for the president's action in desiring to relieve Mr. Powderly is because he has not worked in harmony with the higher officials of the treasury department, which has resulted in more or less friction. It also has been determined to relieve Thomas Fitchie, commissioner at New York, and his assistant, Edward F. McSweeny. The changes, it is said, will take effect April 1, although it is not given out who will succeed the two latter officials.

DANGERS OF SUBSIDY

The Report of the Minority of the Senate Committee on Commerce Against Ship Subsidy Is Presented.

Washigton, March 15.—Senator Berry, representing the minority of the senate committee on commerce today presented the report in opposition to the pending ship subsidy bill. Most of the points have been covered in speeches in the senate. The minority deny the accuracy of both the predictions and the facts in the majority report. They urge that the bill is wrong in principle, and declare that it will utterly fail in the accomplishment of its proposed objects. They also say that while it is not so complicated as the subsidy bill of the fifty-sixth congress, it is in some respects even more objectionable. The minority continue:

"The bill proposes to tax the whole people to the extent of several millions for the benefit of one single industry. Besides the statistics of the last two years prove that the ship building industry does not need such special assistance, but is rapidly increasing under natural conditions."

They criticise the feature of the bill which carries the subsidy for foreign mails, and say:

"The highest rate of subsidy is given to 20-knot vessels while the fast ocean mails are really carried in 23 and 24-knot vessels. The mail compensation to the slow American vessels, already too high, is made immensely higher by this bill. We pay more for a weekly service than England pays for a semi-weekly service by much faster ships than ours."

They further urge that the bill makes no provision against a shipping trust and claim that it encourages a combination leading to such a trust. They also add:

"The lines might also merge with foreign lines to control freight and passenger rates. Thereby our subsidy would be aiding the foreign partners of our subsidized vessels."

The report closes by saying:

"We know that there are hundreds and thousands of industries in our country doing a losing business, but we deny that congress, for this reason, can go into the public treasury and save them from bankruptcy. We sympathize with all men in the hard struggles of life, but it is not the duty of our government to interfere in the private business affairs of the citizen. We believe that all men should have an equal and fair chance in the race for wealth and happiness—every citizen should bear his share of the burdens of the government, one class should never be the recipient of benefits not given to others. Absolute equality of rights is a doctrine we should never abandon. The bill is wrong in principle, unjust, vicious, pure class legislation."

OBJECT TO IRON HORSE

St. Paul, March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—D. M. King, of the Northern Pacific, who has concluded several weeks' work in securing a right-of-way for the Clearwater Valley short line, is in a quandary over the position of a dozen Indians who own the land along the coast lines surveys, and do not mean to have a steam railway disturb them.

The proposed line cuts through a large area of Indian allotment lands, over which right-of-way has been secured except for the holdings of the twelve Indians. They stoutly refuse to go into any conference with the railway men, and have refused free passes, money and every other inducement offered.

The Northern Pacific has taken the situation under advisement and is trying to find a way around the difficulty.

SOME ARE DISSATISFIED

Boston, March 15.—The final settlement of the great transportation strike in this city has narrowed today to the issue between the freight handlers and the freight clerks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Maine railroads. The issue made by the freight handlers and clerks is that of being taken back in a body, instead of being treated as new men.

The only concession thus far made by the railroads is that they will take back as many men as they can find places for without prejudice, but the strikers refuse to yield. They are about 2000 in number.

Practically all others engaged in the strike had observed the order declaring the strike off today. Some of the 'longshoremen found that their places had been filled, but those which could not return today, relying on Governor Crane's representation that all difficulties would be settled in due time, faced the conditions with more or less patience.

The team drivers, whose return yesterday did much to relieve the congested freight houses and docks, the coal teamsters, the 'longshoremen and the express men were nearly all at work as usual.

A CLUB OF THEIR OWN

London, March 15.—The report that Americans will shortly have a London club, equal in exclusiveness and prominence to any of the leading clubs in the United States, is confirmed. An influential Anglo-American committee was formed this week for the purpose of arranging all the details and getting the organization ready prior to the coronation of King Edward.

Any member of the leading American organizations, such as the Union and Knickerbocker clubs, of New York; the Somerset club, of Boston, and the Metropolitan club, of Washington, will be admitted without ballot for temporary membership. To quote one of the founders of the new club: "It will be a club de luxe, where Americans of good social standing can feel as much at home as they would at the Metropolitan club of New York, and yet have the opportunity of meeting the nicest people of England on equal terms."

Only a few weeks ago one of the oldest English clubs passed a by-law prohibiting Americans from becoming members.

CECIL RHODES IS VERY LOW

Cape Town, March 15, noon.—Cecil Rhodes, at this hour, is in a very critical condition. Mr. Rhodes passed a very bad night. His condition at times was very critical and the attending physicians had frequent recourse to oxygen. The paient's continued loss of strength causes great anxiety. The physicains are in constant cable communication with the London heart specialist, who attended Mr. Rhodes last year.

OPERATORS WILL STRIKE

Fall River, Mass., March 15.—The strike of the cotton mill operatives here will go into effect Monday as planned. The manufacturers and the labor leaders met in conference this morning but the sitting was fruitless as far as bringing peace is concerned. The manufacturers are ready to put the 6 per cent advance into effect on Monday next instead of two weeks later, but the labor representatives stood out for the full 10 per cent asked for.

There has been a break in the ranks of the manufacturers and several mills have posted notices granting the full 10 per cent increase in wages beginning Monday. The impression prevails that the movement will become general and that a strike will be averted.

GROWTH ALMOST UNPARALLELED

Phenomenal Increase In Population and Wealth of the Northwest.

The Rapid Growth of Settlement Means More Prosperity For Duluth.

St. Paul, March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northwestern Gazetteer, just issued by R. L. Polk & Co., of this city, indicates that a phenomenal growth in population and wealth has taken place in the Northwest during the past five years, but particularly during the past year.

In Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Montana nearly every township and county has largely increased in population; every village and settlement has grown perceptibly, and there are 738 new villages and settlements in the four states which have come into existence since the publication of the Gazetteer two years ago.

The Northwest is today in a highly prosperous condition. Its growth is almost unparalleled, as will be clearly seen by the comparative tables of population of cities, villages and settlemen's with the population of 1890, as compared with the United States census of 1900 and the estimated population of 1902, which follows:

Number of cities, villages and settlements in 1890: Montana, 1699; North Dakota, 709; South Dakota, 945; Montana, 516; total, 3869.

United States census in 1890: Minnesota, 1,301,826; North Dakota, 182,719; South Dakota, 328,808; Montana, 132,159; total, 1,945,512.

Number of cities, villages and settlements in 1900: Minnesota, 2565; North Dakota, 1015; South Dakota, 1178; Montana, 966; total, 5274.

United States census in 1900: Minnesota, 1,751,394; North Dakota, 319,146; South Dakota, 401,570; Montana, 243,329; total, 2,715,439.

Number of cities, villages and settlements in 1902: Minnesota, 2821; North Dakota, 1283; South Dakota, 1295; Montana, 1063; total, 6462.

Estimated population in 1902: Minnesota, 1,950,000; North Dakota, 351,000; South Dakota, 440,000; Montana, 267,000; total, 3,008,000.

The table shows an increase of 738 new villages and settlements in the four states during the past two years, and an estimated increase in population of 292,561, which is an empire in itself.

Reference to the last issue of the Gazetteer shows that the estimate of the population, made three months before the United States census, was almost exactly correct. As, for instance, the latest government census showed a poulation of 1,945,512 for the four states. The Gazetteer estimate of the population in February, 1900, was 2,725,000. The government census taken during the following June was 2,715,439.

The railroads from the South and East bring in thousands of immigrants each week, who are journeying north and westward, to settle upon the cheap and fertile lands in the Northwest. The rural districts have already far outgrown the cities, and the effect of this rapid growth and settlement of the heretofore unproductive farming lands in the Northwest is expected to react most favorably upon the growth and prosperity of Duluth and the Twin Cities.

OLD BOAT.

Remarkable Relic Discovered In County Mayo, Ireland.

London, March 15.—A remarkable discovery has been made in County Mayo, Ireland, where a wooden boat, believed to be nearly 2000 years old, has been dug up by some laborers. The boat is beautifully carved from the trunk of an oak tree. It is 46 feet long and shows absolutely no signs of decay. The wood was so hard that hatchets made scarcely any impression on it. Excursions are now being organized to view this relic of Seltic handicraft, which will shortly be taken to the Dublin museum.

GOLF.

Radical Change Made In Rules Relative to Pairing.

New York, March 14.—Radical changes have been made by the executive committee of the United States Golf association in the by-laws governing the pairing on the American amateur championships and the number to qualify in both the amateur and women's championships.

Hereafter all medal play rounds in championships for men and women shall be 18 holes, and the first sixty-four will qualify instead of the first thirty-two, as formerly. This will reduce the first day's play to a sorting out of the best sixty-four, who will meet in match play.

In the pairings for the preliminary rounds at match play, player No. 1 will be paired with No. 33 player. No. 2 with 34 and so on. It will be impossible to tell under this arrangement where any player outside of the first four will land.

COAL RATES

To Lake Ports to Be Fixed at Annual Meeting.

Pittsburg, March 15.—The annual meeting of the officials of the coal-carrying roads of Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia to fix the rate for the lake trade for the next year is being held today at the Hotel Schenley. The meeting is attended by about twenty-five of the representatives of different roads, including the Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo, Toledo & Ohio Central, Columbus, Shawnee & Hocking, Wheeling & Lake Erie; Pittsburg & Lake Erie, Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, Erie, Pennsylvania company and B. & O.

The railroad rate on coal to lake ports has not changed much in the past three years, and it is not anticipated by the officials who are in attendance today that very much, if any, change will be made. There may be an advance of about 5 per cent, to take effect June 1.

TOO RETIRING.

London, March 15.—The movement to make room for British women in the political and professional fields grow apace, apparently without much assistance from the opposite sex. At the annual meeting of the Birmingham society of promoting the election of women guardians one of the women speakers said: "The only complaint we have to make against men is that they are a little too retiring."

Lieut. Gen. Phelps, who was present, somewhat gallantly replied: "Where women are so capable of doing the work it would be superfluous for us to interfere."

A GREAT SALE OF LAND

Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Acres of Minnesota Land Purchased By Syndicate Who Will Sell For Farm Purposes.

St. Paul, March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—During the past few days an exceedingly large deal in Minnesota lands has been consummated in St. Paul. The purchasers are J. A. Felthouse, C. H. McNider, J. A. Kamundson and George W. Brett, of Mason City, Iowa; C. A. Cosgrove, Minneapolis, and G. B. Barnes, Jr., of this city.

The deal involves 250,000 acres of land in Aitkin, Cass, Carlton, Crow Wing, Itasca and Hubbard counties, and the purchase price was $750,000, the Minnesota Land and Colonization company, of this city, being the sellers.

It is one of the largest deals in this class of land that has been made in St. Paul for some time, and is regarded by landmen as an indication of the great business that is to be done this season in Northern Minnesota lands. The property is all fair farming country, and will be sold in lots of suitable sizes for farms by the purchasers.

The land was originally purchased about a year ago by the St. Paul concern from the Great Northern Railway company, and the surrounding country is said to be rapidly filling up with settlers of the best class.

HEATWOLE MAY RETIRE.

Rumor He Will Not Run For Congress Again.

Washington, March 15.—There is a whisper in Washington that Congressman Heatwole has finally decided not again to be a candidate for re-election, and that some formal announcement to that effect is to be made in due season to the Republicans of the Third Minnesota district.

LIEUTENANT GENERAL SIR FRANCIS WALLACE GRENFELL.

Grenfell really outranks in seniority both Lieutenant General Lord Kitchener and the luckless Lieutenant General Lord Methuen. He has been in the British army thirty-three years and is sixty-one years of age. It was while en route to effect a junction with Grenfell's 1,300 men that Methuen was captured.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION

In Torpedo Factory Brings Death and Disaster.

One Girl Killed and Seven Seriously Injured.

Cleveland, March 15.—An explosion in the powder mixing department of the Fairmount Manufacturing company, at 2294 Euclid avenue, early today, resulted in the death of one girl employe, while at least seven other persons were seriously injured. The dead:

ANNA FRITZ, 17 years old.

The injured: Miss Christine Smitzer, probably fatally burned; Miss Kittie Howard, will probably die; Frank Grosch, arm broken and body bruised and burned; Miss Augusta Alden, burned and injured by jumping from second story window; Lena Kort, back injured in jumping from second story window; Mrs. Liza Cottill, burned and bruised; Miss Helen Carey, jumped from second story window, back injured.

The cause of the explosion is not known. The front of a two-story frame building was blown completely out, and the plant gutted by fire which followed the explosion. The company manufactures railroad torpedoes. The pecuniary loss will not exceed $10,000.

Three weeks ago an explosion similar to the one of today, although of considerably less force, occurred at the torpedo factory. At that time no one was hurt by the explosion, but several girls jumped from windows.

BLUNT IS SUSTAINED

Attempt of Labor Organizations to Secure the Removal of Commandant at Rock Island Arsenal Has Failed.

Rock Island, Ill., March 15.—A copy of an official order, endorsed by Secretary Root, which ends for the present the agitation by Grand Master O'Connell, of the Machinists' union, and Agent Berry, of the tri-city labor congress for the removal of Maj. S. E. Blunt from the command of the Rock Island arsenal has been received here.

The order declares that the charges against Maj. Blunt are not sustained and says he has been an efficient and judicious officer. The order also says there has never been any interference with employes of the arsenal joining labor organizations or any discrimination therefor. In conclusion the order says:

"In the contemplated increase of the force at the aresenal the old employes of good records who were dropped when the force was reduced should, so far as it is consistent with the civil service rules, be preferred over applicants never before employed, and in considering the records of former employes participation in the strike which took place in the spring of 1899 should not be counted against them, as it was not counted against them at the time of reinstatement after the strike was declared off."

The strike referred to in the order is one of the most noted in the history of labor troubles, has figured in political campaigns and has been before congress and the war department several times during the three years it has lasted.

BUILDINGS MAY FALL

Alarming Statement Concerning the Corrosion of Steel In Skyscrapers, Made at Meeting of Chicago Real Estate Board.

Chicago, March 15.—"The steel frame work in many of the big buildings in the business district of Chicago is corroding, making them very dangercus. It is only a question of a few years when these buildings will fall to the ground."

This statement was made by Gen. William Sooysmith at the thirty-fifth annual dinner of the Chicago real estate board. He added:

"That the steel frame work of some of the skyscrapers is in the condition stated is nothing short of a public outrage."

The speaker explained that his statements were based on personal observations and investigations.

"The steel frame work imbedded in concrete will last 2000 years," he said, "but the steel frame work in many of the big buildings is left free to the action of the air and gases which circulate through the tile and a space about the steel.

"The owners of these structures have the steel painted with oil. This oil will withstand the corroding process about three years. Then begins the corroding of the steel, and within a few years your skyscraper will fall."

The speaker said that the elevated road structures would not withstand the corrosion. He asserted that within ten years they would be dangerous and within twenty years out of service. The corrosion of one-fifth of the thickness of the steel frame work of the structures, he said, would render them incapable of bearing their own weight.

ESCAPED IN A YACHT

River Pirates Raid Summer Home of John P. Morris and Get Away With a Large Amount of Silverware.

New York, March 15.—River pirates have raided the handsome residence of John A. Morris at Throggs Neck on Long Island sound, and after a running fight with pistols with two caretakers, escaped in a yacht with more than $1000 worth of silver plate.

The Morris mansion adjoins the country estate of Collis P. Huntington, and is guarded during the winter season by two caretakers.

They were asleep when the robbers raised a ladder to the second story window, broke a window and entered, and creeping into the sleeping room, covered the caretakers with pistols. The men were bound, but succeeded in loosening the cords. They secured revolvers, and the robbers, who were at work downstairs, fled, with the caretakers in pursuit.

A dory was anchored on the beach, and into this the pirates threw a heavy bag filled with the silverware, leaped after it, and while one manned the oars his companion kept up a steady fire with his pistol.

A short distance from the beach a yacht was waiting. Several men on the yacht made sail hurriedly, and the boat swung into the wind and raced off down the sound.

On the way back to the house the caretakers picked up more than $500 worth of silverware which the pirates had dropped in their flight.

THOUSANDS VIEW THE BODY

Chicago, March 15.—The body of the late John P. Altgeld lay in state in the public library today and was viewed by thousands of people. A large crowd was waiting when the casket was brought in at 10 a. m. At 10 o'clock tonight the coffin will be closed and tomorrow it will be taken to Graceland cemetery. In the processions to the cemetery will be Governor Yates and staff, state, county and municipal legislators and officials, judges, the United Turner societies, Democratic political organizations, civic and fraternal societies, Boer sympathizers, the Altgeld legion and others.

WHEN the complexion is sallow, the skin covered with eruptions, the eye listless and the whole system enfeebled, you say that your blood is out of order. That is true, but what are you doing to cure yourself?

While you are waiting for health and strength to return, the blood with every heart-beat is pumping the impurities and poisonous matter responsible for your condition into every part of the system. Your condition becomes worse instead of better.

Made from the roots and herbs of old Vermont, and Nature's own Blood Purifier and Body Builder.

WE WANT YOU TO TRY IT for a short time and note the marvelous results.

This medicine is not a new one, although its name may be strange to you. For many years it has been Vermont's most famous and most successful medicine, curing thousands, the only medicines in the homes of the people who know it and "swear by" it. Any Vermonter will tell you of its wonderful cures.

"I accidentally got hold of one of your pamphlets advertising SMITH'S GREEN MOUNTAIN RENOVATOR, and it didn't take me very long to make up my mind that that was the medicine I needed, nor was I mistaken in my suppositions, for yours is certainly a 'banner' remedy in that it does all you claim for it. I suffered terribly with my liver and kidneys. I had doctor after doctor, but they did me no good—only a little temporary relief. Your Renovator is certainly the best medicine on earth for such troubles, for I had not taken one bottle when I felt greatly benefited, and now after taking six bottles never felt better in my life. I told many people about your matchless remedy and they found it just as I represented it."

TO TAKE UP BRICK

Intersections of Lower Side of Superior Street Too Slippery.

Will Be Taken Up and Something Else Put Down.

Board Not Determined As To What Material To Use.

Slippery vitrified brick paving will be removed from avenue intersections on the south side of Superior street. The board of public works has decided on this.

The intersections are to be paved with some material with a softer, rougher surface—something that will furnish horses a more secure and easy footing.

Experiments are to be made with sandstone and creosoted block paving material, and that which gives the most satisfaction will finally be adopted as the paving for intersections.

The abandonment of vitrified brick on these crossings will meet with the approval of horse owners, friends of the horse, and teamsters.

Teams drawing comparatively light loads up teh avenues from Michigan street go down on their knees the moment they strike the Superior street paving. Several valuable horses have been seriously injured by these falls.

At one time last fall all the leading jobbing houses, commission concerns, coal companies and many of the leading retail establishments signed a petition to have the vetrified brick paving replaced with something less slippery.

Cold weather set in about the time this petition was presented and nothing was done regarding it.

The Superior street paving seems to have stood the test of cold weather and hard usage exceptionally well. Even on the crossings where the great wear and tear was experienced in driving up from Michigan street, there is not the slightest chipping, and the cold weather seems to have no effect on it whatever.

The board of public works has for some time past been urging the Northern Pacific Railway company to repair the Sixth avenue west viaduct which was knocked down by a car last winter.

The indications are that this work will be done within the next week or so, and that the viaduct will be ready for traffic again before the opening of navigation.

HIS SIGHT RESTORED

Five Years Ago—He Was In the City This Week and Makes a Statement For the Benefit of Those Going Blind.

After Many Other Doctors Failed to Give Him Relief, and After Hope Was Gone Dr. Mitchell Made Him Well Again.

In November, 1897, I was suddenly stricken totally blind in both eyes and could not tell night from day. I was almost crazed on account of this terrible affliction. I consulted my home doctor and many others in several cities, all of whom informed me there was no hope whatever, and that I would always be blind. A doctor in Minneapolis told me there was no hope at all. A Chicago specialist said he would treat me, but held out no hope. I gave up in despair until I heard of Dr. Mitchell, the great healer, and I decided to see him without delay. I called on him in March, 1897, and he immediately told me there was hope for a cure. After one month's treatment I could distinguish light from darkness, and in less than two months I commenced to see perfectly. At first I did not know my friends, they had changed so since my affliction. I have regained my sight, which is the most precious gift given to mortal man, and if lost like mine was, they will appreciate the truth of this statement. I shall ever regard Dr. Mitchell as my savior, and may heaven's richest blessings ever be his in his efforts to bring health and happiness to the afflicted thousands all over this land.

THE LIBRARY.

The Work of Moving Is to Begin Next Week.

The work of moving the public library to its new home at the corner of First avenue west and Second street will begin next week, but it will not be on in full force until the week after. The book cases have all been in place in the new library building for some time, but the lights are not yet in and there is some cleaning to be done. Next week the government reports and reference books, such as there is no steady demand for will be moved, and week after next, if everything goes as well as expected, the rest of the books will be moved.

Of course the circulation of books will have to cease while the books are being moved and placed in order on the shelves in the new building. If the building is in shape in time it is expected that the work will be completed in a week, and that the library will be closed no longer than that.

Osteopathy.

Hundreds of names of well-known citizens, testifying to the splendid results of treatment by osteopathy, can be seen at the branch office of the Minneapolis Institute of Osteopathy 512-13-14 Torrey building, controlled by Drs. The treatment consists solely of manipulation, aided by electricity, and affords complete control over the nerve and blood supply, curing disease by perfectly natural means.

OPTION ON ARCTURUS

P. L. Kimberly Reported to Have Paid $50,000 For One.

The Mine Is on Western Mesaba and Is Large One.

Ore Is Sandy But Method of Reducing Has Been Found.

P. L. Kimberley, it is learned on good authority, has purchased an option on the Arcturus mine, paying for the same the sum of $50,000. The option is said to be for four months and allows him to either buy the fee to the property or lease on a royalty basis. The consideration, in case of purchase, is reported to be $750,000, although other reports say it is a little at over $500,000.

Rumors have been current all the week that a deal was on for the Arcturus. D. H. Freeman, John Coates and M. D. Taylor, of St. Paul, representing the owners of the fee to the property, were here this week and it was then reported that a sale had been made. Inquiries as to the progress of the deal were put off with the information that a deal had not yet been consummated. Later it was said that only an option had been given. Several options have been given on the property heretofore, and consequently as much importance was not attached to the giving of an option as might otherwise have been the case. It turns out, however, that in this case Mr. Kimberley paid $50,000 for the option. This is the first time that money has been paid on a deal for the property.

The deal is said to have been made by Charles Purdon, with whom were associated Eaton Bros. J. T. Jones, who has represented Mr. Kimberley in several other deals, is said to have appeared for the Sharon magnate.

The Arcturus is the first Mesaba range mine outside of St. Louis county to take a definite position in the mining world. It is situated where for years nobody with good judgment would admit there were paying deposits of good ore. The St. Cloud people bought the fee to 1800 acres of land in that section years ago, and have held on to it ever since. The mine is situated on the n½ of section 13-56-24 and the s½ of the s½ of section 12-56-24.

The ore on the Arcturus is said to be of a very high grade. It has the misfortune, however, to be mixed with streaks of sand, and in some instances, it is said, with clay. In some cases the sand is said to be free from the iron and in others to be mixed with it.

Mr. Purdon, who was associated with Don H. Bacon for years, took a carload of the ore to Kentucky in January for the purpose of putting it through the process for reducing Southern ore, which is afflicted in much the same way. From Kentucky he went to Pittsburg, and it is supposed that the results of the test with the Kentucky process must have been satisfactory.

Mr. Purdon and Mr. Eaton are both out of the city, and nothing could be learned at their office regarding the details of the deal.

IN THE ICE.

The Steamer Hunter Can Neither Get In Nor Out.

The steamer Hunter, of the Booth line, was the first vessel to tackle the slush ice in the lake this spring, and at a late hour this afternoon she was resting comfortably in its embrace just outside the canal, waiting for the wind to turn.

The Hunter has been lying up at Two Harbors ever since she ceased her winter's work, and she started out this morning to make the Duluth harbor. She is to load here next week, if possible, for a north shore trip. About 10 o'clock she appeared off the ice fields outside the harbor, and she got through the first fields swimmingly. She had hard sledding when she struck the inner fields of ice, however, and when the steamer was a few hundred feet from the canal she had to cease working and stand still. The ice had piled up so thick that it was impossible to get through. The strong northeast wind kept pounding the ice in harder, so that it was as difficult to get out again as it was to get in.

This afternoon it looked as though the Hunter would have to remain where she is until the wind turned. The ice is soft and slushy, so the vessel is in no danger.

FOUR MEN CONVICTED

Of Selling Alum Baking Powder And Fined $100 Each.

Judge Clark Assesses Defendants In Pure Food Cases.

Decision Declares Commercial Alum Was In Powders Sold.

St. Louis Republic: The alum baking powder cases were decided in the court of criminal correction Monday morning by Judge Clark. The verdict in the case of the great Western Tea and Coffee company, No. 725 Franklin avenue, was "guilty of the sale of baking powders containing alum in violation of the pure food laws of Missouri." The fine assessed by Judge Clark was $100.

By agreement between counsel, F. N. Judson and S. S. Bass for the state and T. B. Harvey for the defense, the verdict in this case is to apply also to three others. They are B. Woltering, J. G. Faust and J. E. Paule, charged with selling Bon Bon, Raiser and Blossom baking powders containing alum. Five other cases on which the testimony would have been the same were nolle prossed by the state at the conclusion of the trials last week. This was done in order that the retail dealers should not be given too great inconvenience, as the intention of the attorneys for the state was to get a conviction and demonstrate thereby the validity of the state's pure food law, which interdicts the use of alum in all food products in this state on the ground that it is a deleterious substance and dangerous to the health of the public. This is the second time that the pure food law has been vindicated in Missouri in reference to the sale of poisonous baking powders. In the other case, that of the state versus Whitney Layton, now of East St. Louis, the defendant was convicted as a manufacturer of making and selling alum baking powder. A fine of $100 was assessed. The case was appealed by Layton to the supreme court of the state. The supreme court handed down a decision in the case that affirmed the finding of the lower court on the ground that the legislature had a right to protect the health of the public by proper police laws, and that, as alum had been declared in the English courts and in other foreign countries to be an improper and unhealthy ingredient in food, the law was undoubtedly valid. The supreme court also referred to the fact that baking powders and other food products containing alum were excluded from the commissary ration of the armies of the United States and of Great Britain, another point showing it to be under the ban of suspicion as a substance dangerous to the public health.

The manufacturers of the alum baking powder have made a hard fight to continue their sales in this state. The law that prohibits the sale of the alum baking powder was passed by the legislature in 1898. The first case, that of Layton, came up in 1899. While it was pending in the supreme court in 1901, a determined effort was made to repeal the law before the legislature then in session. The bill was reported from the senate committee unfavorably and in language that stamped alum as one of the most dangerous of ingredients used in food.

The senate committee's report also took a fling at the powerful lobby that was maintained at Jefferson City by the so-called alum baking powder trust. The report gave the names of the various manufacturers in the United States, a long list of them, who comprised this trust. Senator James Orchard was the chairman of this committee, and it was to his efforts and those of his fellow-committeemen that the failure of the bill was due.

In Judge Clark's opinion in the present cases he stated that the defense had shown through eminent chemists that their baking powder was made with C. T. S. or cream tartar substitute. The chemical components of this substance, as shown by the defense, were agreed to by the eminent chemists for the state, who positively asserted that they constituted "burnt alum." In other words, Judge Clark's decision was that C. T. S. was, in effect, commercial alum, and therefore its use was a violation of the pure-food law of the state. Its use under some other name than alum, which it is, cannot exempt either the manufacturer or the vender from prosecution and conviction under a broad law framed for the purpose of protecting the health of the public from the use of alum or other substances of a deleterious and dangerous character.

Mr. Judson, counsel for the state, stated Monday that it was the intention to continue the prosecutions in Missouri of dealers who continued to sell baking powders which were made with alum or C. T. S. Time will be allowed for the present decision of Judge Clark to become known, and if cases of violation of the law are then found, manufacturers and wholesale grocers will be arrested wherever evidence is obtained against them of such sale.

GRIP

ASH PILE BLEW UP

Firemen Tackle a Proposition That Kicks Back Vigorously.

Charles McPherson Severely Burned and Others Get It, Too.

Chief Black Forced to Have Oculist Clean His Eyes.

An ash pile blew up this morning painfully burning several firemen.

The ashes from the Torrey building are dumped on the south side of Michigan street next to the Wright-Clarkson whole sale grocery house.

The ashes were only about half burned and all last night and this morning the pile burned briskly threatening adjoining property.

Chief Black was notified of the burning and he took No. 1 hose company down to the scene of the fire.

The ash heap was smouldering and burning like an ambitious volcano and the moment the stream of water struck, the ashes rose up in the air and scattered red-hot coals and fire in all directions.

Charles McPherson, a substitute on No. 1 hose, was very severely burned about the hands and several other firemen were scorched a little.

Chief Black was standing near McPherson and was struck in the face by a mass of flying, dirty ashes which burned him some and filled his eyes, so that he was compelled to go to an oculist and have the dirt removed.

All the firemen and a number of bystanders were covered with slime by the explosion of the ash heap, and the things they said about the engineer of the Torrey building were fully as seething as the exploding ashes.

There has been a great deal of complaint on account of this particular ash pile as well as several others. The engineers of heating and steam plants for several of the large Superior street buildings have a practice of dumping the ashes on the south side of Michigan street and this morning's incident will probably cause the authorities to stop the practice.

NOT SERIOUS.

Miss Florence McLean Partially Asphyxiated, But Is Recovering.

Exaggerated reports from Minneapolis yesterday stated that Miss Florence McLean, a Duluth girl attending the University of Minnesota, was at the point of death from asphyxiation.

Miss McLean has been confined to her boarding house, near the university for several weeks on account of heart trouble. About 1 o'clock yesterday morning she was feeling ill and got up to light the gas.

Just as she turned on the gas she had a fainting spell. Considerable gas escaped into the room before she was discovered, but Miss McLean had so far recovered from the effects yesterday to write a letter to her father informing him of the entire affair.

MISS FLORENCE McLEAN.

She was one of the honor members of the high school class that graduated last year. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. George R. McLean, of 515 Eighth avenue east.

Her father said today that from advices he had received, both from his daughter and others, there was no cause for apprehension or anxiety and that the exaggerated report seemed to have originated in the University daily.

He received a letter from his daughter early this morning in which she explained the accident and said she was getting along very nicely. Despite these assurances, however, Mrs. McLean left for Minneapolis this afternoon.

PORTER CASE

Goes on the Witness Stand In His Own Behalf.

When the general term of district court adjourned yesterday afternoon to Monday morning, the case against Nelson Porter, charged with manslaughter in the second degree, was still on trial, but the evidence was nearly all in, and the case will probably go to the jury before noon Monday.

Yesterday afternoon Porter took the stand and told his story of the trouble in a straightforward manner. He said that Brown gave provocation for his attack by striking him first simply because he asked pay for the tamales Brown had had of him. The defense introduced a number of witnesses, who gave testimony showing Porter's character to be good.

In the civil branches of court the cases of Katherine W. Upham against George H. Lounsberry and A. J. Meagher against J. J. O'Flaherty were still on trial and they both went over to Monday.

An Electric Belt Free

Send Your Application At Once To The Physician's Institute.

They Will Send You Absolutely Free One of Their 100 Guage Supreme Electric Belts, the Belt Which Has Made so Many Wonderful Cures—You Needn't Send Even a Postage Stamp, Just Your Name and Address.

Seven years ago the State of Illinois granted to the Physicians' Institute of Chicago a charter.

There was need of something above the ordinary method of treatment for chronic diseases, something more than any one specialist or any number of specialists acting independently could do, so the State itself, under the power granted it by its general laws, gave the power to the Physicians' Institute to furnish to the sick such help as would make them well and strong.

Ever since its establishment this Institute has endeavored in every possible way to carry out the original purposes of its establishment under the beneficient laws of the State.

Three years ago, the Physicians' Institute, realizing the value of electricity in the treatment of certain phases of disease, created under the superintendence of its staff of specialists an electric belt, and this belt has been proved to be of great value as a curative agent. From time to time it has been improved until it reached that stage of perfection which warranted its present name of "Supreme."

This belt is the most effective of all agents in the cure of rheumatism, lumbago, lame back, nervous exhaustion, weakened or lost vital functions, varicocele, kidney disorders and many other complaints.

This "Supreme Electric Belt" is made in one grade only—100 guage—there is no better electric belt made and no better belt can be made. Whenever in the opinion of our staff of specialists the wonderful curative and revitalizing forces of electricity will cure you we send you, free of all cost, one of these Supreme Electric Belts. It is not sent on trial, it is yours to keep forever without the payment of one cent. This generous offer may be withdrawn at any time, so you should write to-day for this free "Supreme Electric Belt" to the Physicians' Institute, 1111 Masonic Temple, Chicago, Ills.

'Tis a Pity

To Say "No."

Any Sick One Wrongs Himself When He Fails to Get My Book.

No Money is Wanted.

Tell me the name of a sick one and I will mail the book that is needed.

I have spent a lifetime in learning how to cure chronic troubles, and you should know what I learned.

That is all I ask—just a postal card.

Then if you think me right, I will let you take the treatment at my risk.

I will even do this:

I will send with the book an order on your druggist for six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. He will let you take it for a month; then, if it succeeds, the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay your druggist myself.

I will leave the decision to you.

You cannot afford to say "no" to that offer.

A remedy so sure that it can stand a test like that must have remarkable merit.

Don't be incredulous, nor let prejudice deter you. Remember that your health is at stake, and all I ask is a postal card. Find out what I know.

My Restorative strenthens the inside nerves, which no other remedy reaches. My book explains why.

I don't doctor the symptoms, nor the organs themselves. But I bring back the nerve power which alone makes all vital organs act.

If an engine was weak, you would give it more steam. That is what I do with weak organs. I give them more power: more nerve power. They do their duty then.

That is why I succeed where other treatments fail.

Sometimes I fail, too, but not often. Only when a cause, like cancer, makes a cure impossible.

In the past five years I have furnished my treatment to over 600,000 sick people on terms like these. My records show that 39 in each 40 paid for it.

There are 39 chances in 40 that I can cure you. If I succeed, you are permanently well. If I fail, I alone am the loser.

They who need help, and who don't get my book, do themselves an injustice and a wrong.

Simply state which book you want, and address Dr. Shoop, Box 685, Racine, Wis.

Garfield Club Sends the Renowned Jacobson Invitation to Banquet.

Some Members, Including Legislators, Are Greatly Angered Thereat.

Committee Thought It Might Result In Much Good.

There is considerable feeling within the confines of the Garfield Republican club over an invitation that the committee sent out for the annual banquet, which takes place March 28.

In sending out invitations to politicians outside of the city the committee, in a spirit of peace-making, thought it would be a fine thing to send one to J. F. Jacobson, the wild and wooly one from Lac Qui Parle county, who is such a prominent figure in the Minnesota legislature, and who from some cause or other is commonly found to be embroiled with the representatives from St. Louis county on most of the issues that come before the legislature.

So the invitation was sent. Now there are a lot of members of the club, including principally some of the St. Louis county members of the house of representatives, that are up in arms over the action of the committee. They are so worked up over it that some of them have gone so far as to say that the action of the committee is an insult to the St. Louis county delegation in the legislature.

So far no reply has been received from the strenuous statesman of Lac Qui Parle county, but an answer is expected any day. It is believed that he will accept the invitation. If he finds out that there is a row about it the opinion of those who know him pretty well is that he will certainly not miss the opportunity.

The committee has not yet decided whether to put him down for a response to a toast or not, and probably this will not be decided until it is certain that he is coming. If he comes, and the committee decides to put him on the list of speakers, he will probably respond to some such toast as "The Farmer in Politics," "Wrestling With the Octopus," "The St. Louis County Delegation," or "Voice Culture as an Adjunct to a Political Career."

The members of the committee who are responsible for the invitation say that they were guided by the best intentions in the world. They recognize the fact that Mr. Jacobson has shown considerable hostility to St. Louis county and Duluth, but they believe that if he got up here once and found out that he is mistaken in believing that everybody in St. Louis county is in a sort of Siamese twins relation to the corporations, he will be more reasonable in the future.

Meanwhile, they are all awaiting with interest the reply that Mr. Jacobson will send to his invitation. If he accepts ,and is put down for a toast, it can be accepted as an assured fact that the Garfield club banquet will not be a dull affair. It will not be a dull affair, anyway, of course, but Jacobson, of Lac Qui Parle, will make a unique attraction.

IS COMING.

Cold Wave Still On the Way to Duluth.

The cold wave scheduled to arrive at the head of the lakes has been a little delayed, but it is still on the way toward Duluth. The storm was central over Moorhead, Minn., this morning and this afternoon was between Moorhead and Duluth, moving in this direction very rapidly.

Forecaster Richardson says that the cold wave and storm will reach here some time during the night, accompanied by high northwesterly winds. Sunday, according to the predictions, will be a very stormy day. The storm was terrific at Winnipeg during the night, the wind reaching a velocity of fifty miles per hour. This morning there was 4.88 inches melted snowfall at that station. That means nearly fifty inches of snow. The wind at the Duluth station today has been from twenty-four to thirty miles per hour, but it is expected to be much higher tonight and tomorrow.

Forecaster Richardson says that the storm is likely to prove very disastrous in the agricultural country in the Mississippi valleys where, on account of two weeks of very mild temperature, the season is well advanced.

Has Not Intended To.

Manager Van Vliet, of the Lesure Lumber company, says the statement made this morning that the Lesure mill would not have enough logs to warrant a day and a night run as intended, is erroneous from the fact that the Lesure company did not intend to run its mill nights during the coming season.

The loggers about the city were feeling very much encouraged today over the weather reports indicating colder weather with snow. They say that with a good snowfall and just a few days of cold weather they will be enabled to get in every log cut.

The Special Term.

There were twenty-five cases on today's special term calendar in district court, but none of them were of particular importance, and the calendar was cleared of all but one or two minor cases before noon. All three judges took part in the work.

The mayoralty contest case was on the calendar, but as it has been set on the general term calendar it was removed there. It will come up between the jury and court cases, and if the jury cases are finished my Monday, March 24, it will be taken up then. All three judges will hear it.

Eight of the twenty-five cases this morning were cases in which judgments against Charles E. Shannon were marked off on account of his having been discharged from bankruptcy.

THE EARTH QUAKED.

Judge Dibell Vacates Contempt Order In Fleming Case.

W. W. Browne, of Biwabik, sought this morning in the special term of district court to have Justice Fleming, of Biwabik, attached for contempt of court in failing to make a corrected return of a case appealed from his court to the district court.

Judge Dibell, before whom the matter came, did not see it that way, however, and he discharged the order for Fleming to show cause why he shouldn't be punished for contempt. Mr. Browne is the attorney in two cases that were appealed from Fleming's court, the cases of William Martin against Charles L. Verrill and William Anderson against Charles L. Verrill. When the cases came up Mr. Browne claimed that the transcripts made by Fleming were not correct, and got an order for a new transcript. Justice Fleming would not make a new one, but said that he could not. Then Mr. Browne wanted to have him punished for contempt, but after hearing the matter Judge Dibell decided that there was nothing in the case warranting contempt proceedings, so he discharged the order to show cause.

Receiver Budd Finishes Work With Financial Aid Association.

St. Paul, March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—George E. Budd, receiver of the Financial Aid association, an insurance organization came before Judge Bunn today with a petition to have his account allowed and to be discharged. The court made the order. Mr. Budd found that there should be in the hands of the treasurer, according to the books, $800. He has been able to discover a quantity of second-hand office furniture, five notes of a total face value of $40, and $132 on deposit in the First National bank, with a garnishment against it. Mr. Budd finds further that the president and secretary are liable for $191.61 on account of an overdrawn reserve fund, but the secretary of the insolvent association is herself insolvent, and the president claims that he was never properly elected president, did not accept and has not qualified.

The president is Dr. Ira Rose, of Red Wing, and as to him the receiver says the doctor evidently became connected with the association through a misapprehension and that there is nothing which can be shown to call his good faith in question.

The manager is Walter Johnson and the secretary, Emma Johnson. There is on hand $1.87 as compensation to the receiver, who has done considerable work in winding up the company.

THE DEADLY GRIP

Makes Its Yearly Appearance and Claims Many Victims.

An Immense Amount of Suffering From This Cause—A Few Hints on How to Guard Against It and Its More Dreadful After-Effects.

With each recurring epidemic of the grip it becomes more evident that it leaves in its wake a train of stubborn ailments that often baffle the skill of physicians. Loss of flesh, thin blood, nervousness, shortness of breath, exhaustion after slight exertion—so that it is often difficult to walk upstairs—these are a few of the symptoms of after-effects of the grip. More serious results often follow, and grip has come to be regarded as the high road to pneumonia, bronchitis and even consumption.

Miss Nellie Hathaway, a winsome girl of 15, living at No. 120 Portage street, Kalamazoo, Mich., was one of the many who were afflicted with grip last winter. The disease had left her all run down and her blood in a very impure condition. Her case is best stated in her own words.

"I was taken with the grip in March," she says, "and when I got over that it left me in a very poor physical condition. I was weak all over, had no ambition to do anything, and when I stood up or tried to walk I became so dizzy that I had to give it up. I spent most of my time on a couch for about a month. I had no appetite, and nothing that I did force myself to eat tasted good. Then I began to break out with boils, and my eyes became sore and inflamed, and I know my blood was in an awfully bad condition. We had a doctor, but he did me no good at all that we could see, so my mother thought she would doctor me herself. My sister, Frankie, had taken Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for anaemia and they cured her; so I began taking them. I took about two boxes when I began to feel better, and I used about eight boxes in all. Now I feel all right and well. I have not had any more boils and I am strong and healthy. We have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People to many of our friends and they have taken them with good results."

These pills have become famous all over the world for their wonderful efficacy. Acting directly on the nerves and blood, they are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after-effects of the grip, of fever and of other acute diseases, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions and all forms of weakness either in male or female. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, fifty cents a box, or six boxes for two dollars and fifty cents (they are never sold in bulk or by the hundred) by addressing Dr. Williams Medicine company, Schenectady, N. Y. These pills are not a purgative and contain nothing which could injure the most delicate system.

THE CRIMINAL CASES

L. D. Hathaway Charged With Non-Support.

L. D. Hathaway, who claims to have been employed by the city on the streets, was arraigned in district court this morning before Judge Dibell charged with failure to support his wife. He was arrested on a bench warrant issued under an indictment returned by the grand jury while it was in session. Bail was fixed at $100.

Mrs. Philmena Belucci and Mrs. Mario Brido, charged with selling beer without a license, pleaded not guilty this morning.

Albert H. Fisher, charged with keeping a house of ill-fame, yesterday afternoon withdrew his plea of not guilty, entered in the morning, and demurred to the indictment on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a public offense. Baldwin & Baldwin are his attorneys.

BLIZZARDS

Are Raging Wildly In North and South Dakota.

St. Paul, March 15.—Blizzard news is contained in specials to the Dispatch from various points in both North and South Dakota.

A hard snow storm is reported at Fargo, where last night's rain and sleet changed today to heavy snow, delaying trains and breaking down wires. The storm in Western and Northwestern North Dakota is said to be the worst in seven years, with snow three feet deep on the level. There is no sign of any abatement of the storm at Bismarck, where it has been raging furiously for over twelve hours. All trains are snowbound in that vicinity.

The Northern Pacific west-bound train has been stalled at Dawson, N. D., since last night and has not left there yet. A plow is attempting to clear the track of snow, which has filled all cuts and made traffic nearly impossible. The Washburn road north of Bismarck is snowed in completely and no attempt will be made to send out a train until the storm abates. Reports received from along the line of that road state it is the worst storm of the season. All business in Bismarck is practically suspended.

About Huron, S. D., the storm set in today and drifts are interfering with the railroads, but farmers hope the mild temperature will save stock.

BEDE IN EARNEST

He Files His Petition As Candidate For Congress.

Issues a Characteristic Address Asking Support of Voters.

Says His Efforts Carried Duluth Election For Hugo.

St. Paul, March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. Adam Bede today filed at the state capitol his petition as a candidate for the Republican nomination in the Eighth congressional district, this state. Mr. Bede, who does not believe in hiding his light under a bushel, at the same time issued the following address to the voters:

"I have lived sixteen years in and around Duluth, spending much time on the iron ranges, as well as among the farmers, and I believe I know every interest of the district and having done newspaper work in Washington several sessions of congress, am familiar with every department of the government, so that I could begin effective work at once. And, also, having campaigned for the party in various states, am acquainted with its leaders and would be a stranger in the halls of congress. If chosen to a seat in congress, I shall campaign throughout the states of the Union, and I believe I could give some distinction to the district.

"My personal work, influence and following were sufficient to determine the result in the district in the close campaigns of 1896 and 1898. And my personal work there was surely sufficient to tip things our way in the recent close mayoralty contest in Duluth.

"I have done much for the party and received nothing at its hands. Others have received much and done nothing. Having worked all my life for others, it seems to me that the bread cast on the waters should begin to return.

"I was born a Republican of abolitionist parentage and my first vote was for Garfield. In 1884 I was living in a territory and could not vote for president, but afterwards supported Cleveland because of his standing on the gold standard and moderation on other measures, while the Republicans were flirting with silver legislation. When the Democrats stamped the track and the Republicans took solid grounds on the money question, I paid up my back dues and was reinstated in the party.

"For a platform I stand on the gold standard and McKinley's Buffalo speech, believing that trade concessions to Cuba are a part of the voluntary obligations we assumed when we went into the Spanish war.

"Because of my lecture work, a seat in congress would be worth much more to me than to any other aspirant, and I merely ask my friends to help push the cause along. I have a very wide personal acquaintance in the district and surely expect to be nominated on the 9th of September. As every one of the eleven counties in the district is Republican, the nomination is the real thing."

NO ROOM FOR SILVER

Sub-Treasury at San Francisco Is Overcrowded.

Washington, March 15.—The secretary of the treasury today notified the senate that the assistant treasurer of the United States at San Francisco had advised him that he is unable longer to exchange silver certificates for standard silver dollars for want of vault room in which to store the coin. He says there is over $32,000,000 in standard dollars now in the vaults of the San Francisco sub-treasury and all available space is crowded to the utmost. He suggests the necessity of erecting a new structure or of providing for more vault room in the new custom house about to be erected in San Francisco.

WOULD DELAY ACTION.

President of Landsthing Is Criticised at Copenhagen.

Copenhagen, March 15.—The president of the landsthing, Dr. Maisen, who is opposed to the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States seems inclined to delay consideration of the treaty. He has called the first meeting of the landsthing for March 19. The press criticises his attitude on the ground that the delay is considered discourteous to the United States. It is thought that a few of the president's party will support the government thus insuring the ratification of the treaty without a plebiscite, by a samll majority.

DEMOCRATS TO CAUCUS.

Washington, March 15.—The chairman of the house Democratic caucus, Mr. Hay, of Virginia, today issued a call for a caucus next Wednesday night in the hall of the house to consider the question of policy on the Boer war. St. Petersburg, March 15.—Military and naval circles here have been disturbed by rumors to the effect that misunderstandings between Russia and Japan led recently to an exchange of sharp notes. The correspondent of the Associated Press, however, is authorized to say that the rumors are quite unfounded.

IN CONGRESS.

Senator Teller Speaks In Opposition to Subsidy Bill.

Washington, March 15.—Rev. E. J. Prettyman, pastor of the Mount Vernon M. E. church, Washington, pronounced the invocation at the opening of today's session of the senate.

The senate agreed, at the suggestion of Mr. Berry (Ark.) to take up the ship subsidy bill immediately after the routine business Monday and that speeches on the bill be limited to fifteen minutes each, except as to the senator from Maine (Mr. Frye) who was accorded thirty minutes.

Mr. Teller (Col.) then began a speech in opposition to the pending ship subsidy bill. Personally he was of the opinion that it would be better to adopt the old policy of discriminating duties for the upbuilding of the merchant marine. A serious objection to the pending bill was that it did not provide for new lines. The money paid in subsidies, therefore, would be paid to established lines. And yet one of the professed objects of the bill was to establish new lines.

In the event of a European war, Mr. Teller declared, the United States government would have to do what it now declined to do—allow its citizens to go Europe to buy ships and place them under the American flag. Such vessels he would exclude from the coastwise trade, but he would permit them to enter the general trade.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, March 15.—When the house met today Mr. Parker (N. J.), reported back from the committee on military affairs the resolution introduced by Mr. Richardson, the Democratic leader a few days ago calling upon the secretary of war of the reports of certain army officers who examined into the transport service between San Francisco and Manila, with the recommendation that a substitute be adopted, which calls for the details relative to this transport service instead of the reports.

The house then went into committee of the whole and entered into the consideration of private pension bills.

HUNTLEY OIL AND REFINING CO.

OF BEAUMONT, TEXAS.

Hon. Benton McMillin (Gov. of Tenn.)_____ ____President
Hon. Charles A. Towne_____One of the Directors

IT IS ONE OF THE BEST INVESTMENTS IN TEXAS.

MONEY IN OIL STOCK!

If others can make money by investing a small or large amount in legitimate enterprise, why not you?

No investment pays as large dividends as a good oil proposition. The California oil fields prove that. Only five years old and stock has gone from three times par to 1500 times par. In that field the output at the highest is 500 barrels a day, while in the Beaumont field the lowest is 40,000 barrels per day. Give the Beaumont field five years' time and it will startle you as to the dividends it will pay, and the many times par stock will go.

We have the contracts closed and pending. We have the transportation. We have one of the best gushers in the Texas Oil Field.

Come and see me if you want to make big money.

I have just received an extension of a few days on this stock.

TALKED BACKWARDS.

The gentlemen of science of the Smithsonian institute appreciate a good joke and relish a droll situation with as much gusto as they do all the other good things of this earth, and it happens that, often enough, they see and make the most of the humorous and amusing aspect of science and it weighty problems much quicker that the lay fraternity, says the Washington Post. For example, Professor Otis T. Mason tells the following at the expense of Professor Garner, whose study of the higher apes and efforts to discover a language or system of thought expressive by the sounds uttered by simians in general, have attracted world-wide attention:

"Professor Garner spent considerable time in study here in the Smithsonian," said Dr. Mason, "prior to the time he became generally known and before he left on his first expedition to the Central African region, there to observe the habits of the larger apes from the interior of a cage made with special reference to the object of his journey. He was engaged while here in making a study of the sounds uttered by a colony of monkeys which had been provided and placed at his disposal in the taxidermist's quarters, in the small frame building in the rear of the institution. Here Dr. Garner studied the simians without care or annoyance, month in and month out, using a large phonograph for recording whatever remarks his simian roommates had to offer.

"In all that he did Professor Garner remained quiet and inconspicuous, for he was not then ready to announce the results of his investigations. It happened, however, that the work of this savant proved too much for the curiosity of the younger scientists of this institution, and when they discovered that he was endeavoring to shed light on pithecan philology, there was a general explosion of laughter all along the line over what was at that time a unheard-of proposition.

"The boys, I am inclined to think, rather looked upon Garner as a crank, and it was not very long after they found out what he was doing before they were laying plans to work off a practical joke at his expense. In this they finally succeeded.

"One afternoon the monkeys at Garner's disposal were unusually loquacious, filling one of his cylinders, which, before leaving that evening, he arranged in the phonograph ready for a lengthened and prolonged repetition on the following morning. But the doctor's plans went awry. After he left the boys got into his shop and reversed the cylinder, so that when Garner arrived next morning, and set the phonograph in operation, a volume of sound poured forth that scared the monkeys and cost the professor several hours of acute mental agony and bewilderment before he finally discovered that the cylinder had been reversed and that the concersation had been running backward.

"Another amusing thing happened after Professor Garner became known to the world, and that was when an enterprising showman came here evidently looking for him. The showman was heard to remark that if he could get the doctor to travel through the country in the midst of a cage of monkeys and talk 'monkey talk,' he could make more money than if he had Buffalo Bill's show."

THE DAKOTAS.

A Furious Blizzard Raged Throughout North Dakota.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—A furious storm raged her all day Friday, the wind blowing a gale and the air being full of particles of ice, which cut the skin like needles. The temperature dropped 30 degrees. The ground, which was thawing out well, is again frozen and there will be no farm work for some days.

Minot—The heaviest blizzard in two years has raged here all day. Railroad trains are delayed and wagon roads are impassable.

Fargo—The most pronounced result of the meetings of the state educational officials with the presidents of school boards is in the establishing of a clear relationship between the men who outline the school work and those who see that it is done. Many counties have held the meetings and in addition to the local superintendent, State Superintendent Devine has managed to be present at most of them. He is much pleased with the good feeling established.

Fargo is to have a new enterprise. Some years ago A. E. Tullis lost a leg in a railway accident. Since that time he has studied the problem of artificial limbs and secured a patent on a pneumatic limb cushion to be made attachable to ordinary cork and wooden legs. He has decided to begin the manufacture of artifical limbs in Fargo and has secured ample backing for the enterprise.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—The jury in the case of state vs. George McEdwain found the defendant guilty of manslaughter in the second degree. McElwain stabbed John Gray in a saloon in Gayville last September, and Gray died from his wounds. This was the second trial of the case in circuit court and the verdict was the same in both cases.

Sioux Falls—Preparations are being made for a meeting of the lumbermen of the Northwest, to be held in this city on the 19th. Representative lumbermen from all parts of the territory included in the association, which covers portions of South Dakota, Iowa and Minnesota, will be present. The meeting will be held at the Cataract hotel. Instead of being for the purpose of raising prices, as some have intimated, it will be held simply for the purpose of discusing matters of a social rather than of business matters.

Deadwood—Wong Quinn Bong, a young Chinaman who was born in Deadwood, has returned from China, where he has been since he was three years old. He was held at Port Townsend, Wash., over a month by the customs officials, who were not satisfied with his passport and were about to send him back to China when Congressman E. W. Martin interceded in his behalf at Washington. His father is Wonk Bong, a brother of Wing Tsue, the leading Chinese merchant of Deadwood, with whom he is interested in a store. Wong Quinn Bong and with him in addition to his passport, an affidavit of birth from Dr. A. L. Von Wedelstadt, now deceased. His father and uncle take great pride in the fact that the young man will be a voter when he arrives at maturity, which will be in about three years. He will be placed in the Deadwood public schools for the present.

A Good Deal

Has been said and written recently about the new fad known as the "no-breakfast habit," some people claiming that by omitting the morning meal the health will be improved and life lengthened. This may be all right for idle people who arise at noon, but for the average business man or woman a good breakfast is an absolute necessity as a stimulant for the day's labor. When traveling the appetite is sharpened, and experienced travelers say that breakfast is the most enjoyable meal "en route." The officials of the Milwaukee road have so arrange their dining car service on the Pioneer Limited that passengers are enabled to obtain 'most anything they want in the way of a morning meal. The model dining car is attached to the train at Milwaukee and until Chicago is reached breakfast is served "a la carte," that is, the passenger may order and have served anything that may suit his palate and pay for what he gets. It is not necessary to order a $1 meal when simply a light breakfast is desired. In addition to the "a la carte" plan, sixteen individual club breakfasts are served at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1. This is a decided departure in dining car service, and is appreciated by the Milwaukee's many patrons.

Frank Brandecker, trainmaster for the Ironwood branch of the Wisconsin Central railway, has been promoted to traveling freight agent and is succeeded by Mr. Johnstone, of St. Paul. Mr. Brandecker's home is in Milwaukee, but he will make Chicago his headquarters. He was very popular with railroad men and others in this locality.

Sault Ste. Marie—Hunter's Home, a sportsman resort at McKnight and Mackinaw roads, was destroyed by fire last night. Origin of the fire is not known. The loss is covered by $3000 insurance.

An innovation in logging in this section of the country is to be tried this spring on the Tahquamenon river by the Bradley-Watkins company. The plan will, it is believed, prevent the usual loss sustained by reason of logs being hung up because of low water or other causes. A boat drawing but sixteen inches of water has been constructed and shipped to Newberry for transportation overland to the river. The craft is equipped with a 16-horsepower engine, is capable of a speed of twelve miles per hour, and is designed to tow logs to the falls instead of their being floated down in the customary manner.

St. Ignace—Through a request that the city clerk make out her papers for this quarter, it has developed that the widow of a soldier who ought in the war of 1812 is residing here with a daughter. The aged woman is Mrs. Jennie Flint. She is in her eightieth year and draws a pension of $12 per month.

Ontonagon—Reports come from Greenland, this county, that dogs in that section are daily chasing and in many instances killing deer. Wolves have been held responsible for the carcasses of deer found in the woods at various times, but it now develops that canines are also assisting in the slaughter, one farmer alone reporting four deer killed near his farm by dogs. A game warden has been appointed for the county, but owing to the fact that the salary is but $40 annually, he has so far failed to qualify.

Escanaba—Dr. McVoy, Bark River, is suffering from a fracture of the spine and concussion of the brain. Wednesday night, while driving home, he was thrown from his buggy onto the railroad track. A farmer found him and carried him to his residence.

LITTLE IS SOLD

Not Much Wheat Sold For Early Shipment as Yet.

Stocks Are Large But the Demand Has Been Poor.

Shipping Market Never Duller Than It Is Now.

"I don't think much wheat will be loaded out here April 1," said a shipper this morning, who is an authority in his trade. "In fact, I don't know of anybody that has sold very much wheat to load out."

The man who goes to the wheat market aglow with a reflection of the activity that prevails in every other branch of trade and commerce gets something of a chill when he hopefully asks how many million bushels of Duluth wheat have been sold for early c. i. f. delivery in Buffalo. The weekly elevator statements are very prosperous looking documents. The elevator man isn't the one that has a kick coming, for wheat is a good enough tenant to always pay its rental before it leaves to take fresh quarters. But the shipper cannot see that golden light that seems to illumine the outlook for othei branches of business. He has had a pretty dull winter. The export business has been practically nil as far as lake shipments are concerned. About 2,000,000 bushels of wheat have moved out of here during the winter all-rail to the seaboard. It has been largely Canadian wheat, which has sold 1½ to 2½ cents under Duluth wheat, and is now about a cent cheaper. The wants of importing countries seem to have been much lighter than heretofore. As gauged by engagements for May and July deliveries, it is said that the shipping market has never been duller than it is at this time. Some even vouch for there never having been a complete precedent for the present situation.

It is not that there is not the wheat here to sell or ship. Stocks are about as large as they ever were at this time of the year. They are beginning to undergo the regular spring increase, owing to the custom of cleaning out country houses before the assessor gets around, and will be much larger before much of the present stocks leaves Duluth.

The stocks of wheat here now in round figures are about 14,00,000 bushels. This is almost twice as much as there was in store here last year. A little less than 600,000 bushels is in store in vessel bottoms in the harbor. Stocks of wheat in bond aggregate about 1,700,000 bushels. It is said that even all this has not been sold for shipment.

Aside from the charters made last fall, it is claimed that no tonnage has been placed for the moving of wheat from here. Almost 400,000 bushels of flax is already in vessel bottoms, and about a million and a half more is in store in the elevators. This will furnish some early cargoes. But aside from what has been noted, the outlook for great spring activity in the grain shipping market is very unpromising. It is believed that little of the Canadian wheat has been sold. There are six times as much flax here as a year ago. But there is only 127,000 bushels of corn, whereas the stocks last year were 4,623,000 bushels. There is a little more rye, but a couple of small cargoes would clear that up.

Nobody suspects that the present situation is going to continue. The fact seems to be that buyers abroad know that they do not have to put their money into wheat in order to be sure of getting adequate supplies when they need them. They are in the position of the independent gentleman who can take life leisurely, and when he needs some wheat knows right where he can go and find plenty of it without looking hard or having to pay premiums or anything of that kind. He is in a position to make quicker turns and run smaller risks, and he is taking advantage of his opportunities.

Can be completely and permanently removed, no matter how young or old the sufferer.

Hood's Sarsaparilla was given the daughter of Silas Vernooy, Wawarsing, N. Y., who had broken out with scrofula sores all over her face and head. The first bottle helped her and when she had taken six the sores were all healed and her face was smooth. He writes that she has never shown any sign of the scrofula returning.

SCOTTISH CONCERT.

Miss Jessie Maclachlan at the Lyceum Wednesday.

Next Wednesday evening at the Lyceum a Scottish concert will be given by Miss Jessie Maclachlan under the auspices of Clan Stewart No. 50, Order of Scottish Clans, and the Second Presbyterian church. Fame has come to Miss Maclachlan for her singing of the songs of Scotland. The Glasgow Evening Times called her the "queen of Scottish song." The New York Press said of her:

"Miss Maclachlan's fame in the British Isles has been heralded here, and the audience certainly expected a great deal. Her superb rendition of her first numbers was not unexpected. Encores were enthusiastic and the Scotch fire of her impassioned interpretation roused admirers of Scottish and Gaelic song, and her perfect method began to be understood. Again and again the singer came out flower-laden, and bowed response to thrice repeated encores and in vain. A long song with quaint refrain was generously sung, and then another, before, at a late hour, the audience could let her go."

The program for the concert is as follows:

Piano solo—"Balmoral" ..... Robert Buchanan.
Song—"Angus McDonald" ..... Miss Jessie A. Maclachlan.
Song—"Scots Wha Hae" ..... Philip Gordon Brown.

RECEIVER

Asked For Driggs-Seabury Gun and Ammunition Company.

Trenton, March 15.—Papers in a suit for the appointment of receiver for the Driggs-Seabury Gun and Ammunition company of Derby, Conn., were filed in the chancery office today. Vice Chancellor Stevenson has granted a rule for the company to show cause at Jersey City on March 24, why a receiver should not be appointed and in the meantime the company is restrained from doing business. The company is incorporated under the laws of this state. The application for a receiver is made by Louis Driggs and William H. Driggs, stockholders and creditors of the concern. It is set out in the bill that the company is insolvent, but has valuable contracts on hand for the United States government. It is stated that in October last a balance sheet was made out showing that the company has assets of $890,726.54, and liabilities of $912,124.38, and that in addition the company owes $45,000 on notes in banks.

A LARGE INCREASE

Shown In Gross Earnings of the Omaha Road.

Both the Freight and Passenger Business Increased Heavily.

Gross Receipts Largest In History of the Line.

St. Paul, March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although the average rate per mile for the transportation of both passengers and freight decreased, the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha closed its fiscal year with an increase of gross earnings amounting to $854,403 and an increase in net earnings of $329,287. Gross receipts were $11,196,403, according to the annual report issued yesterday by Controller Robinson and the greatest in the history of the line.

Comparative traffic statistics show that passenger earnings increased 11.46 per cent. Freight earnings increased 7.84 per cent. The average rate per passenger carried one mile was 2.318 cents, a decrease in one year of 3.74 per cent. The average rate per ton of freight per mils was .961 cent, a decrease of 1.03 per cent.

The volume of both freight and passenger business increased heavily, the former 10.86 per cent and the latter 7.78 per cent. Gross earnings per average mile operated increased 6.15 per cent and were $7111.67 for the year, considered a high figure.

AT WEST DULUTH

A very enthusiastic meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club was held last evening. About forty-five of the members were out and it was generally conceded that the outlook for the club is much brighter than it has been for a number of weeks past. M. M. Clark, chairman of the special committee to get in susbscriptions, reported good progress, and asked for a little more time for the committee, which was granted.

A delegations of West Superiorites were at the meeting last evening to talk over the advisability and feasibility of establishing a ferry service between West Duluth and the Steel plant in West Superior. The project, as represented by the West Superior gentlemen, looked all right in theory for the steel plant, but it is likely to get a frost.

The gentlemen representing the Hundred Thousand club, of West Superior, were J. W. Palmer, chairman; J. J. Severson and A. A. Campbell. The latter gentleman is president of the Good Citizens' league of the Ninth ward, West Superior. He is a business man in the Steel plant district, and naturally has quite an interest in having some means of transportation between West Duluth and that portion of West Superior. In the course of his argument for the scheme, Mr. Campbell said that the management of the street railway company has assured him that it would extend its line on Twenty-first street, Steel plant, to the river, a distance of about three-quarters of a mile. He believed that the citizens on this side of the bay could get the company to extend the Central avenue line another block on Central avenue, to the river, near the blast furnace. The two wards of the different cities would then be separated by only three-fourths of a mile of water, and a ferry service could be maintained.

Ex-Alderman R. L. Cochrane gave a logical argument showing why the West Duluthians should not call on the company to extend any more of its West Duluth lines at the present time. He referred to the West Third extension, and said that the citizens were now trying to get better cars, and it would be well to wait for a time before asking for too much. Ferry service would cost about $27 per day, and it is not likely that patronage would warrant the expenditure.

Temporary disposition of the matter was made by referring it to the Commercial club committee on transportation, that will report at the next meeting.

County Commissioner Kauppi asked the club for an expression of opinion regarding the advisability of giving the people an opportunity to vote on the court house bonds. The matter was discussed briefly, and was made the special order of business of the next meeting, which will occur Friday evening of next week.

ALL QUIET TODAY.

No More Trouble At the Match Factory.

Philip Bourasa and Bernard Benson, the two young men charged with trespass at the match factory and assault and battery on the person of Carmini Izzo, yesterday morning, were arrested and arraigned before Justice Stone yesterday afternoon. They both pleaded not guilty and were released on their own recognizance. Later the officials of the match company, objecting to their release without bail, they were brought back to court and required to give bonds in the sum of $25 each. Their trial has been set for tonight in Justice Stone's court.

It is likely that the proceedings will attract a large attendance. The company is bent on having the boys punished for the alleged trespass on their property, and Signor Izzo is as determined to push the charge of assault and battery against them. Izzo's arm is still badly swollen, and until the swelling is reduced it will be difficult to determine whether he has any bones broken. He has also an ugly gash across the nose, where one of the boys struck him with a wooden tray.

The men in charge of the match company's shop say that Bourasa and Benson were driven out of the shop two or three times yesterday morning before they assaulted Izzo.

Izzo is claimed to have warned the boys away several times, and took no steps toward his own defense, even after the boys had thrown matches in his face and thrown cold water over him. He is said to have been stooping down to pick up something connected with his work when both boys jumped on his back and got him down. The management of the match factory is determined to push the case against the boys to the limit.

It was said at the factory this morning that matters are quiet and that the machines are running again as usual, full-handed. The management says there were more applications for the places of the boys that struck than there were places to fill, and some of the applicants were turned away.

There was a little delay in starting up for the reason that some of the splints were wet. Yesterday afternoon some matches were accidentally lighted among the splints, occasioning a smudge. It was necessary to turn off the water and the splints must dry out before being used.

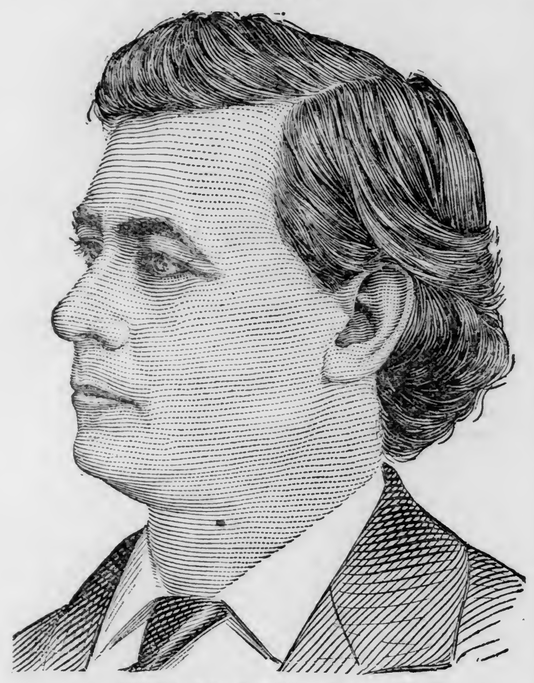
CONGRESSMAN HOWARD.

Of National Reputation Are the Men Who Recommend Pe-ru-na to Fellow Sufferers.

A Remarkable Case Reported From the State of New York.



CONGRESSMAN HOWARD, OF ALABAMA.

House of Representatives,
Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks and fnid I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe, and I take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow sufferers."

W. M. HOWARD.

Congressman Howard's home address is Fort Payne, Ala.

MOST people think that catarrh is a disease confined to the head and nose. Nothing is farther from the truth. It may be that the nose and throat is the oftenest affected by catarrh, but if this is so, it is so only because these parts are more exposed to the vicissitudes of the climate than the other parts of the body.

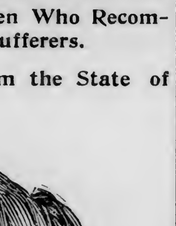
Every organ, every duct, every cavity of the human body is liable to catarrh. A multitude of ailments depend on catarrh. This is true winter and summer. Catarrh causes many cases of chronic disease, where the victim has not the slightest suspicion that catarrh has anything to do with it.

The following letter which gives the experience of Mr. A. C. Lockhart is a case in point:

Mr. A. C. Lockhart, corner Cottage street and Thurston Road, Rochester, N. Y., in a letter written to Dr. Hartman, says the following of Peruna:

"About fifteen years ago I commenced to be ailing, and consulted a physician. He pronounced my trouble a species of dyspepsia, and advised me, after he had treated me about six months, to get a leave of absence from my business and go into the country. I did so and got temporary relief. I went back to work again, but was taken with very distressing pains in my stomach.

"I seldom had a passage of the bowels naturally. I consulted another physician with no better results. The disease kept growing on me until I had exhausted the ability of sixteen of Rochester's best physicians. The last physician advised me to give up my work and go South, after he had treated me for one year.



Mr. W. P. Peterson of Morris, Ill., says: "I was nearly dead with catarrhal dyspepsia and am now a well man, better, in fact, than I have been for twenty years or more.

"Since I got cured by your Peruna I have been consulted by a great many people."—W. B. Peterson.

"I was given a thorough examination with the X-ray. They would not even determine what my trouble was. Some of your testimonials in the Rochester papers seemed to me worthy of consideration, and I made up my mind to try a bottle of Peruna. Before the bottle was half gone I noticed a change for the better. I am now on the fifth bottle, and have not any ache or pain anywhere. My bowels move regularly every day, and I have taken on eighteen pounds of flesh. I have recommended Peruna to a great many and they recommend it very highly. I have told several people that if they would take a bottle of Peruna, and could then candidly say that it had not benefited them, I would pay for the medicine."

BANK SCHEME.

A Proposition to Enter the Money Order Field.

Indianapolis, March 15.—The Sentinel says: Charles L. Farrell, assistant cashier of the Capital National bank, and secretary of the Indiana Bankers' association, left yesterday to attend a meeting at New York city, today, of prominent bankers from nearly every state in the Union, to act upon one of the most important banking schemes of late years. The proposition is to enter the money order field as a competitor of the express companies, and the government itself. It is proposed to issue a uniform bank money order, payable through an immense clearing house in New York city.

The scheme was conceived by Eastern bankers, who held a meeting in New York last spring and invited the co-operation of Western banks, in order to extend the proposed system over the entire country. The responses were generally favorable, and two weeks ago a call was issued for a meeting of the executive committee to be held in New York today.

At the head of the system will be the Western National bank of New York city, which will act as one immense clearing house for the national association. In each city where the number of banks request it there will also be a clearing house, as it were, to collect daily the orders cashed by the various banks.

It is proposed to incorporate this association with a paid-up capital of gigantic proportions, reaching far into the millions.

To compete with the express companies, the rates for the issuance of orders will be placed at a minimum price, which it is believed the express companies will not be able to meet, because of their limited banking facilities. The rate proposed is one-tenth of 1 per cent, which, on orders for $100 or less, would be 10 cents, or just one-third the charge by express companies.

THE LAKE LEVELS.

Lake Superior Lower In February Than Last Year.

The gauge records of the United States lake survey show the following mean stages of water for February, above mean sea-level: Lake Superior, 601.76 feet; Lakes Huron and Michigan, 579.21 feet, and Lake Erie, 570.77 feet. These stages show Lake Superior to have been 0.37 feet lower than during same month last year, and 0.17 feet lower than in February, 1895; Lakes Huron and Michigan were 0.36 feet lower than during same month last year, and 0.26 feet lower than during February, 1895; Lake Erie was 0.37 feet lower than during same month last year, and 0.37 feet lower than during February, 1895.

CAUSES A FLUTTER

President's Recent Order Felt In Local Railroad Circles.

Lumber Freight Rates From Zenith City Are Withdrawn.

Question Whether Law Was Violated In This Instance.

President Roosevelt's dictum that violations of the interstate commerce law shall be punished has been felt in Duluth. All lumber freight rates to routes east of Chicago and to Omaha territory have been withdrawn.

Considerable lumber has been shipped out of Duluth by rail during the winter season to Pennsylvania points and to Omaha territory as a result of some favorable freights. The Eastern shipments—or the bulk of them—would likely not have been made if some concession had not been offered.

There was quite a flutter among freight men yesterday, as a result of the withdrawal of rates that have prevailed of late. Nobody will admit that tariffs have been cut. As a matter of technical fact, it is likely that this is true. The results have been brought about by manipulation of division percentages. Just how this is done, it would be hard for the lay reader to understand. In every case a loophole of technical escape from the provisions of the interstate law is found through the shrewdness of some general freight agent or some of his assistants, who schemes out a way of manipulation based on the situation local to his line.

As a result of these concessions to shippers, it is said that lumber has been moved West at 4 or 5 cents below tariff and East at several cents below tariff. While the technicalities exist that occurred are violations of the law is a question. Nobody has any complaint to make about somebody else being a more favored shipper. One shipper has been as good as another and has had as low rates. There is nobody to claim that there has been injustice of any kind. But there seems to run in the traffic man's temperament the same spirit that diffuses itself through the advertising schemes of the dry goods merchant—a holy reverence for the pulling powers of markdown sales.

One traffic official who was asked today for an explanation of the changes that have been ordered by wire was inclined to deprecate the importance of the matter.

"There has been disagreements between the lines east of Chicago and those west of Chicago about the division of percentages on through rates," he said.

"Several ineffective efforts have been made to right the situation amicably. This having proven impossible, the lines east of Chicago have cancelled the rates, with the intention of coming into new divisions with the Western lines."

This is regarded as a very pretty way of putting it, but it is known that while it describes the situation in a sense, it does not convey the real importance of the matter. That is, that President Roosevelt's orders that all violations of the interstate law be punished is back of the sudden withdrawal of the through rates that have prevailed.

A NEW TENOR.

Raymond Stephens to Sing at Flaaten Sunday Concert.

Duluth has a new tenor in the person of Raymond Stephens, recently of Chicago, who has become head of the vocal department of the Bradbury school of music. He will be heard Sunday afternoon at the Flaaten concert at the Armory and there is much interest among the musical people of the city to hear him.

Mr. Stephens is a lyric tenor, who, after three years of study with the celebrated instructors, Langi Cannuccini and Francisco Cortesi, made his debut as "Faust" in Italy, scoring a great success. After that he was engaged as leading tenor with the Carl Rosa Opera company, and later with the De Olyle Carte company of London, and sang the leading role in the famous production of "1492" at Palmer's theater in New York for a year. Since that time he has devoted himself to concert work and instruction having lately been with the Honshaw school of opera in Chicago.

STORMY TIME

Between Bernard and Brown at the Capital.

Washington, March 15.—There was a rather stormy time in the committee of Indian affairs room after its adjournment, between Representative Brown of Wisconsin and A. G. Bernard relative to the proposed amendments to the Morris bill. Mr. Brown claimed they were for the best interests of the Indians. To this Mr. Bernard showed that the present Nelson law was far more honest and fair, and would not permit such high-handed robbery of the Indians as the proposed amendments.

Mr. Bernard informed Representative Brown that sooner than have the bill go through with the amendments, they would go to the president and demand that the agricultural land be thrown open to settlement, and that the timber be allowed to remain for future legislation.

It is not at all likely that Representative Brown's amendments will be adopted by the committee at its next or subsequent meetings.

No official action whatever has been taken on his proposition. Representative Eddy is expected back next week.

The medals are to be of bronze. On the obverse side the statues of Germania and Columbia are surrounded by the inscription, "Glory to God, peace on earth, good will toward men."

All Day Sunday

She Thought About a Food that would Agree with Her.

An unnatural appetite for rich and improper food is really kept alive by the use of such foods, whereas a change to healthful, nourishing and scientifically made food will correct the unnatural appetite. A little woman up at Peekskill, N. Y., Margaret Smith, P. O. Box 193, says:—

"I was such a sufferer from dyspepsia that life was a burden. I could hardly keep from eating all sorts of pastry, cakes and other rich foods, although they did not agree with me, nor in fact did any sort of food. I became low spirited and discouraged, was too weak to work and very seriously troubled with palpitation of the heart.

"Drugs seemed to make me worse rather than better. A friend said one day: 'I believe Grape-Nuts food would cure you,' explaining that that food was made with great care and intended for the prevention and relief of diseases that were brought about by improper food.

"That was Saturday night, and all day Sunday I kept thinking about Grape-Nuts, and the first thing Monday morning I sent for a package. I had it in my mind that the food would look like nuts, and was disappointed when I found it had to be eaten with a spoon. However, I followed the directions and made a meal of Grape-Nuts and milk, which I found to be delicious and for the first time in months I suffered no distress after eating.

"I at once began to feel hopeful that I might be cured at last. Since that day I have used Grape-Nuts constantly, morning and night, and have steadily improved in health, until now I am as well as I ever was in my life; weigh 10 pounds more than I did a year ago, have no palpitation of the heart and can work all day long.

"At supper I have Grape-Nuts mixed with soft-boiled eggs. I make my dinner on any kind of food I desire. One of the best things about this cure by proper food is that I no longer have any desire for the rich, indigestible rubbish of which I used to be so fond. 1

TO AWAKE INTEREST

Women's Council to Hold Public Meeting Tuesday Evening.

Will Plead For Attention to Cleanliness, Health and Beauty.

Addresses By Mrs. Woodbridge, Mayor Hugo and Others.

The members of the Woman's council, representing the different women's organizations of the city, have arranged a mass meeting for next Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock, at the high school assembly hall, for the purpose of arousing an interest in the cleanliness, health and beauty of the city. There will be short speeches by a number of people on the general subject of civic improvement, or on some phase of the subject.

The women who are actively interested in the improvement of the appearance of the city are entering upon no crusade against the powers that be; neither are they criticising the methods of the said powers, or attempting to usurp their prerogative. But they would like to awaken the pride of every householder in keeping his premises and the streets adjacent in a neat and attractive condition. If they can at the same time help to create such a public sentiment as shall make it possible to enforce ordinances on the subject, they feel sure that they will not be accused of stepping out of their province and doing men's work. The "city fathers" have assured them that on the contrary they will be grateful for such assistance.

At this meeting Tuesday evening Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge, president of the Woman's council, will tell what the women are trying, through this organization, to do for the city, and what they have already accomplished. There will also be five to fifteen minute addresses on the subject by Mayor Hugo, Rev. J. M. Smith, of Superior; Bishop McGolrick, Professor Charles Allen Smith, Watson S. Moore and J. L. Washburn.

The meeting will be free of charge and no collection taken. Everyone interested in the appearance of the city is urged by the women interested to attend this meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and it is hoped that the hall will be full.

AFTER THEM.

Authorities Pursuing Individual Who Expectorate In Street Cars.

Look out for the "plain clothes man." This warning will be in order for all those persons who make a practice of expectorating on the floors of the street cars in this city. The campaign against the expectorators is being pursued with the utmost vigor at the present time, the influx of the woodsmen from the camps in the vicinity necessitating more vigilance on the part of the street railway employes, for many of the men either wilfully or thoughtlessly violate the ordinance regarding expectoration while on the street cars.

Yesterday one man was warned that he was violating the ordinance, but he only laughed and repeated the offense. He made a great mistake, for the "plain clothes" man was on the car and the expectorator was taken into custody and later in the day, in police court was given his choice of paying a fine of $5 or spending ten days on the rock pile.

The "plain clothes man" is a person who has been employed especially by the street railway company, or somebody else, to spend his time riding about on the cars and picking up all persons that insist in spitting on the floors of the street cars. The conductor, it is held, has other duties to attend to and cannot watch for the public nuisance who thinks every vehicle is a free-for-all cuspidor. The "plain clothes man," however, has nothing else to do but to watch for such individuals and bring them to justice. The idea is a new one in this city, but one that all law-abiding citizens and particularly the lady passengers on the street cars will appreciate.

IS KILLED.

Moses Chevrette, of this city was fatally injured at Chisholm yesterday afternoon.

He died a few hours after the accident and the body was brought to Duluth this afternoon.

Mr. Chevrette was a building contractor and at the time of the accident was working on a building in the new town of Chisholm. The walls of the structure collapsed and he was buried beneath the wreckage.

The deceased had been a resident of Duluth for the past eighteen years. He was 63 years of age and with his wife and three daughters resided at 1117 East Second street. Another married daughter lives in the West End.

The funeral service will be held at 9 o'clock Monday morning in the Saint Jean de Baptiste church, and the interment will be in Calvary cemetery.

BEHIND THE TIMES.

C. O. Nelson Finds Indiana Business Men Slow.

C. O. Nelson, the well known West End business man, returned yesterday from a several weeks' visit at the French Lick Sulphur springs, in Southern Indiana, where he went for his health. Mr. Nelson returns feeling very much improved. He says that Southern Indiana is about fifty years behind Northern Minnesota in its methods of doing business, that the business interests there could do much better than they are, but that they are too slow. Mr. Nelson says there is more vigor put into his interests here by the average business man in one day than the Southern Indiana merchants can get up in a year.

On his return Mr. Nelson found awaiting him a letter from Governor Van Sant regarding the Twentieth avenue station, on the Northern Pacific road, for which Mr. Nelson has been an ardent champion ever since the company closed the depot there. Governor Van Sant stated that Newell H. Clapp, of the law firm of Clapp & McCartney, of St. Paul, has been engaged as associate counsel by Attorney General Duglas in the legal fight that has been started by the state railroad and warehouse commission to compel the railway company to open the Twentieth avenue west station. The governor further said that he had been in conference with the attorney general about the matter, and that the case will be pushed as fast as possible.

WATCHING DAUGHERTY.

His Political Course a Matter of Much Concern.

The probable course of Senator Daugherty in politics is being speculated upon with some interest. One of his friends has said that his removal from the Fiftieth to the Fifty-first district means that if he runs for senator again at all, it will be in the Fifty-first. In view of Representative Laybourn's formally declared intention of running for senator in the latter district, Mr. Daugherty's prospective attitude lends an air of uncertainty to the situation.

It has long been thought that if Congressman Morris were to retire from legislative life to the federal bench, Senator Daugherty's friends would press him as successor to Judge Morris. It is intimated now that if the long-talked of additional federal judicial district is created, Judge Morris will be appointed to the place, and that Mr. Daugherty's name will be urged for the Republican nomination for congress. It is recalled that Mr. Daugherty was chairman of the senate committee on reapportionment when the new Eighth district was carved out, and that the district was gformed according to his ideas.

This adds interest to speculation on the probable course of Mr. Daugherty. It is said, however, that whatever may be his line of action it will be determined by the state of his health, which was not very rugged for some years, but which lately has been much improved.

May Come Here Light.

Chicago vesselmen say that a good deal of tonnage at Chicago now will go out light to Duluth or to Superior for wheat or ore. There is no expectation of getting cargoes for all the fleet that is in Chicago now. Of all the capacity there awaiting the opening of navigation, enough to carry 2,560,000 bushels of grain, only 750,000 bushels has so far been chartered. On the basis of the oats charters made a few days ago the wheat rate is about 2½ cents, corn about 2 cents and the oats 1½ cents. Duluth is taking wheat room at 2¼ cents.

WEST SUPERIOR LOST.

Basket Ball Team Was Defeated at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, March 15.—The Women's basketball team of the university last evening defeated the West Superior normal school team at the Armory, 14 to 11.

The game was a magnificent exhibition, and victory hung in the balance until the finish. The Misses Casey, Turnhill and Karon of Superior played a strong game. Capt. Karon was compelled to retire in the first half because of an injury to her wrist. Even without the leader the team played with coolness and pluck.

Both teams were nervous at the start and rather unaggressive, but gradually things commenced to grow interesting. The score for the first half was 7 to 1 for Minnesota. The Superior team took a decided brace in the second half and the tide of battle turned. The visitors scored three straight baskets. Later the home team came to the front and just beat their adversaries at the finish.

Mr. Heinze Says the Amalgamated Has Lost.

New York, March 15.—F. Augustus Heinze, president of the Montana Ore Purchasing company, yesterday stated that the efforts of the Amalgamated Copper company to keep the price of copper around the 17-cent level and its subsequent action in dumping millions of pounds of the metal on the market at 11 cents or thereabouts, resulted in a loss of $10,000,000 cash to that organization.

Heinze also declared that before the slump in copper began the Amalgamated based its dividend disbursements on 16 and 17-cent copper and by this time had probably accumulated a large debt. Under these circumstances he believes that the Amalgamated directors will not be justified in continuing dividends.

"There is no prospect of a settlement of the copper controversy," said Mr. Heinze.

"Settlement, if anything, is more distant than at any time since the copper war began. The Amalgamated company, in order to force smaller companies out of business, has kept the price of copper at a low level. It has succeeded in closing the mines of several companies that cannot produce copper at a profit at prevailing quotations; but it has not injured the larger independent companies to any extent. The Amalgamated itself is the greatest sufferer through low-priced copper. I do not see that it is bringing competitors into line. However, the copper situation is sound. I think the average price of copper during the current year will be about 14."

SITE FOR SHERMAN STATUE.

New York, March 15.—At a public hearing, just held by the park commission with a view to selecting a site for St. Gaudin's statue of Gen. W. T. Sherman, presented to the city by the chamber of commerce, the general sentiment favored the proposition to place the statue near the Grant tomb, on Riverside drive. The commission did not reach a final decision.

Merely Wards of the Government.

According to the recent decision of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, in the case of the Indian Lone Wolf and others for the restoration of their rights in the Oklahoma reservation, the Indians of the United States are merely wards of the government; have no rights of their own and are tolerated by the good nature of the department. The following significant language is a part of the court's judgment: "It is attempted to be maintained that the right of occupancy conferred upon the Indian tribes by the treaty of 1868 was or is a vested right of property of which they could not be divested or cannot be deprived of the enjoyment thereof without due process of law and upon payment of just compensation; and that the agreement of cession and the act of congress ratifying the same do not constitute due process of law.

"Clearly there is no authority for this contention. The Indians within the United States or their jurisdiction have from the earliest period of the government, been regarded and treated as the mere wards of the government, and the lands and reservations occupied by them have been assigned to them by the United States as places of domicile for the tribes, and they hold and occupy such lands with the assent of the United States and under their authority. Such lands and reservations are held by the Indians subject to the control and dominion of the United States, and such Indian tribes are subject to be changed from one locality or reservation to another, as may best serve the purposes and policy of the government in the administration of Indian affairs. They have no title in the lands they occupy, except in certain cases where treaties of settlement may have conferred a title to the land; their right is simply to occupy at the will of the government and under its jurisdiction." This decision practically states that the United States is not bound to any agreements, however solemn, whereby the Indians were settled on their reservations. It goes further and implies that congress can do as it pleases with the Indians, and their property without consulting them. This is a serious matter and in connection with the frauds which were perpetuated on the red men in the opening of the Oklahoma lands reveals a condition of affairs in Indian government which will hardly be tolerated. The Indian Rights association is raising money to fight this question and will try and secure final adjudication in the supreme court of the United States and it is to be hoped the Indians may secure their rights.

Ambassadors and Ministers.

There has been a great deal of talk and some argument over the fact that the United States is to elevate our minister to Austria to be an ambassador. As a matter of fact there is but little, if any difference in the positions. Austria has already elevated her diplomatic representative in the United States to the post of ambassador and the United States will follow suit. This change will not mean so much to our representative as it will to Ambassador Hengelmuller, the Austrian diplomat and Washington. For one nation to send an ambassador to another country is a mark of distinction and respect to the nation thus honored and is always acknowledged by a similar promotion on the part of the second nation. Outside of the fact that Minister McCormick, who represents the United States in Austria, will have higher rank and more pay as an ambassador, the change will mean little to him. He will hereafter take precedence over all ministers accredited to Austria, and in all state functions will flock with the ambassadors who occupy a notch above that of the ministers and two notches above the charge d'affaires. An ambassador to the United States is supposed to represent the person of his sovereign ruler, whereas, an ambasador from the United State is the representative of his government, just as a minister is. There is no difference in the duties and general functions of a minister and an ambassador, the main point of distinction being in the important matter of precedence. The relative standing of diplomatic officers was fixed by the congress of Vienna in 1814 in this order, ambassadors, ministers and charge d'affaires. An ambassador to this country has authority to go direct to the president to transact business as convenience or the facts in the case might dictate, but a minister does not have this right, even constructively. He does all his business with the secretary of state. It is very rare, however, for an ambassador to take matters of business direct to the president, and in nine cases out of ten were this done the president would refer the ambassador to the secretary of state.

DULUTH'S BEST YEAR.

Duluth is launched on the full career of the best year in her history, and, to paraphrase the princely villain of Gloster,

"Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of prosperity;
And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried."

The change has come on so gradually that perhaps many have not paused to take note of what a great change it is. Symptoms of its coming have been noticed occasionally for several years. Conditions that pressed down upon business interests were slowly raised, and business began to expand. Money grew more free, trade grew livelier on every hand, and it began to look as though the hopes of Duluth that her sons had never relinquished were about to be realized.

Within the past six weeks the change has ceased to be gradual, and is coming on in swift bounds. Real estate, the last thing to be affected by prosperity, as a rule, has felt it, and there are more sales in a week now than there were in two months not long ago. The city has filled up with people, and more are coming. The house building that has been done has not affected the supply of homes in the least, for enough new people have come in to make the demand as large as ever.

The increase in business of every sort has been so great that it will take an immense building boom to bring conditions abreast of the times. Such a building boom is scheduled for this summer, and the difficulty of getting materials appears to be the only limitation upon it. The large building enterprises that are going to be carried out this year have been enumerated, and there are other projects under advisement that will be put through if it is possible.

New enterprises have come here, more are coming; Duluth has been made the headquarters for very important industries, the country that is tributary to the city is settling up in a rapid manner, and all things look well for the future of Duluth. The most favorable feature of it all is that conditions do not have the appearance of one of the mushroom booms that raise a city as a cyclone would and leave as much ruin in their wake. It is simply a steady, natural growth that has been in progress for several years and that is just flowering. In other words, Duluth is coming into her own.

A matter that is not attracting much general attention in Duluth because of the rush of other things is the development of the agricultural interests of St. Louis and adjoining counties. This has been simply marvelous. A few years ago there were thousands of acres of land, apparently wilderness, that are today being cultivated by an honest and industrious farming population. St. Louis county's farming interests are at least thirty years old, but there has been more development in the past year than in the preceding twenty-nine. It is estimated that within a radius of thirty miles from Duluth there is a farming population of 6000 to 10,000 souls, where the number a couple of years ago was very inconspicuous.

Settlers have come in from Iowa and other states, and many laboring men have saved up enough to start them upon farms in a small way. During the past fall and winter land has been sold in large blocks that will be settled and tilled this year. In the rush of other and more prominent things the importance of this gain should not be overlooked. This is the foundation; the other things go into the superstructure. The settlement of the available farming lands near Duluth will do much to solve the question of cheap living, while at the same time the nearness of a large, prosperous and growing city will furnish at all times a ready and profitable market for the products of the farms.

IN SOUTH AFRICA.

The English war office is apprehensive as to the next move of the doughty Boers. It is in a state of agitated suspense as to what will come next in South Africa. It is felt that Botha, Delarey and De Wet are all more or less likely to strike unforeseen blows at any moment. Opinion is growing that large re-enforcements alone will enable Lord Kitchener to operate effectively against the Boers while maintaining the present enormous force on guard duty. It is feared that when enough men have been moved to the Western Transvaal to deal with Delarey, Botha will renew hostilities in the Eastern Transvaal, and De Wet will launch an unexpected attack northeast of Bloomfontein, or attempt another raid in Cape Colony. Renewed rumors to the effect that Botha's burghers are dissatisfied and anxious to surrender are dismissed by the war office as unworthy of notice. Apparently the fact is beginning to dawn on Pall Mall that the Boers view the spread of such reports with satisfaction since they act as a sedative on the British both at home and in South Africa. St John Brodrick, minister of war, is said to have sharply reminded Lord Kitchener that severe measures must be taken to keep the British commanders awake and to prevent them from swallowing stories shrewdly circulated by the Boers to the effect that the burgher military organization is in a state of collapse.

While the British anticipate further burgher aggressiveness in the immediate future, the Boers in London incline to the contrary view. They say that Methuen's overthrow has put Kitchener and all his officers on their mettle, and that therefore the burghers will be hard pressed for a few weeks, possibly meeting with some serious reverses. However, they admit that if the British commander-in-chief concentrates his troops against Delarey and De Wet to the neglect of British interests in Botha's district, that general may improve the opportunity with vigor. With the recent victories of the burghers in various localities, and the repeated breaking through of the blockhouse lines, which were thought to be so effective, it would seem that the time would soon be at hand when a change of front on the part of the British would be made, and peace established on some terms.

THE FARMERS' INTERESTS.

In another column will be found "An Open Letter to American Farmers," written by Franklin Pierce, of New York, which contains facts of interest to every person, not the farmers alone. It is an article of special value at this time when the farmers of the Northwest are finding the value of their wheat depreciated, despite the "protection" of 25 cents a bushel, by the flood of Manitoba wheat that is pouring into the British markets, thus lessening the demand for American wheat, cutting off the exports of American flour and demoralizing the wheat market generally. If the tariff on wheat were removed, the Manitoba wheat could be handled on the Duluth board of trade and the price could be regulated so that the present demoralization would not exist and English millers would be unable to get this wheat at a price that enables them to grind it into flour and undersell the American miller.

Will farmers never learn that they have to sell their crops in the free trade markets of the world, while protection has cunningly raised the price of nearly everything they buy? Will they never stop and think long enough to realize that the special favors of protection cannot benefit those who depend so largely upon foreign markets as the growers of corn, cotton, cattle and wheat? Inoculated by the virus of protection, hundreds of private interests are clamorously seeking "protection" and subsidies. The farmers can never compete with them in the lobbies of congress. Justice and expedlency alike demand "equal rights for all, special privileges to none;" and the farmers must hold their congressmen strictly to this bottom principle as the only way to protect themselves from "protection" prices and unfair discrimination.

COLLEGE TRAINING.

Mrs. Astor was credited with the statement a few days ago that "no man can be a gentleman without a college education." The remark has called out a storm of protest, as was naturally to be expected, because the statement is untrue and utterly absurd. All the educational training in the world will not make a gentleman out of a boor. Now there has appeared a pamphlet which attempts to show by statistics that a college training is a handicap to a man who goes into business. R. T. Crane, of Chicago, is the author of the pamphlet, and in making his investigation he found that while several college presidents, to whom he applied, believed a college education helpful for a business man, none had statistics of the number of graduates in commercial life. Of the 555 recent graduates from whom he heard, only sixty-five were in business. Fourteen of them believed they might have been further along had they not gone to college. Mr. Crane then sent letters of inquiry to 100 business men. Fewer than half replied and most of them had comparatively few college men in their employ. This fact, Mr. Crane thinks, shows that an academic course unfits a man for business. Of course the data are so inadequate as to be worthless for the kind of inquiry he was conducting. But even were his figures complete they could demonstrate nothing further than that college men do not generally enter a commercial life.

The only thing of value brought out by this "investigation" is the opinion of the business men. Of thirty-two who expressed themselves, twenty-two favored a college training for business. W. F. Merrill, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad company, for instance, says: "It has been my experience that men with a college education make better help than men of about the same caliber who have not had that advantage. A college education gives a young man habits of study and application which are invaluable." President Tuttle of the Boston & Maine railroad says he would give preference to a college educated man, "other things being equal." President Harris of the Burlington system thinks that college men rise more rapidly than others. President Ripley of the Santa Fe says: "I am of the opinion that college graduates are better equipped for general work, mental caliber and habits being the same, than non-collegiates." Mr. A. C. Bartlett, of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., of Chicago, writes: "While college-bred men may not show greater mental ability, they do show mental training; as a consequence they advance more rapidly."

The above are representative of the opinions of men who favor an academic training for practical reasons. A small minority of the business men with whom Mr. Crane corresponded are averse to the college education, preferring to take young boys into their houses and then promoting them. But the value of an education cannot be proved by statistics. For instance, take two well known, very successful business men: Andrew Carnegie never went to college, while J. P. Morgan had a very thorough academic training, finishing his education at the University of Heidelberg. If Mr. Carnegie had received a college education would he have become a great ironmaster and amassed immense wealth? If Mr. Morgan had received but a meager common school education would he have developed into the great financier and capitalist? These are questions that cannot be answered with any degree of certainty. Statistics can only show that a college education is no hindrance to success, while it is undoubtedly true that the discipline of a college course is a good foundation for commercial life.

TO BEAUTIFY DULUTH.

The Herald desires to direct the special attention of every person in Duluth to the public mass meeting to be held at the high school Assembly hall next Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Women's Council. It is open to the public, there being no admission fee or any collection whatever. The object is to tell the citizens what the council is doing for the betterment of Duluth and to create a widespread interest in the cleanliness, health and beauty of the city. There is much that can be accomplished along the lines indicated at comparatively small expense, while the net result would be to greatly add to the appearance of the city. Surely this is a subject in which every citizen should take a deep interest. The members of the Woman's Council should receive very hearty support in their commendable work, and one way to assist them is to turn out to the meeting next Tuesday evening and by your presence at least express sympathy with the movement.

A very attractive program has been arranged for the meeting and its projectors hope to give it a stirring and enthusiastic nature. There will be short speeches on the general subject of civic improvement and other phases of the work. With proper effort Duluth can be made a very beautiful city, and the movement should receive general encouragement.

CHINESE EXCLUSION.

In view of the protest of China against the exclusion of the Chinese from the United States and the efforts of the labor unions and others to secure the re-enactment of the exclusion law, which will soon expire by limitation, there are two articles in the February Forum that are of peculiar interest. One, by Truxton Beale, of San Francisco, is entitled "Why the Chinese Should Be Excluded," and the other is by R. Hutcheson, of Washington, D. C., and gives reasons "Why the Chinese Should Be Admitted." The article by Mr. Beale presents all the weighty arguments which have in the past been offered against the admission to this country of Chinese cheap labor.

Mr. Hutcheson puts in a new light the advantage that the admission of Chinese to the Philippines might be. He thinks we should do there what England did in India. "The Declaration of Independence and the bill of rights," he says, "are examples of a species of baggage we never should have attempted to carry into our tropical possessions." England did not carry Magna Charta into India, but sent thither capitalists, merchants, manufacturers and built up Bombay, Calcutta and Madras. Spain lost her Western colonies by greed and cruelty; England preserved Canada, Australia and others by justice and humanity. She gave India factories, banks, schools, railroads, ships, but not self-government. The Dutch have pursued the same policy in Sumatra and Java. A few thousand Englishmen govern 300,000,000 natives of India; a few thousand Dutch govern 25,000,000 semi-barbarians. Mr. Hutcheson seems to regard the Filipinos as no more fit for self-government than these other Orientals. "What we want to do," he says, "is to make the rich resources of the Philippines a field for our industrial forces—the promoters, the syndicates, the so-called trusts; those abused agencies of development and industrial activity." When the great canal is completed, the navy strengthened, the merchant marine built up, and free trade with the islands established, our iron and coal and cotton and grain and other products will find an Asiatic market, and we will establish industries in Manila that will rival those of the great cities of India. We can feed and clothe 800,000,000 Asiatics. This is Mr. Hutcheson's dream of the future. Then he adds:

"But to develop the possibilities of the Philippines and build up this commerce in the Orient will require reliable labor. American workingmen will never go to to the tropics in large numbers. Where, then, is the labor to come from? In my opinion there is but one answer to this question. It must come from China. Scratch a Filipino and you find a Malay—a pirate by nature and a marauder and a ladrone by practice. Spain never could make the Filipinos work, but had to depend on the Chinese, who have been going to the islands for 300 years, and have been hated by the natives for no better reason than that they were willing to work. On one occasion during the sixteenth century the Filipinos massacred 30,000 Chinamen. But the Chinese showed grit, and returned to the islands in the face of massacre and death. They are there today, but the testimony of the soldiers and visitors is uniform that if further immigration is excluded by military order or act of congress, there will be no reliable laborers on the islands. There is no 'problem' in the Philippines. The situation there is simply a fact. All that is needed is a little common sense."

Another great tribute to American supremacy in manufacture is found in the results of a recent big fire at Para, Brazil, in which American safes withstood the conflagration and safes from other countries were destroyed. There were in the office of one company, six safes, one English, one German, one French, one Portuguese and two of American manufacture. After the fire it was found that the Portuguese safe was a complete wreck and fell to pieces when touched. Its contents were totally destroyed and the same was true of the French and German safes. The English safe contained about $175,000 in money and when it was opened the money was found to be almost unrecognizable, being an almost total loss. Everything in the American safe was intact after the fire, money, books and papers being little, if any, the worse for the ordeal through which they had passed. The incident gave rise to very favorable comment on the character of the American made safe.

The flush methods of some of our multimillionaires are further illustrated by a recent experience of Artist Benjamin Constant with Charles T. Yerkes, whose portrait has been painted by Constant. The price agreed upon was $20,000, but Mrs. Yerkes was so pleased with her husband's likeness that the railway magnate added $10,000, accompanying the check with a note saying that he begged the artist to accept the additional sum as a token of his subject's admiration for his genius, which had produced so fine a portrait with such an uninspiring model. Thereupon Artist Constant proudly answered: "While appreciating your amiable intention, I must decline the voluntary increase. My price cannot vary one way or the other according to the degree of satisfaction felt. Therefore, upon receipt of your permission I will turn the $10,000 into a fund of public charities." And thus the multi-millionaire's intended douceur was disposed of.

The retirement of Maj. Gen. Otis this month, and Maj. Gen Brooke and Maj. Gen. Wheaton in July, removes three more of the active figures in the war with Spain. The New York Evening Post points out that, of the nine line generals in active service at the beginning of the war in 1898, only two, Miles and Wade, will remain on the active list after July, while of the staff generals five, or just one-half are still in active service. According to the Post, 107 regular army officers have held the rank of brigadier-general in the regular or volunteer army since April 1, 1898. Of these nine are dead, forty-eight retired and fifty in active service. The war in the Philippines is still going on, and the crops of new generals will continue to be raised.

The United States government has trailed the other nations in the matter of wireless telegraphy for its war vessels. Italy, France, Germany, England and even Japan are ahead of us. In fact, the United States navy is now only about to begin experiments with the Marconi system and the German device of Slaby and Arco, with a view to determining which is the better. The German system, of which we have heard less than Marconi's is already used on thirty-two German war vessels.

The number of highly distinguished physicians who are giving it as their positive and emphatic opinion that Millionaire Rice died a natural death looks ominous, unless expert medical testimony counts for less than a valet's turning state's evidence. Patrick's chances of being acquitted are good.

The refusal of Mr. New of the Indianapolis Journal to accept the proffered first assistant postmaster-generalship is cited by the Boston Herald as another demonstration of the superior charms of journalism.

The Mankato city election this week developed a tie between two candidates for alderman. They decided to decide it by one game of euchre, and the result was that one was euchered out of the office.

There Are No Good Microbes

By Dr. Elias Metchnikoff, Russian Zoologist and Entomologist.

Between sixty and seventy different microbes infest each healthy man. At birth man is not inhabited by any microbes, but immediately afterward the surface of the skin and the mucous membranes are rapidly populated. They derive their sustenance from the air and from the water used to bathe the infant, developing in summer with much greater swiftness than in winter. The organs of digestion become the most densely overgrown. Dr. Muller, of Berlin, has described more than thirty species of vegetable life which inhabit the cavities of the mouth. Many of these are conducted from the mouth into the cavities of the digestive organs and can be recognized in the stomach and intestines. From the small intestine the microbes pour into the large intestine, where they are joined by a large number of new species. Of all parts of the human body the large intestine is the most abundantly provided with these organisms, having at least forty different species.

I do not believe, as do some scientists, that certain microbes play a useful role in the human constitution. I condemn them all as baneful.

It may be asked in defense of the microbes why, if they are all pernicious, they have not been eliminated a long time ago simply through the operation of the law of natural selection. It is because the majority of organs which give shelter to the vegetable organisms are themselves useless if not injurious to the health of the body. For example, the sebaceous follicles have become valueless to the organs and simply represent a debris of the fleece which comes from the skin of animals. Similarly, the stomach is something of a larder for our food, and which we could not dispense with without serious consequences. There exists, in fact, at this moment four people who are living comfortably without stomachs.

Of all parts of the digestive apparatus the small intestine alone is indispensable to life, and even it is of a length disproportionate to its function. Instead of having an intestine measuring from six to seven yards long, man should be content with one-third of that length. This the successful operations of curtailment prove. As for the large intestine, it no longer fulfills a useful end, but serves merely to house numerous harmful microbes.

If man were to be somewhat modified he would certainly be more healthy. The tendency of evolution to reduce and atrophy these organs should be aided by medicine and surgery. In brief, we ought to assist in perfecting ourselves.

Money Getting the Worst Sign of the Times.

By Dr. Timothy Dwight, Former President of Yale University.

I heard a prominent graduate of one of our universities say that when he was a student many years ago there was in the student community almost a contempt for wealth. The thoughts and ambitions of the college men at that period were in the line of higher things than wealth, and in their estimate of one another they regarded this as nothing.

The whole life of the country has greatly changed since then. We have become a wealthy nation. We have passed from the simple life of a quiet town as it were, to the luxury and abundance of a great city. The devotion of the people to money-getting has become so great as even to be alarming, and the one desire which seems to unite all men together is the desire to make something in this matter of money out of nothing.

There is surely no worse sign of the times in our day than this; but I believe much of the old spirit still remains—at least so far as our judgment of men goes.

If the evil tendencies that are manifesting themselves so strongly among our people are to be checked and the glory of the old ancestry is to be preserved, the result must be accomplished through the influence of educated men. Those who go forth from the universities and colleges must show by their living, by the estimate of things which they manifestly form, by the energy they display in the pursuit of the higher and nobler objects of desire, by their exaltation of learning and mental culture and the power to do good service to the world and of honorable character above all external things, and, if we may use the strong expression, by a contempt for wealth, what the true life for the nation is.

The young men of this generation are in greater danger of being led away in the false path in this regard than were those who lived in former times. They read, therefore, the more carefully and constantly to open their minds to the higher influences of a university life.

May I not also say that they owe it to the best interests of the country and of the future to keep alive these higher influences? the students' work is the student's life, and no higher obligation rests upon him than to pass on to other generations the true spirit which has been transmitted to himself.

The Irish Armed a Greater Threat than the Boers

By LORD SALISBURY, Premier of Great Britain.

The existence of hostile feeling in Ireland is a signal that the efforts upon which depend in no light degree the glory and continuance of the empire must not be relaxed.

The maintenance of our position in Ireland is the most vital object the empire has, and it can only be attained by strenuous exertions.

The feelings of hostility which have of late been expressed are more uncompromising than any expressions which ever issued from the lips of Parnell or O'Connell.

An Irish government with power to accumulate arms and ammunition would constitute a more serious threat than have the Boers.

The Spirit of Parnell Still Animates Erin

By William H. K. Redmond, Member of Parliament.

After a twenty-years' struggle our people are more dissatisfied with British rule than ever before, and all the more earnest are they to work on until the British ensign shall be forever hauled down and in its place put the Irish green. There is something that still animates Ireland, and that is the indomitable spirit of Parnell. During these twenty years we have had dissensions, almost civil war, in Ireland; but, having gone through it all, I now declare that the causes of dissension have in the main disappeared, and we are a united people. There is not a nation of men in all the world which has gone through ten years of such struggle as Ireland has which has come together and united so loyally as the Irish nation has today.

From the day when Parnell arose in parliament and defied it, from that times to this, the Irish party in parliament, if it has not achieved self-government, has at least proved an embarrassment and a danger to the English to their very hearts. We are not after vengeance, yet I do say as one of the band of eighty Irish patriots moving together on the floor of the English parliament, embarrassing them, exposing them before the world, that if they destroy our parliament we will burst their parliament. The greatest question in British politics is how to destroy the Irish power in parliament. Our privileges are being curtailed, but we will remain there a danger and embarrassment to them.

A Life of Ease Is Not a Happy One

By Russell Sage, Financier.

Every man has a right to live his own life, and when he has money to spend it as he sees fit. Having in mind the recent retirement of William C. Whitney, I cannot see how a man of talent who has led an active life and been a factor in great and diversified business undertakings can suddenly sever all business connections, and really enjoy himself as much as he had hitherto. Such a man's mind must continue active, and after his experience I should think it would be difficult for him not to wish to keep in touch with the changes and the march of business events. It is hard to overcome habit, and in success in business lies a very keen pleasure.

A successful man usually strives for new and greater successes, and as these come his enjoyment increases. I am unable to think of a life of all ease as a happy life. It is a great satisfaction to make a thing grow and watch its growth.

Every man to his liking. Mine is to sit at my desk and keep close to what is going on in the changing world of finance and trade.

TO LECTURE HERE.

Prominent Salvation Army Officer to Appear In Duluth.

Brig. Alex M. Damon, general secretary for the Salvation Army work in Chicago, will be in this city Thursday next and give his celebrated lecture in the evening at the hall, 1631 West Superior street, entitled "In Darkest America," illustrated with 100 magnificent stereopticon views. Mr. Damon has charge of the thirty-five institutions that are operated in Chicago for the poor. He has occupied this important position for the past four years. He has had years of experience among the classes he will describe in New York, Boston, Chicago and other large cities.

AMUSEMENTS.

FREDERICK WARDE.

Frederick Warde and his company produced Shakespeare's great tragedy "Julius Caesar" at the Lyceum theater last evening. There was a large audience, and the play was given a completely satisfactory production. Of course the leading feature was Mr. Warde's Mark Antony, in which part he does some of his best work, in many respects. Mr. Warde has always been a favorite with Duluth audiences, from the days when the team was "Warde and James," a familiar combination some years ago. He has appeared in many parts, covering a wide range of characters within his chosen field of tragedy and romance of the heavier class, but no visit to Duluth has been enjoyed more by the theater-going public than this one.

The play was given a warm reception, and it deserved it. Mr. Warde's Mark Antony is not unconventional, which may or may not be a merit, according to the way one looks at it. It is eminently satisfactory, at any rate, in every respect. The Brutus of Charles D. Herman is another markedly excellent feature of the performance. Shakespeare's Brutus is a patriot, and not the envious and ambitious plotter that history is inclined to make him out to be, and Mr. Herman carried out the poet's conception to the letter in a very pleasing manner. Harry Johnstone took the part of the "lean and hungry Cassius," and his acting was full of spirit and excellence. As Portia, the wife of Brutus, Miss Antoinette Ashton was very sweet and dainty and pleasant, and Miss Trescott was good as Calphurnia. So was Miss Aileen Bertelle as Lucius. The remainder of the company performed their parts to the satisfaction of the audience.

The Pianola!

A Gift Insuring Pleasure For the Entire Year.

Thousands and tens of thousands of compositions have been written for the piano. How many of them does the average piano owner enjoy? A few, perhaps, are played by some members of the family; a few more by some friends who call. The selection is made not from those who wish to hear, but it is governed by the pieces, the technic of which you have mastered.

This is an unnecessary limitation. You are missing the benefit of all the other grand compositions. You fail to realize the full value of your piano, and you lose the pleasure which is experienced in producing this music yourself.

With the aid of the Pianola every member of the family can play upon the piano—not one or two selections, but practically everything ever written for the piano. The player has the pleasure of hand-playing because he controls the expression, which is the soul of the music.

May be purchased by moderate payments.

Price $250.

AN EVENTFUL DAY

When Coffee Left the Household.

"I never began to use coffee until after I began teaching school, then a good, motherly old dame served such nice coffee that she got me into the way of drinking it.

"Inside of a year I became a wreck from insomnia and nervous prostration. Every afternoon I was so drowsy and filled with apprehension that I would have crying spells without knowing why.

"I laid around the house in misery and was a misery to every one else. Once in a while a friend would tell me that coffee was the cause of my trouble. I reasoned with them that I only had one cup at breakfast and that was not enough to cause the trouble, but I found that that was the secret—that one cup of coffee.

"It was an eventful day in our household when I quit coffee and started making Postum. I followed the directions and the result was wonderful; no other words express it. The Postum Coffee was of a rich, beautiful color, and when cream was added looked as delicious as it tasted.

"A doctor who was in the house tasted the Postum and said that it was equal to the best Mocha or Java, then quickly turned away as though it was incomprehensible. He suspected there was coffee in it, but I have been assured of the absolute purity of the Postum and have confidence in it.

"Nothing ever tasted better to me than that first, well-made cup of Postum, and never since have I tasted coffee, and I now look back with horror upon the sickness it caused. We began, very quickly, to see the difference between my condition under Postum and under common coffee. I lost that feeling of despair and restlessness which oppressed me every afternoon and I began to sleep like a baby. Postum must be given the credit for all my improvement.

"A word about tea also. One time when I was visiting I had a package of Postum with me. It gave out and before I could get another I had tea for breakfast. Within a few days the old wretched feeling that coffee used to give me came back, and all through the long afternoon I felt that I must weep and weep though really over nothing at all.

"Insomnia came back, but I quickly quit the tea and got all right again." Name given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum is an absolutely pure product of the creals as analyzed by some of the best chemists in America and passed upon by the various pure food commissioners of the different states.

Lumbermen Comment on Oshkosh Man's Talk of Advance.

"The price of lumber seems to have gone up higher as seen from Oshkosh than anywhere else," said one of a group of shippers standing in front of the Spalding yesterday. "I have heard of one man who has 5,000,000 feet of lumber who has marked up his prices $1.50 a thousand since it was found that the log crop was going to be short. But he has a way of marking up his prices about $1 a thousand every Monday morning and then figuring out how much richer he is than he was the Monday before. He is the only man that I have heard of who anywhere near carries out the announcement of the Oshkosh manufacturers that prices have advanced $2.50 since March 1.

"My impression is that it is difficult to determine just what the advance has been. There is little lumber for sale here, and what there is has been held higher than buyers were willing to pay. But I haven't heard just lately that manufacturers have marked up prices quite $2.50 a thousand."

One of the local manufacturers probably hit the situation very closely, when he said:

"The Oshkosh buyers who have been in the city were looking for No. 1, 2 and 3 cutting stock. The kind of lumber that they want is 1¼, 1½ and 2-inch stuff, lumber that they can cut up at their factories into smaller pieces for their manufacture. There is none of this kind of stock at the head of the lakes, in fact there is mighty little of it to be had in the Northwest and the few people that have it are in a position to demand $2.50 more for it than they formerly obtained. Indeed it would not be surprising if the factory men had to pay even more for it than $2.50, in some cases.

"Until last year the Wisconsin factory men were unheard of at the head of the lakes market, but last season they came up here and began buying everything in sight in the grades that I have named.

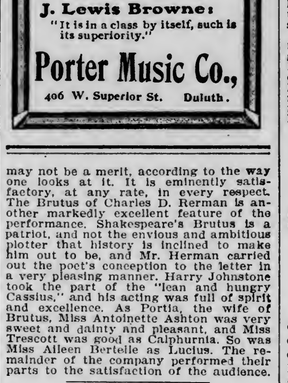
"The factor men are looking mostly for white pine and the talk that they can get their lumber from the Pacific coast laid down here 50 cents cheaper than they can buy it for in the Northwest market is practically hot air talk. In the first place they cannot get white pine from the coast and the sugar pine is hardly the stuff that they want."

IN THE AIR.

The Germs of LaGrippe are Conveyed Through the Atmosphere.

No one can escape the La Grippe germ because when an epidemic of the disease is prevailing the air is laden with it.

The reason that everyone does not have the disease at the same time is because the persons who are enjoying perfect health are able to successfully resist and throw off the infection, while those who, for any reason, are not in the best of health, fall ready victims.



The first symptoms are those of acute catarrh resembling a hard cold and if prompt treatment is applied at this time, it can easily be broken up; one of the best remedies at this stage is Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, sold by druggists everywhere and if taken freely, say one tablet every hour or two for two or three days, the danger of pneumonia and serious complications will be averted.

The Rev. L. E. Palmer, Baptist clergyman of Ceresco, Mich., makes a statement of interest to all catarrh and grip sufferers. He says: "Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have certainly been a blessing to me. I have used them freely this fall and winter and have found them a safeguard against La Grippe and catarrhal troubles from which I have suffered for years. I feel that I can freely and conscientiously recommend them."

Persons who suffer from catarrh of the head and throat are very susceptible to La Grippe and such will find a pleasant, convenient and safe remedy in this new catarrh cure.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are composed entirely of harmless antiseptics and may be used as freely as necessary, as they contain no cocaine, opiate or poisonous drug of any kind.

Supt. Park and Young Brother Are Found Not Guilty.

A. Tyndall Park, county superintendent of schools, was acquitted of the charges of assault and disorderly conduct in police court yesterday afternoon. His younger brother, Edward Park, was also acquitted of the charge of being disorderly.

The complaints were made by Charles Brown, proprietor of a skating rink at West Duluth, who claimed the two men created a disturbance in entering the rink on Dec. 7.

The case required an entire day for hearing and it developed that the only scene the two men on trial had created was in their efforts to prevent another man from assaulting Brown.

AT THE HOTELS

"Biwabik's justice court," said Attorney W. W. Browne, of that place, at the McKay this morning, "is as absolute in its final jurisdiction as Capt. Streeter's District of Lake Michigan is at Chicago—In the mind of the chief personage, himself. I had some cases before the justice court at Biwabik. The court ordered a continuance without my consent, and I appealed to the district court. The justice made returns that I claim are untrue. On my motion the district court ordered the justice to appear yesterday and show cause why he should not amend the returns. He did not appear and today I am going to ask the district court to order his arrest for contempt. This justice, Fleming by name, believes that the district court has no jurisdiction over him, and that he is free from any orders that the district court may issue against him."

"I thought you had zero weather up here in Duluth," was chorused by a group of arrivals at the Spalding early this morning. Manager Raidt looked wise and triumphant, and pointed with some satisfaction to the entry at the top of the page of the register for the day, "40 above zero."

"We haven't been sending out any winter resort literature this season," responded Mr. Raidt, "but next winter we expect to enter on a campaign for that class of business. People might as well save the expense and annoyance of a long trip to California of Florida, and come up here where it is more pleasant."

E. L. Brown, now general superintendent of the Montana Central railway, writes to a friend here that he is well satisfied with his new location and position. He adds as proof of his satisfaction that he has already organized a kickers' table at his hotel.

"The club is composed," he says, "of a senator, a judge, a horse thief and a railroad man." This combination, he considers, beats the one he had at his table at the Spalding, which consisted of a judge, a captain and two railroad men. It is said the very efficient organization Mr. Brown had at his table at the Spalding has fallen into a condition of decay. Since the chief's withdrawal, all interest in life has been lost, and the dining room service is received without comment, just as in the old days it used to be only when it wasn't all right. The Great Falls personnel is said to show wonderful aptitude for progress under the skillful tutorship of its organizer, who had had twelve years' experience at the game at the head of the lakes.

COLLISION

On the Nickel Plate Caused Severe Injuries to Four.

Knox, Ind., March 15.—The westbound Nickel Plate passenger train, No. 2, due here at 1:50 p. m., ran into an open switch, resulting in a disastrous wreck. The following persons were severely injured: A. A. Schwind, engineer, Fort Wayne; Jim Dalton, fireman, Fort Wayne; C. L. Alexander, baggage master, Cleveland; William Brove, mail clerk, Cleveland.

The train was running at a high speed when it collided with a number of freight cars which were standing on the side track. The bagage coach was torn to pieces and the engine and six freight cars were piled in a heap, which was completely destroyed by fire. The fire raged for several hours. No one was killed, although many passengers were slightly injured.

Schwind received dangerous wounds in the head and his wrists were severely cut. He almost bled to death. Dalton's shoulder and wrist were severely injured; Alexander and Brove, it is feared, were internally injured. The railroad company's loss is heavy.

Brilliancy unsurpassed.

It rallied to 74c at 11:25, sold at 74c at 11:45, and closed at 74 7/8c, an advance of 1/4c. Chicago advanced 3/4c and Minneapolis, 1/8-1/4c.

Cash sales were 50,000 bus at 1c under May for No. 1 northern, 2c under for No. 2 and 5c under for No. 3.

Flax was quiet and sold 1/2c up to $1.70 1/2, falling back again to $1.70 and closing there. Cash flax declined 1/2c, and to arrive advanced 1/2c. Corn advanced 1c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Grains Open Higher and Take On Firm Tone.

Chicago, March 15.—The weather map again caused anxiety among shorts in the grain pits at the opening today. The cable lists also were very steady in spite of yesterday's wheat break, and May wheat started 3/4@1c higher at 75 1/4c to 75 3/8c. The tone at once grew strong on the Washington prediction that the West and Southwest were to be visited by a cold wave. Dry weather damage statements continued to come from Kansas and commission houses executed a good number of buying orders. The early trade was not large and scalpers did most of the selling. May advanced to 75 3/4c and reacted to 75 1/4c. Local receipts were 25 cars, none of contract grade. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 358 cars, making a total for the three points of 483 cars against 332 last week and 464 a year ago.

Continued liquidation and general evening up over Sunday took much of the strength out of wheat and May at one time sold to 74 5/8c. The close was barely firm, May 1/8c up at 75 1/8c.

Fear of the cold wave and its possible effects on stock feeding, the strength in wheat and the continued small receipts of corn brought a strong opening in corn, with May 1/8@1/4c to 3/8@1/2c up, at 62 1/2c to 62 3/4c. Cables were unchanged but offerings were small and the cold weather threatened still further to curtail the movement. Some buying was done and May held around the opening prices. Receipts were 86 cars.

May corn fluctuated very narrowly the latter part of the session and closed firm, 1/8c up at 62 1/4@62 3/8c.

Oats were firm at the opening in sympathy with other grains. July was in fair demand and some May was wanted at advanced prices. May started 1/4c to 1/2c up, at 45 3/4c to 45 5/8c, but the demand was easily supplied and the price eased to 45 1/4c. Receipts were only 67 cars.

Prices for hogs at the yards were lower today and restricted trade in provisions. The tendency was for lower prices in the pit, but the grain strength kept the market up. May pork opened unchanged at $15.45, and advanced 2 1/2c. May lard was a shade lower, at $9.40, and May ribs a shade lower, at $8.40, and made up its early loss.

LIQUOR SHUT OFF.

Striking Trimmers at Ishpeming Threaten Trouble.

St. Paul, March 15.—A special to the Dispatch from Ishpeming, Mich., says: The striking trimmers at the Champion mine are inclined to create trouble. Many of them are beginning to drink heavily and indirectly threaten officials of the company. Township authorities have closed the saloons and the drinks of the strikers are shut off. The saloonmen are under instructions to not sell liquor to any one until the strike is ended.

WINSLOW SCORCHED.

Illinois Town Has Fire Loss of $125,000.

Milwaukee, March 15.—A Journal special from Monroe, Wis., says: Fire at Winslow, 16 miles south of here early today destroyed property to the value of $125,000. All the buildings on the east side of Main street with one exception were destroyed. The burned property included two hotels, two large general stores, Fumer's bank, the new city hall and several dwellings. Only six business houses of the town remain. About $75,000 insurance was carried. The cause of the fire is supposed to be spontaneous combustion.

Seventeen families were made homeless and the following business concerns were burned out: Marsel hotel, Oscar Koler's barber shop; John Wright, general store; Winslow hotel, protograph store, W. W. Wright's general store, W. F. Shram's general store, Mrs. E. Kennedy's bank, J. Buelow's jewelry store; Snyder's restaurant, undertaking establishment, Winslow Register and Charles Vaughn's saloon; Bunday & De Graff livery. Two residences owned by Oscar Collier and J. B. Winslow were also burned.

Winslow is just over the state line in Illinois.

BENCH SHOW

At Chicago Has Been a Most Successful One.

Chicago, March 15.—The annual bench show of the Chicago Kennel club closed last night with a parade of prize-winning dogs and their owners. The show has been one of the most successful ever held in Chicago, about 1000 dogs having been on exhibition. Many of the exhibitors were women of the fashionable world.

All records for sales have been broken at this year's show, more than $50,000 having changed hands. Many of the finest dogs from the East have been purchased on local account and will hereafter be owned by Chicago parties. It is stated that because the Interstate Field Trial association changed its name to the American Championship Field Trial association, and made the qualifications for dogs competing in the all-champion event such that only winners of state trials can take part, there is likelihood of disruption of the organization. Several state organizations, it is said, threaten to withdraw. The association is composed of eleven organizations: Missouri, Michigan Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, South Dakota, International, of Canada; Western, of Kansas City, Illinois, Iowa and Alabama.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

N. H. Perrin, Chicago: Cables uninteresting as usual on Saturday. The exports of wheat and flour for this week are the smallest since November, 1900. Reports from Southern Minnesota and South Dakota indicate that seeding has begun under favorable circumstances and suggests being in full swing next week. Rain and snow flurries general in the Northwest and Southwest. Barely possible that cold wave will move to Southwest; now in the extreme North. Corn is being held by muscle and money. Yesterday's reports of large New England demand fizzled out. I would cover short wheat on easy spot today, rather than chance cold wave over Sunday.

* * *

Greenleaf, Baker & Co.: Our weather report from Central Kansas shows a few local rains, but nothing that will do wheat any good. They are having high winds for the last three days and wheat is being damaged every day. Our Mr. Crowell just returned from a trip through Western Kansas, and he says he never saw wheat in as bad shape in places as it is at present.

* * *

Lincoln, Neb.—Farmers and dealers are concerned for the winter wheat. Except in a limited area the wheat has had no rain this spring and fields are dry. Temperatures have been high and crop has been affected by wind storms. Conditions are for rain, but if they fail damage will be heavy.

* * *

A. H. Farnum's Chicago morning gossip: Wheat—Cables are rather firm, considering our break in wheat yesterday. The Northwest has zero weather and snow; 6 to 14 above in Nebraska; 20 above in Kansas. The heavy selling here the past two days has, I think, continued as long as it is likely to. We look for a steadier market.

Corn—Receipts have dropped to so low a point that stocks are being steadily decreased and it makes the situation strong. Feeders continue fair buyers of cash corn. Shipments from Southwest markets exceed their receipts. The speculative situation is also healthy.

Oats—People who a while ago were talking about delivering all oats they had sold here in May are evidently selling their cash oats as they are buying May oats here. July and September oats don't seem particularly high under the circumstances. The latter are 30c under corn. We think the difference too wide.

* * *

The weather map this morning shows low temperatures in the extreme North. It is 4 above to 14 below and the Washington weather bureau last night predicted a cold wave as far south as Kansas, but the temperatures all over the West and Southwest were still moderate.

* * *

Ryeroft, of Chicago: One exporting firm says it offered 25 loads of wheat to the other side last night on the basis of 75c for May without getting even a comment this morning.

* * *

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market here was quiet and fairly strong. The relative firmness of the cables was a disappointment to local bears, and the prospect of a change to much colder weather throughout the inter-wheat belt also checked to some extent the selling. Conditions of supply and demand are not at the moment very bearish. The demand here brought us upon an export basis and foreigners have been fair buyers of wheat in this market for the past two days. Our advices from the Pacific coast are that the surplus wheat in that quarter has been pretty largely exhausted by the export demand of the last two months. Argentine shipments are supplied from shipments from the Atlantic coast. On the other hand, with the exception of relatively unimportant territory in the Southwest conditions for the growing crop seem favorable and the acreage is very large. This creates a very bearish feeling among a large and influential class of local professional speculators. The visible supply is likely to show a fair increase on Monday. Northwest will report a much better demand for flour.

Corn—The market here is dull and firm, with almost no movement from farmers' hands and sufficient demand to reduce stocks, and prices in the Southwest markets relatively better than here. The market is about selling pressure.

Oats: The market was quiet and firm a very little doing in may option, but with the small receipts there is much cash demand here and at interior points the price of low grade oats well up to the May option. With these conditions as we have repeatedly mentioned a discount of 9 1/2c a bu on July oats seems like offering a big premium to the buyers. September oats nearly 15c under the price of cash oats is also an attractive proposition.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, March 16.—There was a fairly large trade in wheat today and while there was further liquidation by longs, still shorts were good buyers and held the market steady. The close was 1/4c per bu higher than last night. Liverpool reported their market as steady, 1/4d lower for the day. Continental markets were also slightly lower. The visible supply in this country is expected to show about a million bus decrease. There was a fairly good demand for cash wheat here, but export demand at the seaboard was very quiet. A cold wave is predicted, but in all probability will be preceded by snow. Estimated receipts for Monday, 35 cars.

The corn market ruled very firm all day and closed 3/4c per bu higher than last night. There was a fairly large trade and pit offerings were very light. Cash demand was good, especially in the Southwest. Country offerings were practically nothing. Foreign markets were steady. We see nothing in the situation to change our opinion and still believe in higher prices. Estimated receipts for Monday, 105 cars.

The oats market ruled firm all day with only a light trade and no special feature and closed May and September, 1/4c and July 3/4c per bus higher. Estimated receipts for Monday, 100 cars.

Provisions opened easier on lower hogs and good receipts. Nothing of importance was done except free offerings of country pork limited above the market. It is a held market and is driving trade away. The market by daily fluctuations has an appearance of strength but the fact is outsiders are holding onto their long product because of these and will be more likely to sell on a sudden decline than an advance. Receipts of hogs this week in spite of bad roads are fully up to estimates and are about record breakers for March. While shipments for the week of meats and lard are much below the average. Estimated receipts for Monday, 47,000, and for next week, 210,000.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Harris, Gates & Co.—The week closes with the bank statement the chief feature. It is believed there was a big shifting of accounts between banks and trust companies, either to affect the present statement or the one of last week, or possibly both. All of the ear marks of a well planned and persistent buying campaign of the strongest financial interests were in evidence throughout the week. All of the uneasiness possible to be aroused by the money situation and by strike news was supplemented by bear raiding.

Rock Island suddenly became attractive today. In well posted circles this is taken to mean more than covering by shorts, and is thought to indicate a merger with another road, presumably Union Pacific. Excellent buying of Manhattan has followed developments resulting from electric equipment. Southern Pacific should be bought at once. Baltimore & Ohio is cheap. The situation regarding rails was vastly improved this week by the heavy and general rainfall throughout the entire winter wheat and corn belts. Money ran up to 5 per cent but came back to 3 on the bank statement.

* * *

W. H. Laidley & Co.—The market firmed but was rather dull and dragging until the appearance of the bank statement which was better than expected and caused some rallying and a strong close. Rock Island sprang into prominence and advanced four and a half points upon comparatively few sales. The stock is extremely closely held, the property is well managed and with prospects of good crops in its territory should advance to 185. The large interests continue upon the long side of the market. Money is plentiful and cheap and all recessions should be taken advantage of to buy stocks. Get some New York Central for about ten points. Union Pacific and Southern Pacific should do better.

* * *

Walker to Paine, Webber & Co.—The market today opened steady and with interest centered largely in specialties. There was not very much activity and traders were waiting for statement. Rock Island was advanced sharply on inside buying. The bank statement was much better than was expected and caused a good deal of covering and some buying and the strength and activity continued until the close. The outlook seemed more favorable and traders talked higher prices for next week.

* * *

Waldorf to W. H. Laidley & Co.—While the bank statement is expected to show a small surplus reserve reported a week ago also, there is no uneasiness over the money situation. The increase in the dividend on Southern Railway preferred to 5 per cent is regarded as significant because of the very conservative policy which the management has pursued since the stock entered the dividend list. It is also the strongest kind of evidence that Morgan is confident of the future. As a consequence of the raising of this dividend it is said that the plan for cutting Southern Railway common stock in half will be taken up at an early day and put through. The formal announcement of the Southern Steel corporation's refunding plan is awaited with a good deal of interest and will, it is predicted, impart both activity and strength to securities of the company. Morgan and company interests are steady buyers of both common and preferred.

* * *

Ridgely to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Unless there is a big shifting of loans from banks to trust companies, the surplus reserves will be wiped out altogether in today's bank statement, however. The small decline is likely to affect the market. Insiders come in and buy stocks whenever there is any particularly bad news. Buy stocks on recessions. There will be much decline.

* * *

Bache to Paine, Webber & Co.—Up to the publication of the weekly bank statement the market was extremely dull, but comparatively firm. Sugar was really the only stock in which decline of more than 1 point took place probably due to opposition which has developed in the senate against the Cuban tariff reduction. The bank statement showing a reduction of nearly $15,000,000 in loans and only a small decrease in reserve was considered a favorable showing and with the large disbursements to take place today and in the early part of next week, it seems that greater assurance is felt as to the immediate money market and thus a decidedly stronger tone was noticeable and higher prices were recorded in which the standard issues as well as the industrials and specialties participated. With further favorable reports as to growing crops and a more secure feeling as to money, it is likely greater activity from now on will displace the dullness that has prevailed for some time the Southern Railway dividend is an indication which shows the confidence the future by leading financiers, and the advances that have taken place in such stocks as Northwestern, General Electric, North American and Rock Island may be considerd as indicators of market standards.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—There has been less pressure to sell coppers today and there was a fair volume of buying. The bank statement is helping the New York market and the coppers should improve sympathetically. There is a considerable short interest in coppers and this will support the market in the event of a further decline. F. Aug. Heinze is quoted as saying that the copper situation is sound. He expects the average selling price of copper this year to be 14c.

NEW YORK MONEY.

There was light buying later on the basis of 8.89 for July. THE MOORCROFT OIL CO.

Is Offering to Investors a Block of Their Treasury Stock at 15 CENTS PER SHARE (Par $1.00, non-assessable) Which Will Ere Long Prove to Be One of the Best Investments In the Northwest.

WYOMING OIL—Especially that found in the northeastern part of the state—ranks the product of all other oil producing states. We own 320 acres of land which is located in the heart of the best field north of Moorcroft, Wyoming.

Our market is the mines. The oil is a natural lubricant.

Thousands of barrels of lubricating oil are shipped into the Black Hills, Butte, and Northern Idaho mining districts each year from the East, for which the mining companies are paying extremely high prices. We can save the mining companies money on freight charges alone to an extent which will command their trade. We are experienced in the oil business and all matters pertaining to market. Rates and prices were ascertained before a share of the treasury stock was placed on the market.

We are drilling in oil-saturated shale now and have cut through two stratums of oil already. We have taken necessary precautions to guard against failure. Our land was selected by the geologists who made the United States Geological survey of the various fields. We are not "wild-catting" and have too much at stake to carry out the enterprise in other than a good, honest and business-like manner. We are figuring on the profits accrued by the sale of the product.

There is no question but that the price of the stock will advance, but it is our aim to prove that in holding the stock as an investment the returns will be highly remunerative and satisfactory in every sense of the word. DO NOT DELAY. Purchase while the stock may be had at 15c per share. Samples of the oil and asphaltum may be seen at 409 Torrey Building. Prospectuses sent on request.

San Francisco, March 15.—Bids for the big fight between Fitzsimmons and Jeffries were to have been opened at 9 a. m. today, San Francisco time, but the opening was postponed until 5:45 this evening, owing to the non-arrival of Jeffries and Billy Delaney.

RELATIONS ARE CORDIAL.

Rome, March 15.—In the chamber of deputies today, Signor Prinetti, the minister of foreign affairs, replying to a question, said the government of Italy declined to take the initiative in proposing intervention in South Africa. He was glad of the chance to say that the relations between Italy and England were never more cordial than at present.

TIGHE HELD.

St. Paul, March 15.—A special to the Dispatch from Helena, Mont., says: Thomas Tighe, who killed Paul Koch at East Pacific mine, near Winston, last week, was held to the district court without bond last night, after a rather exhaustive preliminary examination before Justice Lambert. Tighe will be defended by former Attorney General Nolan, of Helena.

Homeseekers' Rates

The northern lines have announced that they will apply their homeseekers' excursion rates to all California points beginning next Tuesday and continuing every two weeks up to the middle of June. This rate, which is one fare, plus $2, for the round trip, has never before been made effective to California points. The rates are good for fifteen days going and twenty-one days from date of purchase for return. The rate will probably be made over all Pacific coast lines.

MANITOBA WHEAT

Production Will Keep In Advance of Carrying Capacity.

Must Look to American Facilities to Handle Grain.

Should Lead to Abolition Of Duty On Wheat.

Minneapolis, March 15.—G. F. Ewe, secretary of the Van Dusen-Harrington company, who returned yesterday from Winnipeg and other points in Manitoba, says that natural conditions will force a large amount of Canadian grain through terminals on this side of the line during years to come. After careful investigation, he believes that the development of Western Canada will keep in advance of the development of her transportation and elevator facilities, and that she must look to American facilities for help in marketing her grain.

"As a business proposition," said Mr. Ewe, "no one can expect the Canadian Pacific and other roads that may be built in the Western provinces to discourage the movement of Canadian grain by American roads, except under extreme conditions which seriously affect business and make it impossible for the farmer to market his wheat. The Candian roads want to haul all of the Canadian grain they can to Canadian terminals at Port Arthur and Fort William. Extreme conditions have forced a change of policy temporarily and as a result considerable of this grain is going East by American routes. Grain acreage in Canada will increase so rapidly that under the most ordinary conditions the transportation facilities will continually fall far short of the demand and the conditions which prevail this year will continue to favor grain men on this side of the line in their efforts to bring a large amount of that wheat this way.

"There is an opportunity for grain men and millers in the handling of this Canadian product which ought to prompt vigorous action toward the elimination of the duty on wheat. The American wheat producer and miller will have the Canadian crop to contend with in the world's markets from now on. It will be a big factor and the quicker we prepare to cope with this new element in the situation, the better.

"Some of the Canadian business men say that the unusual weather conditions last fall are responsible for the congestion of the wheat traffic. They say that the four weeks rainy weather delayed the marketing of wheat just that long and in the Indian summer weather which followed the grain was rushed in fast. But in the meantime four weeks of open navigation necessary to the successful handling of the crop had been lost. This argument itself shows how dependent upon perfect weather conditions is the successful handling of the crop had been lost. This argument itself shows how dependent upon perfect weather conditions is the successful marketing of the Canadian crop. Among Canadian traffic men and others who have made a close study of the situation, the opinion appears to be general that the adverse conditions under which Canadian roads operate will force a large amount of this wheat over American lines during the season when navigation is closed.

The wheat shipped to Duluth has relieved the situation at some points in Canada. There is still a large amount of grain awaiting shipment in Western Manitoba and Assiniboia."

SEE SIGNS OF A BOOM IN REALTY

Condition at Present Much Like That In Latter Eighties---Residence Buying and Building the Feature of the Market.

People who passed through the real estate boom of the later '80s are beginning to sit up and take notice, for they have perceived something in the atmosphere of Duluth that is familiar. Quietly, without any great hurrah; gradually, without any false starts; but surely, without any cessation, the movement in real estate has crept up during the year until now, with the season only fairly started, it is under way and gathering force and volume as it goes. While conditions do not partake of the boom character, which every citizen will resist as dangerous, there is a healthy demand for real estate at proper prices, such as there ought to be in a city with the foundation and future that Duluth has. That future is now opening up clearly, and while no true Duluthian has ever for a moment had a doubt about it, conditions are such that others as well as Duluthians are warranted in buying as largely as they may.

* * *

One of the most noticeable things about the situation is the home-building and home-buying. The new home projects are almost numberless, and many of them are on a very elaborate scale. Some of the most elaborate have not yet been announced.

* * *

One of the most important purchases of the week was made by A. D. Davidson, of the firm of Davidson & McRae, who purchased 100 feet on East Superior street just west of Sixteenth avenue east, on the upper side of the street. He will build a handsome residence upon the property. One lot was purchased from W. J. Suffel, whose residence the property adjoins, and the other was purchased from N. H. Witt. The price is said to be about $6000. The lots are very fine, and the site is one of the handsomest building sites left available in the East End.

* * *

B. J. Cook has bought the E. W. Matter residence on East Second street, the first building east of the First Presbyterian church, for $7500. The building, which is located at 314 and 316 East Second street, is a handsome one.

* * *

The Bethesda Norwegian Lutheran church has bought 100 feet on the northwest corner of Sixth avenue east and Fifth street, and the congregation is making arrangements to build a substantial church home very soon.

* * *

James McCahill has bought 100 feet on the southeast corner of Nineteenth avenue east and Second street from the Farmers' Trust company for $2100, and he will build a residence.

* * *

One of the most important purchases of residence property of the year was made by George A. St. Clair during the week, when he purchased the old Sherwood residence, on Superior street, near Twelfth avenue east, for $11,500. The sale was made by Whitney Wall.

* * *

Henry Hurdon has bought the residence at 221 West Third street from a Philadelphia party for $4000, and he will rebuild it and occupy it as his home. John A. Stephenson made the sale.

* * *

"Michigan street property is the cheapest in the city," said a man who ought to know yesterday afternoon. "It is different from any other property in his respect. Superior street property can depreciate in value through the moving of business upon First street, or east or west on Superior street while Michigan street property must always be valuable for the purpose for which it is used, because it is the only street having railroad tracks at the back, and yet the highest price that is asked for available property is $350 per front foot."

* * *

Stryker, Manley & Buck report that the demand for property is keeping up steadily. During the week they had offers for property, including one of $4700 and one of $6000, that have not yet resulted in anything, and a number of sales are pending.

* * *

Little & Nolte sold R. C. Kruschke a lot on Dingwall street, between Nineteenth and Twentieth avenues east, during the week, and the firm reports business in good shape.

"Duluth is just beginning her future," said Mr. Nolte yesterday afternoon. "If the water power gets into operation, as we all hope it will, the city will be a hummer. It will be a hummer anyway, but it will be two hummers with the water power going."

* * *

The following building announcements are reported by the Improvement Bulletin:

Palmer, Hall & Hunt, architects, have plans for a $3000 dwelling for Peter Johnson, to be erected at Fourth street and Fourteenth avenue east, Duluth. They also have plans for a $6000 double house for W. D. Williams for Second street and Twelfth avenue east, Duluth.

Dr. Titcomb will erect a $5000 residence at Lester Park, on plans by J. J. Wagenstein, architect. The same architect has plans for five dwellings for J. D. Howard & Co., to be erected on Eighteenth avenue east.

W. H. Bruner will erect a double house on London road, Duluth, to cost about $5000. Radcliffe & Hill, architects.

Radcliffe & Hall, architects, have plans for a dwelling for A. P. Cook, of Duluth.

Capt. J. H. Pearce will erect a modern dwelling on East Superior street, Duluth.

W. H. Hoyt will erect a $4000 dwelling on Jefferson street, near Twenty-first avenue, Duluth.

L. R. Hurd contemplates erecting a modern house on Twelfth avenue east, in Duluth.

There is a building on the property purchased by Mr. Hurd, and he will remove it an erect in its stead a handsome residence.

* * *

J. D. Stryker: "We hear a good deal about Duluth realty values being high. I made considerable inquiry when I was East on this point, in order to satisfy myself as to relative values of property here and the same class of property in cities of the same size down East. I found that in about every case property was higher in towns of Duluth's population, even though their position is not half so good or so promising."

* * *

George H. Crosby: "We haven't been trying to stir up new business this week. Still, we could not ask for a better outlook. The situation is most satisfatcory, and to my mind Duluth never had a brighter outlook for its real estate interests than it has today."

* * *

A. W. Taussig: "Some deals have been practically closed this week, but none are far enough along to be published at this time. People who have building projects in mind find it an easy matter to get good-sized loans at low rates of interest. One good-sized loan has been closed within a few days. The outlook for the local real estate market seems to me to be one of great promise."

La Crosse, Wis., March 15.—The mewing of the family cat saved the entire family of Henry Bartheld, of this city, from death by asphyxiation. Bartheld was awakened late at night by the noise made by the cat and was then almost unconscious from the effects of escaping coal gas. The entire family is in a serious condition.

LYDDITE

Is Dangerous to Its Users When Close at Hand.

London, March 15.—The extraordinary effect of lyddite has been revealed by the statement that, during the recent experiments with the hulk of the old battleship Belle Isle, shells containing that explosive refracted fragments upon the attacking vessels, which were sixty yards distant. Other fragments dropped close to a gunboat situated 200 yards abeam of the line of fire. The deduction drawn is that when lyddite is used there is danger to a friendly vessel at least 200 yards away. The Outlook compares lyddite with a boomerang and points that to be of any service it must be dropped right on board a hostile vessel, as "if the projectile does not hit the right place it will fly right back and slay the slayer."

San Francisco, March 15.—D. The picture which is an immense canvas is held by the authorities until the duty is paid or the government waives the right to collect it on the grounds that the Philippines are American possessions.

HIRAM HALL ACQUITTED.

Black River Falls, Wis., March 15.—It took a very short time for the jury to acquit Hiram Hall of the murder of E. B. Parker. The jury was a unit from the start. Public sentiment was very high in Hall's favor and was intensified when Parker's widow came from Illinois and testified in Hall's favor.
